"Why do you favor the Constellation Killer? Leafanta Aegim is a human who goes around killing Constellations. If anything, I would think you would dislike him, not understand why you would like him."

We landed on a snowy mountain the day we finished the Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon. Facing the dead, blackened corpse of a dragon, the Head Librarian and I had our first candid conversation about our true feelings.

"Since you asked, I'll tell you. I have a very old dream."

"A dream?"

"Yes."

The Head Librarian's eyes sparkled innocently.

"It's to appear directly in the novels I love!"

The Head Librarian explained. There's a difference between 'intervening' in a story and 'appearing' in it. He confessed he wanted to naturally appear in the story, becoming an equal character among the others.

"To avoid meddling, there's only one way to become a character in the story."

"Instead of me going to the characters in the novel, the characters in the novel come to me."

The Head Librarian whispered like a boy in love.

"Leafanta Aegim, the Constellation Killer, keeps moving between worlds, killing Constellations. Someday, he will visit the Great Library of All Knowledge in my world. To kill me."

That was why the Head Librarian loved Constellation Killer.

"I'm waiting for the day the Constellation Killer visits the Great Library."

His only way to become a character in the story.

"I look forward to the day he, of his own accord and following his story, stands before me. That day, I will finally appear in the story of Leafanta Aegim!"

The Head Librarian declared.

"Being killed by the protagonist, what a perfect epilogue, right?"

And then.

I speak up.

"Now, that's gone. Your reason for living."

"....."

The Head Librarian's expression hardened.

"...What do you mean?"

"You said it. Your dream was to become a character in a story. Not to forcefully intervene but to appear naturally. And Constellation Killer was the only one who could fulfill that dream. But now..."

I smiled.

"Do you still wait for the Constellation Killer to kill you?"

"....."

"Do you think Constellation Killer, who met the director, will kill you?"

The Head Librarian swallowed.

"No. What are you talking about... I don't understand. The Constellation Killer that was taken in as a ghoul is just one of many. There's still a Constellation Killer on the 50th floor. He will come to me someday and kill me, right...?"

"True, but."

I gripped the Head Librarian's right hand tighter.

"That Constellation Killer is not the one you chose. I asked you earlier."

Route 1.

Constellation Killer on the 50th floor, who neither met me nor forgave the director.

Route 2.

Constellation Killer who met me and finally forgave the director.

I asked which of these two would be recognized as "Constellation Killer's story."

"And you chose the second route."

And the Head Librarian acknowledged the latter as the official history. The story of Constellation Killer being possessed by Kim Yul, receiving an apology from the director, all of it was accepted as Constellation Killer's life.

Meaning.

"Even if Constellation Killer from the 50th floor comes to you one day, could you truly be happy in that moment?"

"Could you wholeheartedly accept the Constellation Killer, who hasn't experienced anger, sorrow, revenge, or forgiveness, as the real Constellation Killer? Could you accept being killed by such an ending?"

The Head Librarian might not have realized it, but he had essentially shattered his own 'dream.'

"It's impossible to accept. You are a person who follows stories more than anything. You wouldn't want to be killed by someone you don't acknowledge, by an [extra]."

"And just so you know, denying it is useless."

Because I can see it clearly.

'Character Window.'

Who the Constellation in front of me loves.

+

Name: Holed-Up Head Librarian

Favorability: 95

Preferred Genres: [Fusion], [Romance], [Mystery], [Adventure], [Horror], [History], [War], [Sports], [SF], [Mythology], [Fairy Tale]...

Disliked Genres: None

Preferred Characters: [Fictional Characters], [King of Death], [Kim Yul]

Disliked Characters: None

Preferred Plots: [Story]

Disliked Plots: [Serialization Cancellation]

+

Constellation Killer's name changed to Kim Yul.

The order changed too. Originally, my name was after Constellation Killer, but now it's in the front. As Constellation Killer's story came to an end, he grew to love my story more.

"....."

Silence.

The Head Librarian looked stunned.

He looked up at me with an incredulous expression.

"King of Death, what have you...? Since when have you been planning this...?"

"That day. On the snowy mountain, when I heard your dream, I started planning. Not every detail, but the big picture."

But the big picture was already drawn back then. The project to make him love me more than Constellation Killer. That's why I obsessively, almost to the point of fixation, relentlessly pursued Constellation Killer.

To hunt down one Constellation.

"Hamusutra."

The Head Librarian flinched at his true name.

"There are two paths left for you now."

"Two paths...?"

"Live here forever, never fulfilling your dream. That means parting with me. Giving up hope that the Constellation Killer will fulfill your dream, only serving and welcoming warriors who treat characters like trash, just as you've done, cooped up in this library."

"Eek..."

The Head Librarian trembled slightly. Instinctively, he struggled to shake off my handshake, but his own strength was negligible. My right hand was firm.

"Or give it to me."

"What... what do you mean...?"

"The book containing your story."

The prey I've long sought.

"Give me the book that records your life."

Not a Revelation of another world's apocalypse, or a book depicting other worlds' landscapes, but specifically here. A book encompassing the Holed-Up Head Librarian in the Great Library of All Knowledge.

"I will make it the 30th floor of this tower."

"....."

"Then you will naturally become a part of our tower. Do you understand? You'll become a character in our story. Become our comrade."

The Head Librarian opened his mouth.

"Climb the tower with me. Hamusutra."

Volume 7 – Chapters 150-174

Chapter 150:

Prologue (3)

-Hey, what a magnificent library.

There once existed a being named 'The Pond Where Memories Gather'. Humans couldn't pronounce its name properly. 'The Pond Where Memories Gather' was merely a name cobbled together by humans.

Its actual pronunciation is ■■■■■. Just as humans don't consider naming something for a cricket to call out, ■■■■■ felt no need to be named for humans to call upon. The closest approximation to this pronunciation would be 'Hamusutra'.

-The atmosphere is nice too. The collection of books is impressive.

Hamusutra.

That's how humans called 'The Pond Where Memories Gather'.

-I'll gladly admit that. ■■■■■.

But the human in front of it was different.

-Of all the libraries I've visited, this one is definitely the best.

This human freely used the Dragon Tongue. That alone was already remarkable. 'The Pond Where Memories Gather', inherently curious, saw enough probability in showing a bit of kindness and curiosity towards this odd creature.

Provided, of course, we ignore the fact that this human was the very first visitor to this library.

-Who are you?

The human reeked of too many mundane scents. It was peculiar. There was the stench of a dragon, but it wasn't a dragon. A hint of a god's scent, but not a god either.

'The Pond Where Memories Gather' had never encountered a being like the one before it.

-How did you come to be here?

A natural wariness tinged its voice.

-I never permitted entry. This is my world. State your purpose, stranger.

-I'm not a book thief. Please don't be too wary.

The human chuckled.

-I'm sort of a salesperson for insurance. I'm in the process of convincing beings like you, one by one.

-I asked you about your purpose.

-I'm building a house. Or should I call it a villa*? If I am the landlord, then I'm trying to persuade you to become a tenant.

*The first character of villa in korean is the same character as “stars”.

Again, the human chuckled.

-.....

'The Pond Where Memories Gather' was annoyed. For the first time in thousands, perhaps tens of thousands of years, it felt 'annoyance'. It had loved characters in books, be they villains or heroes, and had equally shown kindness to both unlucky and lucky humans, but reality often differed from stories.

'The Pond Where Memories Gather' was a great being. What defined greatness might vary, but as far as the 'Pond' interpreted it, true greatness hinged on whether one could kill annoying things or not.

-How annoying. Begone.

Today, the 'Pond' chose to be great again. It exerted its power lightly.

In the library, the 'Pond's power was absolute. Ordinary humans, and even lawless beings who claimed transcendence, would be shredded to dust. The 'Pond' was confident. Before it became as greatly great as it was now, it had turned quite a lot into dust, long ago.

-Ah. My apologies.

But the human before it wasn't affected.

Completely unharmed.

-I guess I misread the mood. But could we talk just a bit more? It was somewhat a hassle to get here. Ugh, traffic was bad and the road conditions weren't great...

'The Pond Where Memories Gather' was shocked to realize its greatness had no effect.

It was a tremendous shock.

Such a tremendous shock that the 'Pond' escaped reality. The attack just now hadn't used full power. Nullified. It should be treated as if it never happened. The 'Pond' fully justified itself and attacked the human again.

-Now that you mention it, I must say. Doesn't this library have any doors? Is this a library or a tomb? At least put in some windows. It's suffocating. I can hardly breathe.

The human was still completely fine.

-Should I open some for you?

In fact, the human even made a hole in the library's wall. Smiling broadly.

-Ah. Now it's a bit more ventilated.

'The Pond Where Memories Gather' was dumbfounded.

-Is this insane?

It was the first curse the 'Pond' had uttered in thousands upon thousands of years.

This library was not a mere space. It was the 'Pond's body and soul. Thus, being able to make a hole in the library's wall meant it was possible to stab oneself in the stomach. The 'Pond' was smart enough to deduce this and didn't like the idea of being stabbed.

-Alright! I surrender. What do you want from me?

-I want everything about you...

-I'd rather die!

-Ah. Should I? Is it okay to kill you?

-.....

The 'Pond' was quite smart. Smart enough to realize the human before it was insane.

-You don't want to die, do you? Of course not. Life is precious. Well then, I'd like to help you. Please sign here to protect your precious life.

It was unfortunate for the 'Pond' that the madman before it possessed power beyond imagination.

-What is this...?

-It's a contract.

-May I ask what kind of contract it is?

-Oh, of course. I'm not some thug.

Even though he wasn't a thug, he was very similar to one, but the 'Pond' didn't point it out. In other words, the 'Pond' was smart. It knew what could be said and what couldn't.

-I'm building a tower.

Tower.

-I'm going to invite beings like you. I'll even allow those creatures you call lowly to enter.

The 'Pond' carefully read the contract. Its expression changed as it read.

At first, it thought the human before it was a lawless madman who had come to seize the library. The human was indeed lawless. Mad, too.

But not a plunderer.

The contract was filled with enticing offers.

-You'll grant me the right to observe all worlds? Really?

-All worlds would be too much. Only the worlds I can intervene in.

---And these secret clauses?

-Those you must strictly adhere to.

The decision wasn't difficult.

Instead, curiosity deepened.

-Why start such a venture?

It wondered.

-For what purpose? What benefit is there for you?

-No being is born of their own will.

The human smiled.

-Everyone should have a chance to live one more life. They might not live as they wished, but they should live because they wish to.

The 'Pond' couldn't easily understand the human's smile.

-Someday, you too will live once again. Mr. Holed-Up Head Librarian.

That statement too.

"....."

The Head Librarian stared up at me, lost in thought.

Did he not understand my words? Or did he understand but his mind was overwhelmed? Either way was fine. I didn't rush the Head Librarian and waited for him.

"Let's climb the tower together, shall we."

After a long while, the Head Librarian murmured.

"G-Gong-Ja, I am not an ordinary Constellation. Unlike the ghost that haunts you, or the Holy Sword bound to you, I am a Constellation who actually oversees a stage. I am quite high-ranking, you see... To belong to a specific tower. That would mean..."

"What would happen then?"

".....I do not know. I have no idea. There's no precedent in the history of the tower."

The Head Librarian trembled.

"There have been cases where a Constellation was charmed by a warrior and volunteered to serve them. Quite a few, actually. Like how you swallowed the [Demon King of the Autumn Rain] with [Ghoul Reincarnation], there have been cases where a warrior absorbed a Constellation. But... But for a Constellation to completely become a hunter, I've never heard of such a thing..."

"It'll be the first case on record, then."

"....."

"Hamusutra. Don't live in a place like this."

I looked around.

The graveyard of books.

Traces of worlds gone by accumulate here. That's all there is. In this place, time does not flow; only the breaths of others and stories born from different worlds are sealed here.

'It's familiar.'

A place that merely longs for or envies the worlds of others.

'It's a place I'm familiar with. This place.'

I thought of the room I lived in before regression.

My room too was plastered with pictures and interviews of the Flame Emperor.

Although incomparable in scale to the Grand Library.

'The essence is the same.'

That's why I can say it.

"Come up to the ring directly now."

You must come out from here.

"By staying only in such places, people start becoming strange."

"S-strange..."

"The Revelations record the lifetimes of people. Reading it, one might feel like they understand people, but no, Hamusutra. Do you know what [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] described the world's end as?"

The Revelations described Master's death like this:

「 Suddenly a mysterious illness spread, and the Heavenly Demon died 」 .

"What's that?"

"....."

"It's meaningless. Utterly meaningless."

How the Master looked in her final moments, how the disciples screamed, how hard the children by the river worked to dig up the soft mud - none of this can be known just by reading the Revelations.

Unknown.

"But, but!"

Hamusutra countered.

"This lord can see it. Spectate it. Behold it!"

"Yes."

I readily agreed.

"You can enter the worlds directly and observe. When Master passed away, you must have felt sorrow, just like I did. I don't doubt that."

"Then, there shouldn't be any problem.....!"

"But you weren't as sad as I was."

"....."

"When the Master executed the last technique of the Heavenly Demon Martial Art, you must have held your breath too. When the Sword Emperor countered and split the moment, you must have felt awe. But what you felt, all of it, was just 'appreciation'."

Firmly.

I held Hamusutra's hand, pulling him closer.

"You must love Raviel too. You must like her. But you know, you can never love her as much as I love Raviel."

"....."

"You're just tasting it. Sitting in the world of this library. Never having stepped onto the stage of your own life, just being an audience. If you like the show, you clap; if not, you yawn. That's all."

"King of Death, I....."

"Live with us."

Hamusutra flinched.

"I'm, uh... bound by strict contracts. If I affiliate with a specific tower, or violate such regulations, 'The Tower' will surely sanction me. Perhaps all the constellation authorities will be lost.... Then, this constellation, being of no use, will be of no help to you."

"It's not about that."

"....."

"You know."

"....."

"Hamusutra."

I looked straight at the person before me.

"You once dreamed of dying by the hands of Constellation Killer. Now abandon that dream. I will give you a new dream. It won't always be pleasant, often more like a nightmare. You'll want to erase it many times. But if you wish. If you want, I will be in that dream."

I said.

"Live a life with me."

"....."

"Let's be part of each other's stories so that we can call each other ours."

Hamusutra's lips trembled. More trembling than that, he put his hand into his pocket. In his hand was a book older than [Leafanta Aegim's Epic].

+

+

I couldn't read the title.

A language from another world, beyond our reading.

The Holed-Up Head Librarian, now Hamusutra, slowly handed me the book containing his life.

"King of Death..."

"Yes."

"I, as a reader, will give you my final advice. I am your biggest fan. There is and will be no reader who loves you more than me. So, please remember."

"I'll listen."

"If you keep flirting like that, people might misunderstand, so please only use your tongue with Duke Raviel. Otherwise, King of Death, you might get your heart pierced by Duke Raviel someday..."

"I've already died like that once. But, alright. I'll keep it in mind."

"King of Death..."

"Yes."

"Is living as a human... enjoyable?"

Hamusutra was afraid.

I smiled.

"It sucks."

I grabbed [■■■■■].

"But even sucky things can taste good when chewed. Sometimes it breaks your teeth, but I'll help you."

"Damn it..."

Hamusutra sobbed.

"To think this would be the last line in this my revelation..."

Hamusutra grabbed the spine of the book, and I grasped the cover.

"Life isn't easy like a story. Deal with it."

We opened the final revelation.

Hamusutra spoke with a voice mixed with fear and sobbing, bravely.

"King of Death. Holed-Up Head Librarian. I hereby designate these two individuals as characters in [■■■■■]. The difficulty of this Apocalypse is undecided. When our eyes open, there we will be, in a world being currently serialized..."

"When we open our eyes, it will be just like here."

".....That's right."

Hamusutra looked up at me.

At that moment.

"I declare, stage clear."

Paah!

A white light enveloped us.

Chapter 151:

Prologue (4)

The library was instantly illuminated.

The light was like a cascade of white water, alive and moving. [■■■■■]. From Hamusutra's revelation, a ceaseless flow of light gushed out. The waves of light engulfed us and poured between the bookshelves.

The light overflowed.

[Stage Clear.]

The revelations continued to spew light. Chwaaak! Whoosh! The light surged instantly, submerging the towering bookshelves of the Great Library, tall as buildings. Even the Forbidden Books areas, untouched by light for thousands of years, were illuminated.

A white flood.

A pristine pond.

[Today.]

We stood amidst the deluge of light that submerged the world.

[The 30th floor has been cleared.]

Screams of hunters echoed from afar.

"Aaaaah!"

"What, what is this?!"

Was it the sudden inundation of light that startled them? Fortunately, there were reliable companions in the library. Many of them. While some hunters were shocked and dismayed, others were there to soothe them.

Though their faces were hidden by bookshelves.

I recognized every one of their voices.

"Aigoo! I'm gonna die! My vision's already dim, and now it's going to complete darkness! Egu, egu. Hey! You youngsters should at least make some tonics for us elders!"

Medicine King.

"Eh. Ha, but the medicine should be given first to those in need. Sorry, but you, Medicine King, don't seem to need it much... Maybe you should just get new glasses...?"

Apothecary.

"Aha, this is the 'Stage Clear' thing. Just simple light. You guys might not have experienced this much, but I've seen it several times already. Mystery becomes mundane with familiarity. Don't overreact."

"Wow! Master!"

"I was counting on you, damn it.....!"

Viper and his minions.

"Huh? Ah? Was the 30th floor meant to be cleared automatically? Ahah. It's good we saved some time. All members of the Temple of the Omnipotent God, prepare for transfer! As soon as we return to Babylon, we'll start catching up on our backlog!"

Heretic Inquisitor.

"This is troublesome. I have no experience in librarian work."

"I have a general understanding, Mr. Kim Yul. I'll assist you."

".....Thanks."

Constellation Killer and the Director.

And there were more. The voices of the Black Dragon Witch, Countess, and Paladin were heard. Sometimes from afar, sometimes quite near. From beyond the heavily stocked bookshelves, human voices drifted.

Yes. In the library, I could hear every whisper and murmur of the people. It was as if the light's current absorbed their voices.

Next to me, the tiny Head Librarian was trembling.

[Announcing once again to everyone.]

[Today, the 30th floor has been cleared...]

Czzzzzzzt-

Noise intermingled with the Tower's voice.

The already trembling Head Librarian flinched, shrinking his shoulders.

[Warning!]

[Abnormal clearing detected.]

[A warning has been issued to the 'Holed-Up Head Librarian.']

"Uh."

The Head Librarian grabbed my sleeve.

"I-It's fine. The 30th floor is determined by ■■■■■. As the administrator overseeing stages from the 21st to the 30th floor, I vouch for this. As a Constellation ruling over ■■■■■, I acknowledge the stage clear..."

[Warning once again.]

[If the stage clear is declared, the 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' will receive significant penalties.]

[Confirming whether to proceed with stage clear.]

The grip on my sleeve tightened a bit more.

"....."

The Head Librarian was hunched over. Normally, his generously sized clothes made him appear larger than he was. Not now. He seemed small. In this world, the space the Head Librarian occupied was insignificant.

Leaning against me, the Head Librarian looked up at me.

".....It doesn't matter."

That was a message for the Tower, as well as for me.

"I, as the..."

Hamusutra spoke.

"I will live in this Tower. I ask for your favor.....
Acknowledge my descent, Master of All Lives."

Silence.

[Announcing once again to everyone.]

The noise cleared from the Tower's voice.

[Today, the 30th floor has been cleared.]

Cheers erupted. Although the library was still submerged in a swirl of light, the hunters heard the declaration of stage clear. Realizing their success, they rejoiced.

There was a voice that only Hamusutra and I could hear.

[The 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' can no longer maintain his authority.]

[Initiating rank adjustment.]

It was a phrase I had heard once before.

When Preta lost the shell of the 'Demon King of Autumn Rain,' I heard the same words.

[The alias of the 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' has been revoked.]

Preta had screamed then. "No!" She was horrified at losing her status as a Constellation. She desperately resisted descending.

Hamusutra's reaction now was different.

Silently, he closed his eyes tightly.

[Announcing once again.]

[The alias of the 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' has been revoked.]

[The authority of the 'Holed-Up Head Librarian' is revoked.]

The revelation in our hands trickled down. Perhaps 'melted down' would be more accurate. Plop, plop. The book cover turned into a slime-like substance and flowed down, and the pages dripped down like candle wax.

[May fortune be with you.]

And then the revelations turned into light and vanished.

"....."

For a while...

Hamusutra didn't speak. He just quietly exhaled and calmly inhaled. His small upper body rose and fell, and the once trembling Hamusutra in fear gradually calmed down.

"Ah..."

Hamusutra sprang up in place.

"Look at this, King of Death."

His long sleeves fluttered. They were so long they couldn't fall to the ground. Every time Hamusutra hopped in place, the sleeves lifted slightly before falling back down.

"I can't fly anymore."

Hamusutra turned to me, smiling.

"I can no longer soar through the skies. I used to enjoy watching the worlds from high above. All day long. Sometimes for tens of days, I enjoyed simply gazing at the horizon. My hobby is gone..."

"Yes."

"So much has disappeared."

"Yes."

"I've achieved my dream. The dream of appearing in a story, but it's bittersweet. I'm scared. Afraid. I love you all. I cherish you. I'm scared you won't love me back. I want to be loved by everyone..."

"Hamusutra."

I placed my hand on Hamusutra's shoulder.

"Forget about that. It's impossible."

"....."

"Let's take it step by step. If your hobby is gone, let's find a new one. How about it? Want to do something to commemorate your descent from a Constellation?"

"In fact, I have two wishes."

"Tell me. If I can, I'll grant them."

"Firstly, stop speaking formally to me..."

That was a wish I could grant.

"Okay. I will. What's the other wish?"

"My second wish is a bit extravagant... It's such an incredible luxury that you, King of Death, will shudder in astonishment..."

"What is it?"

Hamusutra wiped his eyes with his sleeve. Sniffles were heard. After a while, when the sleeve dropped, Hamusutra's face was smiling.

"I want to try a Venti White Mocha Frappuccino Quad Shot with Java Chips and extra Drizzle Chocolate..."

It was indeed a tremendous luxury.

And fortunately, also a wish I could grant.

There's a story to tell later.

"Indeed. So that's why my consort died."

Raviel, dressed in a school uniform, said while drinking cider.

See.

In that one sentence, an incredible collaboration took place.

Look. Raviel, [in a school uniform], drank [cider].

Not even the epic of the universe's creation and destruction could match the sublimity of this sentence. With the emotion of a believer witnessing the creation of heaven and earth, I share this moment with you...

"My Gong-Ja is trembling."

"I'm n-not trembling."

"Is that so?"

Cradled in my arms like a princess, Raviel tilted her head in puzzlement. By the way, I've been holding this pose for over three hours now. No aura allowed. No skills allowed. Purely relying on muscle and posture.

"It definitely looks like you're trembling."

Raviel smiled slightly.

"Ah. Is my body too heavy?"

"Not at all. Raviel, you're light as a feather!"

"Which feather? A dinosaur's? An archaeopteryx's?"

"You're lighter than a freshly hatched chick's feather!"

"Then I'm relieved. I was about to get down from my love's embrace worrying I was too heavy. Since there's no problem, I'll continue to enjoy the excellent ride."

Raviel touched her lips to the cider can. A drop of the clear cider lingered on her lips. Ah, I envy that drop of cider. Evaporate already. Evaporate and return to nature...

Let me explain the situation. We're on the 29th floor, in the world of [City of Ascension - Side Story].

As Hamusutra predicted, the [Side Story] didn't alter the real world's history. It wasn't incorporated into the official record. Only this city, centered around Shinseo High, got detached like an isolated island, becoming a standalone stage.

'Strangely, the residents of this world don't seem to notice anything odd.'

When hunters like us enter the 29th floor, we're automatically registered as middle or high school students. As if we've always lived in this world, we experience school life. There's a university too, but that's all.

A literal school city.

So, apart from the chance to attend school, it's a completely useless stage, but...

"Public education is beautiful."

It turns out to be surprisingly helpful.

"A place where even the less fortunate can learn to their heart's content. Isn't it like a dream? From now on, our empire plans to send talents here to study. Indeed, my love is worthy of calling himself the Moon of the Ivansia Ducal Family."

"Uh. You might not learn much good here...?"

"It doesn't matter. The purpose of education is to share common sense. A nation is an abstraction that can degenerate into delusion with just one misstep, so it's necessary to ensure that its citizens always dream the same dream."

"The same dream..."

"Hmm. I was pondering how to naturally integrate the people of the Tower and the empire's citizens. The empire's citizens educated here will eventually bridge the two forces."

Raviel occasionally speaks about difficult things. So cool.

So why have I been holding Raviel for over three hours?

"Let's set aside political talk for now. Right now, I want to savor the sight of you being punished."

Right. I'm currently being punished...

The reason for the punishment is quite clear.

"I was truly surprised, Gong-Ja. I was working in the office, and suddenly, I returned 24 hours back in time. I hesitated for a moment but soon realized the situation. Ah, indeed. My consort must have died somewhere again," she said.

Raviel took out a golden card.

+

[A Certain Returner's Love]

Rank: EX

Effect: For a returner, love is like poison. No matter how much they struggle, they can't share time with the one they love. Thus, a certain returner had a burning desire, 'Let my beloved keep her memories.' This desire reached the tower and was granted.

You share a timeline with your beloved. If your lover goes back a day, you go back a day. If you go back a day, so does your lover. This is the vow of a ring. This is a marriage of time.

May fortune be with both of you.

*However, it only activates when you and your lover mutually love each other.

+

Indeed.

Because of [A Certain Returner's Love], when I die, Raviel also returns 24 hours back in time. Raviel experienced this return when I was killed by the Constellation Killer.

Naturally, Raviel could only be aware that 'I had died'.

According to Goldencup, who serves in the Ivansia Ducal Family, Raviel immediately murmured, "Some bastard, wherever he lives, touched my consort," as soon as she returned.

With an expressionless face.

Goldencup reportedly felt cosmic horror that day.

"I'm sorry..."

"No need to apologize."

Raviel spoke calmly.

"From what I heard, didn't you make enough effort? Didn't you desperately try not to die? If you still died despite that, it can't be helped."

"Right?"

"Yes. Even if you rashly jumped from the 29th to the 50th floor, challenged one of the strongest there, and finally attracted the aggro of an entire floor, it's unavoidable. My love, what you did was perfectly rational. There's no recklessness to be found. I understand."

"I'm really sorry..."

"Do you truly regret it? Do you realize your mistake?"

Raviel pinched my cheek. Jwoooook. My cheek stretched like freshly made glutinous rice cake.

I was moved.

'Ah, Raviel is pinching my cheek.'

Raviel is wearing a school uniform before me. Raviel in a school uniform is in my arms. Is this really a punishment? Rather, a reward? Perhaps Raviel, my goddess, is disguisedly praising me under the guise of punishment...?

"This man is hopeless..."

Raviel sighed.

"His eyes have gone crazy. His slightly crazy eyes were charming, but this is too much."

"I love you. Raviel."

"I love you, Gong-Ja."

Ah. The scent of cider.

Nice...

Happy...

-Damn it.

An uninvited guest grumbled from behind.

-Seriously? Do I have to see this crap every time I meet these two? Huh? This isn't right, is it? Have they totally lost their minds with hormone levels? What did I do in my past life to deserve this hell!

[Shiny points out that you probably committed many sins in your past life.]

-Sh-, damn...

One must never underestimate local broadcasting as a hero.

While I was explaining my story, Raviel looked around Shinseo High. Who killed me, what past did they have, what did they lose, what did they regain. Guided by me, Raviel memorized every classroom and rooftop.

"Hmm."

Raviel nodded.

"Well done, Gong-Ja. It was worth the time you spent."

She was convinced. Although I had to endure the hell of my arms and the heaven of my brain for a full 3 hours, considering what's more important between arms and brain, it seems like I came out ahead. A total win.

"Now, I must see the scum who killed you for myself."

"Raviel. As I mentioned earlier, that person is probably also one of your ancestors..."

"Even more despicable. An ancestor should entrust work to their descendants gracefully, not dare to touch the moon of the family. Today's Ivansia is mine. I'll punish him according to family law."

Sorry, Constellation Killer.

Sorry, Kim Yul.

You're done for.

"And also."

Raviel smiled. On the rooftop of Shinseo High, the setting sun tinted her lips red.

"I'd like to greet the person who raised you."

"....."

"Will you guide me, Gong-Ja?"

I nodded.

"Yes."

And whispered while holding Raviel.

"Transfer."

Light enveloped us.

The next moment, we were in the 30th-floor library.

In just a few days, the library had changed somewhat. First, there were strict divisions between accessible and restricted areas. Ordinary books adorned the shelves in the accessible area, and hunters leisurely enjoyed reading at tables.

A peaceful scene.

On the tables where hunters sat, there were coffee cups and beverage cups.

"Ah."

Hamusutra, wandering between the tables, spotted us and hurried over. Instead of his usual loose-fitting clothes, Hamusutra was now dressed in a neat employee uniform.

"Welcome, King of Death. Oh? The Silver-Clad Heart also came along. What an honor to have such esteemed guests visit us together!"

The library café.

For now, Hamusutra decided to work here. He wasn't yet ready to live in the 1st-floor city, but he was slowly mingling with hunters and getting used to life as a human.

"Hmm. Is Kim Yul around? Raviel wants to see his face..."

"Mug, my consort."

".....Raviel wants to see Kim Yul's mug."

Hamusutra grinned widely.

"Kim Yul's face is worth coming a long way to see. Got it. He might be organizing children's books now, but I'll call him."

There's still much to tell.

Who took over the Great Library after Hamusutra's descent. Why Medicine King almost single-handedly funded the café's creation. Hence, even now, Medicine King is behind the café counter in bartender attire, brewing coffee, and so on.

There's much to talk about.

But there will be a time for that story.

"Then I'll guide both of you to your seats!"

As always.

That story will continue on a higher stage than ever before.

Chapter 152:

Surging to the Top

(1)

Human connections are truly mysterious.

From the trivial ones like discovering a friend is actually the grandson of the old man who runs the supermarket in our neighborhood, to the more extreme ones like being obsessed with a hunter for ten years only to find out they're a deranged psychopath, whom I killed and now share a life of cohabitation with...

No, let's stop there. That's an exceptional case.

Anyway, my point is simple: human connections are unpredictable. I've met all sorts of bizarre and fascinating people, yet I still marvel at the mysteriousness of these connections.

"Hey, Kim Gong-Ja. You look even more radiant than before!"

Specifically, I'm marveling at the person I'm video chatting with right now.

"You look even better than when you were younger, your face has become so strikingly handsome. I'm jealous! Really, I should have followed you into the Tower when I left the orphanage. This place, Kim Gong-Ja, the air is bad, the people are bad, it's just not a good place to live."

A man in a neat suit, with his hair neatly parted 9:1, kept talking non-stop. I murmured his name.

"Kim Han-Bi-Ja..."

"No, no. It's Kim Han-Bi now. Okay? I've changed my name."

"I heard about the parliamentary badge from the director. Congratulations, friend."

Among our orphanage alumni, he's probably the most successful. A proportional representation member of the parliament, they say.

The director mentioned in passing that 'he just rode the right coattails and was at the right place at the right time,' but it's not easy to grab onto the right coattails at our young age.

"Compared to you, Gong-Ja, I'm just a small fry. Haven't you seen the internet? You're incredibly popular. You've greatly contributed to raising our country's prestige."

"Sorry, I've been off the internet recently, so I don't know much."

"Oh, really? That's unexpected. Anyway, friend. Can you do me a favor?"

Kim Han-Bi smiled warmly.

"I'm planning to run for a district seat in the next general election. But apart from being young and fresh, I don't have much to appeal to the people. So, how about promoting the fact that you and I were close friends at the orphanage?"

"Yeah, that's not possible."

I nodded politely.

"Best of luck, congressman. Please, do good politics. Politics that prioritize the citizens. Honest and clean politics."

"What? Oh, hey! Hey!"

Han-Bi's expression turned desperate.

"Gong-Ja! Please, I beg you! Help me out! Sorry for not contacting you before! Who would have thought you'd rise so high in the Tower! Just, one photo! I'll use it only for one poster! Please help me get re-elected as a congressman..."

Click.

I cut off the call without hesitation. The last image on the screen was the face of my childhood friend, crying and begging. It made me realize something anew.

'I really made it big in the Tower.'

An old friend who never contacted me before is calling. And even receiving petty requests from a congressman. It's something I could never have dreamed of before my 4000 returns.

Buzz, buzz...

The phone rang again immediately after hanging up. It was Han-Bi. I answered, clearly annoyed.

"Hello?"

"Gong-Ja, I'm sorry. I got ahead of myself just because we played together as kids."

This guy...

He's become quite something since becoming a politician.

There's something to learn from his shamelessness.

"I know you must be busy, but could you just listen to me for a moment?"

"Listening is the least I can do."

"Gong-Ja. I know nationality is meaningless in the Tower. But aren't we both Koreans? This is also a connection. Our parliament, our party, there are many who are favorable towards you, Gong-Ja."

"I'd rather not be a fool who gets happy over favor and ends up being used."

"Tell us what you want..."

"How about clean politics? Working for the peace of humanity?"

"Something possible, you idiot!"

Really. Was it an impossible request?

If it's impossible, what can be done...

"Ah."

An idea flashed through my mind.

"I do have a favor to ask."

"Finally! People always have favors to ask. What is it? Tell me anything. I'll push it through at the party level. I called you with a blank check in hand."

"Trustworthy, indeed."

I smiled.

"Do you know a person named Hwang Eun-Seo?"

Gong-Ja says, human connections are indeed mysterious.

Sometimes, it's about getting revenge on someone you thought was dead.

"That happened."

"It's a natural and expected process."

The Sword Saint responded after hearing my story.

"When I reached the number one rank, I received countless requests. Not only from people in the same faction but also from politicians and businessmen calling hundreds and thousands of times."

"Really? Even the Swedes do that?"

"People are similar everywhere."

Chaaaang!

Our swords crossed as Sword Saint and I conversed leisurely while our hands and feet moved busily. We were sparring to improve our skills, and simultaneously, I was seeking advice on life.

"By now, you're a powerholder, a special one at that. You didn't gain power through politics, but purely through skill and achievements, didn't you? People in the outside world like you. Hunters in the Tower admire you."

"You're gilding my face too much, elder."

"The more reason to be careful, young man."

Sword Saint swung his sword. Whiiiiik! The sharp attack targeted my wrist. I tilted Shiny slightly to deflect Sword Saint's strike.

An attack I couldn't follow with my eyes before.

"Don't I live cautiously enough?"

But now, I could parry while chatting. I've reached that level. Whoosh! I channeled aura into Shiny, firmly grabbing Sword Saint's sword.

"Hmm."

Sword Saint frowned.

"Your use of aura is impressive."

"I guess I have more talent in aura than in swordsmanship."

"Whoever said that was accurate. Aura is mental. It varies greatly depending on how strongly you can visualize in your mind. What were you thinking about just now?"

A mansion engulfed in flames.

In it, children were tied up. Desperately struggling but trapped in unyielding restraints.

『It hurts...』

『Please forgive me...』

I thought of the children's hands and feet and moved my aura. Handcuffs and chains. Struggle and thrashing. With the aura shaped like that, I grabbed Sword Saint's sword firmly.

"I don't know."

I smiled.

"Trade secret. I can't share that for free."

"....."

A gleam flickered in Sword Saint's blue eyes.

".....I deeply regret one thing. I should've insisted on going to [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] with the Celestial Martial Guild Master. The you before and after visiting [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] are completely different martial artists. I should've gone, even if I had to force it."

"Isn't it tiring to regret past decisions?"

"How cheeky!"

Sword Saint laughed.

"I have no intention of giving up the number one rank!"

The Sword Saint's sword erupted with blue aura. Kwaang! The pressure felt like the sudden burst of compressed air. I quickly erected a barrier of aura to cut off the explosion.

"Haha!"

The laughter of youth came from the elderly man's mouth.

"Wonderful!"

Sword Saint didn't stop at the explosion. Whoosh! Whoosh! Like a typhoon wielding wind pressure, he continuously poured out blue aura. I cautiously backed away, severing each of his sword strikes one by one.

"The existence of a rival is such a joy!"

Sword Saint was purely delighted.

"When we were racing through the Aegim Empire, I had no idea you'd grow so much! Human affairs are unpredictable. I'm endlessly grateful for a young man like you!"

Sword winds stormed in. The blade split every second, rushing towards me. Chaaang! I managed to counter it, combining sword and aura, but my movements started to become slightly hasty.

"Aren't you, enjoying this, a bit too much?"

"Enjoyment is not to be refused! The Celestial Martial Guild Master is progressing day by day, and you're rising at a terrifying speed. This is what makes life worth living!"

The old man's laughter filled the plains.

The Tower's 1st Floor, City of Ascension, Babylon outskirts. Many hunters gathered to watch our duel. They watched our battle with wide eyes, recorded it, and even took notes in their notebooks, marveling.

"That's incredible..."

"Can you fight like that if you master aura?"

"That's not possible! It's because they are who they are..."

"The Sword Saint is still a step ahead of the King of Death."

Hmm.

'That seems to be the general opinion, isn't it?'

My pride began to boil.

'Fine. I'll show them.'

I still personally consider Sword Saint to be better than me. But what I think and what others think are two different matters. Very different.

"Sword Saint sir."

"What is it!"

"I personally don't like to show off an 'unfinished technique'. I think it's inconsiderate to my sparring partner."

After severing Sword Saint's sword, I leaped back, creating a distance between us.

"But you and I aren't just ordinary sparring partners, are we?"

"Oho?"

Sword Saint didn't chase me but lowered his sword instead, interested in what I was about to say.

"Don't you think so? Aren't we, after all, disciples of the same master?"

"....."

The old gentleman's face stiffened.

The master I was referring to wasn't the Demonic Cult but the Guardian Spirit. I meant the Sword Emperor.

Like me, the Sword Saint also has the same Guardian Spirit.

‘[The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] showed the Sword Emperor sparring against the master.’

The Guardian Spirit's sparring session was broadcast to the Tower. It was aired. If one wanted, every hunter could watch it, and of course, the Sword Saint was among them.

‘He couldn’t have missed it.’

Most hunters wouldn’t understand that sparring session.

But Sword Saint, at least his Guardian Spirit, would have known.

‘Of course.’

It’s his own martial art.

How could he not recognize it?

‘Both of us are under the same Guardian Spirit.’

Now, both [my Guardian Spirit] and [Sword Saint’s Guardian Spirit] know each other’s existence.

Recognizing each other.

‘Yet the Sword Saint didn’t ask me anything, meaning... He waited for me to speak first. He was considerate.’

But he probably never imagined I’d bring it up at this timing. He must have thought I would confess in a quiet place like a secret conversation.

As proof, Sword Saint was quite embarrassed, looking around nervously.

"No, young man. King of Death. You shouldn’t say such things here...!"

"Are you flustered?"

I smiled broadly.

"Great! Elder, please be more flustered!"

"What, what...?"

"I haven't finished my technique yet! Please, take this!"

I rushed towards the old man.

Yes.

I brought up the Guardian Spirit topic purely to fluster Sword Saint!

"Wow. That's sly. There's no mercy in a fight, but this is something else..."

The notoriously vicious Guardian Spirit admired me. Ignoring its praise, I raised my holy sword high and brought it down.

'The visualization is the flames engulfing that mansion.'

The fire that raged there.

'The suffocating smoke.'

Aura exploded from my body. Red tentacles enveloped the surroundings. The aura turned into blazing flames, engulfing the plains, suffocating everything alive within it.

The field instantly transformed into a hell of fire.

".....!"

Only then did Sword Saint react. He quickly raised his blue aura to counter.

Sorry, but my technique isn't finished yet.

『I don't want to die.』

Resentment.

『I'm hungry.』

Desire.

『I want to live...』

Hope.

I filled my aura with all these yearnings.

Each strand of the rising aura carried the voice of a different child, burning with different paths and intensities.

The flames, now a living swarm, swarmed Sword Saint.

"Hmm?!"

Sword Saint hurriedly defended against the flames. He had to sever each wave of fire attacking from all sides.

Naturally, gaps appeared in Sword Saint's stance.

I pounced on those gaps like a beast.

Demonic Heavenly God Art - Reformation.

The First form.

Sword of Burning Youth.

My own version of Demonic Heavenly God Art that I decided to create.

The old man, witnessing this technique, widened his eyes.

"I'm sorry, elder. I'll take this fight!"

I swung my sword down towards Sword Saint's head.

Chapter 153:

Surging to the Top

(2)

"Huh?!"

Sword Saint was indeed Sword Saint. Despite being flustered, he swung his sword to the end. Had I not shaken his mind, even my first debut technique would have been blocked.

But this time, my move narrowly succeeded.

".....!"

My holy sword pointed at the old man's throat. Hesitation. Glancing at the blade just 5cm from his neck, the old man froze. The sword he swung in a final struggle was still over 15cm away from my neck.

"Huh."

I smirked slightly.

"I've won, elder."

"....."

Sword Saint's face soured rapidly.

"How can this be! Invalid! It's invalid!"

"Aaah, I don't understand what you mean. A match is a match. Are you planning to cry invalid even after being defeated in battle? Huh? I never thought the Sword Saint would be such a person."

"There's a limit to everything! This is... this is..."

"This is? What?"

"This is excessively sly!"

Sly?

That's a fantastic compliment!

"Puhahaha! Thank you, elder. To be called sly by the Sword Saint! It's like I'm living the dream. Please stay healthy and strong."

"This....."

Sword Saint trembled. His face screamed how annoyed he was with me. The more he was, the sweeter it was for me.

"I too held back talking about 'the master' for your sake! I've been considerate, waiting until now. Is it right to trample an old man's heart so pettily!"

"Sure, loser."

"L-Loser? Ha. We've fought 53 times, and I've won 52 times! If it's 53 battles with 52 wins and 1 loss, I'm obviously the winner!"

"The last one is always the most important. Haven't you heard of Xiang Yu, the Hemeon-King of Western Chu? You can win 100 times, but it's all for nothing if you lose once. If Sword Saint is Xiang Yu, then I am Liu Bang. The master of the world is me."

"So you're saying we should have another round!"

"Nope. I'm not fighting for the next six months. For six months, I'll spread the news everywhere that I've beaten the Sword Saint. After that, maybe I'll consider fighting again."

"H... Huh...!!"

Sword Saint seemed on the verge of fainting. Oh, the misery. Maybe his Ki was blocked and meridians twisted leading to delirium. I should pray for the Sword Saint's soul.

That's when a voice came from not too far away.

"...You two seem close."

Pop!

Someone appeared out of thin air and landed lightly. It was the Black Dragon Witch. Using a teleportation skill, her appearance made the spectators in the outfield murmur. The top three hunters, from ranking 1 to 3, were gathered in one place.

"Hmm."

Black Dragon Witch also noticed people's gaze. She slightly smiled and waved her hand.

Click! Click!

Hunters busily clicked on their smartphones to capture the scene of us three together. Only then did Black Dragon Witch turn to look at us, wearing an incredulous expression.

"It's usual for the King of Death to be childish, but why are you like this too, Sword Saint? Hanging out with him, did your mental age drop as well? Without your noble image, you're just a corpse."

"Don't want to hear that from a witch who's as good at faking innocence as breathing!"

"Ah. Yeah. Now that I think about it, you did have a hot-blooded vibe in the early days of entering the tower. I vaguely remember... not that I miss it."

Black Dragon Witch seemed to recall the past, her gaze softening for a moment. But soon enough, she composed herself and stated her business to us.

"It's good to play like kids, but today, show the demeanor of the top two rankers. Everyone else is already gathered at the Great Library."

"Eh?"

I sheathed my holy sword, asking,

"What happened?"

"Stuff happens every day without getting boring... Yeah. Today is a bit of a big deal."

Black Dragon Witch spoke softly.

"Let's open the 31st floor."

It's been 56 days since we cleared the Great Library.

For the past two months, we've had a hectic time.

What? We should rest after struggling from the 21st to the 30th floors? That's for ordinary hunters. Top rankers like Black Dragon Witch and I have been even busier. To put it exaggeratedly, we nearly died.

A month ago, a powerful warlord in Africa completely collapsed, and about 1,300 of his remnant soldiers fled to the tower. It was maddening, but such things happen quite often. The tower is already overflowing with entrants, and dealing with those warlords kept us incredibly busy.

"Welcome! We've been waiting for you, everyone!"

Upon arriving at the Great Library, the Heretic Inquisitor greeted us with a bright smile.

Adorable as an angel, but when I recall that he wore the same smile while personally interrogating 33 of those warlords, his cuteness level drops a bit.

"You heard? We're going to open the 31st floor?"

"Yes! The urgent tasks are mostly finished. There's still a lot to solve, but it's manageable at the executive level. Ah, our duties must be fulfilled!"

"Hmm."

I nodded.

The purpose of top rankers is to conquer the tower. We move upwards, raising our flags, showing those who follow that there's still a 'place we must go'. We show the direction. When the direction is clear, hope naturally arises.

In return, we hold power.

And with that responsibility, we stake our lives.

"King of Death. But what happened in this morning's sparring? Sword Saint is making a face like he ate something terrible!"

"He's probably just uncomfortable. Let's end the meeting quickly for the elder's sake."

"Poor Sword Saint, you can go to the bathroom if you need. We can wait a few more minutes, the 31st floor isn't going anywhere! Oh. Is it constipation? That's a bit troublesome."

"You lot....."

"Hmm."

Paladin cleared her throat.

"Everyone's here, so let's proceed."

Paladin turned her head to look at Hamusutra.

Hamusutra, dressed as a cafe worker, silently stood by the table. He was no longer the librarian of the Great Library but now an employee of the Library Cafe Planetarium.

"Then, call the [Head Librarian]."

"Um. Understood."

Hamusutra smiled and walked out, not through the main entrance but the back door marked 'No Entry Except for Authorized Personnel'.

Shortly after.

A plumply dressed child followed Hamusutra in.

"Did you call me...?"

The child yawned heavily.

"Ah, it's the King of Death. Long time no see."

Seemingly just woken up, the child even clutched a pillow. It was adorned with colorful peaches.

Though looking completely like a young child.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages greets you.]

This child is the new librarian of the 30th floor, replacing Hamusutra. Not just any constellation, but one of the so-called 'Pillars'.

I bowed slightly.

"Yes, long time no see, Princess."

I'll have the chance to talk about this constellation later.

What's important now is that [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] is in charge of the library and the revelations. She plays the role of a guide and helper in our tower conquest.

"Hmm."

The Princess sleepily looked around the cafe table.

"All the top rankers are here... Ah. Are we starting today?"

"That's right."

Black Dragon Witch answered on our behalf.

"Two months ago, you said you'd open the next stage whenever we wanted. We've tidied up things, so we're starting the conquest again today."

"Huh. You guys are really fast..."

The Princess rubbed her eyes.

"Just in case you're mistaken, there's no time limit to conquering the tower. It's fine whether it's cleared in 600 or 1200 years, or even not at all. Are you really unlocking the 31st floor today?"

"Yes, we are..."

"Ah, sorry. Black Dragon. I wasn't asking you."

The Princess dismissed Black Dragon Witch.

"This is a decision for the number 1 in the rankings. It's a rule. Same for any tower. You're number 3, so you don't have a say."

"....."

Black Dragon Witch fell silent.

"Sorry, it's a bit autocratic, isn't it? The tower has its reasons. Who takes the number 1 spot affects a lot, though 'now' you're lucky. In the past..."

"Princess."

Hamusutra spoke quietly.

"I'm not in a position to criticize, but you're talking too much."

"Ah. Sorry. I've been sleepy since I descended here... Anyway, Swordy boy. Are you really unlocking the 31st floor?"

The person the Princess looked at was our tower's number 1, Sword Saint.

"....."

Sword Saint slowly looked around. Hunters meeting his gaze nodded one after another. Even Paladin nodded, and only then Sword Saint spoke.

"Unlock it."

"Okay. Got it."

The Princess spread her arms.

The pillow in her embrace dropped to the floor with a thud.

"I, [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages], as the temporary guide of this tower, acknowledge your ascension."

At that moment, a voice resounded.

[Announcing to everyone.]

[As of today, the next stage has been unlocked.]

It was the voice of the tower.

"Alright. Let's skip the welcome speech since I'm here..."

The Princess waved her hand.

Then, a list appeared in front of us.

+

1. Pure Humans Race

2. Ghost Tribe

3. Mountain Calamity Tribe

4. Gill Fishes Tribe

5. Ancient Orchid Clan

•

•

•

•

•

•

•

+

No matter how much I scrolled, the list seemed endless. Dozens, maybe hundreds of races were listed in succession.

'Finally, it's here.'

My heart raced with excitement as I steadied myself.

But my companions seemed more curious than excited. They furrowed their brows as they looked over the list.

Naturally, the first to ask a question was the Heretic Inquisitor.

"What is this?"

"You asked well."

The Princess chuckled.

It seemed she took pleasure in answering questions.

"Try clicking on any of them. Then you'll understand."

Following the Princess's suggestion, the Heretic Inquisitor clicked on 'Shuninjong'.

Pop! A hologram appeared.

+

[Pure Humans Race]

Extinction Grade: F (No danger)

Maxim: 'We decide the world.'

Description: A race with average abilities across the board.

Depending on the world, the Pure are enslaved by other races or rule as masters of the world. 'We represent all intelligent beings.' The Pure claim themselves as pure humans, promoting average as normal, and establishing it as the standard.

Traits: [Fast Stance Change], [Legacy of Records], [Square Enthusiast]

Evolution: None

Alias: Human, Hume, Homo Sapiens, etc.

+

An image was displayed next to the description.

It depicted humans, just like us.

"....."

My excitement intensified.

If I remembered correctly, the stages to come were...

"Race Wars!"

The Race War.

"From now on, you must choose one race! That race will worship you like gods, and as you command, prophesy, and divine, they will cultivate a 'civilization'."

We had to choose one from hundreds of races.

In the past, Flame Emperor, the former number 1, chose the Fairy Race, commonly known as 'Elves'. What he did with them was too dreadful to describe.

I learned then that Elves could become so brutal and ferocious.

'For the Fire God!'

Elves, shouting this as they mercilessly slaughtered other ances, showed what disaster befalls when the number 1 ranker is misguided.

"Hmm."

The Heretic Inquisitor tilted his head.

"What does it mean to cultivate a civilization?"

"Exactly as it says. Cultivate a civilization as you wish. It could be a civilization of war-crazed plunderers or of scholars who worship knowledge. It's up to you. Maybe this will make it clearer?"

The Princess bent down, picking up the peach pillow again.

"This time, you'll be..."

Cradling the peach pillow, she smiled.

"Experiencing the role of a Constellation!"

Murmurs spread among my companions.

Meanwhile, I was swiftly scrolling through the list.

Calculating which race would yield the best outcome.

'Dragonkin. Sounds intimidating with 'dragon' in it, but they were just Wyvern-like creatures, right? Fairies... I was drawn to them before the regression, but no. The image of fairies tarnished by the Flame Emperor has left a deep wound in my tender heart...'

-You madman.

The Guardian Spirit clicked his tongue.

-Just pick the Pure Humans Race normally. You're a human. I am too. Humans. Those who have tasted meat know it best, same with races.

'No.'

The choice of race was clear.

+

103. Earth Spirit Tribe

+

I silently touched the hologram of that race.

+

[Earth Spirit Tribe]

Extinction Grade: A (High Danger)

Alias: Goblin, etc.

+

Goblin.

The sight of the three-syllable word sent an electric tremor through me.

How could I describe this lightning-like sensation?

Love?

Destiny?

No.

'I am a returner who has traveled back in time by 11 years.'

Thus, this is-

'Inevitability.'

I pulled out a card from my pocket.

My ace in the hole, cherished and reserved for this moment.

An undisclosed secret technique that no one could have imagined.

'The time has come.'

On the brown card, words were densely written.

+

[Goblin High Society]

Rank: F

Effect: The Great Goblin pondered deeply. 'Our goblin culture is too lowly. Every language ending in Kerk or Keruk. How can I, the boss, shine with such a language!' Then, a stroke of genius hit him. 'That's it! From now on, I will not say Keruk, but Gorr. Gorr! A pronunciation befitting my refined sensibilities.'

*However, this causes internal conflict within the tribe.

*Skill copied from the monster Great Goblin King.

+

-Wait a minute.

Guardian Spirit sensed something amiss and changed color.

-You're not serious, right? You, as mad as you are, wouldn't do that. Right?

I made a solemn face.

'Goblin.'

With an unwavering voice, I declared.

'I choose Goblin.'

The Guardian Spirit was silent for a moment.

Then, he exploded.

-You crazy lunatic!!

Now.

It's time to soar.

Chapter 154:

Surging to the Top

(3)

Naturally, I was the only one eyeing the Earth Spirit Tribe, the Goblins. The other companions reacted diversely as they browsed through the list.

"The pinnacle of all races is surely the dragon. This race marked as 'Dragonkin' must be the most superior."

"Look at the illustration. They just look like wyverns. Can they even speak?"

"There are so many intelligent races..."

"Oh, indeed. Oh ho."

The Countess was fervently searching through the list, reminiscent of someone determined to pick the freshest apple at an open market. On the other hand, the Black Dragon Witch slightly frowned in distaste, while the Heretic Inquisitor's eyes sparkled.

"Princess! I have a question!"

"Ah, I like students who ask questions. It gives me a chance to show off for free. Go ahead, Heretic. I'll gladly let you assist in my bragging."

"Are we choosing only one race for our tower?"

"Good question."

The Princess buried her face in her pillow, chuckling.

"It's your choice."

"Our choice, you say?"

"Now, I'm going to give a gift to the top seven in the ranking."

Swoosh.

A hologram window appeared in front of us.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages sponsors startup funds.]

[You have received 700 race points!]

[Your total race points are now 700.]

It was a reward I had never received before regression.

As the Princess said, this privilege was given only to the top seven rankers. In my past life, where I was nameless, such a thing was beyond my wildest dreams.

"Now, as the first in ranking, our Swordy boy must choose!"

Technically, it wasn't given to us yet, but we could potentially receive this bonus.

"From the 31st to the 40th floors, a total of ten calamities will strike you. Each one is a terrifying disaster! Your primary goal is to survive these and lead your civilization to prosperity. Now, Swordy, will you put all your points in one race or distribute them?"

"Put all my points?"

The term was unfamiliar, and the Sword Emperor, our tower's number one ranker, furrowed his brows.

"What does that mean?"

"It's literal. You can choose one race and put all 700 points into it. Or, each of the top seven rankers can pick one race, starting with 100 points each."

The Princess grinned broadly.

"Putting all 700 points in one race obviously has its benefits. You can get a head start. But the risk is also greater. If that race goes extinct, you all go down with it. On the other hand-"

"If we each choose a race, the risk is distributed. Even if one race goes extinct, the others can still survive."

"Right! You catch on quickly."

"....."

The Sword Saint stroked his chin, his eyes becoming more contemplative.

In the past, the Flame Emperor, the former number one ranker, didn't hesitate and chose 'all in.' He manipulated the elf race as he pleased, disregarding the opinions of other rankers and guild leaders.

But the Sword Emperor was different.

".....Evolution is an art of diversity and chance."

He was a wise elder.

"The environmental changes a single race has to endure are infinite. To survive in a cruel world, diversity of species must be ensured first. I don't know how significant these 700 points are, but it's hard to see them equaling the value of seven races."

"Ah."

"We choose 'distribution,' Princess."

The Princess looked at us amusedly.

"Really? If you choose seven races, they will compete against each other. Someone might even stab another in the back."

"Conflict is also a form of competition."

The Sword Emperor spoke calmly.

"Those without rivals are usually eliminated."

The old man glanced at me briefly. Without a word, the gaze conveyed his intention. Recalling our recent sword fight, I nodded.

"Hmm."

The Sword Emperor also nodded.

"I'll say it again. Our tower chooses distribution."

"Great!"

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages welcomes your choice.]

"Now, from the first to the seventh in ranking, choose the race you'll rule! Oh, and guys, remember, no duplicates. If someone else has already chosen a race, the next person can't select it."

The Princess sat down in the cafe chair. Hamusutra had already served her a coffee. Sipping a smoothie loaded with chocolate chips, she winked at us.

"Take about 120 years to think about it if you want! There's no time limit on choosing your race."

Of course, there was no need for such lengthy deliberation.

The Sword Emperor, the number one ranker, was the first to choose a race.

"I choose the Shuninjong."

"

Ah..."

Disappointment echoed around. The Shuninjong (Obedient Human Race) resembled us humans. Lacking distinct traits but familiar to us. It seemed there were quite a few hunters eyeing this race.

"Well, a safe choice. What will you choose, King of Death?"

The Princess turned to me.

The eyes of my comrades also converged on me.

Everyone was curious about my choice.

-Choose zombies...

Preta was internally agonizing.

-Or elves. They're potent. Good-looking, long-lived, and high in magic. Let's go with elves, huh?

I spoke solemnly.

"I'll choose the Earth Spirit Tribe."

-Ahhhhh! Insane! Lunatic! Insane lunatic!!

Preta tumbled around in the air.

Below him, my fellow hunters displayed a collective '?' on their faces.

"The Earth Spirit Tribe?"

The Black Dragon Witch asked on behalf of everyone.

"What is that?"

"It's number 103 on the list."

"Oh. 103? That means..."

My comrades each scrolled through their lists. After a long scroll,

"....."

Silence fell.

"Uh...?"

The Black Dragon Witch rubbed her eyes.

Did she see or hear something wrong?

But it's okay. We are of one mind. What I see, she also sees, and what she sees, I too am seeing.

+

[Earth Spirit Tribe]

Extinction Grade: A (High Danger)

Maxim: 'Keruk! Goruk!'

Description: A race with all abilities in the lower tier. In other words, an inferior race. Their intelligence is less than that of the Pure Humans, their combat power falls short of the Ghost Tribe, and their magic is weaker than the Vampiric Race. Amazing! No matter which aspect you consider, there's always a superior counterpart to the Earth Spirit Tribe!

From the perspective of any race, the Earth Spirit Tribe is not admirable. A race devoid of beauty. That's the Earth Spirit Tribe. From the Pure Humans to the Earth Spirit Tribe themselves, all races consider the Earth Spirit Tribe as 'ugly.'

So ugly!

This is a bit too much!

Traits: [Victim of Racial Discrimination], [Kinship], [Greed]

Evolution: Unknown. Two evolutions exist. 10,000 racial points are needed for the next evolution.

Alias: Goblin, etc.

+

An illustration stood alone next to the description.

A creature, unmistakably a goblin, was depicted.

"Uh, uh...."

The Black Dragon Witch stumbled over her words.

"King of Death?"

"Yes."

"That's a goblin, right? It says so in the alias."

"Yes, it's a goblin."

".....Are you insane?"

"Huh."

I smiled triumphantly. The Black Dragon Witch looked at me as if I had lost my mind. Not just her, but all my comrades did. Ah, but how could sparrows understand the intentions of a phoenix?

"Everyone."

I clasped my hands together like a solitary sage.

"Goblins, the Earth Spirit Tribe, are the greatest race in this world."

The Black Dragon Witch's gaze turned slightly pitiful.

"King of Death... you poor thing... I'm sorry. You've been too busy lately, right? I'll be more considerate from now on. Let's cancel all the interviews scheduled for this month."

"Please listen to me devoutly, everyone."

I preached about the greatness of goblins.

"Look at the description. It says, 'In any field you choose, you can find a superior counterpart to the Earth Spirit Tribe.' Right?"

"Uh-huh."

"In other words, they can exhibit inferior abilities in any field. Whether it's intelligence, magic power, or combat, they might not be the best, but they can be the next best or at least the least worst."

"Uh..."

My fellow hunters looked confused.

'He's interpreting it that way?'

"Above all, they're pitiful. Look, every race considers goblins ugly. Even the description mocks them. I... feel a kinship with them..."

I gave a sorrowful smile.

"They're persecuted and ignored, thus exiled. Doesn't it remind you of us in our tower?"

"....."

"Yes. Goblins are in fact a reflection of ourselves. What's truly ugly is not the goblins, but our hearts that scorn them... Ah, everyone. I am saddened. We all have a 'goblin heart' within us..."

My comrades' faces were baffled.

'Has he finally lost his mind?'

I firmly continued my speech.

"Goblins will rise."

"....."

"They will surely rise."

"....."

"Trust me, I'm a prophet. Don't you believe me?"

"Alright, alright. Have it your way."

Overwhelmed by my unwavering determination, the Black Dragon Witch gave in. She seemed to want to avoid me as much as possible, but that must be my imagination. Our friendship is solid. Right.

"Ahahaha!"

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages was rolling with laughter.

"Alright. The King of Death chooses goblins, right?"

"Yes. My heart is clear and free of doubt."

"Ah, as expected. That's why I... No, never mind. Let's continue."

The racial selection for the top seven rankers was completed.

The races chosen by each were as follows:

+

1st Place, Sword Emperor: Pure Humans Race

- Alias: Human.

2nd Place, King of Death: Earth Spirit Tribe.

- Alias: Goblin.

3rd Place, Black Dragon Witch: Vampiric Tribe.

- Alias: Vampire.

4th Place, Heretic Inquisitor: Mountain Calamity Tribe.

- Alias: Snail.

5th Place, Countess: Fairy Tribe.

- Alias: Elf.

6th Place, Viper: Ghost Tribe.

- Alias: Dokkaebi.

7th Place, Paladin: Gill Fishes Tribe.

- Alias: Mermaid.

+

The Paladin, who had been lingering in 9th place, had risen to 7th place over the past two months. See worked hard in dismantling the African warlords. Thanks to that, he got to participate in this stage.

"Alright. Everyone's done. Now each person will get 100 points."

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages distributes the grant.]

[You have received 100 race points!]

[Your total race points are now 100.]

The Princess put down her glass on the café table.

"Shall we start lightly with the 31st floor?"

Fwoosh!

At the exact moment the glass touched the table, we were enveloped in light. A moment passed.

When we opened our eyes, we were above a primeval forest.

"Here...?"

"This is the world where the races you chose live in peace. Look below."

Looking down, we saw tiny creatures scurrying about in the forest. Each race had formed its own tribe, living in a primitive state.

"Oh ho, the Mermaids are living in the swamp!"

"Fascinating... The Vampiric Tribe lives in caves."

We observed the races as if visiting a museum.

It was as if we had gained a third-person omniscient perspective.

We zoomed in and out as we wished, even going down among the primitives. They didn't notice us at all.

-Keruk...

-Keruk, ker.

The Earth Spirit Tribe were busily butchering a creature resembling a giant centipede with stone knives. When they roasted the centipede's legs over the fire, surprisingly, it smelled like chicken.

-Keruk!

Young goblins were eagerly devouring the centipede meat.

'Centipede chicken?'

Could it be that in this world, giant centipedes are the source of chicken meat? Then, each leg could taste like a chicken drumstick. Catching one centipede would yield dozens of drumsticks.

Wow, isn't that amazing? Could this world be a paradise?

"Goblins look quite cute from this perspective."

-Are you insane? Well, you've always been...

The Guardian Spirit clicked his tongue in disbelief.

The small primitive communities had us captivated.

Rumble, rumble...

Unfortunately, the peaceful times were brief.

A towering mountain in the midst of the forest began to shake. It was a volcano. The primitives below couldn't see it, but with our third-person view, we could clearly see the lava bubbling up.

"Hmm?"

"Uh-oh."

My comrades were startled.

"This looks... a bit dangerous."

Shortly thereafter, the volcano erupted. We intuitively knew it. Lava would mercilessly engulf the forest, and the races living there would be doomed to extinction.

If nothing was done, all seven races we were guiding would face extinction.

"Then, let's start with the first quest of the 31st floor!"

The Princess announced.

"This is the Great Primeval Forest, where many races coexist. But as you can see, the volcano will soon erupt and destroy everything!"

A hologram appeared before us.

[The 31st floor quest has been given.]

Text quickly formed.

+

[End of the Golden Age]

Difficulty: E

Mission Objective: The Golden Age of all races has come to an end. A volcano is about to erupt in this land where numerous races have built their homes. There's no time. You must guide your protected race to a 'safe area'!

*However, failure to guide them will result in the extinction of your race.

+

Boom!

Almost simultaneously with the quest's announcement, the first explosion from the volcano echoed. Lava spewed, shaking the rocks. Huge boulders teetered as if they would tumble down any moment.

"Uh."

The Black Dragon Witch hastily said,

"Wait. They can't see or hear us. How are we supposed to lead them to safety? Communication itself is impossible!"

"Indeed."

The Princess smiled mischievously.

Behind her smile, Boom! Rocks shot into the air. They fell in the middle of the forest.

-Kirrr!

-Kek! Kek!

The primitive tribes finally sensed something was wrong. Some quickly climbed trees to look at the volcano, which was spewing lava.

"But you are their guardian constellations. From now on, it's up to you to handle it!"

The 31st floor had begun.

Goblins were in a state of confusion.

I smiled at them, unseen.

"Don't worry, little ones."

From now on, I'll carry you.

Chapter 155:

Becoming God (1)

The volcano painted the world in hues of red.

Rumble, rumble, rumble-

Lava engulfed the mountaintop, uncontrollable like overflowing soda. The lush greenery covering the slopes and peaks was instantly set ablaze.

Screams echoed from numerous races.

"I'm just here to assist you."

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages yawned against the backdrop of the disaster.

"You are different. You are the Guardian Constellations caring for these children. You chose to open the next stage and selected a race to nurture. Please, make an effort."

"But even if you ask me to try... This is troublesome."

The Paladin frowned, alternating her gaze between the volcano and the primitives. Impatience was evident on her face.

"There's no way to intervene. We can't communicate, be seen, or heard. How can we possibly evacuate these children?"

Our Tower's Vigilante Corps Vice-Captain is inherently good. She would want to help these unfamiliar races.

The other colleagues were similarly restless. Most of them couldn't stand still as lava continued to ravage the primeval forest.

"Hmm."

I stepped in.

"Princess, before starting the stage, you distributed something called [Race Points] to us."

"And?"

"You wouldn't have given them to us without a reason. There must be a purpose for these points."

I spoke calmly.

"As our helper, please tell us what we can do with these [Race Points]. Preferably quickly and intuitively."

"....."

The Princess grinned. Her eyes seemed to say, 'You're correct.' My companions' eyes widened, realizing the validity of my point.

"Aha... Perhaps it's a system to purchase certain items or skills?"

"We'll also use points! Please show us the services available with points!"

"Ha."

The Princess shrugged her shoulders.

"This is why having a quick-witted warrior makes a difference in clearing a stage, right? Well, the King of Death is correct. This certainly falls under the helper's duties."

Swoosh!

A notification window appeared, displaying a hologram before us.

[Welcome to the Civilization Store.]

The hologram contained an extensive list of products.

+

[Oracle Message] - 20p

[Animal Possession] - 40p

[Appearance in Dreams] - 100p

[Hunting Prey Tracking] - 5p

[Bronze-rank Settlement Search] - 80p

[Tribal-rank General (Lottery)] - 100P

[Bronze-rank Technology Invention (Lottery)] - 1,000P

•

•

•

+

'Okay.'

Now the real challenge begins.

I had been referencing the 'strategy guide' Flame Emperor had gone through in the past. He often bragged in interviews about how he conquered stages, and those collections served as a sort of strategy guide.

I remember this strategy guide quite well.

'But that doesn't mean I know every specific tactic.'

I knew about the existence of the [Civilization Store].

However, I didn't know which products would help us overcome the current crisis. I had to figure it out myself, using my own intellect.

'How can I surely guide the goblins to safety? Maybe I should buy [Oracle Message] to attempt communication?'

I pondered.

Just then, the Paladin spoke urgently.

"I have a question. Does [Oracle Message] directly deliver a message to a race?"

Interestingly, the Paladin had her eye on the same item as I did. The Princess nodded, as if she had expected this.

"Yes, that's right."

"In what way is the message delivered?"

"It's a method you're already familiar with. It's similar to how Constellations communicate with you."

The Princess twirled a lock of hair around her finger.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages demonstrates an example for you.]

A voice echoed in my head. It was an audio message.

"You've experienced it several times already, haven't you?"

"I told you. You're experiencing what it's like to be Constellations. Oh, and remember, [Oracle Message] is a one-time use product. Even if you purchase it, you can only send it once, so be careful! The recipient of the message is also limited to one person! If you want to send more, you'll have to purchase again."

The Paladin nodded in understanding.

"I see. I'll purchase one [Oracle Message]."

The Princess smiled ominously.

"Sure. But remember, there are absolutely no refunds, no matter what happens."

I sensed something was off with the Princess's smile.

But the purchase was already completed.

The Paladin looked down at her chosen race, the Gill Fishes Tribe, which were mermaids. They were floundering in the river, gills fluttering.

"The lava is flowing in from the east... South won't work."

The Paladin muttered to herself. Even in urgency, she tried to stay calm. She chose a leader-like mermaid and declared her oracle.

"[Swim westward with all your might!]"

Shiver!

The mermaid leader splashed vigorously.

-Kyaw? Kyaw Kyaw?

The mermaid seemed startled, thrashing the water with its tail. Suddenly hearing a divine voice in its head would naturally be shocking.

But this mermaid's reaction was odd.

".....Huh?"

The mermaid didn't swim west. It just spun in place. Despite using valuable points, the oracle was ignored. The Paladin stared blankly at the mermaid.

"Wait a minute. This is different! Why isn't it following the oracle?"

"Hmm?"

The Princess leaned on a pillow, feigning ignorance.

"Just because you hear the voice of Constellations doesn't mean you immediately say 'Yes, understood' and respond accordingly, right? Maybe it's similar to that."

"What.....!"

"Or not. Anyway, there's not much time left. If left alone, all races might go extinct from the 31st floor onwards. That would be the end of your tower conquest."

Annoying as she was, the Princess was right.

Rumble, rumble, rumble-

The lava had now reached the foothills. Not just the lava, but the exploding volcanic rocks were also a threat. A single rock hitting a tribe could cause significant damage.

'Why? Why didn't the oracle work?'

I quickly racked my brains.

'Was the Princess deceiving us? No. It's unlikely that the tower's guide would deliberately deceive us. She might not tell the truth, but she wouldn't lie. Could it be that the mermaid genuinely didn't understand?'

While I pondered, the goblins caught my eye.

-Ker! Kerk! Keruk!

The goblins howled. Faced with rocks raining down like meteor showers, the primitive race was in panic.

"....."

That moment.

"Ah."

I realized something.

An all-too-obvious truth.

"The oracle wasn't wrong!"

"Hm?"

"The Paladin's oracle was flawless! The problem lies with them!"

I turned to my companions. Our eyes met, and the Paladin, who was contemplating purchasing another [Oracle Message], paused.

"What do you mean, King of Death?"

"Don't buy another message. It's useless."

"But why? We need to know the reason..."

"Of course! They're real primitives. How could they understand something like [Swim westward with all your might]? They don't even know what [west] is!"

"Ah, indeed!"

"Yes! Their translation might not even be accurate. They lack the [vocabulary]!"

The Paladin's eyes widened.

"What?"

Only then did the Paladin realize the oversight.

The other colleagues' eyes widened too. My point was correct. Compared to the primitives, our language was overly advanced. No matter how much they wanted to understand, they couldn't.

"...Good heavens. So the oracle is truly useless?"

The Black Dragon Witch expressed disbelief.

"[Go that way] might work, but this time we can't specify [that way]... We can't be sure how much they understand our language."

"No, there must be a way."

The Tower does not lie.

It never sets up a stage that is impossible to conquer.

I looked again at the [Civilization Store] with confidence.

+

[Oracle Message] - 20p

[Animal Possession] - 40p

[Appearance in Dreams] - 100p

[Hunting Prey Tracking] - 5p

[Bronze-rank Settlement Search] - 80p

[Tribal-rank General (Lottery)] - 100P

[Bronze-rank Technology Invention (Lottery)] - 1,000P

+

And then.

I thought of a strategy.

A way to evacuate the primitives to a safe area without using language.

"Princess!"

"Yep."

"Can I use [Hunting Prey Tracking] to find a specific prey? For example, if I want a tiger, can it locate the nearest one?"

The Princess nodded.

"Yes, that's possible. There are no tigers in this world, but it can find the closest resembling beast. However, direct possession of a primitive is prohibited. You'll need a higher-grade item for that."

Okay.

A plan formed in my mind.

"I'll purchase one [Hunting Prey Tracking]."

The Black Dragon Witch, not understanding, tried to dissuade me.

"King of Death? In this situation, why leisurely hunt..."

"I'll explain later!"

We were running out of time.

[Purchasing 'Hunting Prey Tracking.']

[5 Race Points will be consumed!]

[You currently have 95 Race Points.]

A card of the same color appeared in my hand.

Without hesitation, I asked the Princess.

"Princess, please locate a creature 'with a unique color,' 'fast on its feet,' and 'fairly large' nearby. Something like a white deer or a white lion, or even a black horse. Anything will do!"

".....Heh."

The Princess's eyes gleamed with amusement.

"Those are pretty vague criteria. But okay, I'll find it for you. You're still beginners after all. I don't want to be as strict as with the others."

With a flick of her finger, the Princess activated the card.

My card melted away.

[Your 'Hunting Prey Tracking' has been consumed.]

The card dissolved into colored dust, moving as if it had its own will. The dust led to a thicket where a large creature crouched.

A lion with white fur.

Fortunately, it was quite close to the goblin tribe.

"I'll purchase another item from the shop."

I spoke decisively.

"I'm buying [Animal Possession]."

Messages appeared in succession.

[Purchasing 'Animal Possession.']

[40 Race Points will be consumed!]

[You currently have 55 Race Points.]

Half of the valuable initial funds were gone in an instant. But it didn't matter. The priority was to save the goblin race from the impending volcanic lava.

"Ah!"

The Heretic Inquisitor realized my plan.

"Indeed! Everyone, possess the most conspicuous animals!"

Following my lead, the Heretic Inquisitor purchased [Hunting Prey Tracking] and [Animal Possession].

"Primitives revere animals with mystical appearances. It's a very basic form of faith! Aha, ha. In a situation like the end of the world, if a 'white lion' or 'black deer' appears, they'll take it as a divine sign!"

Typical of the Heretic Inquisitor. Quick to understand.

"Possess these mystical animals and guide them to safety! They'll follow without needing words! A brilliant idea, King of Death!"

"Ah."

"Certainly..."

"Everyone, hurry up!"

My colleagues purchased the same items.

Leaving them behind, I pointed at the white lion and used the [Animal Possession] card.

"I'll possess this animal."

Sssshhhh!

My consciousness flickered into darkness.

The next moment, I opened my eyes to a different view.

"Growl..."

From my mouth, no, from the beast's jaws, a rough growl escaped. Sharp claws dug into the ground. The beautiful white fur masked the wild ferocity.

"Growl! Growl!"

'Perfect, everything is going as planned!'

I stood up in the lion's body. Its form was utterly different from a human's. Walking on four legs felt strange. Despite the awkwardness, I ran towards the nearby goblins.

'Using aura is... not impossible, but difficult. The Ki points are too different.'

Thump! Thump!

I dashed through the dry forest path. The lion's forelegs struck the ground, and its hindlegs kicked off. Though quadrupedal running was awkward, the lion's speed was incredibly fast.

'Oh.'

It felt amazing.

'This is unexpectedly pleasant?'

The smell of smoke from the burning trees.

The scent of freshly blossomed flowers.

And this stench... must be the goblins. It smelled like a pot of bean paste stew left out in the summer heat for too long.

'Ugh. Why does this race even smell bad?'

Soon, I arrived at the goblin village. The strong scent made it easier to find.

-Keruk!

-Ker, Kerk!

The primitive goblins were still in a state of panic. Young goblins clung to their mothers, wailing, and the adults either banged their heads on the ground (I had no idea what gesture that was) or stomped their feet.

They were so panicked they didn't even notice the white lion approaching.

‘Such a pitiful and unfortunate race.’

I stood at the entrance of the village.

"Growl!"

I roared towards the goblins.

-Keruk?!

-Kerup! Ker?!

The goblins panicked. Those who were head-butting the ground hastily stood up, only to stumble and fall. The wails of the young goblins intensified.

‘Good job. Very good.’

From the goblins' perspective, the earth had just quaked, a fire demon had covered the sky, and now a strangely colored beast had appeared. It must have felt like the end of the world.

"Growl!"

I swished my tail and hit the ground, then shook my head.

‘Follow me, you little ones!’

Hesitantly, the goblins began to stand up.

‘Yes, that's it! Good, my little ones!’

I snorted.

Goblins. You are bipedal creatures. Though your brains may be soaked in green stupidity as a primitive tribe, you can one day achieve a dazzling civilization!

"Gar, growl!"

‘Come on, follow me!’

I turned around gracefully and walked into the forest.

The goblins hesitantly followed. There was a brief squabble over who would lead, but eventually, all the goblins in the village started to follow me, entranced.

Then.

Boom!

Not long after I led the group away, an exploded rock from the volcano landed on the goblin village. The ground shook violently.

-Ker?!

-Keru! Kerp, Ker?!

The goblins dropped to the ground in fright. They soon realized that their homeland had suffered a terrible fate and had narrowly escaped the disaster.

[The last residence of the Goblin race has been destroyed!]

[You must now lead them to a new residence.]

The goblins looked at me, utterly lost.

Their goofy faces held a subtle charm.

"Gar."

‘Hmph.’

I snorted as the white lion.

"Kek, Kerk."

‘You should be grateful.’

And with a majestic stride, I walked on.

-Ker...

-Ker, Kerk!

The goblins’ mood changed. Initially following in fear and caution, they suddenly began to eagerly chase after me.

-Kek, Kerk!

The goblins shouted.

-Kek, Kerk! Kek, Kerk!

‘What are these things saying...?’

I was relieved they finally seemed to understand me. Unfortunately, their chatter didn't translate.

Then, a voice from the Tower echoed in my head.

[A Primitive Belief!]

[The Goblin race awakens to primitive religion!]

Huh?

[Hail to you!]

[Your race is the first in this world to adopt a primitive religion!]

I blinked in surprise.

[From now on, the Goblin race will develop the 'White Lion Faith'.]

[You have achieved a first-time achievement!]

[500 Race Points are awarded to you!]

What's this about?

I looked back at the goblin horde in bemusement.

-Kek, Kerk! Kek, Kerk!

The goblins were chanting a strange slogan, following me. Huh. I couldn't help but snort in disbelief.

‘Are these guys really taking me for a god?’

Kim Gong-Ja.

It was the moment I became a god to the goblins.

Chapter 156:

Becoming God (2)

Guided by my lead, the goblins safely escaped.

-Ker! Keru!

-Kek, Kerk!

The goblins hopped around joyously, resembling green chimpanzees. If they had cried 'Ukiki' instead of 'Kerk,' they would have been mistaken for monkeys.

'These little guys are cute.'

-They look cute to you...? Huh?

Guardian Spirit commented with a grimace.

-You sure your eyes haven't gone bad, zombie?

'Look with your heart, Sword Emperor. I see a future for the goblins, a future so noble and beautiful. I can see a future that hasn't arrived yet.'

-Ah, I can't deal with this kid anymore... My mind goes blank every time he opens his mouth...

Meanwhile, other races had also successfully escaped.

The Black Dragon Witch, transformed into an elegant Black Swan, led the Vampiric Tribe. Earlier, when emerging from the forest and looking up, I saw a flurry of bats flapping their wings across the sky. Forming a triangular formation, they followed the Black Swan.

'Oh. That's impressive.'

Our eyes met for a moment as the Black Swan flew past. In its pitch-black eyes, I saw not the wildness of a beast but the intellect of the Black Dragon Witch. Flap! The Black Swan spread its wings wide.

-Yihee!

And then, in an instant, it disappeared beyond the horizon.

My companions, too, had transformed into mystical animals and led a grand escape.

[Quest Clear!]

[You have successfully evacuated your race from the Primeval Forest.]

[As a reward for completing the quest, you receive 300 Race Points!]

[You currently have 855 Race Points.]

The reward was quite generous.

'500 points for creating a primitive religion or something, and 300 points for the quest. Not bad.'

-Hmm. Is that a lot?

'It's sufficient for the beginning. At least we won't starve for points now.'

-If you say so. More power to you, Goblin God Kim Gong-Ja.

'Yes. Now we need to find them a place to live and eat.'

-Is there no damage to your ego at all...?

I chose the next item to purchase in my mind. Shopping in the Civilization Store was possible even in the lion's form.

[Would you like to purchase 'Bronze-rank Settlement Search'?]

Without hesitation, I splurged.

'Yes.'

Messages appeared in succession.

[Purchasing 'Bronze-rank Settlement Search'.]

[80 Race Points will be consumed!]

[You currently have 775 Race Points.]

Whoosh!

A vision unfolded in my mind. After crossing a river and three streams, a suitable settlement area for goblins appeared.

'Appropriate moisture, decent hunting grounds... Not bad.'

Good, now all that was left was to guide them there.

"Goruk! Gor, Growl, Gor!"

'Alright! Follow me!'

I marched forward confidently on the lion's front paws. Like ducklings, the goblins followed me mindlessly, full of joy.

And so, on the sixth day, we finally reached the settlement area indicated in the vision.

-Ker!

The goblins joyfully plunged into the stream.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe is very pleased with this place!]

[The sorrow of losing their homeland diminishes among the Earth Spirit Tribe.]

The goblins rolled around in the river, covering themselves in mud. That seemed to be their hobby.

The mothers dug out gravel and applied clean mud on their young ones' backs. The kids laughed – Ker, Ker! Perhaps they couldn't resist the tickling sensation of the mud?

-Maybe they're trying to mask their own stench. Goblins do have a rather strong smell, don't they? At least the mud helps a bit.

'Interesting perspective.'

-Didn't you know that, Goblin God Kim Gong-Ja?

'A god does not concern himself with every minor detail. Only the grand plan matters.'

-Crazy...

What is he talking about?

I lay down, crossing my front paws, watching the mud festival.

As I watched contentedly, a voice from the Tower spoke.

[Would you like to establish this place as the new settlement for the Earth Spirit Tribe?]

'Yep.'

[A new settlement has been established!]

[Please name this settlement.]

'A name, huh... I'd like to call it Raviel Sanctuary, but I can't pronounce it. They wouldn't be able to either.'

I sadly scratched the ground with my paw. Hmm. The sensation of my claws scratching the ground seemed to alleviate my gloominess...

-Hey. You're becoming more and more like a beast, aren't you...?

'It's an illusion.'

Just then, a fly-like insect buzzed around me. By the way, the animal I possessed looked similar to a lion but wasn't exactly a lion.

I just called it that for convenience.

I swatted the fly with my tail. Thwack! My tail struck the fly perfectly, killing it instantly as it hit my side.

This fly hunting had become my new hobby during this mission.

It was surprisingly fun.

-So, he really has become a beast...?

'If you mean I possess the charm of a beastly man, I gladly accept. Anyway, let's name it [Guru], after the sound of my roar.'

And so, I roared.

"Guru-!"

The Tower responded to my roar.

[The new settlement for the Earth Spirit Tribe will be named 'Guru'.]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe has escaped the risk of extinction!]

[You may now declare stage clear.]

[Would you like to declare stage clear now?]

-Wow, finally! We can leave this growling hell! Let's get out of here! What are you waiting for? Declare it clear!

'Ah, don't you know the Tower?'

-I know! I know! I just want to get out of here!

'I reject that.'

The Race War.

From the 31st floor to the 40th, the theme progresses through time. If the 31st floor is the Stone Age, the 32nd becomes the Neolithic Age, and so on.

If I declare clear now, I'll meet the goblins centuries or even millennia later on the next floor.

'Let's complete everything we can before moving on.'

I slowly reviewed the status of the Goblin race.

I had glanced over it several times while guiding them, but it was a critical issue that needed to be definitively addressed.

'The traits of the goblins were [Victim of Racial Discrimination], [Kinship], [Greed].'

I reviewed the information in order.

+

[Victim of Racial Discrimination]

Rank: F

Effect: The Earth Spirit Tribe is unattractive! Their appearance incites disgust in onlookers. As a result, the Earth Spirit Tribe faces prejudice and misunderstandings, making it difficult to form healthy relationships with other races.

Be warned! The hearts of the discriminated harbor hatred. The greater the Earth Spirit Tribe's hatred grows, the more they will automatically antagonize other races. This issue must be resolved before crossing the point of no return.

*However, this trait may change depending on the course of history.

+

'First, this is the problem.'

What if we move to the next floor and find the goblins have formed hostile relations with all other races? What if, as in typical fantasy worlds, our goblins are seen as 'public enemies'?

That would be horrific.

To have saved them, only for them to become public enemies.

'This must be resolved before we leave... Next is Kinship.'

+

[Kinship]

Rank: C

Effect: The Earth Spirit Tribe has a very strong sense of kinship. When one of their own dies, no race in this world, except for the same goblins, will shed a tear for them. Instead, they cheer, 'A monster has died! It's a cause for celebration!'

Goblins are goblins.

It's an inescapable fate.

Under the belief that they can only rely on their own kind, the Earth Spirit Tribe becomes tightly knit. The greatest taboo in their society is to 'betray their own kind' or 'kill their own kind', among others.

Unless faced with extraordinary misfortune, it's unlikely that the Earth Spirit Tribe will self-destruct due to internal strife!

*However, this trait may change depending on the course of history.

+

Even after reviewing it multiple times, this seems like a good trait.

After all, even goblins deserve to have at least one good trait.

-It doesn't seem like an entirely positive trait...

'Oh? Why do you say that?'

-Just saying. Hurry up and open the next trait.

'Are you finally starting to feel the charm of the goblins?'

-I just want to get this over with...

It's clear as day that he's enjoying nurturing the race, even though he denies it.

-No, I'm not...

Either way, a lion and a ghost sat side by side, peering into the final description box.

+

[Greed]

Rank: B

Effect: The Earth Spirit Tribe is overflowing with greed. Perhaps due to their inferiority complex and self-loathing for being ugly, they seek recognition not for themselves but through their possessions. 'Kerk! I've covered myself in warm mud!' 'Keruk! I've plastered myself with premium mud from upstream!'

An insatiable desire for better things.

A longing for more impressive possessions.

Mixed with feelings of inferiority, self-loathing, and a craving for recognition, the Earth Spirit Tribe's hearts brew a powerful greed. They might begin to covet shiny treasures, or perhaps they will boast about having prettier slaves than others. The Earth Spirit Tribe is greedy, and their potential lies within this greed.

The direction of their 'greed' depends on you.

*However, this trait may change depending on the course of history.

"....."

I pondered deeply.

'This is somewhat similar to me.'

-Huh? What is?

'Nothing. Just thinking aloud. Hmm.'

I slowly raised my heavy lion body.

As I approached the stream, the mud-covered goblin kids noticed me and gathered around.

-Ker.

-Kek, Kerk?

Compared to humans, goblins had fewer facial muscles.

Their mouths were excessively large, and their cheekbones protruded, making it difficult to read their expressions.

“Grrr.”

I raised my paw and struck a rock by the stream. The goblins flinched in surprise, but I paid them no mind and continued to strike with my paw.

Soon, my claws were all broken.

-Huh? What are you doing?

'Just wait and see.'

With my tattered paw, I pressed into the mud. My fur, like a paintbrush soaked in water, became drenched in mud.

The goblins watched my incomprehensible actions with bated breath.

“Grrr.”

I approached the nearest little goblin. As the shadow of the giant lion cast over the youngster, it flinched but didn't flee.

“Gor. Grrr. Grr, Goruk.”

'Right. Be brave. Just stay like that.'

Thump.

I gently rubbed the goblin's belly with my mud-covered paw, drawing a curve. The little goblin twitched each time I applied the mud.

-Ah...

Guardian Spirit spoke up.

-Are you creating a tattoo right now?

Exactly.

'Yes.'

I drew a spiral pattern on the little goblin with mud.

And it wasn't just for this one. After completing the swirl pattern, I drew tattoos on the other goblins as well.

“Gor.”

Drawing with a lion's paw instead of a human hand was clumsy. Painting with clumpy mud instead of fine paint was awkward. But even if it was awkward and clumsy, it was undoubtedly art.

After tattooing every goblin,

-Ker?

The goblins looked at each other curiously, marveling at their bodies. Soon, like children discovering a new toy, they started smearing mud on each other and playing.

-Kerk! Gerup, Gergur.

-Gergur!

The goblins splashed in the stream. When their tattoos washed away, others would draw new ones, and they all laughed – Keruk.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe awakens to an aesthetic sense!]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe becomes enchanted by the beauty their bodies display.]

The Tower's voice echoed in my head.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe's trait 'Victim of Racial Discrimination' evolves!]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe acquires a new trait 'Primitive Fashionista'!]

Letters appeared before my eyes.

+

[Primitive Fashionista]

Rank: E

Effect: The Earth Spirit Tribe is unattractive! Their appearance incites disgust in onlookers. As a result, they face prejudice and misunderstandings, making it difficult to form healthy relationships with other races.

‘Kerk! We are ugly!’ To combat this, the Earth Spirit Tribe invented a special culture. ‘Then we’ll just wear fancy clothes, right?’ They cover their appearance with fashion.

The Earth Spirit Tribe paints a variety of tattoos on their green skin. The more beautiful the tattoo, the more recognition they receive from their kin. Congratulations. The Earth Spirit Tribe now has a culture of fashion!

Blessings to the primitive fashionistas!

‘No matter how much they dress up, a goblin is still a goblin.’

Of course, whether this fashion will be recognized by other races is another matter.

*However, this trait may change depending on the course of history.

+

Okay.

I let out a contented growl.

“Grrr.”

Whether it's the Race War or Guardianship Constellation, it's simple.

Basically, I just need to raise these kids as best as I can.

"Grung, Grrrr, Gop, Goruk!"

‘Hey, I’ll elevate your tribe to the heavens!’

I roared vigorously.

-Kekerkek!

-Kekerkek! Kekerkek!

The goblins, covered in mud, circled me, dancing jubilantly.

A cauldron of emotions.

Guardian Spirit, who had watched the entire scene from beginning to end, muttered softly.

-No... They just seem like a bunch of crazies... Surely they won't turn into a bunch of Kim Gong-Jas, right? A race full of lunatics like Kim Gong-Ja? Nah, that's impossible. Such a fantasy, such a hellish existence, can't unfold in reality...

-Ker!

The grand chant of the goblins echoed through the new settlement.

Chapter 157:

Becoming God (3)

[Purchasing 'Hunting Prey Tracking.']

[5 Race Points will be consumed!]

[You currently have 95 Race Points.]

“Grrrr!”

I tore into the hide of a bull. Although it looked nothing like a cow, with its shell back and porcupine-like spikes, I had my reasons for calling it a bull.

-Eummeo!

Its bellow sounded just like that of a cow.

-Eummeo! Eummeo!

The bull let out a feeble cry. Despite its final struggle and resistance, it was no match for my teeth and claws, and especially not for the spears jabbed by the goblins.

Kuung!

The bull fell.

The goblins who joined me in the hunt jumped around excitedly.

-Kiruk! Ke!

-Kerk, Kekgo, Goruk!

[You have succeeded in ‘Hunting’!]

[You have now fully understood this prey. Hunting this animal further will not yield more Race Points.]

[Your hunting experience has reached its limit. You cannot gain more Race Points from hunting.]

'Well, that's it for hunting in this area.'

-Zombie... Let's just go... Please... We've hunted everything...

'Alright, let's go gathering now!'

-Damn it!

How long have these idyllic days lasted?

[You can no longer secure Race Points through gathering.]

The goblins no longer exposed their bare skin. They used red and green mud to awkwardly, but brilliantly, tattoo themselves.

And something strange happened – the smell began to decrease. Whether it was due to the deodorizing effect of the mud or the power of the Primitive Fashionista trait, the stench that smelled like a mix of spoiled soybean soup in the summer heat and a sewage tank was now gone.

But that wasn't all.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe has established itself as 'Hunters-Gatherers'!]

[Among the Earth Spirit Tribe, the fear of large animals diminishes.]

[You have gained 50 Race Points.]

[Your current Race Points are 1015.]

“Gor.”

‘Okay.’

I wagged my tail in satisfaction.

‘Now, I’ve almost done everything I can for them.’

The goblins have learned to play with mud and can now hunt large animals in groups.

This is the starting point. The groundwork for a great [Goblin Civilization] to flourish in the future is laid.

‘There are no more Race Points to gain.’

I wonder if the other companions are in a similar situation?

[The Celestial Clan Master leading the Ghost Tribe declares a clear!]

[The Sword Saint leading the Pure Humans declares a clear!]

More companions are declaring ‘Stage Clear’. The Celestial Clan Master was the first, followed by the Sword Saint.

The rest of the companions will probably wrap up this stage one by one.

‘Ah.’

I sighed, feeling a bit regretful.

‘I really wanted to pass on things like 'writing' or 'aura'. This is frustrating...’

-Why? Just teach them.

‘I wish I could, but I can’t.’

Sighing through the lion’s maw, I looked at the Civilization Shop. The shop had almost every item imaginable, including the things I wanted to pass on to the goblins.

‘Item search. Writing.’

The problem is that it’s just a pie in the sky.

The hologram smoothly moved, displaying the product.

+

[Writing]

Description: Your tribe invents letters. Writing records is far more effective than oral transmission! Unlike voices that evaporate as soon as spoken, letters withstand the flow of time.

Price: 4500 Race Points

*The Pure Humans start with this technology.

+

'Damn. Have you ever seen such a crazy price...'

The price is excessively steep.

I have 1015 Race Points right now. Even if I hadn't spent any points on hunting and other activities, it wouldn't be enough to purchase 'Writing'. What's more, the Pure Humans start with this expensive 'Writing'.

Is this a joke about race balance?

-It's your fault for choosing goblins. Hehe.

The Pure Humans aren't the only ones with a bonus.

In fact, they are underpowered. The Fairy Tribe, led by the Countess, aka Elves, start with both 'Mana Reaction' and 'Aura Reaction', each priced at 6200 points.

It's now clear how disadvantaged the goblins were from the start.

'Of course, I believe these kids will ascend in the future and eat up both the Pure Humans and Elves, but it's still pitiful.'

-Your head might be the pitiful thing here, Zombie.

'I really wanted to leave them with writing at least. Sigh. Is there really no way to accumulate 4500 points...?'

The Tower's voice reached me again.

[The Paladin leading the Gill Fishes Race declares a clear!]

The Paladin had now also declared a clear.

Only three of us remained in the 31st floor stage: the Heretic Inquisitor leading the Mountain Calamity Tribe, the Black Dragon Witch ruling the Vampiric Tribe, and me.

‘Hmm.’

At that point, I decided to give up.

‘Alright, let’s abandon the straightforward method of purchasing 'Writing'.’

-Huh?

‘Even if I managed to collect 4500 points, it would be too precious to spend on one item. And since when have I used a straightforward method? I’ve always relied on cunning.’

-What are you talking about?

‘I’ll just teach them letters myself!’

From that day, I embarked on educating the goblins’ brains and blood.

“Goruk, Gor. Ah. Ker, Ah.”

‘Look, kids, this is A. This is A.’

I drew the letter A on the ground. To ensure they could recognize it, I etched it large with my claw. However, the goblins gathered around me just tilted their heads in confusion.

-Kerrrr?

-Kekerkek?

As expected.

They didn't get it at all.

But I am a man who doesn't know how to give up.

"Gor! Gaa, ah, kar!"

'Look! A, A, this is A!'

I growled, driving the goblins into action.

The goblins, startled, twitched their shoulders.

-Gar...?

-Go, go?

The goblins stood up and walked somewhere.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe is frightened by you.]

[Your inexplicable behavior has plunged the Earth Spirit Tribe into confusion.]

Shortly after, the goblins brought me the meat of the bull caught that morning. They timidly offered the well-cooked meat before me.

-Kekerkek!

The goblins bowed their heads to the ground, crying.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe pleads for you to calm your anger.]

‘What? These guys really think I’m angry about not having bull meat?’

I'm just trying to do some advanced learning for your benefit. You always play around, going 'Goruk, Goruk', but if you don't learn, the Elves next door and the Humans in the neighboring house will catch you and turn you into monster barbecue. Do you want to be barbecue? Huh? Do you want to be treated like experience-farming monsters by the Elves later?

“Grrrung! Gaa, ah, kar!”

-Ker, Kerruk....

I didn't give up and continued trying to teach them letters.

But it was a colossal failure.

The goblins couldn't even learn ABC. It seemed like they memorized A somehow, but with expressions that said, 'What's this even for?' 'Don't know...' 'Not sure why we're doing this...', they became disheartened.

‘Khuung.’

For the first time while leading the goblin tribe, I encountered a real obstacle.

‘Could it be impossible for goblins to learn letters with their intelligence? That's strange. I remember the Earth Spirit Tribe using letters when the Flame Emperor was clearing the 33rd floor. Is it too early in history for their intelligence to develop? It shouldn't be...’

I deeply pondered the situation.

‘Teaching them ABC like this will only lead to them forgetting it soon.’

The goblins must directly feel the meaning of letters. They need to understand why they are learning and what benefits it brings. Otherwise, even if I successfully pass on writing, it will all be forgotten in a generation.

How can I imbue meaning into these letters?

"....."

Wait.

An idea struck me.

‘Maybe I’m trapped in a fixed mindset?’

Right. There’s no need to strictly teach ABC when passing on writing!

I suddenly stood up and roared.

“Grrruk!”

‘Gather around!’

The goblins, who were eating meat, gathered around me, startled. They all looked like droopy-eared puppies, probably thinking, ‘Is he going to do something strange again?’ ‘Ugh, I don’t like this...’ ‘I’d rather he just put mud on us like usual.’

In short, I was a bit sulked.

“Grrr, grruk. Kekekek, gor, ke.”

‘There, there. It’s okay. You know I like you, right?’

I coated my paw with mud and applied it to the goblins. They tickled. The sulking goblins began to loosen up a bit.

-Gorgoruk.

-Kerrup, ker!

Little brats. As easily as they sulk, they reconcile.

My skillful mud application melted their icy hearts. Once the mood lightened up, I showed the goblins some [writing].

‘Look here, kids. This is mud.’

This time, however, I used a slightly different type of writing.

I swiftly drew something with my claw.

■.

First, I drew a square and filled it in black.

Then, I piled up mud next to the ■.

‘Mud. This is mud. Get it?’

-Kerruk...?

The goblins looked puzzled. They didn’t understand much, but I didn’t mind and decided to take my time.

Days passed by.

Each time I applied mud to the goblins, I drew ■ on the ground. Not just that, I tattooed letters on the goblins' bodies whenever I had time.

‘This is daytime. The sky is bright.’

O.

‘Now it’s night. The sky is dark.’

●.

‘That’s the sun. Blinding, right?’

☆.

‘This is the moon.’

★.

‘This is water. Water. Stream water.’

~.

‘What if the water is a bit deep?’

~~.

‘What if the water is extremely deep?’

~~~.

-Kerrr....

-Kerk? Ker, ke?

At first, the goblins were baffled, but they slowly began to understand my [pictures]. They couldn't grasp why A meant 'ah', but they somewhat understood that ■ meant 'mud'.

'Right.'

My initial approach was wrong.

'The world is still small for the goblins.'

In this vast world, there isn't much that goblins recognize.

Huge as it is, what goblins see, feel, smell, and hear here is really just a handful.

-Kerk.

Sky.

-Kerruk.

Land.

-Ker.

Meat.

-Ke.

Water.

The goblins saw something blue stretching above them. They felt something hard yet sometimes soft under their feet. They smelled the pleasant aroma of roasted centipede meat. They heard the soothing sound of something cool to drink and fun to jump into.

-Gor!

They said they were happy when happy.

-Kerruk...

And expressed discontent when they weren't.

Thus, in the world of goblins, there were about six things. Just six. Six words were enough to represent these six aspects of their world.

Six pictures instead of dozens of 'alphabets'.

That's what the goblins needed.

Sssss...

One day, it rained.

The goblins bathed and played in the rain.

I showed them a certain letter.

'Water.'

~.

'Dark sky.'

●.

'Water from the dark sky.'

●~.

'Rain'

I looked up at the rain pouring down from the sky.

The goblins followed my gesture and looked at the rain.

'Rain.'

-.....

After some time passed.

The goblins slowly began to speak.

-Kerkke?

-Kerkke. Kerkke.

The goblins pointed at the rain, then imitated the ●~ I had etched into the ground, drawing a similar figure in the dirt.

-Kerkke!

‘Rain.’

The goblins looked at me as if asking if they got it right.

I nodded in satisfaction.

“Gor.”

‘Good.’

At that moment.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe has awakened to writing!]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe gains a new trait ‘Legacy of Records’!]

Words appeared before my eyes.

+

[Legacy of Records]

Rank: E (A)

Effect: The Earth Spirit Tribe has realized the endless possibilities of drawing! They understand that their drawings are not just visually pleasing but can represent something in this world. They now know that symbols can carry meaning.

'O.'

This represents the sky to the Earth Spirit Tribe.

'■.'

This represents mud and land to them.

'O■.'

Thus, this represents sky and land, expressing 'world' to the Earth Spirit Tribe.

'O■.'

That is their world.

From now on, the Earth Spirit Tribe will develop their pictographic writing. They will leave behind what they love in pictures, and their letters will contain their lives.

May fortune be with them.

*However, this trait can change depending on the course of history.

+

"....."

What was it?

I felt strangely moved just for teaching a few pictures.

-Kerkke, kerkke!

-Kerkkeruk!

Now, the goblins, covered in mud, drew pictures with joy, ignoring me. Watching them, I felt a mix of emotions – sorrow, happiness, a touch of loneliness. Pride? Admiration? It was an indescribable feeling.

[The Black Dragon Witch leading the Vampiric Tribe declares a clear!]

After about two weeks, the Black Dragon Witch also declared a clear.

Now only the Heretic Inquisitor and I remained on the 31st floor stage.

‘The Heretic Inquisitor must be diligently teaching something too.’

Meanwhile, I taught the goblins numbers.

Initially, I tried teaching them Arabic numerals, but they didn’t understand at all, so I compromised with Roman numerals. I, II, III. Perhaps because they were simple sticks, the goblins understood them.

I would've liked to teach arithmetic, but...

‘These kids don’t get the concept of subtraction...’

A goblin is a goblin.

They couldn't even grasp the existence of numbers greater than six.

Well, it's too much to ask for so much so soon.

‘I guess I've taught them everything I can. Right?’

-Yeah, seems like it, man.

I nodded.

‘It’s time for me to leave.’

That night, when the goblins were deep asleep, I sneaked out of the tribe.

The goblins would be very sad when they realized I was gone.

But I couldn't leave this white lion body in the middle of the tribe and depart the 31st floor. It might attack and injure the goblins.

"Grrr. Gorrurr."

'Take care, kids.'

I licked a young goblin's forehead with my tongue.

-Gorr...

The little goblin, oblivious, slept soundly.

'Cute things.'

I moved as far away as possible from the goblin settlement, [Guru]. Time passed. In the dark night, where nothing but insect sounds were heard, I faintly heard the goblins' mournful cries from afar.

-Kekerk... Ker...

Had they already realized I was gone?

The goblins were calling out my name, Kekerkker

I didn't look back and disappeared faster into the darkness.

'Live well! Grow well! Let's meet again when you're even more splendid!'

And I whispered in my heart.

'I declare, stage clear!'

The Tower's voice responded.

[Stage Clear!]

[You have cleared the 31st floor.]

[Reward tallying will be conducted after entering the 32nd floor.]

[Sequential layer progression - You will be forcibly transferred to the 32nd floor!]

Sssss...

A white light engulfed my vision.

Chapter 158: Great Snail Empire (1)

---

Right after clearing the stage.

What awaited me in the 32nd floor, where I was forcibly teleported, were my fellow hunters and [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages]. Among them, the Princess was holding something odd that looked like a pillow.

“Wait. Is that...?”

Upon closer inspection, it wasn't a pillow but a snail doll.

This is unexpected.

A goblin doll I could understand, but a snail doll....

“There are goblin dolls too.”

“Really?”

“Here.”

The Princess quickly pulled out a goblin doll from her bosom. It had elongated ears, nose, and even cheekbones, all remarkably replicated.

“Where did you get that...?”

“I made it.”

“Could you show me...”

Before I could properly request to see more as a rightful Goblin God, someone interrupted.

“What are you guys doing?”

Black Dragon Witch looked at us incredulously.

“If you have time to play with the Princess, let's move on to the next stage. It took us 24 days just to conquer the 31st floor. ...Or is my sense of time off? It took years to clear the 10th floor. Really now....”

“But you're also holding something in your arms, Black Dragon Witch....”

“This, this is for research purposes.”

Black Dragon Witch quickly hid her bat doll behind her.

Countess and Paladin were also fiddling with elf and mermaid dolls, respectively.

“I'm checking the product for quality. It's a rare item made by the Princess, isn't it?”

“The item descriptions are quite thorough.”

These people....

“King of Death. Here.”

“Ah, thank you.”

I took the goblin doll, hugging it tightly, and looked around.

A white world. Nothing else was visible. It was as if a blank white canvas stretched out infinitely. We were the only ones stranded in the middle of this canvas.

Hmm.

“...Is this the 32nd floor?”

I asked, though I thought it unlikely. As expected, the Princess, hugging her snail doll, shook her head.

“Think of this as a kind of waiting room. To materialize the 32nd floor, all of you first need to declare ‘Stage Clear’. Ah. Like in Viper’s case, he spent fifteen days here waiting for you all.”

“I almost thought I was going to die of boredom!”

Viper, sitting on the white floor, grimaced.

“Why were you all so late? You should've quickly taken care of the kids and come out. Here, we can't even observe what you're doing, so I spent all this time meditating.”

“Along with your dokkaebi doll, right?”

“It helps with meditation. While I'm thoroughly pragmatic and practical in my approach to the game, what were you really doing, arriving now? Always so immersed...”

“No, you're just too detached.”

Paladin sighed.

“Didn't the Princess say when we entered the 31st floor, [From the 31st to 40th floors, it's a race war]. It implies that the stages from the 31st to 40th floors are continuously linked. We might be governing the same tribes we chose in the 31st floor.”

“What?”

“If it’s just clearing the 31st floor, like you said, Celestial Martial Clan Leader, it would’ve been fine to casually take care of them. But if we’re governing them until the 40th floor, it’s a different story. Even if [I’m not there], we need to prepare the tribes in advance to develop on their own.”

Viper blinked his one eye.

“W-Wait. Was there such a conversation?”

“It was clear enough for anyone to notice.”

Paladin’s sigh grew heavier.

“Think a little on your own, Liǎofàn. You tend to gloss over things too easily when they’re not related to martial arts....”

“Really? Is that why everyone lingered in the 31st floor for weeks?”

Viper frantically looked around. His eyes were desperate, as if hoping someone would say 'no'.

Unfortunately, there was no hunter with enough brain cells left to respond to Viper's wish here.

"Celestial Martial Clan Leader, it's okay."

I smiled kindly and patted Viper's shoulder.

"King of Death... no, that can't be right. I can't be the only one who lagged behind like an idiot, right...?"

"Even if your tribe goes extinct, there are still six tribes left."

"Damn it!"

Viper covered his face.

Watching our comical scene, the Princess chuckled mischievously.

“Don’t worry too much. From the first to the seventh in the ranking, everyone has survived ‘to the next era’... to the 32nd floor stage. Thanks to all your efforts, the Stone Age ended quickly. Now it's the Ancient Times.”

Ancient Times.

There was a temporal gap between the 31st and 32nd floors.

‘It must be thousands of years later.’

Thousands of years. During this lengthy period, I was concerned about how well the goblins fared, but hearing the Princess confirm their survival relieved me somewhat.

However, the Princess unexpectedly announced something.

“Alright! Everyone's here, so let's open the next stage.”

The Princess floated the snail doll into the air and climbed on top of it. Then, like a knight on a horse, she lifted one arm and shouted, “Oh-!”

“32nd floor is the world 200 years after the 31st floor!”

"....."

Silence fell among us. My reaction was similar.

"What?"

The Princess had just said 200 years, not 2000.

It's ‘only’ been 200 years since the Stone Age concluded and the Ancient Times began.

“200 years, Princess? Did you mean 2000 years?”

I looked dumbfounded. It made no sense.

In the past, when the Flame Emperor devoted all his points to raising the elves, the gap between the 31st and 32nd floors was over a thousand years. Even if my memory isn’t perfect, it was certainly more than five hundred years.

But only 200 years?

Did we raise our tribes so well?

“You heard right.”

The Princess beamed.

“I was surprised too. I knew you were fast, but I didn’t expect it to be this fast. Or, in this case, should I say ‘slow’? Yep. Sometimes the detour is the shortcut.”

“What do you mean?”

“You’ll understand once you go to the 32nd floor. Off we go.”

The Princess set down the goblin doll on the white floor and stretched out her arms.

“Now, opening the 32nd floor!”

“Wait a minute.”

Black Dragon Witch interjected, clearly startled by the number 200 years.

“We haven’t all gathered yet. The Heretic Inquisitor isn’t here.”

Black Dragon Witch was right. Among our group, including myself, only six were present. One of our members, the Heretic Inquisitor, was still missing.

“We should go to the 32nd floor after the Heretic Inquisitor declares ‘Stage Clear’....”

“Oh. Don’t worry about that.”

The Princess waved her hand dismissively.

“I said it earlier. [Everyone who should be here has arrived]. If you’re talking about the Heretic Inquisitor, who’s fourth in our ranking, he’s already arrived at the 32nd floor and waiting.”

“.....What?”

“As I said.”

The Princess smiled.

“You’ll see when you get there.”

Fwaaah!

White light enveloped us.

---

When we opened our eyes, we were floating in the sky. The world unfolded beneath our feet.

The previous world had a vast Great Forest. This time, it was different. No forests, no streams, no sunlight filtering through leaves.

Even the sky was missing.

“My goodness.”

Black Dragon Witch muttered in astonishment.

“What is that...?”

The landscape beneath us, which Black Dragon Witch referred to as ‘that’, was a ‘subterranean city’. There, a city unlike anything I had seen or heard of before had been established.

-It’s tough, lime, the commute home is too far.

Voices flowed from somewhere.

-A new tavern has opened near the Great Void...

-I’d like to postpone this year’s tribute day, lime.

Something squirmed about the city. Not walking, but crawling.

Snails.

Translucent creatures scuttled about, each with a large snail shell on their back.

“Crazy...?”

The underground city, no, the underworld was entirely different from our world. Firstly, there were no roads. Instead of walking, the snails clung to walls to move.

-Don't carelessly stick on our wall roads, lym!

-That's ridiculous. All wall roads in Polis are public property, lime! Where I end up is determined by the gods, but how I crawl is my choice, lime.

The snails freely moved left, right, up, and down.

A vast subterranean world.

At first glance, the 20-plus-story stone buildings were randomly erected, but nowhere to be found were stairs. Snails simply crawled up the walls and entered their homes through windows.

-Rents have skyrocketed lately, lime...

-I'm sorry to say, but this winter I'll have to stay in an 'old house'....

Even homeless snails existed.

The homeless huddled in small caves, burrowing into snail shells. They exchanged a blue-glowing mineral among themselves. When a snail swallowed a blue stone, its translucent body emitted a bluish light. The snail itself turned blue.

-For this one bite, I endured today, lymu....

-Seeing the bright light, it seems the kids got something good, lime.

-I was lucky. Nowadays, traders have no integrity, lime. How can they mess with rolling tobacco? It's inhumane, lime.

-Just one bite for me....

And it didn't end there.

-Hurry up and move the luggage, lime!

A snail waved its tentacles. Squelch! A squishy sound echoed. The creature struck by the tentacle groaned and heaved heavy stones onto a cart.

The Ghost Tribe.

The dokkaebi, once governed by Viper, struggled with their labor.

-Really, the Ghost Tribe are all lazy! lime!

A snail, apparently a manager, grumbled.

-Despite being expensive, they slack off at the slightest distraction. Lymu. We feed, clothe, shelter, and save them, yet I can't understand their complaints.

-Right. Slaves always try to climb up if you treat them slightly well, lime. A lower species without shells, how dare they act so arrogantly.

-Hey, slave. Try saying 'lime'. If you can pronounce it correctly, I'll let you off.

The snail was much smaller than the Ghost Tribe. The Ghost Tribe members were large like orcs, with a horn in the middle of their foreheads. Yet, they were at the mercy of the tiny snails.

-La, Lymy.

-Look at that! Slaves can't even pronounce lime properly! Born low, they can't even utter our sacred words, lime. Lowly creatures! Hurry up and move those stones!

-Ugh...

Incredible.

Could these snails actually be enslaving the Ghost Tribe?

“No... What is that...”

Viper was dumbstruck.

Suddenly his tribe had become slaves.

“Ah, but that's too much. How can this be? I... I took care of them in my own way and left the 31st floor! I even made them weapons, spears, and taught them how to fight... What is that! Slaves? Could my tribe really have become slaves?!”

“Huh.”

Then, a familiar voice sounded.

“What a pleasure to see familiar faces!”

It was the Heretic Inquisitor.

“Ahaha. Indeed, now we have finally entered a new era. Hmm, slow yet fast. No. Objectively, it's still fast!”

The Heretic Inquisitor was the same as always. Wearing his usual black priest's robe and smiling warmly. So Viper, without sensing anything unusual, rushed at him.

“Hey! You psychopath!”

“Ah, yes.”

“Why is my tribe serving your tribe?!”

Viper grabbed the Heretic Inquisitor's collar, shaking him.

Despite being shaken, the Heretic Inquisitor's smile never faded.

“That's easy to explain! The [Snail Civilization] I established requires highly concentrated labor. Slavery is quite useful for providing labor! 112 years ago, the Ghost Tribe invaded in large numbers, so after defeating them, I captured them all!”

“What, what...?”

“Aha, don’t worry. They are a very proud tribe, so taming was hard, and still is, but I managed to subdue them somewhat! Maybe in three generations, their nature will change.”

"....."

Viper was at a loss for words, failing to comprehend the Heretic Inquisitor’s explanation. Meanwhile, the other hunter colleagues exchanged glances, realizing the situation.

“...Heretic Inquisitor.”

I stepped forward to speak.

“I have a question.”

“Aah, King of Death! Yes! Ask me anything.”

The Heretic Inquisitor beamed. If he had a dog's tail, it would be wagging energetically. His smile was that vibrant.

“We declared 'Stage Clear' on the 31st floor and moved to the waiting room. You weren't there. The Princess said you arrived at the 32nd floor first... What does that mean?”

“Hmm? Ah, I see. Ahaha.”

The Heretic Inquisitor pondered a few times.

“Strictly speaking, that's incorrect. I didn't arrive at the 32nd floor first! I've been on the 31st floor the whole time!”

"....."

Silence.

"...What?"

"Exactly as I said. King of Death! Everyone! I knew you were declaring 'Stage Clear' one by one. The Tower told me. However, I thought, if the 31st floor is connected to the next, there's no need to declare clear, right?"

"....."

"I'm somewhat knowledgeable about the course of human history. This knowledge was sure to help the [Snail Civilization] advance! So, I told the Tower I wouldn't declare 'Stage Clear'."

"So that means..."

"Yes! I've been caring for the Mountain Calamity Tribe all this time!"

The Heretic Inquisitor beamed.

"Welcome, everyone! Aha. It's been 200 years and 6 months 21 days! So good to see you after such a long time!"

Insane.

Chapter 159: Great Snail Empire (2)

---

In the beginning, there was 'Lime'.

The people did not know where 'Lime' came from or where it was going. However, 'Lime' chose the foremost among them, providing evidence so that the people would realize they were the chosen seed.

-Though there are many people in this world, only you can pronounce 'Lime' completely. I permit only you to call upon this holy name. Ah! This is your authority. As proof of being chosen by 'Lime', recite 'Lime' at all times – while eating, defecating, dressing, undressing, sleeping, waking, always proclaiming my presence in the midst of your lives and voices...

“...What in the world does this mean?”

I asked, to which the Heretic Inquisitor responded with a broad smile.

“This is the holy scripture I created!”

“Holy scripture?”

“Yes! The Mountain Calamity Tribe’s vocal organs are very unique. Among the seven races, only they can pronounce [Lime]! Therefore, I designated this pronunciation as the name of a god.”

The Heretic Inquisitor, with a light tap, landed in the subterranean city. We followed him. He introduced us to the history of the 'Snail Civilization' with a beaming smile.

"Neither the Ghost Tribe nor the Fairy Tribe can pronounce [Lime] correctly! It's simply because their vocal organs are different, but I attributed a mythological meaning to it."

The snails crawled around us, passing through our bodies as if we were invisible to them.

"The Mountain Calamity Tribe can recite [Lime] as evidence of being chosen by heaven!"

"Why...?"

The Paladin spoke up.

"Why would you do this, Heretic Inquisitor? You know better than anyone the terror of religion. Misusing the name of a god recklessly can lead to irreversible consequences-."

"Ah, I didn't misuse it. I used it very deliberately and intentionally!"

"....."

"Use is different from misuse, and even more so from abuse."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly.

"Everyone, religion is inevitable! Humans always seek causes. They search for reasons for their existence, for why the world exists. God. This word magically fills all ultimate causes!"

The Heretic Inquisitor pointed at a pillar. A giant pillar. Erected in the middle of the underground city, it rose from the bottom of the cave to the ceiling. The pillar was lined with pictures like Egyptian murals.

The 'holy scripture' I had read earlier was also engraved on this pillar.

“But.....”

“Paladin, I understand what you’re pointing out! But in this era, there is still too much unknown. They don’t know why it rains, why their hearts beat, why they must drink water to live.”

A gentle smile appeared on the Heretic Inquisitor’s face.

“Think about that fear.”

“Fear.....?”

“Yes. Fear.”

The Heretic Inquisitor explained.

“Their hearts throb within them. They hear the beating but do not understand why. When injured, blood flows, and if too much is lost, they die. But they do not understand why the blood flows. Why bread tastes good, why they feel happy when full, why they must eat salt to live – they are completely ignorant.”

The Heretic Inquisitor clasped his hands as if in prayer.

“The world is surrounded by unknown monsters to them! No. Monsters even lurk within their own bodies. They live as dictated, utterly ignorant and powerless! Everyone, do you understand their fear?”

Clang!

A sound of mining echoed from afar.

Deep in the vast cave, miners were extracting rock salt.

“God resolves this ignorance and powerlessness. Now rain is not an unknown monster. It's the tears of God! The world sometimes sheds tears.”

Clang! Clang, clang!

Snail miners, secreting mucus, mined the rock salt. They grabbed sharp rocks with their tentacles and swung them.

“Now salt is not an unknown rock. In the beginning, the Earth Mother Goddess was torn apart and died, her hair became forests, her blood the sea, and her teeth salt. Salt is the remains of a god. Therefore, it's sacred and safe to consume. Ahaha! In modern terms, myth is like stamping a hygiene certificate on each food!”

The Heretic Inquisitor, with his hands clasped in prayer, looked devout.

He continued in a soft voice, like an endless stream.

“And god tells them. You were born because of me. I care about you, thus you are a being that concerns god. Do you see? Because of god, people find a reason for their empty lives.”

"....."

“Imagine!”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled cheerfully.

“The heartbeat you hear inside is no longer a groan from an unknown monster. God designed people in his image. Thus, this rhythm is the music composed by god, and I am privy to music composed by god anytime, anywhere.”

The Heretic Inquisitor sighed.

“Isn’t it beautiful...?”

He looked around the underground city.

The world he created.

Watching the civilization formed by the snails, this [Little God] rejoiced.

“Now people escape from just existing. They break free from being mere creatures! Finally, their lives have direction.”

We didn't fall into this world meaninglessly.

We are loved by god.

“Humans constantly build temples. They create wonders to dedicate to god, manifesting evidence of being loved by god on Earth. Isn't it wonderful? Isn't it enchanting? People in this era are courting the world!”

"....."

“All love needs evidence. Effort. Instead of suffocating buried in fear, they struggle and fight to be loved by gods! Even if this love is a dark misunderstanding, sometimes people need misunderstandings to live. I bless them!”

The Heretic Inquisitor released his prayer pose and spread his arms.

“You might consider religion a necessary evil. But every necessary evil is born from a necessary good. These people still need a god! Because of god, they breathe, live, and love.”

That was the Heretic Inquisitor's belief and divine will.

“Humans need a reason to shed tears over a single flower. God gifts them with infinite reasons! The god of antiquity does not annihilate humanity. Because of god, people understand themselves and love the world!”

Silence lingered.

Far away, the sound of rock salt being mined echoed.

I slowly turned to observe the 'underworld'.

-Slaves! Move! Lime!

-Rest time ended long ago. Lime! Hurry, load and transport it to the dock!

Snails clung to stone walls, whipping their tentacles. Slap! The whip-laden slaves knelt. Familiar with the whipping, they moaned but moved on.

-One, two. One, two....

Among them were Viper's people, the Ghost Tribe with a single horn on their foreheads. The dokkaebi were used to carry heavy loads.

-Shik. Shik, shiik...!

The Paladin's people, the Gill Fishes Tribe, swam in the water leading out of the cave. The mermaids swam, towing galleons directly, their upper bodies bound by ropes to the prow.

-Purrurur! Baa! Purr!

The race guided by the Black Dragon Witch, the Vampiric Tribe, was ceaselessly flying in the cave. Bats clutched scrolls or various items in their hind legs. They flew everywhere, from west to east in the cave, delivering goods to the residents.

"Ah."

Noticing my gaze, the Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

"This is the capital of the Slime Civilization, Limepolis. The specialty here is rock salt. According to mythological traditions, this is where the Earth Mother Goddess fell to her death, dropping her head! The Mountain Calamity Tribe believes this cave is her [skull], and the rock salt her [teeth]! This [sacred tooth] is supplied throughout the empire as the main industry, and the Mountain Calamity Tribe controls power through salt trade.”

“...Amazing. Impressive, but still... 200 years?”

The Black Dragon Witch sighed.

“It makes no sense. How did it last for 200 years?”

“Hmm? We are in a kind of spiritual state now since we have embarked on the mission, aren’t we? 200 years is trivial!”

“No, I mean... it’s been 200 years.”

“Yes! During that time, I continuously possessed a white dog. When the dog died, I would possess its offspring.”

“But what I mean is... never mind.”

Mid-sentence, the Black Dragon Witch looked exasperated. The other companions also had similar expressions.

The Heretic Inquisitor, still grinning, said,

“Therefore, the lineage of dogs I possessed is revered as divine beasts! They reside in the palace and temples. Today, the 34th divine beast died, and I was about to possess the 35th, but coincidentally, you all returned! Welcome back once again. Please, come in!”

"....."

The companions were silent.

Behind the Heretic Inquisitor stood a pillar, and beyond that, a sphinx-like statue. The statue, simply put, was a gigantic Welsh Corgi. It was clear what kind of dog the Heretic Inquisitor had been possessing.

And then.

-Kerrruruk!

A familiar cry came from somewhere.

-Kerrur, Keruk! Today's glory to our sacred White Lion! Ker!

-To the citizens of the great Limepolis, I offer my blood!
Gorr!

Thump! Thump!

Two goblins, each holding a sword and shield, banged them together. They stood on a flat mudflat. Countless snails surrounded the mudflat, cheering.

-Lime! I bet my entire fortune on you today, you filthy mold!

-Kirke! Show your might today! Kill him!

-Woo! Woo! Woo! Woo!

Hearing the crowd's cheers, the goblins roared.

-Gooooo!

And the goblins charged at each other. Mud splattered. They swung their daggers, fiercely striking each other's shields. Clang! Clang! The harsh and fearsome sound of metal echoed.

The cheering of the snail audience grew louder.

-Woo woo! Woo woo!

-You uncivilized, shell-less barbarians! Swing your forelegs! Limu! Stab with your forelegs!

-What are you doing! Move your legs, you fool! Lime! Lime!

I was momentarily at a loss for words.

"...Gladiators? They're gladiators?"

"Yes!"

The Heretic Inquisitor's smile blossomed.

"Sword slaves!"

A goblin roared, swinging his sword. Blood spurted. The unguarded flesh, geometric tattoos on the body, now marked with red lines.

"The Earth Spirit Tribe is known for their bravery and intelligence! In Limepolis, no, throughout the Snail Empire, they are the most favored race for sword slaves."

A wounded goblin screamed. The opponent seized the moment, grabbing the sword in reverse grip and thrusting it into the goblin's throat.

Blood spurted.

The audience cheered.

-Gooooo!

At that moment.

[The 32nd floor quest has been given.]

Letters formed before my eyes.

+

[The Great Snail Empire - Earth Spirit Tribe Edition]

Difficulty: B+

Objective: The unification of races is imminent. The protagonists are the Mountain Calamity Tribe. Using a highly developed governmental system and religious organization, they have subjugated other races into slavery one by one. If left unchecked, all races will kneel under their slimy rule.

You must rescue the Earth Spirit Tribe from the oppression of the Mountain Calamity Tribe!

*However, if you fail to guide them, the victory of the Mountain Calamity Tribe will conclude the 32nd floor.

+

The Great Escape.

That was the mission of this stage.

Chapter 160: Great Snail Empire (3)

---

Viper, the Black Dragon Witch, and others frowned as they looked into the void, probably having received their quests too. It wasn't hard to guess what those quests were.

‘Probably to escape with their respective races.’

Around that time, the Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

“Oho?”

He must have also received a [Quest].

And guessing its content wasn't difficult either.

“A mission has been given. Ahaha! The quest instructs me to thwart your escape and staunchly defend the empire!”

The exact opposite of our mission.

Defend the empire.

“You must have been tasked with rescuing races from the Snail Empire. Hmm, interesting. Our quest objectives are in direct conflict.”

"....."

An odd silence fell among us, broken by the cheers echoing from the underground city's colosseum.

The Heretic Inquisitor stroked his chin.

“I understand. Everyone, surrender to me.”

“...What?”

The Black Dragon Witch furrowed her brows, puzzled, but the Heretic Inquisitor's expression didn't change. Still smiling gently, he logically laid out his argument.

“I know you’re all emotionally confused right now! Although it was just over a fortnight, you each devoted affection to your races. It’s natural to not accept them becoming slaves. However, this is the fastest way!”

Fast.

“If I hadn’t intervened, the people of this world would have wandered for thousands of years! But thanks to my timely intervention, humanity entered the ancient era in just 200 years. Fast, right?”

“Heretic Inquisitor, even if what you say is true, using religion and slavery like this is...”

“I’m not saying my method is perfect, Black Dragon Witch! Imagine the lives that might have been sacrificed over thousands of years of history. Even if my civilization exploited hundreds of thousands of slaves, it’s ‘just’ a few hundred years!”

"....."

“I will further accelerate history.”

The Heretic Inquisitor declared. Torches flared up everywhere in the underground world, casting a shadow from the giant dog statue behind him.

“From ancient to medieval times. From medieval to modern times. From modern to contemporary times! I will hasten the end of all the mistakes, misunderstandings, and massacres humanity must endure!”

Confidence flowed in the Heretic Inquisitor’s voice.

He conveyed his intent with gentle eyes.

‘I can do this.’

“Everyone, surrender to me! I will remain in this world to guide them. 400 years. No, I’ll raise them to our civilization’s level in 360 years!”

“You’re saying you’ll endure here for another 360 years?”

“Yes!”

Under the pillar inscribed with the history of a civilization, the Heretic Inquisitor beamed.

“Trust me and leave! I will take care of everything!”

---

We discussed but couldn't reach a conclusion. Some companions wanted to leave the stage to the Heretic Inquisitor, while others strongly opposed it.

Eventually, after over two hours, we couldn't agree on a consensus.

“Let's first see how our races are doing. Everyone's getting too heated.”

I suggested.

“This way, it'll only turn into an emotional conflict... Let's see how the children are living. Then we'll naturally come to a decision. Let's meet here again tomorrow. Okay?”

The companions nodded. Sighing or groaning, we dispersed to check on our respective races.

I, of course, went to where the goblins were.

Most of the goblins lived in the salt mines.

-Today's daytime work is over! Lime! Everyone, return to your quarters!

-Only the cave chiefs are allowed outside, except for the mold!

-Line up! Orderly!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe snails waved their tentacles. The goblins, shuddering, entered holes dug right next to the salt mines.

Those 'holes' were the accommodations provided to the Earth Spirit Tribe.

"....."

I was speechless.

Lost for words, a sigh-like sound escaped my sealed lips.

“It’s unbelievable... In holes. These children love mud so much. Living here, where there’s only the smell of salt. At the very least, they should reside somewhere damp.”

-Exactly.

The Guardian Spirit muttered.

-They're always looking for water. Hey.

From hundreds of holes, a goblin or two emerged. The goblins wore red collars around their necks, clutching water jars.

Cave chiefs.

The leaders chosen from each hole were fetching water themselves.

-Kerrr.

Mostly, they were mothers.

I immediately understood why mothers were chosen as cave chiefs.

-Why are two coming out from your hole!

-Keruk, if I disappear, the child keeps crying. Please understand, Ker...

-Tsk!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe supervisors commanded that [all goblins, except cave chiefs, should not roam outside]. However, they didn't stop the maternal love of a mother accompanying her child. If a mother was chosen as a cave chief, she could take her child out, allowing up to two people to leave and fetch two jars of water.

-Gorr!

-Water! Ke, water!

Young goblins plunged into the cave spring. Splash! Splash. While the children swam, the mothers fetched water.

Unvarnished, freshly baked jars. Fragile pottery that would easily break if dropped. For the goblins living as mine slaves, even these were precious assets, so the mothers were careful not to break the jars.

"....."

My words became fewer and fewer.

The time to fetch spring water was the only freedom allowed to the Earth Spirit Tribe. During this precious respite, mother goblins mixed water with sand, trying to mimic the feel of mud. They slowly drew tattoos on the children's skin with this rough, mock mud.

-Gorr!

-Gorr, gorr!

The children joyfully played, oblivious.

One child waved its squid-like arms, smearing mud on its mother's body. The drawing was more like a scribble than a tattoo.

The mother didn't erase the child's scribbles.

-It's time for night work! Lime!

The day's labor continued.

-Don't dawdle, mold!

The snail supervisors urged them on. The Mountain Calamity Tribe called goblins [mold]. It was a derogatory term. In their pronunciation, mold was [org], named because goblins always whimpered goruk goruk.

-Come out of your quarters!

-Don't dawdle! Lazy orgs.

The cruel act of broadly labeling a race for 'funny pronunciation' left me speechless.

Not only goblins were called by derogatory names.

The Ghost Tribe was [horny-heads]. The Blood Ghost Tribe [blood-suckers]. For the Gill Fishes Tribe, they were simply [fish]. Under the rule of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, the unique characteristics of races had become a subject of mockery.

-Start working!

-Begin the night work!

Bang!

Goblins wielded their stone hammers, smashing the rock salt. The salt mined from the mines was extremely hard and large. The goblins' night work was to break it down to edible sizes.

-Kerrr...

-Kerruk. Kerrr.

The rock salt emitted a foul odor as it broke, smelling like rotten egg yolks. Bang! Bang! Bang! For one hour, two hours, three hours, the goblins broke the rock salt, smearing their long noses with the stench.

-Kerrr...

From a distance, the goblins appeared to be wielding laundry beaters. But up close, it was evident that their fingernails were all worn down.

As the salt shattered, so did their nails.

Blood flowed from their wrinkled fingers, and the salty smell of the rock salt seeped into their wounds. The goblins occasionally groaned, but they continued their work as if accustomed to it.

-Lime.

The snail supervisor looked up.

In the center of the underground world, there was a single hole in the cave ceiling. During the day, sunlight poured through it, and at night, moonlight settled in. Now, stars in the night sky could be glimpsed.

-Work is over!

-The night shift is ending, lime!

-All miners, return to your quarters! Leave all hammers in their place. Any mold caught taking a hammer will receive 50 lashes! Lime! Remember! Any mold caught taking a hammer will receive 50 lashes!

The goblins returned to their holes with their heads down.

-Kerrr... Gorr.

Waiting for the Earth Spirit Tribe returning to the holes were two jars of water and a few fish, resembling carps, thrown in by the supervisors.

These too were caught by the Gill Fishes Tribe, aquatic slaves feeding other aquatic slaves.

"....."

Smoke rose from each hole as fish were grilled. One, two, three, four, and hundreds...

Children of the goblins kept reaching for the half-cooked fish. Tired from mining rock salt all day, the mothers weakly swatted the backs of their children's hands, as if shooing away flies.

Yet the children kept hungrily eyeing the food. Eventually, the first fish cooked were given to them. The children voraciously tore into the fish.

-These creatures always have to burn their food before eating it, Lime.

The snail supervisors overseeing the night laughed.

-Their digestive systems are less developed than ours.

-Real barbarians. How can they burn food like that?

-Speaking of which, the next candidates for the colosseum...

Night fell.

The goblins fell asleep. The supervisors dozed off on the watchtowers or played with air. Apart from some distant revelers, the underground world sank into a tranquil silence.

"Hmm."

By this point, I had already made up my mind.

"I think I owe an apology to Raviel."

I said.

The Guardian Spirit crossed its arms, as if it had expected my decision.

-Going to regress?

"Yes. I'll go back and talk to the Heretic Inquisitor. Perhaps we can create a different future."

-What if the talk doesn't work?

"Then we'll talk some more. Anyway, we have about 200 years, right?"

The Guardian Spirit twitched its nose.

-I disagree.

"Why? Do you somewhat agree with what the Heretic Inquisitor said?"

-No, it's not that... Sigh. How do I explain this so that this kid gets it?

The Guardian Spirit scratched its head.

-Let's say I'm your child.

"Really?"

-Hypothetically! Don't look at me like I'm crazy. Anyway, suppose I'm your child and I come home from school having been beaten up. Would you regress a day to erase that fact?

"...What are you talking about?"

-Think from my perspective.

The Guardian Spirit looked me straight in the eye.

-Suppose I had an accident. Bad luck, died. Then it's only natural for you to regress. Don't even think twice, regress and save me. Got it?

"But what are you..."

-But if you go back a day just because I got beaten, what about my chance? It'd be pretty crappy from my perspective. 'I got beaten and you regress and erase it? Don't I get a chance?' That's what I'd think.

“What chance?”

-The chance to kick those guys' butts. This is something you already know. Just a few months ago, you got a good beating from someone you raised.

I pondered.

"But..."

-Just trust.

“Whom?”

-Yourself.

The Guardian Spirit responded firmly.

-And the kids around you.

I mulled over it.

Mice in the cave chirped.

After a while...

-Huh?

The Guardian Spirit suddenly spoke.

-Look at that, Zombie. Look at them.

“What?”

-Those goblins.

I turned my head towards where the Guardian Spirit pointed.

-They're not sleeping. What are they up to?

Indeed.

Goblins were stealthily emerging from their holes. One or two from each. After confirming that the supervisors on the towers were dozing off, the goblins quietly headed somewhere.

-They're going into the cave?

The goblins entered the salt mine.

The mine was labyrinthine, like an ant colony. The Mountain Calamity Tribe supervisors, relatively sensitive to salt, mostly directed slaves from outside the mine and rarely ventured this deep.

-Kerrr...

-Kerruk, Kerr.

The goblins spoke in hushed tones as they walked. The deeper they went, the narrower the mine passage became, and the ceiling got lower. It was like a maze. But the goblins skillfully found their way, as if they had trodden this path several times before.

-Huh?

The Guardian Spirit raised its mouth corners in amusement.

-Look at this?

"....."

-It's darkest under the lamp. They made a secret tunnel right under the rulers' noses?

Underground level 2. Level 3. Level 4.

The goblins went down to a deep place. The number of forks they had passed was in the hundreds. Anyone who entered recklessly without knowing the way would likely never find their way out.

Finally, after over an hour of descent.

-Kerr.

A wide cavity opened up.

-Kerruk, Kerr.

-Kerrr...

In the dark cavity, torches flickered dimly. Every time the light faintly illuminated, the goblins' outlines wavered.

There wasn't just one path leading here. There were several. Not only the goblins I had followed, but also groups from elsewhere had gathered.

-Aaah.

The Guardian Spirit marveled.

-See? I told you. They are people too. They're not just waiting for someone to come and save them!

As if responding to the Guardian Spirit's words, the Tower whispered to me.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe begins a secret meeting.]

Chapter 161: Cave Fire (1)

---

The cave was filled with air. It was cool. The goblins just sniffed with their noses, unaffected by the cold vapor clinging to their skin.

About a thousand goblins all remained silent.

-Today in the arena, a great warrior died.

Someone spoke softly amid them.

-The warrior's name was Gyari. Kerr. She was the daughter of the white-maned tribe's chieftain, Orogon, and Gorhe, and a descendant of Gorhir, a great warrior who inherited the tattoo from the White Lion.

The voice was not prominent; it was buried in the crowd. Leaning on the shadows of their kind and the cave's shades, a goblin was speaking. It wasn't a speech from a podium, so it was not an oration.

-She was a laughing child. Kerr.

-Always picking fights since she was young, and eventually, she died from getting beaten up.

It wasn't a single person's speech, so the goblins freely spoke their minds. In the dark cave, goblins threw in their words from here and there. Fragments of speech gathered to assemble the story of a goblin called Gyari.

-Gyari never remembered whom she hit.

-But she never forgot who hit her. Kerrr.

-She was a child living with poison in her nose. I remember. When young, Gorhe tried to apply a tattoo on Gyari. But Gyari shook her head, saying she would draw it herself after seeing others' tattoos.

-Kerr. Gyari was always a head-shaker.

An entire life was compiled through cooperative narration. A thousand fragments, a thousand snippets, were forming the story of a goblin named Gyari.

I realized.

‘...This is a funeral.’

Today, a goblin died in the colosseum. That Earth Spirit Tribe member was Gyari. Those who knew Gyari, who even once talked to her, had now gathered here underground.

-For Gyari, nodding to people and swinging a sword at the world were the same.

-She thought they were the same. Kerruk.

-That's why she became a gladiator.

The fire flickered.

Shadows were cast on the cave walls. Within these shadows, the goblins were indistinguishable. They were a mass. The bumpy shadows opened their mouths and whispered.

-Thirty-six of our kin died by Gyari's sword.

-A cruel child.

-When the Mountain Calamity Tribe branded her as a gladiator, Gyari laughed. She thought it was a splendid tattoo.

-A terrifying child.

-Happy to wield a sword, but Gyari was only allowed to fight in the arena. Her only allowed opponents were her kin. Gorr. It was Gyari's misfortune that she could only kill her kin with her happy swordsmanship.

-Kerrr...

-It's difficult to understand.

-An unfortunate child.

The fire flickered.

-Was Gyari one of our kin?

The shadows answered.

-Gorr.

-Gyari was a drawer of tattoos. An artist. A lover of mud and a yearner of rainwater.

-Gyari was us.

An elderly voice spoke.

-Gyari will return to Guru.

Guru.

A word familiar to me.

As I silently watched the goblin's funeral, the Tower's voice reached me.

[You have witnessed the Guru Doctrine of the Earth Spirit Tribe.]

Text appeared before me.

+

[Guru Doctrine]

Category: Religion. White Lion Faith.

Origin: [Fellow Kinship Ritual (C)]

Description: 'Guru' is the homeland of all Earth Spirit Tribe members. Guru is the first village established by the Earth Spirit Tribe after the Golden Era's fall. Guru is the nation of the Earth Spirit Tribe. Guru is where warm stream water flows and soft mud swells.

Guru.

It is the last land where the White Lion resided.

The Earth Spirit Tribe does not distinguish between this world and the afterlife, only between 'Guru' and 'non-Guru.' What the Earth Spirit Tribe expects from life – rainwater, mud, plenty of fish, a comfortable resting place – can all be found in this world. Hence, a belief in the afterlife is unnecessary for them.

The homeland of all kin.

They wish to return to Guru.

*However, over time, memories of Guru will fade.

*If left unchecked, 'Guru' will transform into an abstract place! In that case, Guru will become a concept of 'a space existing somewhere else, not in this world.'

*It's been quite some time since the Earth Spirit Tribe lost Guru! There's a chance that the Guru Doctrine will transform into a doctrine about the afterlife!

+

"....."

I stared blankly at the description.

It contained words that were hard for me to understand.

But there was something that only I could understand.

“I named it without much thought. Guru.”

My heart twinged.

“...And it became something immense for these kids.”

Something.

A feeling I'd never experienced before arose.

It was weird. I was proud that the goblins had grown on their own, without me. But I was scared that a word I had casually thrown out had become a meaning for these kids, that it had solidified into a meaning, that they had clung to it to survive.

An anxious feeling.

I was worried about these kids.

“The kids.....”

That's right.

“This is what it feels like to watch over children.”

Until now, I had never imagined having a child. I never thought of myself becoming a parent to someone. But intentionally or not, I had played a role akin to a parent for the Earth Spirit Tribe.

-Maybe? I've never raised offspring, so I'm not sure.

"....."

My heart fluttered.

-Kerruk.

An elderly goblin stepped forward. In the center of the cave, a fire was burning. The old goblin stood in front of the fire, and the Earth Spirit Tribe members, who had been casually throwing pieces of Gyari's story, fell silent.

Silence.

The old goblin waited until the silence became more transparent.

“...Wait?”

He put his hands into the burning fire.

“Hold on. Isn't that... suicide by self-immolation?”

-No, watch closely, zombie. His hands aren't burning.

The Guardian Spirit cut off my concern.

-That guy. He's an Aura user.

“Eh?”

-Look at him. He's using Aura. He's wrapped his hands in Aura.

The Guardian Spirit was right.

The flames obscured the view, but faintly, certainly, the goblin's wrinkled hands were swirling with Aura. It was a red Aura. The old goblin buried his hands in the fire.

Whooosh!

The flames soared.

The previously just-burning fire strangely twisted. The elder used his Aura to manipulate the fire. At the tips of the old man's hands, the flames rose like ascending dragons, swirled around, and spread out like blossoming flowers.

-.....

-.....

The goblins silently watched the ever-changing flames, their eyes calm like spectators watching a stage.

Whoosh. Whish!

The cave was vast, but the vast space was entirely black. The flames were the only colorful light captivating everyone's gaze.

‘Ah.’

And then I understood.

‘That is a painting.’

Indeed.

The old man was painting with fire.

The flames blazed.

Each flame rose differently.

Two branches of fire split open like mouths, soaring high, reaching the ceiling of the cave.

▲.

It was anger.

The fire's peak hit the ceiling and shattered into pieces. Sparks fell like petals. Slowly. Gently. In the dark cave, the sparks twinkled and eventually vanished, leaving darkness in their wake.

▼.

It was sorrow.

The fire continued to rise from the bonfire.

Small. Into five branches. Like five fingers.

But the fingers of flame couldn't reach the ceiling. They couldn't catch the falling sparks. Between the falling sparks from the sky and the rising flames from the ground was an irreparable gap of air.

That was Gyari's death and their funeral.

The goblins cried silently.

All the Earth Spirit Tribe members watching the fire knew the meaning of the flames. It was their script. Their letters. Their painting. Every minutely trembling flame, every weakly fading spark, was a clear gesture to the Earth Spirit Tribe.

The elder unleashed the fire.

[You have witnessed the Earth Spirit Tribe's Blood Fire.]

Text shimmered in the flickering flames.

+

[Blood Fire]

Category: Art.

Origin: [Primitive Fashionista (E)]

Description: Blood Fire is a unique art of the Earth Spirit Tribe. After being conquered by the Mountain Calamity Tribe and dragged to the hollow city, Limepolis, the Earth Spirit Tribe found it difficult to obtain mud. It became hard to express their pictographic language.

‘We must draw.’

Yet, the Earth Spirit Tribe's aesthetic consciousness did not wane.

‘We want to draw.’

It instead ignited.

The Earth Spirit Tribe chose fire as a substitute for mud.

In a dark cave, it's hard to recognize a painting. But using fire, the darkness of the cave suddenly transforms into a vast canvas. The Earth Spirit Tribe adapted to and utilized their cave life.

‘Beautiful.’

The mud-dwelling tribe was mesmerized by the art of fire.

‘Gorr.’

The cave's fire.

The Earth Spirit Tribe named this Blood Fire. Sometimes called Hole Painting as the cave's painting or Fire Painting or Blood Painting comparing the flames to blood.

Fire burns and then disappears. It leaves no trace. Therefore, it's good for evading the surveillance of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

When witnessing Blood Fire, it's polite to remain silent. This too is to avoid being caught by the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

May fortune accompany the silent fire.

*However, only Aura users can perform Blood Fire.

*Very few among the Earth Spirit Tribe can use Aura! Among them, only one 'priest' can use red Aura. If the priest dies without a successor, the art of Blood Fire will decline.

+

The elder waved his hand through the flames.

Whooosh... oosh... oosh...

The once fiercely burning fire gradually diminished. Without sparks hitting and breaking on the ceiling, without flames rising and howling from the wood. The fire silently subsided without leaving a trace.

And it went out.

Night had fallen.

With the fire extinguished, the cave was enveloped in complete darkness.

There was no light anywhere.

By extinguishing the fire, the elder had painted the last picture that Blood Fire could express. The darkness of the cave was no longer just empty space. It was the picture drawn by the elder.

-.....

The goblins saw the 'night' and quietly wept in the midst of it.

-.....Gorr.....

No one lit a torch. It was ● now. The goblins accepted the ●. Without anyone saying or commanding to leave, the goblins turned to leave on their own.

To sleep.

The goblins groped their way along the path they came from in the ●. Nothing could be seen in the ●.

But their scent lingered.

Sniffing the scent of their kin, the goblins returned home in groups. The Earth Spirit Tribe member with the best nose led the way. The other goblins followed, holding his hand or shoulder.

Thus, the goblins left the cave, their own temple.

"....."

Only I, the Guardian Spirit, and the elderly goblin priest remained in the underground temple of the underground world.

-Kerr... Kerrr...

The old man, seemingly exhausted, sat on the cave floor. This place seemed like his home. The goblins left some fish behind when they departed the temple, and the old man, sitting down, tore into the fish.

"....."

I silently observed the tribe that had set up a temple in the cave.

Here, the children of the earth conducted a funeral. They buried the death of their kin.

I had never taught them how to conduct a funeral. I hadn't spoken about how to swallow death. What I taught was merely tattoos to mask the smell and paintings to represent six worlds.

Just that.

With just that, the Earth Spirit Tribe set up a temple. They found fire on their own.

"Even though I might be like a parent to these children..."

I spoke.

"They are not mine."

They did not grow as I thought, nor did they grow as I expected. These children found their own way.

They learned how to accept death.

I was proud of that.

-Kerrr....

Leaving the old priest behind, I went up to the underground city.

‘I know what I should do for the kids.’

Not salvation, but support.

Not worry, but encouragement.

‘Supporting and encouraging these children. That’s my role.’

At the place where the Mountain Calamity Tribe's giant pillar stood.

My colleagues, whom I had parted with yesterday, were gathered there. Had they, like me, visited their respective tribes? The Black Dragon Witch silently stared at the ground, and Viper grimly crossed his arms.

“Ah. You’ve arrived, King of Death!”

The Heretic Inquisitor waved his hand.

“The King of Death is the last to arrive! Well. Have you made up your mind?”

“Yes.”

I nodded.

“I can’t surrender to you, after all. I won’t let the children I nurtured lose their letters and forget their homeland.”

“Ahaha. Then?”

“I will help the Earth Spirit Tribe escape from your underground, Heretic Inquisitor.”

I said.

“And I will eliminate you from the 32nd floor.”

“Ahaha.”

The Heretic Inquisitor grinned broadly.

“I thought you would say that, King of Death. As expected! Good. Let’s bet our respective tribes and wage war against each other!”

That was our declaration of war.

Chapter 162: Cave Fire (2)

---

“I’d like to hear the opinions of the others.”

The Heretic Inquisitor addressed his companions.

“Will you surrender to me? Or will you stand with the King of Death against me? Ahaha. I’m fine with either choice.”

“...Isn’t this an act of betrayal?”

The Black Dragon Witch held her forehead. Perhaps a headache was throbbing. She gave a sharp look to the psychopath she had known for a long time.

“We swore not to be hostile to each other, remember? Once on that night. Once when we conquered the 28th floor with the King of Death. I thought a vow repeated twice would carry more weight...”

“It’s alright this time! Whether I win or you win, the stage will be cleared either way. We all will be victorious. It’s just a matter of differing approaches to victory!”

“Sigh...”

“I will stand behind the King of Death.”

The Sword Saint declared.

“I’m weary of a life chasing quick results and came to the tower seeking change. Now that I’m here, I don’t wish to revert to my old ways. Temple Master of the Omnipotent God. Though you’ve courteously offered surrender, I too, must courteously decline.”

One by one, the companions shifted their stance. Step by step. The Heretic Inquisitor watched their movements with a smile.

“Aha.”

Five stood behind me.

“As expected! I truly lack trust!”

No one stood behind the Heretic Inquisitor.

Until yesterday, a few had sympathized with the Heretic Inquisitor. The Countess did. But now, after spending a day witnessing the conditions of their respective tribes, no one sided with him.

“You’re not untrustworthy.”

The Paladin spoke.

“We all know you’re a great guild leader. And that you’d be [the worst parent]. Children tend to resemble their parents. Leaving the children entirely in your hands... I’d feel more secure leaving them with Viper.”

“Huh? Why drag me into this when I’ve been quiet?”

“It’s a compliment. You’d make a better parent than the Heretic Inquisitor.”

“Hey hey... what a compliment. You might as well say I'd be a better leader than Hitler.”

6 to 1.

Despite the overwhelming disadvantage, the Heretic Inquisitor continued to beam.

“What's your plan now, King of Death? The city I built is strong. The slaves have already forgotten their past wildness and submitted to the Mountain Calamity Tribe's rule!”

The Heretic Inquisitor seemed confident.

“You must have seen the Earth Spirit Tribe's secret meeting. There, they wouldn't have condemned or slandered the Mountain Calamity Tribe! They just conducted their rituals. That's how solid the Mountain Calamity Tribe's rule is!”

‘As expected.’

He knew about the goblins' meeting but left it unchecked.

Like me, the Heretic Inquisitor could turn invisible. Having ruled here for 200 years, he wouldn't have missed the secret meeting.

[It doesn't matter. It's no significant threat.]

That must have been the Heretic Inquisitor's assessment to leave the meeting be.

"I'm sorry, but your tribes have lost hope. They merely mourn and commemorate the past. My 200 years made that possible. King of Death! Do you have a way to raise those who have kneeled?"

"....."

I quietly surveyed the underground world.

Dawn was breaking.

From the ceiling of the underground city, a streak of blue light flowed. The goblins, with heavy eyelids, crawled out of their pits. In the old world, the last to sleep and the first to wake were always the slaves.

“I'm not the one to raise them.”

I opened the [Civilization Shop].

Items in the shop were displayed.

+

[Oracle Message] - 20p

[Animal Possession] - 40p

[Appearance in Dreams] - 100p

[Hunting Prey Tracking] - 5p

[Bronze-rank Settlement Search] - 80p

[Tribal-rank General (Lottery)] - 100P

[Bronze-rank Technology Invention (Lottery)] - 1,000P

.

.

.

+

I selected one item from the list.

"It's just a small catalyst to help the children stand up."

Soon, the Tower's voice inquired.

[Would you like to purchase 'Oracle Message'?]

[20 race points will be consumed!]

[Your current race points are 995.]

I didn't stop there.

[Purchasing 'Oracle Message'.]

[20 race points will be consumed!]

[Your current race points are 975.]

I poured nearly all my points into it.

[Purchasing 'Oracle Message'.]

[Purchasing 'Oracle Message'.]

[Purchasing 'Oracle Message'.]

I recalled the times I had to endure alone. 4000 days of return. When I faced four thousand deaths by myself, what helped me was a voice.

[You have died.] The Tower's voice.

Every time I died, the Tower notified me of my death. Even if I returned, the Tower knew.

The fact that someone in this world was watching me, remembering me.

In really tough times, that fact comforted me.

[Purchasing 'Oracle Message'.]

Now it was my turn to be someone's comfort.

[20 race points will be consumed!]

[Your current race points are 215.]

I purchased 40 Oracle Messages.

The Heretic Inquisitor was still grinning. He wouldn't know what item I purchased.

In the meantime, I had designated 40 individuals, including the goblin priest, the supervisors responsible for each pit, and the sword fighters resting in the gladiators' quarters, as recipients of the oracle.

‘...What should I tell them?’

I pondered.

‘I don't want to tell them to rebel against the Mountain Calamity Tribe. Whether to revolt or to obey, it's for the goblins to decide. What I need to give the children is not the choice itself. It's to help them make their own decisions.’

The message could only be a single sentence.

After much thought, I chose the oracle to send from the words I could say.

[The White Lion is with you.]

Pause.

A mother applying mud to her child's face flinched.

[The White Lion is with you.]

A supervisor just leaving the pit, picking up a stone axe, twitched.

[The White Lion is with you.]

In a cramped shelter, a gladiator was startled.

He dropped the whetstone while sharpening his dagger.

[The White Lion is with you.]

You worship this person as a god, but he is powerless.

He lacks the power to overturn the earth or shake the heavens with miracles.

All I can do is voice a single sentence.

[The White Lion is with you.]

That was the first oracle I delivered.

-.....

The old goblin, lying on the cave floor, stirred. The priest, using the charred remains of wood as a staff, struggled to stand up. Crunch. The stick couldn't bear his weight and broke, but the priest was already on his feet.

-Gorrr...

The elderly goblin laboriously traversed the labyrinthine underground cave. With each step, his pace quickened. Using not just his feet but also his hands, the old goblin climbed upwards, further up from the underground.

-The White Lion has spoken to us...

The priest grasped a rock with his front hand and pushed off the cave floor with his back foot. Red aura flowed from his aged flesh. The aura, resembling flames, carried his voice throughout the cave.

-The White Lion has spoken to us!

The echo resounded.

-The White Lion has spoken to us!

There were dozens of paths in the goblins' underground cave. The priest's voice, fueled by aura and bellowed in defiance, echoed along these many pathways, reaching long-abandoned salt mines and areas where dawn labor was just beginning.

-He has spoken... to us...

-The White Lion has spoken to us!

The echo of the priest's voice finally reached the entrance of the mine. There, the goblin pits were located. Goblins drinking water from jars at dawn perked up their ears.

-The White Lion has spoken to us...

Then, the old man collapsed, having drained his life force to expend every last drop of his aura.

-He has spoken...

The elderly priest lay on the ground, not reserving any strength to rise again. His own voice still echoed back at him. As his voice echoed, the priest closed his eyes.

-Ker.

-Kekkerkek...?

The goblins stirred. They peeked out of their pits, all eyes fixated on the mine's dark entrance, where echoes still resonated.

-Kerk.

One of the supervisors, who had received an oracle from me, stood up while setting down a child.

-The White Lion has spoken to us!

Before the last echoes of the old man faded, the supervisor shouted. He was not alone. Dozens of Earth Spirit Tribesmen, who had received the oracle, raised their heads in succession.

-At last, the White Lion has returned!

-I heard it too! Kerk, I did!

-He said he is with us!

That was all. The children who received the oracle, desperate to share this with their kin, urgently cried out. Just that was enough to unsettle the Mountain Calamity Tribe overseers.

-What's this, lime? Why are these creatures suddenly...

-Quiet! Everyone quiet!

-From now on, any goblin that makes noise will be whipped!

The snails crawled out of their towers, brandishing their tentacles. Crack! The sound of a whip made several goblins cower. Even though some Earth Spirit Tribesmen continued to shout, the Mountain Calamity Tribe didn't spare any and whipped the instigators.

"....."

The Heretic Inquisitor hummed and stroked his chin.

"I see. You activated the Oracle Message? Simple yet effective. But King of Death, your points are limited. You can't send an oracle to even thousands, let alone tens of thousands! This disturbance can be managed by the Mountain Calamity Tribe---."

I didn't wait for him to finish speaking.

Immediately, I purchased the next item.

[Purchasing 'Hunting Prey Tracking'.]

[5 race points will be consumed!]

[Your current race points are 210.]

It was an item I had already purchased once.

I quickly used the item.

'Please locate the nearest lion.'

A map formed in my mind.

It was the Colosseum. Right next to the arena was an animal enclosure, where five lions were caged. A lion nonchalantly gnawed on a bone.

‘Okay.’

I purchased the last third item from the shop.

‘I will buy Animal Possession.’

The Tower responded.

[Purchasing ‘Animal Possession’.]

[40 race points will be consumed!]

[Your current race points are 170.]

Before the Heretic Inquisitor could finish speaking, I possessed one of the lions in the Colosseum. Whoosh! My vision twisted. As if a fuse had blown, my mind darkened.

But only for a moment.

The next instant, I was inhabiting the body of the lion.

“Grrrr...”

Unlike the previous stage, this lion did not have white fur. Its mane was an ordinary brown.

But that didn't matter.

“Grrrum. Grrr.”

Regardless of the fur color, a lion's roar is a lion's roar.

I summoned aura from my entire body. Red-tinged aura surged from my heart. Thump! I encapsulated every beat of my heart and exploded it into a roar.

“Grrrrruk!”

Beasts in the opposite cage were terrified.

“Grrrrrrr!”

My roar transcended the bars, escaping the animal enclosure. It echoed in the plaza where the Colosseum stood, down the streets, along the walls where the Mountain Calamity Tribe trafficked, to the ceiling of the underground city, and finally into the pits dug by the goblins.

‘I am here.’

Even if the lion's eyes couldn't see, I knew.

Now, the goblins are undoubtedly listening to my call.

Hearing my voice.

“Grrrr...”

I took a deep breath and then...

“Guru-!”

I unleashed a powerful lion's roar.

The name of the place that became the Earth Spirit Tribe's homeland. The name I gave them. Our first shared name, word, and eventually belief—I bellowed it.

“Guru!”

The response did not take long.

-Guru...

From across the great cavity, a shout echoed back. The shout was infinitely smaller than my voice carrying aura, but my ears did not miss the goblins' cry.

"Guru!"

And then.

They didn't miss it either.

[An uprising occurs in Limepolis!]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe rebels against the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

Chapter 163: Cave Fire (3)

---

The commotion in the early morning woke up the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

-What's this uproar!

-The lion suddenly started roaring. Lime.

-Unsettling noises are coming from the mines...

Buildings sprouted like mushrooms in the underground city. From the windows of these tall structures, snails emerged. Hundreds, thousands, tens of thousands. From the snails that slept the lightest to those that were deeply asleep, the slime of the Mountain Calamity Tribe covered the walls.

-Is it just a disturbance? Or a rebellion?

-It's a rebellion!

-Blow the horns!

-Lime! Let's awaken the spirits of our ancestors!

Snails climbed up the walls. Slap! Using their antennae, the snails slapped their own faces. This was their way of waking up from sleep.

Boooooom...

The first Mountain Calamity Tribesman to reach the top of the barrier blew a horn. It was not a typical horn, but the shell of a dead snail. The Mountain Calamity Tribe used the remains of their deceased kin as a conduit, producing a long, ominous horn sound.

Boooooom...

Following the first horn, other Mountain Calamity Tribesmen climbed up the barrier. Those on the wall brought the shells of their kin to their mouths. In the underground city, with its numerous buildings, each building acted like a pipe, resonating throughout the great cavity. Booom. Booom. The harmony of the organs played by the Mountain Calamity Tribe shook the dark underground world. The voices of the goblins were buried beneath these sounds.

Bark! Bark!

The dogs raised by the Mountain Calamity Tribe barked. Deeming dogs sacred for their resemblance to deities, the Mountain Calamity Tribe held them in high regard. Dogs grown in the caves had wet noses and their barks sounded gloomy. The harsh barking melded with the dead snail's harmonies.

“Grrrr.”

I shattered the cage. Screech! The bars, reinforced with aura in my forepaws, sliced like tofu. By the time the animal keepers emerged to point their tentacles at me, I had already escaped and was running through the streets of Polis.

-A lion!

-The lion from the arena has escaped!

Snails climbing the wall paths were startled upon seeing me. Some snails hurriedly scampered to higher ground. I struck the ground with my hind legs, leaping onto the giant pillar—right onto the one carved with the history of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

“Grrrr!”

My forepaws dug into the pillar. Red aura surged from them. Like a mountain climber, I ascended the pillar, step by step.

-Lime!

-Look over there!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe was alarmed by my ascent. Other snails, climbing different buildings, scattered, leaving trails of slime. Some lost their balance and slid down the walls.

I stood atop the pillar, overlooking the city.

Boooooom...

The underground world was still filled with the sound of horns. The sound flowed from dead bodies. Following this sound, the Mountain Calamity Tribe armed themselves and assembled. Their forces moved throughout the city. Soon, they would suppress the goblins.

‘I won’t leave it be.’

I puffed out my chest. No building was taller than the pillar I had climbed. I took in the highest air of the city into my lungs and slowly opened the lion's maw.

Goooooooo-

A low growl erupted from my mouth.

Like ripples spreading across a pond, the lion's roar displaced the Mountain Calamity Tribe's horns. The roar spread farther and wider. My lungs were deeper than the empty insides of the dead snails, and my voice more ferocious than their harmonies.

-Gor!

Finally, I caught sight of the goblins. Armed with stone hammers, they gathered at the entrance of the mine.

My seeing them meant, conversely, that they too could see me.

The goblins shouted.

-Kekerkker!

That was my name.

When the Earth Spirit Tribe's language was still amidst the cries of beasts, the goblins called me Kekerkker.

‘Ke’ signified water. Everything pure and transparent in this world was called ‘Ke’ by the goblins.

‘Kerk’ denoted the sky. Everything lofty and sacred in this world was ‘Kerk’ to them.

‘Ker’ meant meat and also animals.

Thus, my name was.

-Kekerkker!

The pure white beast descended from the sky.

Otherwise known as the White Lion.

I stood tall in the heart of the underground world and roared.

“Guru!”

Seeing me on the pillar, the Mountain Calamity Tribe hesitated, while the goblins rolled forward. The goblins formed a line. It was the hunting formation I had taught them long ago when we hunted bulls.

The goblins had preserved the time we spent together two hundred years ago. Like a casual word from a parent leaving a lifelong mark on a child.

Feeling a sense of responsibility, I looked at the formation formed by the goblins.

-Guru!

Alright.

My little ones.

I will take you to the homeland you yearn for.

“Grruk.”

I exerted strength in my forepaws. The aura that surged from my heart flowed through the lion's forearms, paws, and claws.

Crack-Crack-Crack-.

The pillar cracked where my claws dug in. The red aura infiltrated the pillar like a spider web in an instant.

Demonic Heavenly God Art - Reformation.

The First Form.

Sword of Burning Youth.

The giant pillar shattered like glass. The snails screamed. The carved pieces, holding the Mountain Calamity Tribe's myths, broke apart.

I stepped on the fragments of the collapsing pillar as I descended. When I landed on the ground, the pillar had completely collapsed. Dust swirled around me.

‘Now, the Mountain Calamity Tribe's spirit has surely crumbled.’

In this era, people lived in myths. The collapse of the pillar was more than just a single building falling. The pillar was the Mountain Calamity Tribe's history and religion. Its collapse signified a disaster.

A deity had descended.

‘On the contrary, the goblins will be emboldened.’

But I wasn't the only deity roaming the underground world.

A prophecy I had never issued was heard.

[The Heretic Inquisitor admires your swift strategy.]

Then, cutting through the dust cloud, a hunting dog leaped at me.

“Kaah!”

The hunting dog howled and clawed at my waist. It was a surprise attack. I roared and swung my forepaws. Whoosh! But my claws swiped through the air, not the hunting dog's head. The hunting dog, which was right in front of me, had suddenly disappeared.

‘Holy Technique!’

I immediately realized the identity of the hunting dog.

‘Did the Heretic Inquisitor also possess an animal?’

The Heretic Inquisitor quickly grasped my objective. To bring down the pillar symbolizing the Mountain Calamity Tribe's religion. To plunge the Mountain Calamity Tribe into panic.

I aimed to swiftly secure victory by staging a scene from mythology. If the Mountain Calamity Tribe fell into chaos, it would make the Earth Spirit Tribe's escape easier. In response, the Heretic Inquisitor possessed a divine beast to confront me.

‘Where are you.’

My waist throbbed. Blood flowed from the wound torn by the hunting dog. I guarded all directions, but the Heretic Inquisitor was nowhere to be seen. The dust cloud still obscured my vision.

‘Where will you appear from, Heretic Inquisitor!’

It was at that moment when the scent of oil wafted to my nose.

"Grr!"

As soon as I smelled the oil, I rolled to the side. Thump! The hunting dog leapt from mid-air, striking the ground where I had been. It licked its lips, as if regretting its missed attack.

The hunting dog had golden fur.

It was clear that the Mountain Calamity Tribe's priests had always cared for this creature. Small jewels were embedded in the hunting dog's teeth. Swirling wave patterns adorned its short fur.

Most importantly, the scent of olive-like fragrant oil emanated from its entire body.

‘You chose a divine beast to fight in a mythological manner.’

I growled, making a beastly sound.

‘But that’s where you went wrong, Heretic Inquisitor. Your body reeks of fragrant oil. I might have fallen for your ambush once, but don’t think a second ambush with [that smell] will work!’

In this body, I could only produce the roar of a lion. Yet, it seemed like the Heretic Inquisitor understood my roar. He ceased his ambush, realizing its futility.

We looked at each other, taking a step each.

“Karrrr.”

"Grr..."

The sounds of the hunting dog and the lion mingled in the dust.

I slowly circled to catch the hunting dog.

‘You won’t beat me in a one-on-one fight, unless it's a group battle. Your Holy Technique is formidable but is more of a support skill. Without comrades to fight alongside, it’s only half as effective.’

The golden hunting dog growled.

To me, it sounded like the Heretic Inquisitor's laughter.

[The Heretic Inquisitor says he is happy to fight you.]

‘Happy?’

[The Heretic Inquisitor wants you to prove that you are more capable than him.]

I couldn't immediately grasp the meaning of the message.

The hunting dog moved its forepaws more slowly, as if reading my expression.

[The Heretic Inquisitor says,]

[He acts only to achieve the best outcome.]

Slowly, the dust cloud settled.

[Everyone has different abilities.]

[The best effort of a capable person is more valid than that of an incompetent one.]

[If it's proven that you are more capable than him, the Heretic Inquisitor is ready to submit to you.]

Beyond the settling dust, the figures of the Earth Spirit Tribe and Mountain Calamity Tribe became visible.

Both tribes faced each other, with us in the middle.

[The Heretic Inquisitor has shown you his best over 200 years.]

[Now, he asks for your best.]

The hunting dog charged at me.

I too roared and raised my claws.

As we collided, the citizens rushed towards the slaves, and the slaves charged at the citizens.

-Lime!

-Kekerkker!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe, clad in leather armor, swung their tentacles wielding blades. The goblins, lacking proper clothing, swung their stone hammers with bare bodies. The citizens overwhelmingly outmatched in armament, but the snails were unsettled by the sight of the falling pillar, and the slaves had the upper hand in morale.

“Grrr!”

My claws tore through the Heretic Inquisitor's hind leg. Kaaa! The hunting dog twisted its neck, howling in pain. However, my attack wasn't fatal.

Each time I tried to land a decisive blow, the Heretic Inquisitor skillfully used his Holy Technique to evade. The Holy Technique, though ineffective for ambush, was still valid for dodging.

The Heretic Inquisitor's tactics were clear.

‘Are you trying to delay?’

The hunting dog whimpered softly. I couldn't understand the sound of the hunting dog, but the intention of the Heretic Inquisitor was easy to imagine.

He must be thinking, ‘The Mountain Calamity Tribe is in disarray now, but they will gradually regain their composure. More forces will converge here. If I just delay, I am bound to win.’

A war of attrition.

That was the Heretic Inquisitor's strategy.

“Grrr.”

I watched the hunting dog with blood dripping from my waist. The hunting dog limped on its hind leg, locking eyes with me. Both of us were wounded beasts.

‘Not a bad strategy, but.’

I growled.

‘It only works when you're dealing with me alone. In the current situation, it's a bad move.’

Time was definitely not on the Heretic Inquisitor's side.

More precisely, it couldn't be on the Mountain Calamity Tribe's side.

The time that the snails had ruled was now suffocating them.

[Rebellion breaks out in Limepolis!]

Suddenly, something appeared from the sky.

A black swan.

The Black Dragon Witch's divine beast had appeared using animal possession.

Bats hanging from the cave ceiling fluttered their wings. The bats swooped down on the snails moving towards the salt mine. The Mountain Calamity Tribe screamed, waving their tentacles, but the Ghost Tribe revealed even more ferocious fangs.

‘The one stalling wasn’t you but me, Heretic Inquisitor.’

The beastly roars echoing in the underground world didn't stop there. From the dried-up river docks, the salt-stacked harbor, from the western end to the eastern end of the cave, four roars erupted.

[The Gill Fishes Race rebels against the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

[The Ghost Tribe rebels against the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

[The Fairy Tribe rebels against the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

[The Pure Humans Race rebels against the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

It was the sound of an empire crumbling.

Chapter 164: Rain, Mud and Fire (1)

---

Young members of the Earth Spirit Tribe didn't know what 'rain' was.

Only the aged ones, the grandmothers, knew of 'rain.' Sometimes, the old Earth Spirits would gather around the campfire and murmur.

-Rain is water that falls from the black sky.

An elderly Earth Spirit drew a picture with charcoal on their nails.

●. It represented the night. Darkness. Since the Earth Spirit Tribe became slaves to the Mountain Calamity Tribe and started living here in the Great Hollow, it became the most familiar character.

-When rain falls, the whole world fills with moisture. You can feel the dampness everywhere without going to a stream or a well.

-All the dry land quickly turns to mush. Becoming mud. When it rains, just walking on the ground gives a pleasant sensation under your toes.

The elders drew '●~' on the ground while narrating.

Rain falling from the dark night sky.

-Goruk.

It sounded like a dream.

Water overturning the sky, mud filling the land.

In the Great Hollow, water and mud were hard to come by. Water was only allowed to be fetched twice a day. The land of the Great Hollow, made of gravel and sand, made it difficult to create mud, no matter how much water was mixed.

-Sometimes, water drips from the cave ceiling, right?

An old Earth Spirit whispered.

-That is rain.

-But the ceiling doesn't drop enough water to fill the cave?

-It's because the holes in the ceiling are too narrow. Ker. The outside world is different.

-Is there a world outside too?

-This place is a pit. A small pit. A well. Once you leave the cave, the world is so vast, this place is barely a handful in comparison.

-Kerrrr. Sounds like a lie.

To the young Earth Spirit, the Great Hollow was the world. The ceiling of the Great Hollow was high, and the depths were profound. It seemed endless no matter how much they dug. Could such a Great Hollow be merely a well?

It was indeed an unbelievable story.

-Someday, the White Lion will return. Gor.

-Once, this world was covered in trees from heaven to earth. We lived in the World Forest. But the wrath of gods struck, and the World Forest went up in flames. The fire never ceased. For 10 days the fire grew, and for 100 days, it burned as it grew. Then the White Lion guided us.

-The White Lion will return and save us from this well.

-Kekkerkeker.

As time passed, the old Earth Spirits died.

All who remembered 'Guru' fell.

Now, not even the oldest knew of rain. Occasionally, Earth Spirits who had immersed their noses in overflowing mud appeared, but it was a luxury awarded for risking their lives in the Colosseum. It was not because the 'rain' had fallen from the sky.

-Kerkke.

Rain.

-Kerruk.

Mud.

Looking at two jars of water fetched from the stream, the Earth Spirits yearned for rain. Smearing mud, created by mixing water with sand, onto their skin, they nurtured a longing for mud.

Somewhere else, not here.

Another life, not now.

-Guru.

Our homeland.

2.

Limepolis.

Shouts erupted throughout the city, where the Mountain Calamity Tribe had established a dark civilization.

[The Ghost Tribe rebels against the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

[The Gill Fishes Race rebels against the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

[The Fairy Tribe rebels against the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

[The Pure Race rebels against the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

Each shout, weak on its own, couldn't overpower the trumpeting of the Mountain Calamity Tribe. But it was only a matter of time. Shouts from five locations, engulfing the city, began to surround it.

“Kiiuu.”

The Black Dragon Witch’s divine beast. The Black Swan flapped its wings. I couldn’t understand bird calls, but somehow, I comprehended her message.

‘I’ve come to help, King of Death.’

I nodded my head.

‘With the Black Dragon Witch’s help, the battle will be easier.’

I had collaborated with the Black Dragon Witch several times.

Although she might not remember, during the subjugation of the [Demon King of the Autumn Rain], I became familiar with her combat style over hundreds of repetitions.

“Grrruk!”

I roared and charged at the hunting dog. Fwoosh! The Demonic Heavenly God Art erupted, setting the surroundings ablaze. As flames enveloped us from all directions, the hunting dog used its Holy Technique to evade.

‘Now's the time!’

But the Heretic Inquisitor wasn't the only hunter capable of Animal Possession. Poof! The Black Dragon Witch immediately followed where the Heretic Inquisitor escaped. He hadn't anticipated her move while evading my attack, and she caught him off guard.

Crack!

The Black Swan's sharp talons scratched the hunting dog's golden fur.

“Kar-!”

The hunting dog bled and screamed. It twisted its neck to bite the Black Swan's wings. The Black Swan and hunting dog tumbled in the mud, entangled.

This time I saw an opening.

‘Switching offense and defense.’

I leaped and pounced on the hunting dog’s waist. My jaws sunk deep into its tough golden fur. Blood flowed from my mouth, and simultaneously, a scream erupted from the hunting dog.

One-sided domination.

The Earth Spirits cheered as the hunting dog was wounded.

-Kekkerkeker!

-The White Lion defeats the Golden Dog!

-Guru-ro! Let’s return to our homeland!

As the hunting dog’s injuries increased, the Earth Spirits grew more triumphant. In contrast, the Mountain Calamity Tribe panicked. They had swiftly dealt with the large-scale slave rebellion, but seeing their divine beast wounded, they lost their composure.

[The mining area of Limepolis is liberated.]

The Earth Spirits gradually drove the Mountain Calamity Tribe back.

-When will reinforcements arrive! Lime!

-Everywhere else, slaves are causing disturbances too...

-The horned ones are causing havoc! Laymu! We need support!

-At the docks, the fish are in an uproar!

-Reinforcements are out of the question. It's critical here too!

-Request aid from other Polises...

-How can we request reinforcements when the waterways are blocked! The bat brats have gone crazy too!

The snails desperately resisted.

But the slaves that had been oppressed by the snails in various places now seized their tentacles. Earth Spirits on land, Gill Fishes in water, Vampires in the air, and Ghosts, Fairies, and Pure Race in the streets.

Wherever the snails had enslaved others, flames erupted.

[The entertainment district of Limepolis is liberated.]

[The temple district of Limepolis is liberated.]

The enslaved races, unable to communicate with each other, had never united under the Mountain Calamity Tribe's tentacles. The six races each had their own language. But gods and humans were the same in not understanding each other's words. A revelation far more powerful than words, divine beasts led the races. While the Black Dragon Witch and I cornered the Heretic Inquisitor, other allies stirred up Limepolis as they pleased.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe was losing control of the city.

[The gate district of Limepolis is liberated.]

[The barracks district of Limepolis is liberated.]

The tide turned.

The rebellion that started in the mining district soon spread to the dock area.

Mermaids splashed in the river that connected the inside and outside of the cave. They were fish slaves of the Gill Fishes Race. Breaking the ropes around their necks, the mermaids sunk the ships.

-These! Lowly fish dare!

A Mountain Calamity Tribe official raised their tentacles high and struck down. Slap! A mermaid screamed as it was hit and fell back into the water. But it was in vain. Dozens of mermaids grabbed the bottom of the galleons and shook them vigorously.

-Aaah!

The snails slipped off the decks. Splash! The fallen snail was surrounded by mermaids in the water.

-Stay away! Stay away! The fish, aah! Aaah!

About twenty mermaids bit the snail, reminiscent of a pack of sharks hunting a penguin. Despite thrashing its tentacles, the snail couldn't drive the mermaids away in the water. Soon, only an empty snail shell remained on the surface.

[The dock district of Limepolis is liberated.]

Crack!

The huge dock-bound galleons capsized. The sacks of salt onboard sank along with the ships. The finely ground rock salt that the Earth Spirits had labored over all night dissolved without a trace upon touching the river water.

The hunting dog watched this scene from the corner of its eye.

"....."

Dozens of galleons collapsed. Amidst the wreckage, a pink dolphin leaped up. It was the divine beast possessed by the Paladin. Whoosh! The dolphin elegantly dived back under the water.

The Gill Fishes cheered and splashed water with their tails.

[Limepolis falls to the rebels.]

The hunting dog opened its mouth.

"Karr."

Perhaps the Heretic Inquisitor laughed, Ahahah.

The underground world he had built over 200 years was collapsing.

"Karruk, Karr."

The hunting dog stepped back. Drip. With each step, sticky blood trailed. Its beautiful golden fur, already torn by the lion's teeth and the black swan's talons, was bloody.

The same was true for the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

-Lime...

-Lime...

Snails, scared, hid behind the hunting dog. Their shells were indented by the Earth Spirits' stone hammers. Many had their tentacles or feelers cut off.

Snails from all over the city fled towards the hunting dog.

-Grruk.

Naturally, the slave races that drove them there also gathered.

A blood-soaked Ghost Tribe member shouted fiercely.

-Kill those bastards!

-Pay them back for what they did to us!

The Ghost Tribe, resembling dokkaebis, had a single horn on their foreheads. Originally standing tall like a unicorn's, these horns were now broken midway.

A mark of slavery.

The snails broke the horns of the Ghost Tribe, crushing their pride and dignity. A price was paid. Where pride was broken, resentment grew like mold, and where dignity was shattered, poisonous mushrooms of hatred sprouted.

-Damn brutes...

The same went for other races.

-They fed us dirt, laughing.

-Throw them in the pit and pour salt on them!

The Pure Humans Race growled.

-They captured our children, put them in wells, and called them 'fish tanks.'

-Throw them in the Colosseum and make them fight each other!

The Gill Fishes shouted from the waterside. Curses rippled across the dark water.

-They pulled our long ears.

-Stuff their mouths with their broken feelers.

The Fairy Tribe spoke.

-Blood...

-.....

The Ghost Tribe silently observed the Mountain Calamity Tribe from the cave and building walls. Unlike others, they were quiet, only occasionally flying in with animal carcasses, dropping them. They were the heads of the dogs revered by the snails.

Each of the six races, speaking their own languages, couldn't share their anger. But they knew enough of the Mountain Calamity Tribe's language. Forced to learn their master's language, they understood.

-Kill.

Someone whispered in the Mountain Calamity Tribe's language.

-Kill.

That single word was known to every race. It was always what the snails said to their slaves. The moan that first leaked from the Ghost Tribe quickly became a universal language, echoing throughout the cave.

-Kill!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe trembled with fear.

Finally, for the first time since their enslavement, the six races shared a sentiment. Its name was rage.

Everyone was soaked in blood.

And they wanted more.

"....."

I looked around at the snails cornered at the dock.

‘It would be easy to order their massacre.’

Likewise, preventing the massacre would also be simple.

Right now, to the Earth Spirits, I was almost a god. A god's command is absolute. Whether it's massacre or mercy, the Earth Spirits would obey.

‘But, this isn't something for me to command.’

I turned around.

‘You choose.’

And slowly walked towards the exit of the Great Hollow.

-Ker?

-Kekkerker...?

Confused noises from the Earth Spirits echoed behind me.

I didn't stop. Walking slowly enough for them to follow, yet fast enough to bid farewell. The Ghost Tribe hesitantly made way.

-.....

-.....

Silence flowed among the Earth Spirits. Like followers facing a cryptic oracle, they looked at each other's faces. As my footsteps grew distant, someone took a step.

-Goruk.

Their direction wasn't towards the gathered Mountain Calamity Tribe at the dock but towards me.

Dozens of Earth Spirits who had directly received my oracle followed me first.

Then came the young ones. The children preferred chasing their first-seen god over avenging their race.

-Kerr...

-Kekerkker.

As a child followed, the mother chased after.

As the chief followed, other Earth Spirits moved one by one.

The sound of stone hammers dropping echoed here and there. Casting aside the evidence of their slavery, the Earth Spirits followed the lion they revered as a god.

‘Right.’

In the dark underground world, a procession of thousands followed me.

‘Follow if you want.’

We walked towards the only entrance leading outside from the underground city.

No one stopped us.

As I stepped into the bright light at the entrance, the Tower's voice reached me.

[The Earth Spirits start escaping Limepolis.]

Let's go home now.

Chapter 165: Rain, Mud and Fire (2)

---

As I stepped forward, I instinctively closed my eyes.

“Grruk.”

The darkness of the cave was deep. As dark as it was, the emergence from it felt dramatic. Each step forward felt like a spotlight illuminating my path.

Light enveloped us.

-Ker, Ker!

The goblins quickly bowed their heads. Their prolonged life in the caves had altered their physiology. Thinner eyelids. Enlarged eyeballs. They had grown sensitive to light.

For a while, we walked, looking down at our feet.

-.....

The wind blew.

Then, the sunset unfolded before us.

-The sky.....

The goblins murmured softly.

It was already evening in the outside world.

The greasiness from the sunset spread out, painting the world red.

-The sky is red.

For the first time, the slaves gazed upon the endless sky. It was a luxury they had never experienced before, despite it being a fundamental right to look up at the sky from birth.

-The elders were right. It's the sky.

-Why is the sky red? Goruk. Is it bleeding?

-Red...

-The world is burning.

In awe, fear, or perhaps lost in an unknown joy, the goblins murmured. They looked around, trying to comprehend the world.

[The goblins have been freed from slavery.]

[The status of the Earth Spirit Tribe is changing!]

Words appeared before my eyes.

+

[Earth Spirit Tribe]

Extinction Grade: B (Caution)

Maxim: 'We are fire.'

Description: goblins are a race with all abilities in the lower tier. Their individual capabilities are insignificant. Thus, they unite as a community!

goblins have developed only a small number of characters. These are known by every Earth Spirit, from the most humble to the most noble. Minimal language. Minimal characters. Knowledge does not divide the goblins.

'We are fire.'

Fire may burn in many ways, but it always blazes as one. goblins have devised many cultures to become 'one.'

They hold 'gatherings' more in darkness than in bright daylight. The appearance of goblins is obscured in the dark, and individuals become indistinguishable. Thus, every Earth Spirit participating in the gathering becomes 'anonymous' while speaking.

Keep the fire of the goblins burning!

Traits: [Blood Fire (*)], [Guru Cult], [Legacy of Records], [Greed (*)]

Evolution: Unknown. There are 2 evolutions.

Alias: Goblin, etc.

*Caution! There are traits at risk of disappearing.

+

‘Ah, as expected.’

I furrowed my brow.

‘With the priest's death, [Blood Fire] is at risk of being lost.’

Guardian Spirit shrugged.

-Well, considering the condition is to use aura, specifically red aura, it's quite tricky.

‘Right... Hmm. For this stage, we need to start with aura first.’

-Is there a way? Buying aura from that civilization shop will cost an arm and a leg.

‘Yes, that's true. So, I'll buy something else.’

I thought it over.

‘Open the civilization shop.’

Swish.

Items displayed in the shop appeared.

+

[Oracle Message] - 20p

[Animal Possession] - 40p

[Appearance in Dreams] - 100p

[Hunting Prey Tracking] - 5p

[Bronze-rank Settlement Search] - 80p

[Tribal-rank General (Lottery)] - 100P

[Bronze-rank Technology Invention (Lottery)] - 1,000p

•

•

•

+

I purchased an item I had never used before.

‘I’ll buy one [Appearance in Dreams].’

Clang, the sound of a coin dropping resonated.

[Purchasing ‘Appearance in Dreams’.]

[100 race points will be used!]

[Your current race points are 70.]

‘Okay.’

I had already thought of the goblin to use this item on.

I turned to look at a young goblin.

Lying down using his fellow goblin's buttock as a pillow, snoring away, his name was Gorke.

‘Means clear water, right.’

Gorke, the goblin with the name meaning clear water, was mumbling in his sleep.

-Kerukke.

Rain.

-Kerruk.

Mud.

-Guru.

Dreaming of somewhere else, I quietly watched the sleeping Gorke.

I activated the item.

‘[Appearance in Dreams].’

Whoosh!

The scenery swirled, turning white around me.

---

A moment later, I found myself standing in the middle of a plain.

“Hoo?”

The vast plain seemed endless. Shhh. Rain poured down over it. The plain, soaked in rain, became muddy and dense.

In the middle of the muddy plain, Gorke lay with his mouth open.

The pouring rain drenched Gorke's mouth.

-Gorurururu.

Gorke blissfully swallowed the rainwater.

His face showed contentment as if he needed nothing more in this world.

That was the dream landscape of a young goblin longing for home.

"Indeed..."

I was convinced in many ways.

"Whether goblins or humans, desires aren't that different, are they?"

-Goruk?

Hearing my voice, Gorke sat up abruptly.

-Who's there!

“Can you hear my voice? Can you see me? Gorke.”

-Goru...? Pure Race?

Gorke looked puzzled.

“I am not Pure Race. Pitiful child, my name is Kekerkker. The revered White Lion, the being that will lead you to the promised home of Guru.”

-Keruk...? Kekerkker? Impossible!

Gorke snorted. Pfft! Being a Goblin with a big nose, his snort sounded as grand as an actual fart.

-Kekerkker is a lion with a beautiful mane and thick skin. But what are you? With your spiky black hair and skinny skin, you don't look anything like Kekerkker! Kekerkker wasn't ugly like you!

"Aren't you just a little brat? Damn."

-Damn? Keruk? What does that mean?

"It means a brat who should be shoved headfirst into a hole in the ground."

-Eh, such a foul-mouthed Pure Race. Ker. Someone as vulgar as you can't be the revered White Lion!

"Gorke. It was I who taught you letters. It was I who taught you how to hunt. I am Kekerkker, and I am the White Lion, how can you doubt me?"

-Show me proof!

"Very well."

I dug a hole in the mud.

Then I grabbed Gorke's ankle and stuck his head first into the hole.

"Do you see the evidence now?"

-Kerrrr?! Ker! It's a demon! A demon has appeared!

"What? You can't see it? Well, I'll have to show you more proof, as I hold you in such high regard."

I scooped up handfuls of mud and filled the hole.

Still pouring, the rain mixed with the mud, completely covering Gorke in a mud pack.

He screamed.

-I believe it! Keruk, I believe! You are definitely Kekerkker!

"Hmm. Quick to understand, I see. That's good."

I pulled Gorke out of the hole.

Mud-covered and shivering, the goblin stared at me.

"Gorke. My appearance in your dream is of great significance."

As I dusted the mud off his head, I continued.

"I, Kekerkker, intend to teach you aura."

-Aura?

"Didn't the priest show you Blood Fire? Didn't he have red energy swirling in his hands? That's aura."

-Ah. You mean [Holy Blood].

"Holy Blood?"

-We have a body and a soul. Everyone has a body, but the soul is one. One and complete. Goruk. Those who reach beyond the limits of the body to the soul can bleed not just from their body but also from their soul.... But.

Gorke frowned.

-Strange. This is the teaching you gave us, Kekerkker. If you really are Kekerkker, why don't you remember what you taught?

"Kid, I never taught such a thing. What I taught you was how to write letters, count to three, and how to hunt."

-Ker? Is there anyone who can't count to three?

These kids.

Forgetting the past in just 200 years.

How hard I worked to teach them Roman numerals.

"Enough. If you still doubt me, go find the lion Kekerkker when you wake up in the morning! I am that lion, and you will see that I am the one who appeared in your dream. So for now, shut up and learn what I teach."

-Holy Blood, is it?

"Yes. Let's begin the lesson."

I raised my arm and started beating the Goblin.

-Keruk?! It hurts! Kerrrr! Why are you hitting me suddenly?!

"Learning aura is the fastest when you're being hit."

It was a method taught to me by Guardian Spirit.

Truthfully, this was the only method I knew. If there was a more conventional method, like sitting cross-legged, focusing the mind, etc., I'd want to learn it first, but that wasn't an option....

"From now on, I'll beat you so much you'll wish you were dead. While I do, I'll continue to send aura into your body, so feel the flow within you. Capture it. Recognize the blood vessels spread like spiderwebs throughout your body."

-Kerrr! It hurts! It hurts! Kerrruk?!

"Ah."

Gorke curled up. I gently grabbed his wrist, straightened his arm, and then hit his palm, wrist, shoulder, and chest in sequence. Thump! Thump! Aura flowed from my fist into Gorke's body.

-Kerrrr?!

"This is all teaching that will become flesh and blood. Focus."

-There will be nothing left but flesh and blood!

"Exactly. Didn't you call aura holy blood? To show holy blood, the soul must be wounded enough to bleed, right?"

Despite my logical words, Gorke kept dodging.

-I'm going to die!

"No. This is not life, it's a dream. No matter how much I beat you, it'll only hurt as if you're dying, but you won't actually die. It's the perfect environment for learning aura."

-Kerub!

The dream landscape changed from the muddy plain to Slimepolis's arena. To Gorke, the current situation seemed indistinguishable from the Colosseum.

"Oh, this is even better!"

I was delighted.

"Look, Gorke. Those gladiators over there are glaring at you, their eyes fierce as if they'd do anything to cut off your head. Even in a dream, it will hurt if they decapitate you. Hurry up and fight back!"

-Ah, a nightmare. Ker. A terrible nightmare!

Gorke cried.

-Kekerkker! Where are you, who saved us from hell? A demon is tormenting your child! Save me, Ker! Save me!

"Ah, I am Kekerkker."

Time flowed slowly in the dream.

A considerable amount of time passed, but Gorke's dream did not end. Thanks to that, the young Goblin experienced countless non-deaths, and I leisurely guided him.

After a while,

"Ah!"

Flames flickered faintly in Gorke's palm.

Although weak, it was undoubtedly aura.

"Look, Gorke! It's aura. The holy blood has appeared in you!"

-Kerrr....

The young Goblin looked at his palm. His gaze was empty, as if he had lost something precious.

-Kill me.... Let me go, demon. I can't take it anymore....

"Usually, if you don't mind dying, learning while dying is the fastest. Many warriors spend a lifetime in martial arts without understanding aura. On the other hand, you've grasped the essence in just one night. Isn't this a rare opportunity?"

-Just kill me...!

"From now on, you must diligently serve the Earth Spirit Tribe."

I smiled contentedly and gently placed a hand on Gorke's shoulder.

Gorke flinched.

-Serve?

"Yes. The priest died, and there's no one to perform Blood Fire. You shall take his place. I find your culture beautiful. You must strive to ensure its beauty does not fade."

-Kerrr. But I lack the qualifications to be a priest....

"But your aura still seems a bit immature. What do you say, Gorke? Will you suffer for ten more days to master the ultimate form of aura?"

-I'll do it. Gorke! I'll be the priest!

"Excellent."

I nodded in satisfaction.

"Then I'll leave this dream. When you wake up, come to me and check. If I really am Kekercker, I'll pat you on the shoulder."

Then I awoke from the dream.

Quiet dawn.

The Goblins were already up, preparing to continue their journey home. Mothers caught fish by the river, and children grilled them. Many Goblins quietly watched the rising sun.

-Keruk...!

Not far away, a young Goblin suddenly stood up. It was Gorke. His green forehead was wrinkled, and he was drenched in cold sweat.

-Kerrr... Am I alive? I'm alive, Ker?

Gorke breathed heavily. Unsure if he was dreaming or awake, the Goblin slapped his cheek six times. Finally realizing the nightmare was over, Gorke sighed deeply in relief.

-.....

But that was short-lived.

Hesitantly, Gorke approached me.

-Kekerkker...

The young Goblin looked up at me with desperate eyes.

-Last night, a demon tormented me. Ker. The demon dared to impersonate Kekerkker and tormented me. I thought I was going to die. I believed I was dead. I wish you could show me that Kekerkker is not a demon....

"Grr."

Chin.

I slowly raised my paw and touched Gorke's shoulder.

-.....

Gorke's face filled with despair.

"Grr. Gor, Kruk. Grurum."

'Keep my words in mind and do well, kid.'

Though Gorke couldn't understand the lion's words, he shivered.

[A new successor of Blood Fire appears.]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe is no longer at risk of losing the Blood Fire trait!]

That went well. Really well.

-This kid....

Guardian Spirit muttered, having watched me teaching aura to Gorke from beginning to end.

-Why teach so crudely... Don't do that... Be nicer, really....

Chapter 166: Rain, Mud and Fire (3)

---

The Earth Spirit Tribe was at risk of losing more than just the [Blood Fire] trait.

"It must be because of their long suffering under the Mountain Calamity Tribe."

I pondered over the next trait that needed attention.

+

[Greed]

Rank: B

Effect: The Earth Spirit Tribe is overflowing with greed. Perhaps due to their inferiority complex and self-loathing for being ugly, they seek recognition not for themselves but through their possessions. 'Kerk! I've covered myself in warm mud!' 'Keruk! I've plastered myself with premium mud from upstream!'

An insatiable desire for better things.

A longing for more impressive possessions.

Mixed with feelings of inferiority, self-loathing, and a craving for recognition, the Earth Spirit Tribe's hearts brew a powerful greed. They might begin to covet shiny treasures, or perhaps they will boast about having prettier slaves than others. The Earth Spirit Tribe is greedy, and their potential lies within this greed.

The direction of their 'greed' depends on you.

*However, this trait may change depending on the course of history.

*Warning! Due to prolonged oppression, the Earth Spirit Tribe has begun to become indifferent to desire. Resigned to the thought that they cannot achieve what they desire, the Greed trait is at risk of becoming dormant if they continuously fail to experience 'the fulfillment of desire.'

+

"Hmm."

Greed is essentially desire. Having an ambition for something. Greed, desire, ambition - these words might have negative connotations, but...

My thoughts were different.

"It's better than being indifferent to everything."

-Well, I think so too.

Guardian Spirit scratched the back of his head.

-Desire is like a flow. It's like a river. If you dam it up and forcibly stop it, it builds up and floods. If you completely cover it up so it can't overflow, it stagnates and rots. Where does the rotten water go? It seeps underground, eating away at the land.

Guardian Spirit's voice was quite serious.

-Waterways need to be released. If you're going to release it, do it big! Let it flow in one direction. I see that as the direction of life.

"This disciple's opinion is similar, master."

-Hey, hey, who's your master? I've never had a disciple who teaches as ignorantly as you.

"What else should a tadpole learn to swim from but a frog? Sword Emperor, you are my frog, and I am your tadpole."

-Crazy brat...

We, master and disciple, proudly pondered side by side.

"Now, how should we guide the [Greed] in a splendid direction?"

The deliberation didn't last long.

Before I could find the answer, or before Guardian Spirit could tell me, someone else brought the solution.

More precisely, not 'someone else' but 'some others.'

-Kekerkker!

On the third week of the journey home.

Goblins at the back of the procession caused a ruckus. The ones who had been following me leisurely suddenly rushed forward in panic. Wondering what was happening, I turned my head and locked eyes with Gorke.

-Soldiers are visible from the back! Ker!

"Soldiers?"

I concentrated aura in my eyes and looked far beyond the horizon.

The first thing I saw was a cloud of dust. It was clear weather, yet there was dust billowing. It wasn't a natural occurrence, but the dust that rises when a herd of beasts stampedes.

I enhanced my vision a bit more.

"Hmm."

Hundreds of dogs.

Hunting dogs panted as they galloped across the plains.

No matter how much dogs are pack animals, hundreds is not a number that gathers spontaneously. Proving this, the hunting dogs carried something on their backs.

-The Mountain Calamity Tribe!

Snails clung tightly to the hunting dogs.

-The Mountain Calamity Tribe is pursuing us! Keruk! Form battle lines! Form battle lines!

-Children to the center! Be careful not to get trampled!

Cavalry.

No, the Canine Cavalry was approaching.

---

The Canine Cavalry of the Mountain Calamity Tribe was fast.

-Lime!

-Drive them towards the riverbank! Keep the distance!

As soon as the Earth Spirit Tribe formed a defensive line, the Mountain Calamity Tribe gave up the charge. Instead, they slowly herded us, nudging our weak formation, causing the Earth Spirit Tribe to involuntarily step back.

-Kerruk...!

-Don't let the formation break! Match your steps and sides!

Although the Earth Spirit Tribe outnumbered them, there were many elderly and children among them. They had to form a protective formation. The Earth Spirit Tribe was defensive, while the Canine Cavalry of the Mountain Calamity Tribe took the offensive advantage. Using their mobility, they leisurely herded us towards the riverbank.

"That's a good strategy."

I shielded the Earth Spirit Tribe from the front, thinking.

"I thought they were weak after collapsing so easily in Limepolis, but..."

-If they couldn't command the military, they wouldn't have been able to rule the six tribes. What happened in that cave was because all the slaves rose up at once, right?

"True, that makes sense."

I had stood at the forefront of soldiers in the 11th floor, [Aegim Empire's] port battle. So, I wasn't completely ignorant of military tactics.

Even to my eyes, the command of the Mountain Calamity Tribe was adept.

-Buuu.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe blew snail horns to control the pace of the advance. Sometimes they rushed as if to attack immediately, and other times they slowly and indirectly pressured.

-Lime!

Once the encirclement was complete, a commanding snail, who seemed to be the general, approached.

The general rode a much larger hunting dog than the other Canine Cavalry. Did the snail's mucus act as an adhesive? Unlike cavalry, there were no saddles or harnesses.

-Address the dirty mold slaves!

The general snail raised his voice.

-Your 'slave rebellion' has already been suppressed! Limepolis has risen from defeat. Our glorious empire's twelve cities have formed a large army and are pursuing the remnants. This is the proof!

The general inserted his tentacle into the snail shell. Something round. The Mountain Calamity Tribe raised it high and then hurled it towards us.

It was the head of a Ghost Tribe member.

The general did not stop there, continuing to pull out more heads. Earth Spirit Tribe, Pure Race, Vampiric Tribe, Fairy Tribe. Heads from each tribe rolled on the ground.

-Watch carefully! Lime! This is the fate of slaves who dared to rebel against the glorious Slime Empire! Our wrath is great and enduring. These are not the first punishments we have given, nor are they the last. mold. If you do not wish your dirty heads to form a bridge of blood, surrender immediately!

-Ker, Kerr.

The Earth Spirit Tribe shrank back.

-Other tribes have already been suppressed?

-It's a lie. That can't be. The world of the Mountain Calamity Tribe is already over.

-I don't want to return to hell, Ker....

Hmm.

"They're shaking our morale."

-What will you do?

"Expose their false morale."

I stepped forward.

The Earth Spirit Tribe stopped their murmuring and looked at my back. Between the standoff of the Mountain Calamity Tribe and the Earth Spirit Tribe, a plain lay. In the middle of the plain, I quietly glared at the Mountain Calamity Tribe's general.

[Purchasing 'Oracle Message.']

[20 race points are consumed!]

[You currently have 50 race points.]

Sorry, snail of this world.

I'm one step ahead in deception.

I used the divine message to directly implant words into the Mountain Calamity Tribe general's mind.

[The White Lion sees through your lies!]

Startled!

The general on the back of the hunting dog twitched his tentacles. Although I'm not familiar with the physiology of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, I could tell he was tense.

A simple story.

'There's no way they've really suppressed the rebellion.'

If the Mountain Calamity Tribe had won, the Tower would have informed me with a message. That the rebellion failed. That they returned to slavery.

'I haven't heard any such notifications yet.'

The conclusion was clear.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe general had made a bluff with lies.

'Well, I also figured it out because I receive benefits from the Tower system. But you must use everything at your disposal.'

I opened my beastly jaws wide and inhaled deeply.

Then, with aura, I unleashed a lion's roar.

"Gooooo!"

My roar echoed across the plains. Gekeng! The hunting dogs were startled and writhed. The Mountain Calamity Tribe didn't fall or slip due to their adhesive strength, but they too were unsettled.

-The god of mold...

-False gods descended all at once, bringing disaster to the city.

-Limepolis fools offended Lime. Only those who sufficiently serve Lime can enjoy blessings.

From the Mountain Calamity Tribe's perspective, I was an evil god. But even an evil god is still a god. Seeing the god with the Earth Spirit Tribe in person, the Mountain Calamity Tribe lost their momentum and hesitated.

"Good."

I seized the opportunity.

The opportunity to revive the Earth Spirit Tribe's [Greed].

[Purchasing 'Oracle Message']

[20 race points are consumed!]

[You currently have 30 race points.]

Despite clearing the 31st floor, the great escape on the 32nd floor, freeing the slaves, and continuing the lineage of [Blood Fire], I had not yet received a tally of race points.

There was a reason to save them for later, but now wasn't the time to explain.

"This will be enough."

I spent the remaining points to acquire another divine message.

I sent a message to the Mountain Calamity Tribe general.

[The White Lion proposes an honorable duel.]

The Mountain Calamity Tribe general twitched. It must have been frightening to be addressed by a wicked god.

But even then, the general didn't shy away from a counter-question.

-Lime. An honorable duel, you say...?

"Krrr."

Actions speak louder than words.

I turned around and walked back to the Earth Spirit Tribe, who looked at me with puzzled expressions. Enjoying the attention of the children, I stopped in front of one Goblin.

"Hey."

It was Gorke.

"Get on."

-.....

Gorke's face darkened.

-Ker, Kekerkker! It's an immense honor to have such an insignificant creature like me in your presence. May you proceed as you wish, Kekerkker.

"Enough of that."

I bent my front legs to make it easier for him to climb, assuming the posture of a slide.

"Get on, I said."

-Kerup!

Gorke hiccuped.

He looked around with pleading eyes for help.

-Wh... why is the White Lion doing this to me? It's really strange. Do you understand the will of the White Lion, Ker?

The Earth Spirit Tribe murmured amongst themselves.

-It seems like he's telling you to get on...?

-It definitely looks like he's allowing you to get on his back.

In desperation, Gorke spoke out.

-Kerurup! How could we, mere followers, rudely climb onto the back of the White Lion? It's blasphemy! There must be another, holier meaning that we can't even imagine!

I bent my hind legs as well.

Then I lifted my tail and tapped, tapped my waist.

The Earth Spirit Tribe deeply pondered.

-It really seems like he's telling you to get on...?

-If you don't, he might get very angry....

-Isn't disobeying the White Lion's command a greater blasphemy? Keruk?

Gorke looked distraught.

"That brat."

I decided to spend my last points to personally deliver a divine message to Gorke.

[The White Lion says if you don't get on quickly, he will beat you up.]

Eventually, Gorke, with tears in his eyes, climbed onto my back.

Seeing Gorke's tears, those around let out a rumble of admiration.

-Look! The grandson of Kirugepub, Gorke, has been granted grace by the White Lion!

-He's so moved that he's even crying! Gor!

-He's crying! It's worth crying over! It's a glory that will last for generations!

-I'm so envious!

Gorke cried even harder.

-Kerrr... No, it's a misunderstanding... Kekerkker isn't the kind of god you think... Rather than a god, he's more like a brother, and a very bad one at that....

Of course, Gorke's voice was drowned out by the noise.

Insincere shouts always disappear.

Ununderstood by anyone for the tears he shed, Gorke was carried on my back to the Mountain Calamity Tribe general.

-Indeed.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe general stared at me and Gorke on my back.

-So that's what an honorable duel means. I understand.

The general wiggled his antennae.

-I heard you mold didn't interfere with the massacre of our fellow Limepolis citizens. Lime. Though your fate is to rot in the salt mines, there's room for leniency for not participating in the slaughter.

The general murmured, perhaps this too was Lime's will.

He then turned his head and shouted to his army.

-Dirty mold and their god have proposed a duel to us! How amusing, slaves who only swung pickaxes in pits! Soldiers! Isn't there a hero among us who can break the pride of these mold!

-.....

-Success in the duel will bring a glorious life, promised by my antennae! Wealth! Slaves! Honor! Anything is possible. Break the noses of these mold!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe soldiers murmured.

Shortly after, one snail riding a hunting dog stepped forward boldly.

-Lime! I will seize the glory!

It was indeed a giant hunting dog.

Honestly, calling it a dog was legally questionable. At any rate, it was a beast the size of a lion with six legs, too dog-like to be called a dog.

And it wasn't just the dog with many things.

-I, a descendant of the Spiral Apostle lineage, stand here, a member of one of the seven families of the Rift City, Lekamulime!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe soldier with more tentacles than the others wielded a sword in each one, with four tentacles swishing through the air, the swords slicing the atmosphere. Shick! Shick! The dazzling swordplay drew admiration from the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

-Oh. A noble!

-Wow... that's the fearsome Spiral Apostle lineage...

-Truly blessed by Lime!

These guys are amusing.

"I wonder if nobility is determined by the number of tentacles?"

-It seems so.

"That's really strange."

-Yeah. Quite erotic.

"What?"

-Huh?

As the Guardian Spirit and I were marveling at the peculiarities of snail civilization, the so-called descendant of the Spiral Apostle lineage had come quite close.

-I am Seimseulam, a descendant of the Spiral Apostle lineage, ruler of the Rift City! Servant of the evil god! State your name!

Gorke tensed up at such a grand self-introduction.

-Ki, Kirugepub's grandson Gorke....

-A priest's kin?

-Kerrr. The priest has passed away.

-A noble?

-We don't have nobles, Keruk....

-A mere slave.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe soldier twirled a head antenna.

It seemed to be a gesture of ridicule.

-Today, I'll show you the dignity of one loved by Lime! Here!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe led the hunting dog into a charge.

The four swords crossed, making a noisy clang, clang. Seemingly trying to overpower with sound before the fight. I thought no one would fall for such a silly trick, but the coward on my back was thoroughly scared.

-Ker! Kerrrr!

Gorke grabbed my mane and howled.

-Why me! Why do I have to suffer like this, Keruk! It's a demon! I've been tricked by a demon!

"Krrrung."

Hey. Don't worry.

Trust this brother!

I'll turn you into a hero!

Chapter 167: Rain, Mud and Fire (4)

---

-Lime! I'll slice off your nose in one stroke!

The noble soldier charged in swiftly.

"Oh?"

But this was quite fascinating.

He wasn't using a single or double sword like a Pure Human. It was the Quadruple Sword Style. Displaying swords in all four directions: up, down, left, and right, he swung them around.

The diversity of attack patterns was something that primates with only two arms would find hard to mimic.

"Interesting."

The advantage of the Mountain Calamity Tribe with several tentacles on their body was apparent.

Despite numerous battles I've encountered, I had never seen this kind of swordsmanship from [such] a race.

'The vertical strikes are feints. A bluff.'

I quickly assessed the enemy's sword movements with my eyes.

'The horizontal strikes are the real ones... The left one is a distraction. The right one is the main attack. Okay, if the left one is blocked, he'll immediately switch to the other side.'

"Hmm."

Guardian Spirit sighed as if deeply moved.

-They say even a dog at a noodle shop can cook ramen after three years. Kim Zombie. Finally, you're starting to make sense.

'It's the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult, sir.'

-Who are you calling sir?

Anyway... what should I say about this?

'It's a bit strange how simple racial differences lead to variations in swordsmanship.'

-What? Isn't that obvious?

'Yes. But the obviousness only really hits you when you face it head-on. Hmm. This really is martial arts of the demonic unorthodox path. Maybe it could help me refine the Demonic Heavenly God Art...'

-Oh, are you planning to study the snails' swordsmanship now?

'We'll see.'

I skillfully ducked under the feints and used my left and right paws to lightly kick away the Mountain Calamity Tribe soldier's swords.

-Lime?!

The noble was shocked, his antennae spread wide.

'Sorry, kid.'

There was no need for a power struggle.

'It's an issue of the engine before skill.'

The Mountain Calamity Tribe soldier either didn't know how to use aura, or hadn't learned to extend it to the blades held in his tentacles. I had been praised by Guardian Spirit for my talent in manipulating aura. The soldier simply couldn't keep up with me.

No matter how good his riding skills or how noble his mount, he couldn't be faster than a novice pilot in an airplane.

Moreover, I was no longer at the level to be considered a novice.

-You, evil god! Lime! Grant me strength!

The noble swung his swords more fiercely, but it was futile. He couldn't even cut a single hair of my mane. I enjoyed the rhythm of the fight, kicking away his swords with a thud, thud.

-Kerup?! Keru!

Of course, this was my relaxed commentary.

To Gorke, swords were whizzing by right in front of him.

-Save me! Save the Goblin! This demon isn't Kekerkker, is it?! I'm doomed! Gorke is doomed!

"Tsk, tsk."

It was pitiful.

I had even set up a stage in his dreams and bestowed aura upon him. Even if he was scared of dying, shouldn't he show some spirit? Let's say he was really in danger of dying. Wouldn't I help him out?

-Hey, Zombie.

'Yes?'

-Your way of dealing with this Gorke Goblin... it reminds me of someone teaching another. Reminiscent of someone here, teaching someone else. It's probably just my imagination, right?

'I don't know what you're talking about. If you're going to spout nonsense, just watch.'

-Yeah... I guess... It's just me feeling sorry for the goblin. I've hardly felt sorry for humans, but here I am, feeling sorry for a goblin.

What nonsense was this ghost talking about?

"Krrung."

I focused on defense, parrying the noble's sword attacks with my claws, never attacking the soldier myself.

The one to defeat this noble is not me.

'It's Gorke's turn.'

'It's the turn of the Earth Spirit Tribe.'

I patiently waited.

-Ker. Kerr...?

After some time, Gorke seemed to realize that [he was not in immediate danger of dying] and started to relax. He stopped begging and began watching the combat unfolding before him.

-...Gerup...

'Right.'

Facing it head-on.

The first step is to face the challenges that have come upon oneself directly.

'That's it.'

I more aggressively parried the snail noble's sword attacks. Chaang! My claws strongly pushed away the swords.

-Lime?!

Momentarily, the noble's body was wide open.

If I swung my claws just once more, it would be over. The noble would be cut in half without a chance to defend.

But, I didn't.

I just stood there.

-...!

The noble's face turned red. The Mountain Calamity Tribe's skin was somewhat transparent. When blood rushed, it was quite noticeable.

The noble soldier swung his swords even more furiously.

-Don't insult me!

No, that's not it.

-Don't humiliate my family! Lime!

If someone must be humiliated here, it's me.

'Gorke was a slave until recently and is now facing nobility. You are a brave soldier fighting against an evil god. Either way, you deserve praise.'

As for me?

I'm practically a god in this world, toying with a noble soldier.

It's not only against the teachings of the Demonic Cult, but also immature for an adult.

'Sorry.'

But it's necessary.

'I'm responsible for these kids.'

A good parent doesn't mind taking humiliation for their children. A good teacher swallows humiliation for their students. Those who believe in something more honorable than themselves willingly accept disgrace.

And what about a god?

'Now I'm a Constellation looking after an entire race.'

Taking a little humiliation to take care of the children, enduring a bit of disgrace for those who have lived as slaves, is something I can easily bear.

'Now, Gorke!'

I happily took the humiliation.

'And young Earth Spirit Tribe! Look! This is the Mountain Calamity Tribe you feared. A member of the nobility that ruled over you. How is it?'

Once again, I forcefully pushed away the noble's swords. Chaang! Once again, an opening leading directly to the noble appeared. The same gap as before that Gorke just stared at blankly.

'Are you still not confident enough to confront him one-on-one?'

This time was different.

'If you lack confidence, I'll create it for you.'

As if possessed, Gorke moved his arm.

Red aura blossomed from the young Earth Spirit Tribe's hand.

Thump!

-Huh?

A moan, origin unknown, leaked out.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe noble looked down at his body in shock, and the young Earth Spirit Tribe gazed at his hand in a daze.

A fist mark.

A red scar on the noble's torso, clearly imprinted like a stamp.

'Nice shot.'

I smiled inwardly.

'That's it.'

The next moment, the noble bent over and vomited.

-Blargh! Blugh, blargh... Wheeeck!

The noble's digestive fluid poured over the head of the hunting dog. Luckily, the Mountain Calamity Tribe seemed to consume a lot of soup, so the vomit was free of solids, but the hunting dog didn't seem to appreciate it much.

-Woof! Kiging, woof!

The giant hunting dog, its struggles as immense as its size, shook like a mountain during an earthquake and ran towards the Mountain Calamity Tribe's camp, carrying the noble clinging to it.

-Blargh!

Even while being carried away, the noble kept spewing rainbow-colored vomit.

Gorke looked at his fist in disbelief, opening and closing it.

-Gorr...

After him, more challengers came forth.

Not just the nobles, but also the noble's private soldiers, superior soldiers brimming with confidence, and even the lowly soldiers seeking a quick fortune — a total of eleven Mountain Calamity Tribe members challenged me.

But none of them could surpass my claws.

As I've said before, it was an impossible fight from the start.

-.....

As the fight dragged on, Gorke spoke less.

-Gorke! Gorke! Gorke!

And as the victories piled up, the Earth Spirit Tribe went wild with excitement.

'How about that.'

I intentionally took breaks between fights, not immediately accepting each challenge. Instead, I leisurely walked in front of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

Gorke, the victorious warrior, was on my back.

'Impressive, right?'

I captivated the eyes of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

'Aren't you envious?'

I tickled the hearts of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

'Don't you also want to become like this?'

I splashed red paint into their minds.

'There are beautiful things in this world other than Fire Painting. Not just the fragrance of mud. The beauty of victory in battle. Accepting and overcoming challenges. These are as beautiful as fire and as fragrant as mud.'

The Earth Spirit Tribe was clearly intoxicated by the beauty of the duel and the fragrance of victory.

Otherwise, why would their eyes sparkle?

To those who look at the world and sparkle, I wanted to offer nothing but a smile.

'Accept envy as envy. Long for it! Dream. Life only comes alive when it flows somewhere. Envy will whisper to you the direction to flow. Be the water that whispers dreams, not wine that stagnates and rots.'

I felt it when I saw the sword-slave fighting in the Colosseum.

There's a dormant fighting spirit in the Earth Spirit Tribe.

The Earth Spirit Tribe considered their fellow tribesman 'Gyari,' who died in the Colosseum, as an oddity. They regarded her as a peculiar child and mourned him. But if Gyari loved the fight, other members of the Earth Spirit Tribe could love the same thing.

"Krruk!"

I kicked away the eleventh challenger's sword.

'The White Lion is by your side.'

Even though I'm just a fake Constellation, a baseless belief.

I want to be remembered as a beautiful god who whispered beauty to you.

Probably.

「 Can I be remembered by you as a single peony? 」

Certainly.

The Master must have wished for only that.

If sharing life with another person is destiny, and passing will onto others is karmic connection, then teaching longing to these children is inevitability.

I parried the twelfth challenger's sword.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe awakens to the aesthetics of dueling.]

The Tower whispered in my mind.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe desires the honor of victory.]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe longs for the glory and disgrace of challenge.]

Perhaps the Tower has its own aesthetics and procedures, always sending notifications, but at least in this case, it was unnecessary.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe's trait 'Greed' changes!]

Just by looking at the dumbfounded faces of the Earth Spirit Tribe, I could tell.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe gains a new trait 'Competitive Spirit!']

The characters carved before my eyes:

+

[Competitive Spirit]

Category: Cultural, Collective Unconscious.

Origin: [Greed (B)]

Description: The Earth Spirit Tribe is greedy. Greed is not born from the vulgarity of nature but from the lack of life. To any race, the appearance of the Earth Spirit Tribe is ugly, so they are born into the world with inherent deficiencies.

'Life is only life when it flows through the world.'

From now on, the Earth Spirit Tribe will not blame the world for this deficiency, but instead, challenge the world.

'If it must flow, let it be a torrent.'

The Earth Spirit Tribe believes they can become strong. They believe they can achieve their desires! The sword is a symbol of belief, dueling is the procedure of belief, and victory is the proof of belief.

'More fiercely!'

The Earth Spirit Tribe will endlessly crave.

For more honorable battles. For more glorious victories.

The Earth Spirit Tribe will continue to seek the symbols of belief, and perhaps this will be an endless tragedy. But what does it matter? The Earth Spirit Tribe will willingly shed tears for this tragedy and applaud the failed heroes.

May dreams accompany the flowing water.

*However, aura users may be treated as a privileged class.

*This trait can change depending on historical developments.

+

Crack.

It was after defeating the thirteenth challenger.

Drops of water fell on my lion's mane.

-Gorr, krrr. Gorr.

At first, I thought it was sweat from Gorke. He had fought 13 consecutive battles for the first time in his life, drenched in sweat. Before reaching his physical limits, he was pushed to the brink of his mental endurance, unable to use aura any longer.

But it wasn't sweat.

It was rain.

-Gorr?

-Kerr?

The Earth Spirit Tribe looked up at the sky in astonishment.

Drip-drop, drip, drop...

Rain fell. Raindrops hit the Earth Spirit Tribe's beak-like noses, bouncing off. The drops that couldn't bear the weight flowed down as rainwater.

-Rain.

-Kerrkeda...

-Rain.

-It's really water from the sky...

The Earth Spirit Tribe opened their mouths to catch the rain. They looked more ecstatic than when they first saw the Blood Fire in the cave or the sunset after leaving the cave for the first time.

-Gorlup. Gorr, gorr!

-Kerrke! Kerrke!

The Earth Spirit Tribe spread their tiny arms, rolled around, and splashed in the small puddles under their feet, sending sticky mud flying. Some rolled on the ground, covering themselves in rain and mud.

It was too chaotic to be sacred.

Too sacred to be chaotic.

-.....

The Mountain Calamity Tribe's general put a snail trumpet to his mouth.

-This is troublesome. We hastily formed a unit to pursue them here, but now a monsoon has started, causing the river to overflow. The dirty Earth Spirit Tribe has already crossed the river... It's too rough to make the hunting dogs swim. Lime. How can we, born as mortals, stand against immortal nature? Is this the curse of the evil god?

The general muttered and turned his head.

-Or perhaps this too is the will of Lime.

He shouted to his troops as he went among the hundreds of canine cavalry.

-Stop pursuing the Earth Spirit Tribe across the river!

-The tentacles of the ravine, but that's...

-Lime. It's my decision. We can't be the only ones to sacrifice in the midst of immortals. We will join the pursuit unit of White Mountain City and chase after the Pure Humans Race. Troops, move out!

Boooooom-

The trumpet sound pierced through the rain. The Mountain Calamity Tribe tapped the dogs' waists with their tentacles. The dogs panted and stepped back, soon disappearing into the pouring rain, dragging long shadows.

Boooooom...

The trumpet lasted a little longer than the shadows before cutting off.

The sound of rain filled the surroundings.

"....."

I watched the direction where the canine cavalry disappeared for a while. They were a fast-arriving and light-departing army. I guessed why the Heretic Inquisitor was so confident and why they were still laughing despite losing to us.

“Grrr.”

I turned to the Earth Spirit Tribe.

The kids were enjoying the rain and mud.

'I've done all I can.'

Leading them to Guru will end all my duties.

'It's time to wrap up this stage.'

But before that.

I watched the Earth Spirit Tribe playing in the rain a little longer.

'Adorable little ones.'

Smiling inwardly.

Chapter 168:

Between a Master and a Friend (1)

---

A week had passed since we shook off the pursuit of the Mountain Calamity Tribe. We finally arrived at the Earth Spirit Tribe's homeland.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe returns home.]

[Quest Clear!]

[You have successfully led the tribe out of Limepolis.]

[As a reward for completing the quest, you receive race points...]

The reward for the main quest of the 32nd floor was quite generous. As I had done throughout this level, I saved all but 100 of those race points.

'I have a specific use for them.'

After saving the points, I looked at the Earth Spirit Tribe's homeland.

Guru.

The homeland the Earth Spirit Tribe longed for was... somewhat disappointing. To be honest, it was almost a ruin.

-Well, that's expected.

Guardian Spirit shrugged.

-When human hands don't touch it, a village is quickly overgrown with bushes. I once returned to my homeland, taken over by Black Path bandits, and it had turned into a jungle.

'Really? You had such a past?'

-Of course. I'm a man with many pasts. If my life story were written as a novel, it would be a grand work of 39 volumes for part one, 22 for part two, and 13 for the side stories.

'That specific number somehow annoys me...'

-And after dying, I became a ghost and am currently serializing part three. After you die, I plan to possess someone else and continue with the second part of the side story.

'Please, enough!'

We looked around the old homeland. Weeds and shrubs. Green plants had taken over Guru.

Any sign that someone once lived here had disappeared, with only very old goblin-made stone pillars and statues, moss-covered, standing as evidence of compromise with time.

-Oh.

Among them was a strangely familiar statue. Not because I had seen the statue before, but because the subject it depicted was familiar.

White marble. Mane and large teeth carefully carved, though with unskilled hands...

-Did they even make a sculpture of you?

It was me.

-White lion, so they got marble for it. Wow, that's dedication. Utmost devotion.

'Indeed.'

I slowly looked around. The Earth Spirit Tribe, apparently finding something wonderful about this green jungle, were unraveling their bundles with laughter. Thump! Thwack! Some were hitting the shrubs with stone hammers brought from Limepolis, eager to make a place to live.

'I'm not their master, though.'

The line between master and friend. The farthest stranger and the closest stranger, with parents in between, perhaps.

Parents can play the role of master or become friends, but the decision may lie not with the child but with the parent.

'I should tell them before leaving this stage.'

That night.

I used the 100 race points I had saved to get an item.

[I purchase 'Appearance in Dreams.']

[100 race points have been consumed!]

[Your available race points are now 0.]

[All other race points are currently invested and cannot be accessed...]

I entered Gorke's dream.

"Hello? Little one. Long time no see."

-Kirrrrrr?! Oh, demon!

I was greeted warmly.

"Ah, I feel a bit shy when you're so happy to see me... Did you miss me that much? I'm sorry I couldn't look into your heart."

'If you're really sorry, don't appear in my dreams!'

Gorke jumped up.

-Last time, fighting those snails, I thought I was going to die!

"Hey, you didn't die, right? As long as you don't die, everything will eventually contribute to your tenacity. Gorke. You must not be crushed by the world but crush the world in your life."

-Still, such dirty words. Even if it's the same words, how can you say them so filthily? Kerr. Whether a god or a demon, I wish you'd use cleaner language... When you were a lion, you were cool, but in dreams, you're just terrible...

Gorke muttered. His illusion shattered. I didn't deny his words; instead, I agreed.

"That's right, kid!"

-Gorr?

"Currently, the Earth Spirit Tribe harbors too sweet an illusion. That I am your savior, cool, and absolutely perfect, and that I will unconditionally look after you. But my true nature, as you said, is a bit devilish."

-'A bit'...?

Gorke momentarily wore a philosophical expression. Perhaps the first philosopher in the history of the Earth Spirit Tribe, but I broke his thought. If he left behind a saying like 'Everything is made of Kerr!', it would only trouble future students.

"You alone know my true nature. I'm not the god you think I am. Just a helper and an advisor. Gorke, you have the duty to spread the truth to your family, relatives, and tribe."

-Kerr! I don't want to. It seems bothersome!

"In our last fight, I noticed your aura was still immature and had not reached its peak. Let's do a year of secluded training in this dream."

-Gorke loves the truth! Gorke will spread the truth!

Gorke burned with passion. Good to see.

-But, I'm curious.

"Hmm?"

-If you're not a god, why does Kerke care for us? Why do you pay attention to us? Why did you save us from the primordial disaster and rescue us from the snails? I don't understand why Kerke does it.

"Firstly, because you're cute and charming..."

-Kerr? Are you blind?

This kid.

"Actually, I'm not much different from you. I'm just another person. But if I had to say why I treat you well... it's because you're somewhat similar to me."

-Similar? That's strange. Kerke is nothing like us.

"It's not about appearances."

I scratched my head.

"People are drawn to things they think are similar to themselves. I see myself in you. In your greed, I see my greed, and in your situation, I see mine. I discover myself."

-Gorr...?

"If I cherish you, it's probably because I cherish myself."

I stroked Gorke's head.

"But if you insist on worshipping me, think of me not as a god but rather as a friend. I'd rather be treated with friendship than worshipped as an idol. Trust is much better than faith."

-Idol over friendship, trust over faith...

"Yes. Just a friend who occasionally stays by your side. Isn't it cooler to say 'We're friends with a god' than 'We are loved by a god'?"

Gorke looked up at me blankly.

[The faith of the Earth Spirit Tribe shows signs of change!]

[A primitive religion 'White Lion Faith' is likely to gain new doctrines.]

I smiled wryly.

"Do well. I have to leave your side for a while. Teach the others aura. Let them know I want to remain as a friend."

-Leaving?

"Yeah. I've done my duty by bringing you to Guru. I'll be angry if I come back and find you getting beaten by the Mountain Calamity Tribe again."

I playfully rubbed Gorke's cheeks with both hands. Amusing sounds of 'Gorr, Kerr' escaped from Gorke's mouth.

"Teach the other kids about aura, and tell them about my true nature. Oh, and I almost forgot to say this."

"Good job in the last fight. You were quite impressive."

I lightly patted Gorke's shoulders.

"Live vigorously."

Gorke opened his mouth to say something, but I promptly exited the dream. Long farewells only prolong the feeling of longing, so it's better to leave as if you'll meet again tomorrow.

[Item usage has ended.]

The dream ended.

As soon as I woke up, I leapt out of Guru. It was the middle of the night. The Earth Spirit Tribe, having walked for several weeks, had fallen into deep slumber.

There shouldn't have been anyone following me, but...

'Hmm.'

I sensed someone desperately trying to keep up with me.

'Gorke, perhaps.'

Despite his words about demons, it seems he has grown fond of me.

'I tried to be distant just for this reason...'

Feeling the weight of the connections formed between people, I increased my pace. Gorke was persistent but couldn't match my speed. The gap between us widened.

After running through the forest for a while, I finally lost his presence.

'Now.'

I let out a roar, shaking my lion's mane.

'By now, the other hunters must be pondering.'

-Pondering?

'Yes. After seeing the Heretic Inquisitor's crazy stunt of staying in the stage, they must be thinking, [Isn't it better to stay and show off as much as possible?].'

It's a game of chicken.

'The problem is, such crazy acts are only possible for the Heretic Inquisitor.'

To endure for hundreds, maybe even a thousand years?

'Only a 130% pure psychopath like the Heretic Inquisitor can do it.'

Moreover, the Heretic Inquisitor has already been disqualified from this stage.

He failed to stop the escape of the slave tribe.

'Eventually, everyone will have to give up and declare [Stage Clear]. The hesitation is just because they feel like they're losing out if they declare it first.'

-Hmm.

The Guardian Spirit nodded.

-So, what will you do?

'In such cases, someone has to make the first move, even at a loss, to encourage others to follow.'

I murmured to myself, having moved far enough from Guru.

'I declare, stage clear.'

Sssshh!

White light enveloped my entire body.

[Stage Clear!]

[You have cleared the 32nd-floor stage.]

[The reward will be tabulated after entering the 33rd floor.]

[Sequential layer progression - You are forcibly transferred to the 33rd floor!]

---

The next moment, I was standing in a white space.

A waiting room before moving to the 33rd floor.

There was already one hunter who had arrived earlier than me, having declared [Stage Clear] first.

"Ahah! You've arrived!"

The Heretic Inquisitor.

The only one who failed the quest and thus failed to clear the stage, was waving his hand.

"I've been waiting for you! King of Death!"

"....."

"I've been working non-stop for 200 years. I gave it my all! Even if I reached the top of the tower, I couldn't have worked harder than when I established the Slime Empire. Do you understand? King of Death, I have shown you all my capabilities!"

"....."

"And yet, I lost to you."

"You didn't lose to me."

I spoke.

"You lost to all of us."

"It's the same!"

The Heretic Inquisitor shook his head firmly.

"From the top rank to the seventh, it was you who united the fellows. Frankly, it's only fair to say that I didn't even have a momentary insight! I don't include personal bias in my assessments."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled cheerfully.

"My abilities only go so far! My judgment was inferior to yours. My ethics were less than yours. My competence didn't surpass yours! Relatively, I am more incompetent."

"....."

"Incompetent actions lead to ruin. I don't want to be someone who pushes the button of destruction and calamity! It's only right to leave the decisions and actions to someone more competent."

"What are you saying?"

"A simple logic, King of Death."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

"From now on, I will serve you as my master."

Chapter 169:

Between a Master and a Friend (2)

---

Master.

"....."

I gazed intently at my counterpart.

The fact that the Heretic Inquisitor was not using the term 'master' as a mere metaphor or symbol was evident from his beaming smile. Sometimes a boy, sometimes a young man, this man was not one to joke.

Still, I had to probe further.

"Just to clarify, Heretic Inquisitor, when you say you will serve me as your master...."

"I will obey your commands."

The Heretic Inquisitor replied instantly.

"I will kill whoever you wish to be killed, and spare those you wish to be spared! As I said, I will align my judgments and actions with yours."

The Heretic Inquisitor raised his right hand and placed it over his heart, adopting a dignified posture reminiscent of a butler.

"I am quite a useful tool!"

"....."

"A good tool's advantage lies in its consistent performance. Not to boast, but there isn't a more useful tool than me in purging factions, maintaining internal discipline, and keeping a group unified! King of Death, you can always trust and use my abilities!"

In other words,

The Heretic Inquisitor was saying:

[I will never change.]

"Please use me!"

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled broadly.

His confident expression of immutability somehow caused a twinge in my heart.

「 Having gained emotions, I seem to have become a bit mischievous! 」

Because I knew the Heretic Inquisitor had changed.

「 I am becoming addicted to feeling emotions. 」

「 Is this how you always feel living with these emotions? 」

Only I alone.

Even the Heretic Inquisitor himself had not experienced this facet, which I alone remember.

Under a tree shedding its pale magnolia blossoms, the Heretic Inquisitor murmured.

「Had I done this then, or that at that moment. Drifting in such thoughts, wandering, yet still living on like that.」

「That must be why you are so beautiful and lovable.」

「If only I, too, could feel like you...」

The Heretic Inquisitor hadn't forgotten those words.

I could guess the end of the sentence he swallowed, “If only I, too, could have felt emotions like you. Would I have lived a different life?”

Having encountered many psychopaths, I know the boundary that separates them from others.

It's linked by three fragments of a sentence.

‘If only I, too, like you.’

From the moment these words are uttered,

The Heretic Inquisitor was no longer just a psychopath to me, but a man who had somehow ended up living his current life.

“...Name.”

I spoke up.

“Huh?”

“Your name. Not your alias, your real name. The Sword Saint’s name is Marcus Callenbury, and Viper's name is Liǎofàn.”

And the Countess's real name is 'Nisha'. Unintentionally, the Paladin once referred to the Countess by her real name. However, since she had never told me herself, I pretended not to know.

So far, only the Sword Saint and Viper had revealed their real names to me.

“Heretic Inquisitor, I want to know your name.”

“Ahah.”

The Heretic Inquisitor blinked.

“Is that an order?”

“If I ask you as a favor, will you tell me your name?”

“Yes!”

“Why?”

“We, or rather I, had made a promise with the Black Dragon Witch long ago. [We are strangers who have abandoned the outside world, pouring everything into the Sea of Death – nationality, property, relations, everything. Therefore, let's erase the names given by the outside world and only address each other by names earned in the tower.]”

Indeed.

‘So there was such a promise.’

I was reminded anew that I was not an original member of the tower.

“The Black Dragon Witch has complex feelings towards the outside world. Hating it, despising it, yet yearning for recognition from them. Ahaha. Probably, she is the most emotionally intense person among us!”

The Heretic Inquisitor winked his left eye.

“Anyway, the Sword Saint has left our organization. He doesn't need to abide by that promise! Also, Viper never really cared much about such promises. But I hold promises in high regard. King of Death. If you really want to know the name I had in the outside world...”

The Heretic Inquisitor's eyes widened slightly.

“Please, command me.”

"....."

“I will comply.”

I understood.

This wasn't just about whether or not to say a name.

It was about prioritizing my [command] over the [promise] made among the original members.

It was a pledge of loyalty to me.

‘...Can I take responsibility?’

I pondered.

‘Can I give this man a different life? Can I take responsibility for a psychopath, a man who became a psychopath? The intention is there, the desire too. But do I have the ability?’

I looked down at the Heretic Inquisitor silently.

Without a word, he just waited for my lips to part.

‘In [Tales of Sormewin Academy], I had the opportunity to reform the Heretic Inquisitor. But I failed. I missed the chance. In assisting Raviel, I couldn't spare the effort to take care of this child too.’

If given another chance,

I pondered whether I could offer the Heretic Inquisitor another life.

‘I can.’

I reached a decision.

‘And I want to.’

I nodded.

“Yes.”

Although the second chance has not yet arrived,

Until it does, let’s take responsibility for the child in front of me for the time being.

“Please tell me your name.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled lightly.

“My birth name is Bambolina.”

Laughter flowed beneath his golden hair.

“Strictly speaking, it's hard to call it a birth name. It's more of a nickname!”

Nickname.

“I grew up in the hands of the mafia. The mafia often called me ‘baby doll,’ and that name stuck. Ah, Bambolina means ‘doll’! I was also called KyKna.”

The Heretic Inquisitor cheerfully continued.

“The organization that imprisoned me had its base in Bulgaria. It was an organization with branches in many areas. I was trained to be useful for their business.”

“The reason you specifically used the past tense is because...”

“It no longer exists on earth!”

The Heretic Inquisitor grinned, pulling out a padlock from his pocket. Swish. Swish. The padlock spun on his left hand like a rolling pen.

“I was confined for 11 years. One day, after training, as I lay in bed, a question occurred to me. [I can open the lock on that door. Is there any reason not to?]”

Click.

The padlock in the Heretic Inquisitor's hand made a metallic sound as it opened.

“Upon reflection, I realized there was no reason not to!”

Thus, he escaped.

“I saw no reason not to kill my dedicated watcher. No reason not to assassinate the boss!”

Some people won't act without a reason, but the Heretic Inquisitor certainly belonged to those who would act without one.

“I sowed discord between two high-ranking officers and four lower-ranking ones. I subtly manipulated the scenes to grow suspicion. Indeed, after half a year, they began suspecting it was my doing, but by then, half of the organization was already decimated!”

The mafia's ‘baby doll’ smoothly entered the Tower.

The Tower gained a creature of terrifying competence.

“...Why choose me as your master?”

“The first reason is, of course, that you, King of Death, are more capable than I.”

The Heretic Inquisitor slowly trailed off.

“The second reason is... because I hesitated.”

“Hesitated?”

“Hmm. Yes... How should I explain this for you to understand?”

Rarely, the Heretic Inquisitor seemed troubled as he furrowed his brows.

“After clearing [Tales of Sormewin Academy], I became somewhat... different. Even when trying to execute terrorists as usual, I couldn’t act as swiftly as before. To others, it might have seemed like only a second's delay, but to me, that one second was significant...”

Lost in thought, the Heretic Inquisitor paused.

“During that second, I recalled the scenes I shared with you at Sormewin Academy.”

"....."

“Strange, isn’t it?”

No.

Not strange at all.

In fact, I am inwardly startled.

‘The influence remained.’

The path where the Heretic Inquisitor fully immersed himself in Goldencup vanished. It was erased. However, even in the new history I forged, he must have felt Goldencup’s emotions, however faintly.

Even if the immersion rate was less than 10%.

Even if it was just 1%.

The little doll undoubtedly experienced ‘emotions.’

“You, King of Death, are my hesitation.”

The Heretic Inquisitor said.

“You occupied a second in my life. It was the first time I experienced such a thing. Maybe with you, seconds in my life could eventually become minutes, then hours!”

The Heretic Inquisitor beamed radiantly.

“I realize now, this must be what they call hope in humanity. Perhaps people always wait for someone else to occupy their time. In that sense, you are my hope!”

“Just because you occupy my time doesn't mean I become lesser. Yes, somehow, I'm certain of it.”

The Heretic Inquisitor handed me a lock.

Rusted with age.

“With you, my monotone melody might be complemented by your rhythm. My simple hum might be added with your lyrics, at least I can imagine it through metaphors.”

I accepted the lock.

“You might turn even a person like me into music, King of Death.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

“May I choose you as my hope?”

"....."

Heavy.

Frightening words.

The weight and fear are so close that I might fear taking on the Heretic Inquisitor as a burden.

I thought of the weight of Preta, the heaviness of the followers, the weight of Silvia Evanair, and the weight of the Constellation Killer. By the time I considered the weight of the Earth Spirit Tribe, I realized I could take on one more burden.

“Yes.”

The Heretic Inquisitor is my comrade.

“I will be your hope.”

Even if he seems like a beast, it doesn't matter.

Humans, after all, are just beasts aspiring to be people.

Both the child before me and I are on the path to becoming human.

“Without my permission,”

I commanded.

“Do not kill anyone.”

“Yes!”

“Do not torture anyone without my permission.”

“Yes.”

“Without my permission, do not imprison anyone.”

“Understood!”

“When in doubt, talk to me. In return, I will listen without contempt. I won’t look at you strangely. I will think from your perspective, Bambolina. Treat me as your equal.”

"....."

The Heretic Inquisitor clasped his hands over his heart.

For the first time, I felt he was [praying].

“Yes. To you, more capable than me. When you are my hope, I will work for you.”

Fourth in the ranks. Master of the Temple of the Omnipotent God.

The small doll swore loyalty to me.

“I have failed this stage. I cannot join you in the 32nd floor. This time too, arranged temporarily by [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages], will soon end. I will keep your orders in mind in Babylon!”

“Yes.”

I patted the Heretic Inquisitor’s head.

“Stay put and take care of the house, Mr. Fake Cult Leader.”

“Ahaha-.”

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed.

“I will heed your command, noble sir!”

The Heretic Inquisitor’s figure melted away.

[The Heretic Inquisitor has failed to achieve the quest.]

[The Heretic Inquisitor has been eliminated from the stage!]

Then, in the next moment, my other comrades appeared around me.

Sword Saint. Black Dragon Witch. Countess. Viper. Paladin.

The six of us in the raid team, including myself, looked at each other, puzzled.

“...Something’s different this time. We had to wait a bit even after declaring a clear, huh?”

The Black Dragon Witch spoke.

“King of Death. You were the first to declare a clear. Where have you been until now?”

I smiled.

“Just saying goodbye to the Heretic Inquisitor.”

The path we've walked is not without meaning.

Even if it's unspoken and unseen, somewhere, someone is being influenced by us.

Holding the lock tightly, I spoke.

"Thank you all for your hard work. Let's move on to the next stage."

Chapter 170:

Between a Master and a Friend (3)

---

We chatted about the stage we had just conquered, the 32nd floor, how everyone managed to escape Limepolis, and whether they successfully shook off the pursuit...

Of course, there was also some backbiting.

“That Heretic Inquisitor really needs to be dealt with!”

Black Dragon Witch expressed her frustration.

“I can’t fathom what he’s thinking. I mean, I do understand, but that only makes me angrier! Normally, no one would go that far.”

“Well, he’s not normal, so he behaves like that.”

Viper spoke indifferently, his expression not pleasant. Ever since learning that the Heretic Inquisitor had reigned alone for 200 years, Viper had been wearing a face like he'd swallowed something bitter.

“A person who's lived like that all their life isn't going to change now.”

“...There's something more important than that.”

I opened the conversation.

“About the rewards, everyone.”

“Huh? Rewards?”

“Yes. We still haven't received the rewards for clearing the 31st floor, right? We were told that the 31st floor rewards would be given on the 32nd floor, but then the rewards for the 32nd are supposed to be given on the 33rd. The rewards owed to us keep getting deferred.”

“...Hmm.”

Countess tapped her chin with the end of her fan, her eyes gleaming. Among the top rankers, she was particularly sensitive to matters of money and rewards.

“Indeed, that’s true. I remember the tower never owing hunters before. It can’t be that they have nothing to give us, right...?”

“Yep! That can’t be it!”

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages manifests.]

Poof!

With a comical sound, the Princess appeared. Not just the sound, but even the location of her appearance was odd. Like a mole, she poked her head up from below. Viper, who was nearby, was startled.

“Whoa?! That scared me!”

“Sorry, sorry. I was a bit delayed because I had some work up above. Ah, being capable sure is a hassle. When you have abilities, they summon you here and there.”

The Princess crawled out of the hole in the ground. As her body emerged, the floor returned to its pristine white state.

“You had work [up above]?”

“Yep, despite appearances, I hold a pretty high position. I have to participate in managing the tower. Anyway, about the rewards?”

The Princess dusted off her knees.

“We're not stingy with rewards. It's just that we planned to give them all to you after you clear the 40th floor.”

Countess raised her eyebrows in intrigue.

“You mean to bundle the rewards for ten floors and settle them together?”

“Yep. There's a reason for that, which you'll find out later.”

The Princess glanced at me.

Constellation was smiling with her eyes.

“Seems like someone already has a hunch about it.”

“Well, but if we're too secretive, I feel bad. Even if we can't give the [Stage Clear Reward] right away, I'll give you something small for now. Ahem. I do have that much discretion!”

The Princess proudly puffed out her chest.

“Let's see. If I neatly divide the race points that the Heretic had and distribute them... Yep, this is how it'll be!”

Swoosh.

A message appeared before us.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages is tabulating points.]

[You have gained 9,160 race points!]

[You currently have 9,190 race points.]

There was a moment of silence.

“...What?”

Black Dragon Witch mumbled in disbelief.

“Ten thousand? Are you sure you didn’t make a mistake? ...
Ten thousand points?”

My comrades were dumbfounded.

‘That’s more than expected.’

I was surprised too. Considering Black Dragon Witch's reaction, it seemed like each of us received 9,160 points.

“That’s correct.”

The Princess affirmed coolly.

“It’s not favoritism. The Heretic was eliminated, so we just divided his points by six and gave them to you. It’s our principle to favor the winners over the losers!”

“Wait a minute... Are you saying the Heretic Inquisitor had sixty thousand points?”

“Exactly 54,964 points. There were four points left over as interest, which I just gave to Swordy boy. Consider it as a courtesy for the top ranker.”

"....."

We were at a loss for words.

“Huh? Why the long faces?”

The Princess tilted her head, puzzled.

“The Heretic monopolized the stage for 200 years, 6 months, and 21 days. It's natural for him to have accumulated that many points. Feel free to be happy!"

With a jaunty clap of her hands, the Princess said, "Now we're going to start the 33rd floor stage. Before I accelerate the time in that world, does anyone want to spend their points in advance?"

Sword Saint raised his hand.

"I have a question."

"Yep, Swordy boy. Go ahead."

"What do you mean by 'spend in advance'?"

"It's exactly as it sounds. The world of the race you'll be intervening in... Ugh, it's annoying to call it since it has no name. Anyway, that world is currently on pause. Like a temporary stop, you know? If you use items now, they will affect the history, and the results will show up in the next stage."

The Princess swirled her index finger in the air, tracing invisible characters.

Purple text began to form in mid-air.

+

[Bronze-rank Technology Invention (Lottery)] - 1,000p

[Silver-rank Technology Invention (Lottery)] -3,000p

[Platinum-rank Technology Invention (Lottery)] -6,000p

+

“If you use these items now, they will be reflected in history, and you’ll see the results in the next stage. You can’t control history in real-time, but from your perspective, the effects of the items will be immediate, so it’s not too bad, right?”

“...Indeed.”

Sword Saint stroked his beard.

“While we can’t fully control history, we can try to influence its flow. Last time we immediately skipped to the next stage without such an opportunity.”

“Ah, yeah. Since the Heretic pulled that trick, I felt a bit sorry for you guys.”

The Princess sighed.

“He just exploited a loophole in the system. It’s my fault for exposing that loophole in the first place. Really, you and Swordy never leave the system alone.”

“Hmm.”

While the Princess grumbled, my comrades began to open the [Civilization Store] and browse through items. I, watching both the Princess and my comrades, was lost in thought.

‘...She smoothly sidestepped the topic of stage rewards.’

My comrades didn't seem to notice anything odd, but having experienced the future once, I know. The continual deferral of rewards is a kind of [hint].

As soon as I mentioned it, the Princess appeared and changed the subject.

'Did she deliberately counter me?'

Our eyes met. The Princess was smiling and waving. There was no hostility on her face, but her intentions were not clear either.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages seeks your understanding.]

Understanding, huh.

'Well.'

I looked at the Princess and nodded silently without a word.

‘Whatever I tell them from start to finish would only deprive my comrades of their opportunities to grow.’

Until now, I've been leading my comrades using my experience of regression as capital. I've wielded the privilege of knowing the future.

However, this privilege also has an expiration date.

‘The Flame Emperor cleared stages up to the 40th floor.’

Beyond that lies the unknown.

Although I know what concept the 40th to 49th floors are based on, and I'm aware that the 50th floor opens a stage shared by all worlds' towers, that's all I know.

From the 51st floor onwards, even I will be stepping into an unknown world.

‘Then... It's problematic to have subordinates who only move as I instruct. I absolutely need comrades who can fill the gaps in my thinking, the parts I haven't considered.’

Hoarding knowledge and experience for oneself.

Like monopolizing food, monopolizing knowledge is also harmful.

It might solve immediate difficulties, but from a broader perspective, it gnaws away at the strength of [our tower].

‘I can't follow in the footsteps of the Flame Emperor.’

I accepted the Princess' understanding.

Let's leave it to my comrades to realize the truth on their own.

They're all people who've struggled like me, even better than me. They'll figure it out on their own.

‘The real question is where to invest the remaining points....’

I carefully examined the [Civilization Store].

In truth, I already had an item in mind to purchase.

‘There’s a reason why I’ve been investing every spare point into it from the 32nd floor.’

I read the item description.

+

[Race Evolution]

Rank: Undecided

Effect: Certain races possess evolutionary potentials. In worlds where aura or magic exists, ecosystems are incredibly complex, leading to dramatic evolution! Aura is the power to materialize will, and changes driven by will are much faster than those driven by natural selection.

Evolution doesn’t guarantee progress in a positive direction. A race that wills destruction may evolve into one that solely commits massacres. Those willing isolation might become completely detached from the world. Choose carefully!

Cost: 8,900 race points (Currently, 1,100 points have been invested....)

Unlock Condition: Your race must acquire at least three identities.

*Currently, the Earth Spirit Tribe meets the evolution conditions.

+

"I originally thought I could only buy it after the 34th floor, but..."

I sparkled with excitement.

"I can buy it right now."

Race Evolution.

The reason the Earth Spirit Tribe could fight against the [High Elves] raised by the Flame Emperor until the very end.

-Eh?

Guardian Spirit let out a surprised sound.

-Was there such a backstory?

‘Of course. Did you think I chose goblins for no reason?’

-I thought it was out of sympathy for being similar.

‘I did feel that. And still do. But I was serious when I said these guys would soar into the sky one day. I sincerely believed the goblins would rise.’

-Was that for real...?

‘Tsk. As if I would lie.’

-Your life is a lie, you prophet.

Let's call it a white lie.

"Princess."

"Hm?"

"I'll purchase this."

I pointed to [Race Evolution]. The others couldn't see it, but it appeared that the Princess could see the hologram, as she showed interest with an "Heh."

"You really know how to spend points wisely, King. Don't you regret it? You could draw several items like [Bronze-rank Technology Invention] or [Nation-level General]."

"No."

Simply inventing technologies is meaningless if they can't be utilized properly.

Even if a talented individual emerges, it's pointless if they are hindered by jealousy and cannot rise.

On the other hand, [Race Evolution], benefiting the entire Earth Spirit Tribe, assuredly has a solid effect.

"I'll go with this."

"No regrets?"

"None. Why do you keep asking? Do you wish I chose something else?"

"...That's why dealing with a cheat player is..."

The Princess sighed softly.

"Thanks for the good shopping."

A sound of coins dropping echoed.

[You have purchased 'Race Evolution'.]

[8,900 race points have been spent!]

[You now have 260 race points remaining.]

Okay.

I immediately used the item.

[A tidal shift in the era! The Earth Spirit Tribe undergoes evolution!]

[The status of the Earth Spirit Tribe is changing.]

[You will not be able to confirm the evolved form of the Earth Spirit Tribe until you enter the next stage.]

I smiled contently.

"Okay. One more stage before the final evolution, but we're getting closer to the goal."

The day when goblins stand as the rulers of the world is not far off.

'Ah, the moment when Goruks echo throughout the world and everyone chants Keruk, it ignites a fire in my desolate heart and makes my cold heart flutter.'

-Crazy bastard....

The other comrades also purchased items. Some spent all their points, while others saved for later. Others distributed their points evenly, each with their own shopping methods.

"Is everyone done? Nothing left?"

The Princess looked around and nodded.

"Alright. No dilly-dallying! I'm now going to start spinning the history of that world. Let's see, how many hundred years will pass this time.... Heh? Oh. Huh?"

The Princess blinked in surprise.

"This time, far more time has passed than last time. It's been 660 years since the fall of Limepolis due to the slave uprising."

660 years.

Definitely a leap in time compared to the drastically shortened era by the Heretic.

"The last era's losers, the Mountain Calamity Tribe... oh dear."

"What happened to the Mountain Calamity Tribe?"

"Hmm. Well, you'll find out when you go in."

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages spread her arms wide.

"Then, I'm now opening the 33rd floor!"

A familiar white light engulfed our sight.

By now, the sensation of the brain swirling was quite bearable.

-Woah!

The next moment, a thunderous roar of battle echoed in our ears.

-Kill them! Sever the filthy tentacles of the snails!

-Charge! Don't allow the enemy any flanking maneuvers! Stick to them till the end!

We found ourselves in the midst of a battlefield.

Chapter 171: Battle for the Holy Land (1)

---

There are those who liken the sight of humans losing their lives in war to 'flowers splendidly wilting'. I assert that such a person has never actually found themselves in the midst of a battlefield.

-Charge forward! Push through the gates! Krurung, Kreuk!

Right before my eyes, a head was severed, and then, with a crunch, a giant axe crushed a soldier along with his armor.

The sound of flesh tearing, the thunderous crash of metal breaking, the groans of soldiers... On the battlefield, lives bubbled and burst like foam in a heated swamp.

"Wait a moment. What's happening here?"

The Black Dragon Witch spoke in confusion, not startled by the horrors of battle, but rather bewildered by our sudden teleportation into the thick of it.

"Princess, what's going on... She's not here. Does anyone have a quest window open?"

"No."

"Nothing here!"

"How inconsiderate."

The Black Dragon Witch clicked her tongue.

"Are they expecting us to figure out the situation on our own? The [Librarian] might have been a bit odd, but at least a kind Constellation... Sigh. Everyone, let's fly up and survey the situation from above. It'll be clearer then."

With a tap, the Black Dragon Witch jumped off the ground.

"Huh?"

But she didn't take flight.

She frowned, puzzled.

"...What? We can't fly?"

Her observation was accurate.

Up until the 31st and 32nd floors, we had the freedom to fly. We could even observe beyond the horizon. It was as if we had transcended.

‘It seems the real challenge begins now.’

I understood the hidden meaning behind this anomaly.

‘It's actually a good thing. Whether it's skills or powers, if we get too comfortable with them, our senses as hunters dull. In case of any unforeseen accidents, in the worst-case scenario, I can just turn back time.’

I looked around.

Currently, we were virtually invisible. Decapitated heads soaring through the air, splattering blood, all passed through our bodies freely. Having someone's intestines fly through me was not a pleasant experience, but-

"There are several races involved in this battle, not just one or two."

Focusing, I could easily observe the surrounding situation.

"The Pure Humans Race, the Fairy Tribe, the Ghost Tribe... It's a multi-race coalition. They seem to be fighting each other, but they're actually on the same side. Each race appears to be handling a different military role. The Pure Humans Race forms a shield wall for infantry, the Fairy Tribe are archers... and the Ghost Tribe is the cavalry."

I narrowed my eyes.

"In the air, the Vampiric Tribe is flying around. Hmm, I don't see the Gill Fishes Tribe, but it seems like these are the races that used to be slaves in Limepolis, now united as a coalition."

"Then the enemy is..."

"Yes."

I nodded.

"Most likely the Mountain Calamity Tribe."

The coalition army roared, gradually pushing their formation forward. Surrounded by soldiers, it was hard to grasp the overall progress of the battle, but I could sense that the tide was turning.

"This won't do. If we just stay here, we won't be able to do anything other than befriending corpses."

The Black Dragon Witch grabbed my hand.

"I'll scout with the King. It's hard to regroup if we scatter, so you guys wait here. King of Death, are you okay with this?"

I realized what the Black Dragon Witch intended to do. Teleportation. She planned to scout using her exclusive skill, which could transfer not only herself but also others, provided they consented to the skill's use.

"Yes."

"Good."

Black aura seeped from her, gripping my wrist.

"Teleport!"

The next moment, we were in the air. Below us, thousands of soldiers swarmed like insects. As we began to fall, pulled by gravity, the Black Dragon Witch used her skill again.

"Teleport!"

For a brief moment, our fall halted.

"...Are you going to use teleportation every time we start falling to stay in place?"

"What else can we do if we can't fly? Teleport. I've learned through long experience as a hunter that a skill becomes more convenient the more creatively it's used. Teleport."

"Wow, that's really not stylish at all..."

"Does style feed you? Teleport. I'm busy using my skill, so you take a look at the ground."

"Yes, ma'am."

We managed to achieve a sort of floating step in the void, meticulously surveying the battlefield.

"Huh."

I was soon gripped by a strange sense of familiarity.

"This landscape looks familiar..."

"You're right. I also have this vague feeling of recognition."

"It's not a meeting battle, but a siege."

As we suspected, the Mountain Calamity Tribe was the opposition facing the coalition. They had established their base at the entrance of a massive cave, which seemed to serve as both their fortress wall and gate.

"...Isn't that Limepolis?"

The city remembered for the historic mass escape of slaves.

Now, the former slaves, no longer bound, were attacking it.

---

"It has become a holy land," declared the Sword Emperor.

We shared the information we had gathered.

"I heard soldiers in the Pure Humans Race camp chattering. They were confident that this expedition would surely reclaim the holy land. Since they referred to it as [this] expedition, it seems this isn't their first assault on Limepolis."

"Ah, I got that info too. This is the 6th expedition."

The Viper raised his hand.

"For hundreds of years, coalition forces have been formed repeatedly to pressure the Slime Empire. It's nearly obliterated now, with only Limepolis remaining unconquered."

"Holy land... Another troublesome term."

The Black Dragon Witch pressed her forehead, clearly disgusted.

"If I had to pick the three words I hate the most in the world, they'd be terror, holy land, and heresy. Ahh, at the dawn of the Tower, all sorts of heretics flocked here, shouting, 'This is the true holy land! The Tower of Babel, newly granted by God!'"

"The [Neo Babylonian Church], right?"

The Paladin crossed his arms.

"To be precise, they were the milder ones. I remember the heretics who screamed, 'This is R'lyeh!' and caused chaos."

I tilted my head in confusion.

"R'lyeh? What's that?"

"I'm not entirely sure. It's a city from some novel, said to be sunk in the deep sea."

"But the Tower isn't in the deep sea, is it?"

The Tower exists everywhere and nowhere.

If anything, from the outside world, the Tower is more like a 'mirage'.

No matter where one looks from, whether from Seoul or Busan, from Korea or Chile, the Tower's shadow can be seen on the horizon.

As if beckoning one to flee here.

"These are heretics who take fiction literally. Don't expect rational thinking from them. By the way, some of them are still active under the banner of the Temple of the Omnipotent God Guild."

"Eh, is that okay? They're lunatics."

"Why do you think we continue to entrust the Temple to the Heretic Inquisitor? To rule over madmen, you need someone even madder than them."

"Indeed..."

The Temple of the Omnipotent God is more chaotic than I thought.

The Black Dragon Witch sighed, surveying the surroundings.

"It would be quickest to leave such problems to the Heretic Inquisitor... Of all times to be eliminated. When he's actually needed, he's not here."

The battle took a brief pause.

Just like the air cools slowly after a hot early summer day, the battlefield, which had been fierce throughout the day, was now quiet under the evening twilight. Soldiers of the multi-racial coalition were preparing their dinner.

"Of all places, it had to be a holy land..."

"It makes sense that Limepolis is considered a holy land."

I chimed in.

"It's the land where the guardian gods of all seven races have descended. It's natural to regard it as sacred. From the Mountain Calamity Tribe to the Pure Humans Race, the Vampiric Tribe, the Gill Fishes Tribe, the Ghost Tribe, and the Fairy Tribe, it would be considered a holy land to all of them."

The Sword Emperor nodded.

"So, the Mountain Calamity Tribe is defending it, while the other races are attempting to reclaim it."

"And it's the last remaining city of the empire... Neither side can easily back down."

For the multi-racial coalition, there's a history of being oppressed as slaves by the Mountain Calamity Tribe. It's a complex mix of faith, grudge, and politics. It's not something that can be easily resolved.

"Ugh."

The Black Dragon Witch groaned.

"It's strange. Before clearing the last stage, I had sternly told the Vampiric Tribe children that there is no god, and even if there is, I am not one. Could my teachings have been lost...?"

"Ah, I did something similar."

I was intrigued by the Black Dragon Witch's words.

"What did you spend your points on, Black Dragon Witch?"

"[Race Evolution]."

Oh.

I thought the Black Dragon Witch would be the type to save and accumulate points, like a frugal hamster.

“That’s quite a big investment. Unexpected.”

"....."

The Black Dragon Witch stared at me blankly, then sighed as if I were clueless.

“...I eavesdropped on your item choice.”

“What?”

“I took your choice as a reference. I thought it must be a good item if you chose it, so I picked the same.”

“Isn’t that too much of a copycat move?”

“Shut up. What’s wrong with following a successful person’s lead?”

“Wow, totally shameless... Vampiric Tribe are intelligent bats, right? It's interesting to think how they might evolve.”

“I don't know. Maybe they'll turn into vampires?”

“Shh.”

The Paladin raised his hand, pointing to one side of the military camp.

“It's getting noisy.”

We immediately fell silent. As the Paladin said, there was a commotion in the coalition camp. Soldiers who were having dinner hurriedly gulped down their naan bread and gathered somewhere.

“Let's check it out.”

We all clung to the Black Dragon Witch and teleported. “Feels like I've become a mother pig...,” she grumbled, but it was the fastest method.

At the entrance of the camp.

There stood hundreds of warriors in formation. These were warriors of a race that was neither the Gill Fishes Tribe, the Vampiric Tribe, the Pure Humans Race, the Ghost Tribe, nor the Fairy Tribe.

A Pure Humans Race commander spoke to them.

“Warriors of the Wetlands, what brings you here? We are an alliance bound by a holy oath to avenge old grievances. Do not intrude here with sword and spear.”

“Ugor.”

The leader of the warriors nodded lightly.

“I am Gerkessada, the 73rd-ranked chief warrior of the Fire River Council and the commander of the vanguard in this expedition. My distant ancestor mined rock salt in Limepolis. Our swords have not yet turned against you, so rest assured.”

The Earth Spirit Tribe.

The race I was guiding appeared on horseback, confronting the coalition camp.

“An expedition? Weren’t the people of the Wetlands declared non-participants in this war?”

“We said we wouldn’t join your expedition, not that we wouldn’t participate in the war.”

An Earth Spirit Tribe warrior spoke calmly.

“The Council decided to join the war, albeit belatedly.”

“What? Joining the war?”

“Ugor. As a noble representative of the Council, I’ve come to inform you of this decision. We have no intention to ambush or betray you.”

Interesting. It’s clear that 600 years have passed.

‘Their way of speaking has become quite archaic.’

Until the last stage, the Earth Spirit Tribe's unique pronunciation was pronounced. But now, the warrior's speech lacked such traces, and their pronunciation had rounded out, turning 'Goruk' closer to 'Ugo-u'.

-It's not just the speech... They're huge now!

Indeed.

The Earth Spirit Tribe, previously of dwarf stature, had grown nearly twice in size. They were as big, if not bigger, than the Pure Humans Race.

‘[Race Evolution] has successfully occurred.’

Larger than humans but smaller than orcs.

-Krrr.

Even more notably, they rode lions as big as themselves. The lions snorted, glaring at the Pure Humans Race commander, who stepped back nervously.

-They won't bite.

The Earth Spirit Tribe warrior patted the lion's mane.

-This one is a kind friend. Don't worry.

-What do you mean by joining the war? If you're not with our expedition, does that mean you're siding with the Mountain Calamity Tribe? Make it clear. Are you here as a herald of war?

-By the name of Kekerkker and Gorke, I swear, we are not.

Swearing in the name of Gore as well?

The little guy finally made it big.

-We're only participating to prevent sins committed in the name of the gods.

-Sins? Sins?

-Yes. You are committing a wrong. The guardian gods never wished for us to annihilate the Mountain Calamity Tribe. When we sought revenge during the Great Escape, the gods turned away. Their will is clear and distinct.

The Earth Spirit Tribe warrior bared his teeth.

-Further war is neither honorable nor sacred. Taking away the last refuge of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, who whipped us, is just as cruel.

-What...

-Enough with revenge. Fellow chained ones.

The Earth Spirit Tribe chief warrior spoke.

-Stop the fight. We have come to end this age-old war.

Chapter 172: Battle for the Holy Land (2)

---

The coalition camp grew noisy.

“End an age-old war...?”

“Not to annihilate the Mountain Calamity Tribe?”

It wasn't a positive uproar. The commanders of the various races, who had been quietly listening to the Earth Spirit Tribe chief warrior, began to express their anger.

“Ultimately, you're siding with the slave masters.”

“Where's this nonsense coming from!”

“Is this why you hesitated to join the war until now!”

“Waiting until both armies are exhausted, then swooping in to claim victory. Are you under the Mountain Calamity Tribe's orders? Aren't you ashamed before the spirits of your ancestors?”

A flood of accusations poured out.

The Earth Spirit Tribe chief warrior didn't blink.

“It doesn't matter what you say. We simply declare what we believe. The Fire River Council held 12 sub-councils and convened 6 major councils. [Driving the Mountain Calamity Tribe to extinction exceeds the bounds of just revenge] was our consensus.”

“Traitors!”

“Go chain yourselves up again!”

“Just you wait.”

Flap.

Bats perched on the wooden fences flapped their wings. Hundreds of bats gathered in one place, soon forming human figures. Vampires cloaked in black mantles – the evolved form of the Vampiric Tribe.

“I am Carayan, a border count from the Firin, leading 1600 elite troops. My ancestors lived in the ceiling of Limepolis, and my mother and grandfather participated in the last expedition.”

“...They really turned into vampires?”

The Black Dragon Witch seemed uneasy, unfamiliar with her race's evolution. Of course, our conversations weren't audible to the inhabitants of this world.

“Warriors of the Wetlands, you were the first to escape Limepolis during the Great Escape. First to rise with stone axes, yet when the opportunity to finish the Mountain Calamity Tribe came, you turned your backs.”

The Vampiric noble, a vampire, bared his fangs.

“According to legend, the Mountain Calamity Tribe's pursuit force inexplicably let you go.”

“.....”

“There are doubts. You’ve consistently refused to join the expeditions since the first, and now you suddenly appear to cry for peace. Perhaps you’ve had a secret pact with the Mountain Calamity Tribe for a long time?”

“That event happened over half a millennium ago. The repelling of the Mountain Calamity Tribe's pursuit was the achievement of Kekerkker and his loyal apostle Gorke. Apostle Gorke, riding on the back of Kekerkker, defeated 13 Mountain Calamity Tribe soldiers in consecutive duels.”

Wow.

‘Our Gorke became an apostle?’

I felt a mix of pride and sorrow. He used to be a kid who hated fighting me, calling me a devil. Now he’s made history.

“The pursuit force’s leader withdrew his troops, impressed by the duel.”

“Huh. How moving.”

The vampire sneered.

“A noble prophet’s duel and the touched enemy leader. A saga worthy of legends. I, being a cynic and clumsy in nature, tend to lend my ear to things like [secret pacts between two forces] rather than [the enemy leader’s sentiment].”

The Earth Spirit Tribe chief warrior made a subtle expression.

“...It was far from an honorable duel. Kekerkker, cunning and brutal, forced the unwilling Gorke to participate.”

Huh?

“Apostle Gorke advised his kin until his death. Kekerkker wasn’t a benevolent transcendental being, but merely a friend who occasionally looked after us. Rude-mouthed and petty, not someone you’d want to keep close.”

What?

“That’s right. If anything, Kekerkker was our ‘bad friend’.”

“To call a god a 'bad friend'! That's blasphemy!”

The Pure Race commander shouted, but the Earth Spirit Tribe chief warrior maintained his sorrowful, hedgehog-with-alpecia-like expression.

“The legends say so. Names for Kekerkker include [The Lion with a Foul Mouth], [The Lover of Beating Hands], [The Advocate of Violent Education].”

"....."

My fellow hunters looked at me intently.

Uh, uh.

Their gaze, their eyes, seemed to question and blame me. It's been a long time since I've seen such a look from my comrades.

“King of Death...”

The Black Dragon Witch began.

“You... I didn't think you were that kind of person. Did you go around hitting kids when we weren't looking? I'm a bit, actually quite, shocked.”

“...They say a person's true nature reveals when they become a parent and raise a child.”

The Paladin glared at me with accusing eyes.

“How much must you have tormented those little goblins for such a legend to be passed down? King of Death, there's only so much to hit on a small goblin body. Reflect on your actions....”

“No, no, no, wait a minute! Stop! Wait a minute!”

I frantically waved my hands.

“I'm innocent! I'm not that violent! You know that!”

“Well, you do have a somewhat headstrong side, don't you...? Why else would such a legend exist?”

“I did hit them, but! That was using the [Appearance in Dreams] item. You know, that item! In dreams, no matter how much you get hit or die, no scars remain, so I used it to educate aura....”

“You mean goblins died in dreams?”

The Paladin widened his eyes. The others murmured.

“Not leaving scars on the body and leaving trauma in the mind are completely different. Mental scars can be more serious. Especially with education through beating and death....”

“[The Lion with a Foul Mouth]....”

“[The Lover of Beating Hands]....”

“[The Advocate of Violent Education]....”

“No, wait a minute. Really, it sounds terrible when you put it like that, but it’s not true! I can’t exactly say what’s wrong, but I didn’t go that far! Really! I just tried to ensure the goblins didn’t lose their beautiful culture. Believe me!”

“Typical self-justification...”

“Reminiscent of domestic violence...”

Ah, ah!

My reputation! My image is being tarnished!

Always reliable, trustable, kind, and competent – my precious image!

-Hey, who are you talking about...?

‘It’s me.’

-You’re fucking insane....

While my noble image shattered, on the other side, the coalition army leaders were also looking dumbfoundedly at the Earth Spirit Tribe chief warrior.

“Descendants of salt stones being mad is well-known, but...”

“To treat the god they worship so crudely, are they sane?”

“Clearly, they’re not worth associating with.”

What's going on? The Earth Spirit Tribe's image is also strange.

It can't all be my fault, right? Probably not.

“Ugor.”

The Earth Spirit Tribe chief warrior sighed.

“We've conveyed the council's will. How you perceive us is none of our concern. But remember, we've come to end this war. Whether it's the Mountain Calamity Tribe or any other, we won't stand by and watch complete annihilation.”

“Do you think we'll just let you do as you please?”

“We always live as we please.”

The Earth Spirit Tribe chief warrior turned the lion’s head.

“Be aware. We are just the vanguard. The council chairman is leading the main force. Lions that drink rain and warriors who love fire are coming. You should be rightly afraid.”

The chief warrior addressed his troops.

“Advance, everyone.”

The Earth Spirit Tribe warriors moved as one. The coalition was at a loss – stopping them meant a fight, but fighting a force that was neither friend nor foe brought no benefit. They fumbled with their bows, unable to do anything, just watching the Earth Spirit Tribe’s departure.

“And.”

Then.

“Them?”

Seeing where the Earth Spirit Tribe was headed, the coalition soldiers stirred. The leaders were shocked.

“They’re setting up camp there?!”

Right in the center between the coalition camp and the Mountain Calamity Tribe’s Limepolis.

In a spot where both sides could hit with catapults, the Earth Spirit Tribe boldly set up camp.

“Ugog. The soil's stickiness here isn’t bad.”

“Just sticky enough to feel good.”

“I’m tired from marching. Someone give me a back rub.”

A stream flowed through the plains. About 400 Earth Spirit Tribe warriors deftly kneaded the river's mud. They relaxed, rubbing each other's backs and drawing patterns on their bodies, creating a peaceful, leisurely scene reminiscent of a holiday resort. A bathhouse had sprung up in the middle of the battlefield.

To an outsider, it looked like they were just having fun.

“This brazenness...”

“It somehow feels familiar...”

“It reminds me of something I’ve seen a lot...”

My fellow hunters alternated between looking at me and the Earth Spirit Tribe.

No. What. Why.

I really only did good things for the kids.

“Move as per the number drawn.”

After the bath, two Earth Spirit Tribe warriors broke away from the formation.

One towards the coalition forces.

The other towards the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

Just two warriors now occupied the pathways of both armies.

“Ugor.”

An Earth Spirit Tribe warrior, carrying a great sword, eyed the opposing soldiers provocatively.

“Come if you dare.”

“Th-they...!”

Recognizing the intent behind the act and gaze, the coalition army leaders were incensed.

“How impudent! A one-on-one duel challenge?!”

“Typical of the Earth Spirit Tribe! Eloquent in speech, but their actions are barbaric!”

“We are knights upholding the sacred will of the Guardian Spirits. How dare these mixed breeds, babbling about 'bad friends', block our path!”

“Send out a champion! We’ll simply counter with our own warrior!”

Soon, a Fairy Tribe champion mounted a white horse and advanced.

“You moldy runt! Today I’ll bury your stench under the ground!”

The champion, uncharacteristically brawny for an elf, charged at the Earth Spirit Tribe warrior.

“My name is Murmu. Descendant of Kekerkker and the renowned warrior Gorke. Ranked 631st in the Fire River Council. What’s your name?”

“I have no name to give to the likes of you...!”

At that moment, the Earth Spirit Tribe warrior hurled his great sword.

Whirling like a windmill, the massive blade flew through the air.

“What?!”

Startled, the Fairy Tribe champion raised dual swords. Clang! A huge sound echoed as he was unseated. He blocked the blade but couldn't negate its force and was sent flying.

“Cr-ack!?”

Failing to execute a proper fall, the Fairy Tribe warrior screamed. Gasping, he tried to rise, but the Earth Spirit Tribe warrior's lion was already upon him. The lion pressed its paw onto the elf's shoulder.

“Hii....”

“Not stating your name and lineage, such lack of manners. Ugor.”

Thud!

The Earth Spirit Tribe warrior simply directed the lion to crush the elf's face. In an instant, the unknown Fairy Tribe warrior's head was obliterated. The lion, growling contentedly, scraped its paw on the ground.

A duel concluded in a blink.

“Hee-hee-hing!”

The riderless white horse neighed, running pitifully towards the horizon. It could have been a picturesque scene, but then,

“Hee-hing?!”

An Earth Spirit Tribe warrior threw a spear, catching the white horse. The plains quieted. The spear-wielding Earth Spirit Tribe warrior hurriedly dragged the horse back. Realizing his impulsive act as the coalition forces stared, he sheepishly bowed.

“Sorry. I was hungry...”

“.....”

“Thought it’d be a waste to let it go. Meat is precious. Anyway, that’s what I think. Keep dueling.”

He casually returned to the Earth Spirit Tribe camp.

His bow was impeccably polite.

“.....”

The coalition leaders were speechless.

“That....”

“Despicable creature!”

“Could there be anyone more ignorant in the world!”

“A dishonorable fight! Throwing a sword in a duel! Is that a warrior’s way?”

“If you’re aggrieved, throw your sword too. Ugor.”

The Fairy Tribe slayer snorted disinterestedly.

“And we’ve always been ignorant.”

“What?”

“Since childhood, our brothers beat us to learn aura. We’re a lowly tribe; if we can’t use aura, we might as well die. They beat us so we’d rather die, but their beatings were so precise we couldn’t. Keep getting hit, and at some point, you comprehend aura.”

“Choosing a brother who beat you and beating them back is our rite of passage to adulthood.”

The Earth Spirit Tribe warrior gazed at the dusk sky.

His eyes, bright and sorrowful, couldn't be expressed in words.

“Can't believe such an ignorant tribe exists, even I, a member of the council, find it unbelievable...”

“.....”

“But it's necessary. It's the best way. There's no more efficient method to learn aura than to suffer near death. This is the teaching handed down directly by Kekerkker to the noble apostle Gorke 600 years ago.”

The warrior mumbled.

“We call this, borrowing Kekerkker's words, [The Damn Aura Inheritance Method]. Truly damn.”

The Earth Spirit Tribe comrades echoed in unison.

“Friendship over idols! Trust over faith! Damn!”

“Damn!”

“Damn!”

The warrior nodded.

“Our tribe’s grief is deep and vast. There are no gods in this world, only bad friends. So we must do well. We have no choice but to do well. Those who were chained together in the past. Stop the war. Don’t lead the Mountain Calamity Tribe to extinction.”

“.....”

“Otherwise, you’ll die by our hands.”

The plains fell silent.

I fell silent.

My fellow hunters did not.

“That’s the King of Death...”

“It’s totally him...”

“King of Death, why are you there?”

“Since when did you grow fangs and paint your skin green,
King of Death?”

Wait.

What exactly has become of my image?

Chapter 173: Battle for the Holy Land (3)

---

‘How can this be so unfair...’

Maybe this is the karma one must bear as a parent? If a child does well, it's their own merit; if they don't, it's the parent's fault.

Ah, Raviel. Maybe it's better for us not to have children. I don't think I can handle it. Imagine a child resembling Raviel saying, ‘Daddy, damn it!’...

Wait?

‘Maybe that'd be kind of cute in its own way?’

-Crazy bastard... Maybe there really is something wrong with his brain...

‘Open Earth Spirit Tribe status.’

Imagining a happy future, I reviewed the newly evolved state of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

+

[Earth Spirit Tribe]

Extinction Grade: C (Safe)

Maxim: ‘We are fire.’

Political System: Republic

Description: What an incredible turn of events! The Earth Spirit Tribe has undergone a remarkable evolution. They have established a very special civilization, the [Aura Civilization]!

For the Earth Spirit Tribe, an adult is none other than [one who can use aura]. Politicians, artists, warriors - everyone’s success depends on their ability to use aura.

Once an Earth Spirit Tribe member masters aura, they immediately join the council after the next full moon. The Fire River Council comprises all adult members of the Earth Spirit Tribe, deciding all major and minor matters of the tribe. Those who use aura are [adults], [citizens], and [council members].

The council's ranking is determined by how skillfully one can use aura. The top rank, the one most adept at using aura, serves as the chairman.

‘Damn Aura.’

Simply put, the strongest person leads the tribe!

On moonless nights when darkness envelops everything, the Earth Spirit Tribe gathers. Ugly appearances and evil fangs hidden in the dark, that’s when the Earth Spirit Tribe solemnly discusses the fate of their kind.

‘Chairman. I really don't think that solution is right.’

‘Disagree?’

‘I do.’

‘Then come at me.’

‘I shall.’

Despite everyone contributing to discussions, the Fire River Council boasts remarkable efficiency and speed, possible only because the chairman is the tribe's strongest warrior.

It's unbelievable to have such a primitive battle tribe.

If someone is responsible for creating such a tribe, they might need some time for reflection!

Traits: [Republican Tradition], [Bad Friend Doctrine], [Damn Aura Inheritance Method], [Blood Fire], [Legacy of Records], [Competitive Spirit]

Evolution: Unknown. One evolution remains.

Alias: Hopgoblin, etc.

+

Hmm.

Umm.

Right.

I smiled broadly inwardly.

‘Yay, the goblins have evolved into hopgoblins! That's great!
So cool!’

-Zombie, is that all you have to say?

‘Damn, how did this happen...?!’

I held my head.

‘All I did was ensure they didn’t lose [Blood Fire], and somewhat positively redirected [Greed]!’

-Positive direction spun full circle into madness.

‘No, no, it wasn't wrong. Now that I think about it, at least hundreds, maybe thousands, have learned to use aura. Isn't that amazing? Unexpected, but a delightful miscalculation. It's definitely me.’

-A parent who failed in parenting now justifying themselves... This guy...

I looked at the Earth Spirit Tribe's traits. 600 years is a long time. Traits that weren't there in the past had been added.

For instance, [Republican Tradition].

+

[Republican Tradition]

Category: Politics

Origin: [Blood Fire]

Description: The Earth Spirit Tribe has established a republic. This system originated from the Earth Spirit Tribe's unique [Blood Fire]!

Whenever someone died, the Earth Spirit Tribe would gather in underground caves to hold a meeting. The darkness of the caves hid each member's appearance. Though they held funerals to escape the oppression and surveillance of the Mountain Calamity Tribe – unwittingly, they experienced [the veil of ignorance].

In the dark.

The Earth Spirit Tribe freely discussed.

‘How did this person die?’

History.

‘Was this person's life righteous?’

Judgment.

‘How should we respond to this death?’

Ethics.

‘Is Kekerkker a lion bastard or a dog bastard?’

Philosophy.

Over time, the Earth Spirit Tribe began discussing not just the dead but also the living. After escaping the caves, meetings were held every new moon. Naturally, the consensus reached here was regarded as the tribe's will, and the meetings became a council.

Unlike other councils, eloquence is not crucial here.

‘Ugor. It’s a pity. There seems to be a significant difference in perspective between us.’

‘If I smash one of your eyes, the difference in perspective disappears.'

'An excellent solution.'

Survival of the strongest!

In some ways, the Earth Spirit Tribe's council is still a funeral hall!

*However, this trait may change depending on the course of history.

+

Mixed.

Something very heterogeneous... got mixed up.

'Strongest survive, but it's not a dictatorship, and the council exists, but ranks are decided by power, not words. What's this? Something is odd...'

-Isn't this all the result of your education?

The Guardian Spirit clicked his tongue.

-Your foreign policy in a nutshell is either [talk first, then fight] or [talk, but still fight]. Exactly like Kim Zombie.

'Is this... my true self...?'

-Of course. Parents learn about themselves while raising their children.

Shock.

Apparently, I'm more of a maverick than I thought.

"Hmm. As befitting the King of Death's tribe, they are quite adept at fighting."

The Sword Saint looked out over the plains.

“It's already the third duel, but without switching warriors, the Earth Spirit Tribe has won them all. There doesn't seem to be a huge gap in martial skills. It appears to be a difference in aura proficiency.”

As the Sword Saint said, the duels continued. Both the coalition and the Earth Spirit Tribe sent warriors in turns. However, every time a duel occurred, the Earth Spirit Tribe's warrior came out victorious.

The Black Dragon Witch muttered.

“It's surprising. I underestimated goblins. Despite their appearance, their use of aura is quite elegant.”

“Ahem.”

“... King of Death, why are you suddenly doing the shoulder dance? It's unseemly to look at. As the person in charge of your fashion, I'm somewhat despairing.”

“Seeing the kids doing so well naturally gets me excited. By the way, Black Dragon Witch, speaking of fashion, why do I have to wear this tightly wrapped black leather outfit? It's kinda like... juvenile. Internet searches on my fashion are so polarized...”

“It suits you. You look good in leather.”

“You’re not just projecting your preferences, are you?”

“Of course not.”

The Black Dragon Witch spoke nonchalantly.

“I objectively coordinated what suits you best. No personal feelings involved.”

The doubts deepened, and the night followed suit.

-Damned moldy bastards!

The coalition’ leadership ground their teeth in humiliation. They were shivering in disgrace. Despite continuously sending warriors all night, the results were disastrously one-sided.

-Four of ours die for every one of them.

The vampire lamented.

-They might be the vanguard, but this ratio is alarming. Even considering they only picked the elite... The discrepancy is too great.

The leadership of the multi-race coalition glared fiercely.

-The Mountain Calamity Tribe is in a similar situation. Damn it. They've planted their eggs right in the middle of the battlefield...

-Are we going to play into the hands of these moldy creatures? We are engaged in a Holy War! We are upholding the will of the gods! We must ignore these moldy creatures and launch a full-scale attack!

-So, you're suggesting we declare war on the Earth Spirit Tribe? That's foolish.

-What? Foolish?

-Charging in blindly, driven by emotion, only benefits the Mountain Calamity Tribe. Didn't the moldy creatures say they're just the vanguard? The Earth Spirit Tribe's king, the chairman, is leading the main force. According to legends, the king of the Earth Spirit Tribe is a monster capable of altering waterways and controlling flames single-handedly. If they attack us, there's no answer.

The vampire sighed bitterly.

-Mountain Calamity Tribe in front, Earth Spirit Tribe behind... It's a route to annihilation. At least the Mountain Calamity Tribe is probably making the same calculation. It's a deadlock.

-Hmph. So what are you suggesting?

A Ghost Tribe commander hissed. The Ghost Tribe had been oppressed by the Mountain Calamity Tribe longer than any other. Their hatred ran deep.

-We almost captured Limepolis, and now you want us to give up? What about the cost of the expedition? Go back to our homeland without any achievements? That's ludicrous. What will we say to the soldiers who died loyally and to the citizens who contributed? Are you really generals!

-.....

The commanders fell silent.

The next day, and the day after that, duels continued. Occasionally, an Earth Spirit Tribe warrior would lose their head, but three times as many bodies from the coalition and the Mountain Calamity Tribe were severed.

The Earth Spirit Tribe had achieved their goal of [blocking the battle between the coalition and the Mountain Calamity Tribe].

Finally, on the fourth day.

-Ugor.

Hundreds of Earth Spirit Tribe members sniffed the air.

-The wind carries the scent of mud.

In four days, a hundred Earth Spirit Tribe members had died. Slightly fewer warriors than a few days ago, they raised their heads in sequence, looking beyond the plains.

-The familiar scent of earth.

-The smell we rolled in and inhaled through our mouths.

-The fragrance of Guru.

Their sense of smell was accurate.

Shortly after, an army appeared on the horizon.

About three thousand warriors, each mounted on a lion, approached. Not just the warriors, but the lions' bodies were also engraved with strange tattoos. From a distance, it seemed as if wriggling tentacles were moving closer.

-Boo-oo-oo.

The leading warrior blew a horn. Only then did the soldiers of the multi-race coalition and the Mountain Calamity Tribe warriors in Limepolis look toward the horizon.

An army marching with the sun at their back.

-Boo-oo-oo-oo.

The horn's sound continued eerily. Among them were horns made from the Mountain Calamity Tribe's shells, horns from the single horns of the Ghost Tribe, and even horns decorated with the skulls of Pure Humans and the teeth of vampires.

These were the traces of battles they had won.

At the forefront of the army, especially a warrior mounted on a massive white lion.

“Wow.”

Viper commented.

“That's not just a king, that's a Demon King's aura. Hey, King of Death. You've surpassed the Demonic Cult and raised a Demon King. Congratulations.”

The leader of all Earth Spirit Tribe.

The chairman of the Fire River Council led the warriors into battle.

---

-Greetings to all!

Koo-woong!

A building pillar-sized axe embedded itself in the middle of the battlefield. The Earth Spirit Tribe chairman casually stepped on the axe blade. The chairman's aura-enhanced voice shook the heavens and earth.

-Bright and shining lives like stars of this world! I am the 212th chairman of the Fire River Council, Uburka!

A face brimming with dignity. Muscles rippling over his body. As if to show off his experience in slaughter, a large scar marred one side of his face. The chairman spread his arms wide, proudly displaying the essence of his being through his chest muscles.

-Life is full of hardships even today, damn!

His words didn't quite match his imposing appearance.

-Isn't life's harshness experienced by everyone, while its blessings are not, damn? We seven races may look different but share the same damn hardships, making us compatriots, damn it!

The fellow hunters murmured.

“What's with the Earth Spirit Tribe and 'damn' at the end of every sentence?”

“Not sure. Guess it's like 'thingy'. Could mean anything or nothing.”

“King of Death... your teaching methods are...”

I yearned for a child resembling Raviel.

No, I just want to see Raviel. Forget the child. I don't need one...

As I indulged in escapism, the Earth Spirit Tribe chairman's speech grew more passionate.

-Indeed! We are compatriots damn it! In my left pectoral, the soul of the Earth Spirit Tribe resides, and in my right, the love of my compatriots, damn! Behold! My chest muscles swell with soul, love and damn!

His metaphor was awful.

It was a bit too much.

Actually seeing the bulging green muscles made me feel slightly nauseous. What was this muscle pig with muscles in his brain as well as his body? A passing orc would probably involuntarily shout, 'Bro!' at this muscle pig.

"Resorting to such inappropriate flirting..."

"More I see, the more he resembles the King of Death..."

"I am really not like that!"

The multi-race coalition and the Mountain Calamity Tribe quietly watched the chairman from both sides of the battlefield. Despite being enemies, the expressions of soldiers from both armies were similar. They all looked as if they were staring at a madman.

-However! I am! Very sad! Damn!

The madman wore an expression of deep anguish.

-Even if the Mountain Calamity Tribe committed unforgivable sins six hundred years ago, how can exterminating an entire race be the way to atone, damn? It's not right! Not just! Not beautiful! Not damn! And to wage war in Limepolis, a place you call holy. That's not sacred at all! Damn! We define this as a damn situation and hereby declare our participation in the war!

Following the chairman's declaration, Earth Spirit Tribe warriors shook their weapons up and down.

-Damn! Damn! Damn!

-Listen, seven races!

The leader of the madmen spoke.

-It's not bad to have groaned under the Mountain Calamity Tribe as slaves! What can we do if you want to avenge your ancestors? Damn. The Mountain Calamity Tribe isn't bad either! What can we do if they don't want to be annihilated and resist, damn?

The multi-race coalition and the Mountain Calamity Tribe stirred. Comments like, 'What's this madman saying?' or 'With all this talk about moldy creatures, has he really grown mold in his brain, Lime?' They all collectively expressed disbelief.

-Yes! You're not bad!

The following words silenced the seven races.

-What's bad is the Holy Land!

All soldiers looked at the chairman's mouth in disbelief.

-There are no gods in this world. There shouldn't be any holy land. Damn, yet, everyone clings to false beliefs and burns their convictions in these bottomless pits, pouring their bright lives into nothingness! It's all the fault of the Holy Land, damn it! Therefore, the Fire River Council has decided as follows!

The coalition' leadership was flustered. Regardless, the Earth Spirit Tribe chairman crossed his arms and declared.

-We will destroy the Holy Land!

The leaders fell silent.

-The Holy Land can't be shared! It only leads to more fighting! So, let's all participate in destroying it!

-.....

-If we can't forgive others for having it, then no one should have it. This is natural logic! Let's completely obliterate Limepolis so that no one can occupy it or live there! Come! Seven compatriots! Let's destroy the Holy Land together and create a world of happiness for us all!

Just like descendants following their ancestor's footsteps.

The tribe I raised has returned as complete madmen.

Chapter 174: My Son is Too Strong (1)

---

-That is our proposal, my compatriots! What say you?

The Earth Spirit Tribe's Chairman, Uburka, laughed heartily.

-Isn't it a perfect solution?

-.....

-It's so perfect that everyone seems to have lost their words. Ugor. I understand! It's natural for human vision to be narrow, focused on immediate troubles, unable to conceive simple solutions. Be grateful! We have descended to gift you with a fresh solution!

Too fresh, almost raw, it's likely to cause stomach trouble if consumed.

Both the multi-race coalition and the Mountain Calamity Tribe, each looked as if they were chewing on plastic trash. A Celestial Clan commander from the coalition scoffed in disbelief.

-Crazy, those ignorant mold freaks are at it again....

-That's alright. We deeply understand your pettiness.

Chairman Uburka solemnly nodded.

-No matter how perfect the solution, it's hard to accept it suddenly. It must feel like a defeat, an involuntary submission. Humans hate to lose, more precisely, they hate the feeling of losing. Poor things.

-No....

-So, we'll overwhelmingly defeat you!

Uburka extended his left arm, and an Earth Spirit Tribe warrior approached to offer a spear.

Closing his eyes, Uburka slowly assumed a stance.

-Hmm.

His eyes snapped open.

The muscles in his left arm rippled.

-Huh!

A beam shot forth.

It was a beam of red light, no other way to describe it.

Enveloped in a bloody aura, the spear was launched – no, shot forth.

Koooung!

A spear throw.

Chairman Uburka's posture was as elegant as an Olympian, but the spear's power was anything but elegant. It was savage and destructive. The spear crashed into the coalition's encampment with a thunderous roar.

Soldiers screamed. A dust storm ensued. No one was injured directly by the spear, but the chaos of soldiers tumbling and trampling over each other ensued.

And it didn't end there.

-Huhup!

Uburka grabbed another spear and this time aimed at the Mountain Calamity Tribe's Limepolis. Leaving a red trail across the plains, the spear hit the city walls squarely. The thick wall was penetrated as if the spear was a screw drilling in.

-.....

The dokkaebi commander who was previously gesticulating stood frozen.

-.....

The Mountain Calamity Tribe soldiers were also flabbergasted.

-I am, in the 600-year history of the Earth Spirit Tribe, the strongest chairman ever.

With his declaration, Chairman Uburka showed his fangs.

-No Earth Spirit Tribe warrior before me was stronger. I have been granted martial prowess by the heavens. My official record is 261 battles, 260 victories, and since adulthood, I have never knelt in defeat. Warriors of our time, lament! Your lives will be overshadowed by my existence.

-Ugor! Ugor! Ugor!

-As you can see, our Earth Spirit Tribe warriors are already significantly overshadowed!

Uburka folded his arms.

-On the next full moon, representatives from the coalition and the Mountain Calamity Tribe should gather here. Come and hold a meeting. We, the Earth Spirit Tribe, will ensure your safety. You can take this as a threat if you like! If you don't gather, I'll launch spears like earlier.

It was not a proposal, but a threat.

-Where my spear will land next, nobody knows. Not me, not you, not even Kerkerkker! It might strike the heads of your commanders, or it might pierce the gates of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, oh compatriots. Please don't push me to extremes. Even I fear my own power...

Ugor, he hefted his axe onto his shoulder.

-Until the full moon rises, we will continue accepting duels. Unleash your anger as much as you want. If you wish, launch a military assault, as long as you're prepared for the consequences!

Then, a voice from the Tower spoke in my head.

[Seven races feel fear towards a single warrior.]

[The leader of the race you guide has ascended as a new Hegemon!]

[An amazing achievement!]

[You have earned 900 race points.]

[You currently have 900 race points.]

My son has grown too formidable.

---

We roamed the camp, gathering information. Useful and useless alike, but if I were to summarize the rumors about the Earth Spirit Tribe, it would be:

[World-class crazies].

They appeared that way to my eyes, too.

According to the soldiers' gossip, the Earth Spirit Tribe lived quietly, tucked away, but would emerge out of nowhere during "world crises."

A hundred years after the slaves' great escape, when the Mountain Calamity Tribe Empire embarked on a grand conquest, it was the Earth Spirit Tribe that thwarted them.

‘What kind of legendary tribe is this?’

But they were my children.

“That guy, if pushed, might even take us on....”

Viper glanced sideways at the Earth Spirit Tribe's camp with his one eye.

Continuous duels were still happening on the plains. Chairman Uburka hadn't stepped in personally. He just casually watched the duels, arms folded, but his presence was immense. Aura continually surged around him.

"Hey, hey. It's not just a duel. If we're careless, we might be utterly defeated."

I pointed out the fact.

“Didn't you hear him talk? He's said to be the strongest in the history of the Earth Spirit Tribe. His martial talent is unprecedented, probably even higher potential than ours.”

“Hey, hey. But we're like their guardians! It'd be embarrassing to get beaten by our own kids!”

“That's fine, isn't it? We didn't become their guardians because we were stronger....”

“You're calm because they're your kids!”

Uburka.

Maybe, just maybe, I might end up needing help from this child. Thinking this, I said,

“Anyway, there must be a reason why this stage was chosen at this time. We have to figure out the clear conditions on our own since no quest has appeared.... Likely, one of the six races, excluding the Mountain Calamity Tribe, is in danger of decline.”

“Huh.”

Black Dragon Witch nodded.

“That's right. My thoughts are similar. One race, or perhaps multiple races, are in danger of collapsing. Like the last stage was about [whether six races collapse or the Mountain Calamity Tribe does].”

“Indeed. Each stage seems to risk the downfall of at least one race....”

“Yep. And the hunter governing that race will also fall alongside.”

Paladin stroked his chin.

“That makes sense. So, which race is closest to collapse now?”

“Certainly not the Mountain Calamity Tribe.”

Countess folded her fan.

“The snails already fell in the 32nd-floor stage.”

“The Earth Spirit Tribe is out too. Given their current momentum....”

“No, it's not that, Paladin.”

"Uh?"

Paladin tilted her head.

“What do you mean?”

“On the contrary, I suspect it's the Earth Spirit Tribe that's in danger of collapsing.”

We all blinked in surprise.

“The Earth Spirit Tribe? Those muscle pigs?”

“Unlikely.”

“Hear me out.”

Countess tapped her fan handle against her palm.

“They'll likely achieve the 'peace negotiation' they desire. Their military strength is formidable, and both the coalition and the Mountain Calamity Tribe are too preoccupied with each other to attack them. But? What about after the negotiation?”

Countess's eyes narrowed.

“Until now, all races would have united against the Mountain Calamity Tribe as a common enemy. Unity forms when there's a shared adversary. However, after a forced peace negotiation, the common enemy will inevitably change. Think about it. Who would that be?”

I spoke up.

“...The target shifts from the Mountain Calamity Tribe to the Earth Spirit Tribe.”

Frowning, I continued.

“The Earth Spirit Tribe is too powerful. The leaders of each race can't help but feel threatened. They will either disband the alliance and acknowledge the Earth Spirit Tribe's hegemony, or maintain the alliance and engage in a power struggle with them.”

“Oh, that makes sense.”

Countess smiled slightly.

“That's what I think as well. Unless they are incredibly foolish, it's unlikely the alliance will dissolve voluntarily. Probably, they'll conspire in the manner of [The current King of the Earth Spirit Tribe is too strong; let's just wait until he dies].”

“Hmm.”

“Hmm....”

My fellow hunters pondered.

“Right now, the Earth Spirit Tribe is indeed strong. But there's no guarantee they will remain so for the next generation, or the one after that, and so on. Didn't that muscle pig declare? No one in their history has been stronger than him. Maintaining hegemony is much harder than achieving it.”

Indeed.

I was aware of the fact that [at least one race would fall]. I had read the strategy guide before regressing. Countess had pointed out that the Earth Spirit Tribe might be in danger based on my hint.

‘Yes, this is teamwork.’

We complement each other's thoughts.

Feeling happy inside, I asked candidly.

“What should we do, Countess?”

“Simple, King of Death. We must cast a spell to maintain hegemony.”

Countess flashed a feline smile.

“It’s obvious the Earth Spirit Tribe lacks sophisticated political power. They’re headstrong but have a clear direction. Directed power is not violence but authority. Someone will want to seize that power.”

“What do you mean?”

“Hehe. Remember how our guild leaders treated you?”

Countess tapped my shoulder with the edge of her fan.

“You were an unprecedented super rookie. We could have feared you, been wary, and excluded you. But what happened?”

I pondered.

“They used me. More precisely, they bought my name value. In return for cooperation, I demanded equal treatment.”

“That's right. It was a win-win. The Earth Spirit Tribe certainly has tremendous power. If the other races see that power as [beneficial to them], the Earth Spirit Tribe won't face downfall.”

"....."

“Do you get a sense of what to do?”

“Yes.”

I nodded my head.

“I certainly do.”

I had taught the Earth Spirit Tribe how to endure the world.

Now, it was time to teach them how to bestow upon the world.

---

[You have purchased 'Appearance in Dreams'.]

[100 race points will be used!]

[You currently have 800 race points.]

That night.

I immediately used the item and entered the dream of the Earth Spirit Tribe's Chairman, Uburka.

I needed to warn him that the Earth Spirit Tribe might be in danger if the peace negotiation went ahead. They might be acknowledged as hegemonic for now, but they would face a crisis afterward.

-Ugor.

In his dream, Chairman Uburka was sitting in the middle of a mud pond, in a perfect meditative pose.

‘Is he meditating in a dream?’

Sitting above the water surface without sinking, Uburka masterfully manipulated his aura.

‘A martial talent that would make my master drool...’

As I approached, Chairman Uburka spoke.

-Who is there?

Uburka's eyes were closed. He sensed my presence purely through sensation and aura. Truly the demeanor of a peak expert.

-My muscles are twitching. I sense no malice from you, but something significant.

“Detecting hostility with muscles...?”

-Ugor. It is said, mind and body are one. When a person is angry, the facial muscles twitch first. Emotions pass through muscles and are conveyed by them. Why shouldn't I sense hostility through them?

"....."

What is this guy?

Not only talented in martial arts but also a master at bullshitting?

“Uburka, listen to me. I am Kerkerkker, whom your people revere as the bad friend, the one who led you out of the jungle and subtly helped you leave Limepolis.”

-Ho?

For the first time, Uburka opened his eyes.

His bright red pupils pierced through me.

-You claim to be Kerkerkker?

“That’s right. Earth Spirit Tribe Chairman. I am the one who helped your people escape from the jungle and aided you in leaving Limepolis.”

-Interesting!

The Chairman laughed, Ugor, Ugor.

-According to the tales passed down, the ancient apostle, Gorke, met Kerkerkker in dreams. He got beaten every time. Are you, claiming to be Kerkerkker, here to thrash me?

“No... Uh, kid. You don’t seem the type to get beaten. Honestly, I’m not even sure if I could win in a fight....”

Chairman Uburka furrowed his brow.

-What? If not for a duel, why seek me out?

“I came to warn you that your tribe might be in danger.”

Then I shared Countess's theory. It was plausible, and I agreed with it, so the story flowed smoothly.

-.....

Initially amused by my presence, Chairman Uburka's expression grew serious as the story progressed.

-So, we might collapse because we are too strong?

“Not collapse, but there is a possibility of decline. No matter how strong you are, you can't handle five or six races alone.”

-Um. Indeed...

“That's why my advice is this. Uburka, don't forcefully demand peace negotiations. You must give the other races a reason and benefit. I think...”

-Wait.

Chairman Uburka raised his left hand.

-Stop right there.

"Eh?"

-Your lack of malice is clear. My biceps and chest muscles are quiet. If there was even a bit of falsehood in your words, my muscles would have twitched.

What kind of horror is this?

Ego muscles surpassing Ego Sword?

-But, that doesn't mean I will take your advice. We, I, don't listen to those weaker than us.

"What?"

-Only those stronger than others can interfere in their affairs.

Chairman Uburka unfolded his legs and stood up gracefully, causing hardly a ripple in the mud pond with his perfect aura control.

-Attack me!

He beckoned with his left index finger.

-If you defeat me, I'll listen to your advice!

Uh.

Stunned by his absurd proposition, I didn't immediately react, so he stepped onto the water's surface.

-Come at me, or I'll come to you!

“Wait a second. I'm your guardian, your eternal friend, almost like a father, and you really want to fight me?”

-If you're truly Kerkerkker, then you're the one who thrashed your almost-son, Gorke. A father should receive what he has given to his child. I won't complain even if I get beaten by you!

Insane.

But he's not wrong?

-Prepare yourself! Father, or maybe not!

Spouting epochal parricidal lines, the greatest muscle pig launched his fist at me.

Volume 8 – Chapters 175-198

Chapter 175: My Son is Too Strong (2)

---

“This brat?!”

I hastily grabbed the Holy Sword. There was no time to draw the blade, so I blocked the muscle pig's punch with the sheath itself. Kwaang! Aura clashed ferociously against aura.

-Ho?

I deliberately absorbed the momentum, retreating a good distance. The gap between Uburka and me widened. I used the spatial gap as a temporal buffer, gripped the sword hilt, and assumed my stance, ready to counter any sudden charge.

-Good. Very good!

Uburka smiled contentedly.

-For someone with such delicate muscles, you're quite good. Have you added the weight of your soul to your body's weight?

“I always focus on internal muscles, you rude brat!”

-Ugor? Internal muscles? What is that?

“It means I look slim on the outside, but my inner muscles are solid! They maintain my physique while boosting my strength immensely. Internal muscles are the mark of a true master. Your style of muscles bulging outward is nothing but low-level!”

-Kekerkker is barking like a dog...

Chairman Uburka displayed a look of disbelief, and for a moment, his breathing slowed.

When faced with absurd nonsense, the human brain stiffens.

Seizing the moment of disrupted breathing, I swiftly lunged towards Uburka.

-Hmm!

Uburka's red eyes widened in surprise. He was significantly larger than an average Earth Spirit Tribe member, offering more spots to hit. I wrapped aura around the sheath, swinging it like a club.

“Sorry, kid! I’ll go easy on you!”

Chairman Uburka grinned.

-Ugor.

He looked down at me as I dived into his embrace. Just watching. Without twisting his body or guarding with his arms, he let my sheathed sword strike his torso.

Kaaang-

An unimaginable sound echoed. It wasn’t a thud or a slash, but a clang, as if striking solid metal. My palm tingled from the impact.

“Indestructible Iron Skin?!”

-My body is made of muscles.

Uburka revealed his fangs and chuckled.

-I was born with albinism. Sunlight irritated me, and my poor eyesight was a hassle. I couldn't even smear mud on myself under the scorching sun. I wondered why I couldn't enjoy simple pleasures easily. Then, one day, I realized!

Uburka spread his arms.

-If I covered my body with aura, there's no problem!

Insane.

-Since that day, I dedicated myself to aura training. First, I practiced coating my entire skin with aura, even if just for a second. One second, two seconds, three seconds, one minute, two minutes, three minutes... When I could maintain it for over an hour, I became an adult, and when I reached over a day, I ascended as Chairman. To me, Uburka, congenital deficiencies were but minor obstacles!

The Hobgoblin struck a bodybuilder's pose.

His biceps undulated.

"Ugh."

If I had eaten something greasy, my stomach would have revolted at the sight of such a distasteful and perilous throbbing.

-I trained my muscles to be infused with aura! When muscles tear, aura aids regeneration. Reconstructed this way, muscles become better conduits for aura. By tearing and regrowing, I achieved the ultimate muscles!

Ulk! Bulk!

Uburka's left and right chest muscles took turns bulging.

Remarkable. My eyes and psychological defenses are taking severe damage. He's causing damage without even touching me, a truly peak-level master.

-At last, I gained control over every muscle, from the smallest to the thickest! Muscles and aura! Aura and muscles! This is the Muscle Path I have pioneered!

What a high-level nonsense.

-Strangely, no one else seems to follow it. Poor fools! It's simple if you use aura with the intention of reconstructing your body from scratch.

“Wait a minute... You don't mean to say you've achieved Metamorphosis...?”

-You, who may be our father!

The child who might have achieved the first-ever title of “Metamorphosed Muscle Pig” in Earth Spirit Tribe history, shouted.

-You're stronger than I thought! Excellent! I've found an opponent I can hit without holding back. So, attack me with all your strength too!

“Wow. I feel weird saying this, but Uburka, you really know nothing but fighting...”

-Heart is Body! Will is Muscle! Knowledge is Flesh!

Firm! His already magma-like muscles suddenly inflated as if warning of a volcanic eruption.

Inflating.

Inflating.

“What, what?”

They kept inflating.

“Kid...?”

Uburka had become enormous.

Not an exaggeration, he was as big as a hill.

He overshadowed me to the point where I was hidden in his shadow.

“Isn’t that a bit too much growth...?”

It wasn’t his physical body that grew.

His [aura] expanded into [an enlarged form of Uburka].

Like a pilot in a giant robot, Uburka's real body would be inside that giant figure.

In other words, that hill-sized figure was entirely, completely made of aura!

-Phew.

Kwoong! The ground trembled.

Uburka moved his foot, and the earth danced to his rhythm.

I looked up at Uburka like Thumbelina.

“T-that’s a serious killing intent. Can you shrink back down? Daddy's getting scared here...”

-This is my true form!

Giant Mode Uburka roared.

-From the joints of my fingers to the impact of my fist, nothing escapes my will! White Lion, self-proclaimed dream! My fist pierces your heart!

“Hey! Hey! This is parricide, I tell you!”

-Good. If the name of victory is parricide, then I gladly become a parricide!

Uburka joyfully shouted his martial arts name. Then, a fist as large as a house cast a shadow over my head and fell.

Damn Aura Fist Technique - Giant Style.

Brutality.

The Crushing Fist.

A name utterly devoid of elegance!

“That’s too much for a martial arts name?!”

-The value of martial arts is proven by power, not by name!

Indeed, he was right. Uburka had exchanged naming sense for profound destructive power.

One strike.

The earth split.

Two strikes tore the ground, and three cracked the underground.

Rain-like fist strikes.

The bedrock shattered. The hot aura, instantaneously grinding the soil, splattered mud on my face. Suddenly, I was drenched in mud like a drenched rat.

“It's hot!!”

I screamed, dodging Uburka's relentless onslaught.

“Brute! A brute that shakes the world! Ah, I didn't raise you like this!”

-Stop the nonsense, zombie. We can't consider these guys as the ones you raised.

As I danced around to dodge, Guardian Spirit spoke.

-In the martial world, parents and children sometimes split and fight. Even a sect that makes family feuds a tradition exists.

“Damn it!”

I drew my sword.

“Now I don’t care anymore!”

-I stopped caring a long time ago!

“You’re proud of that, you brat!”

I gathered my aura.

I envisioned flames.

In the basement torture chamber of a certain mansion.

‘The outstretched hand of the chained child flickers with flames.’

A young, desperate vengeance.

'Fire.'

My heart heats up instantly.

I materialize the emotions that would otherwise fade without a trace, shaping them into the scene of the underground mansion. I expand these impressions into aura.

‘My shadow is the shade of the basement.’

I don’t get engulfed in emotions.

‘My flame is the touch of a child.’

Nor get captivated by impressions.

There are no you and I in fire. Fire is one. Always merging and burning the world distinctly.

Thus, my sword’s tip becomes someone’s fingertip, and my blade becomes our scream.

Demonic Heavenly God Art - Reformation.

The First Form.

Sword of Burning Youth.

-.....!

Burn.

-Uhahaha! As expected!

My aura flickers like a snake's head along the shadows, binding the opponent's wrist. Even though it's just a form inflated by the giant, my impression is more solid. Hotter.

Stronger.

I sever the wrist.

-Indeed!

The opponent resists. With his left wrist severed, he swings his right arm to shake me off. Is he trying to gain distance? To reset his stance?

I press on.

Ducking to dodge his punch, I seize his right arm with shadow flames in the moment his fist cuts through the air. One strand, two strands, dozens of aura strands constrict the giant's fist.

-Undoubtedly!

Burn it.

-Kekerkker!

The giant tries to regenerate both arms. He must still have enough aura. Then, I just need to sever his limbs faster than he can regenerate them.

-Six hundred years later, has our race been blessed again?

Before the left arm regrows, I cut off the left leg.

Before the left leg regrows, I cut off the right leg.

Before the right leg regrows, again, the left arm.

I slice through the giant's illusion.

-The glory of the legend is not lacking! No, correction! The legend was lacking!

I slash relentlessly.

-Amazing! Ugor! Amazing! To 'enhance' oneself, not by strengthening but by 'invoking' others!

I bury the giant in the burning underground.

-Aura, the flame of the soul, can be used like this!

The giant, like burning paper, is consumed by flames.

Gradually shrinking bit by bit.

The giant's aura, also red, resembles a small flame being devoured by a greater inferno.

‘Do they really need to be different?’

I ponder while absorbing the giant's flames.

‘Uburka inflated his arms and legs. Extended them. Aura is a tool to expand oneself. In contrast, I transferred someone's scream. Pulled it in.’

The red aura blazes.

‘Is there a reason why these two can't occur simultaneously?’

Sparks ignite in my mind.

‘I am transferring Master’s Demonic Heavenly God Art to my own. But do I need to scream alone? Can I, alone, bear all karma, and draw all resentment? Should it be that way?’

The principle of aura operation filled my mind.

‘No.’

The solution emerged.

‘Anyone can become a flame.’

I speak up.

“Uburka. Remember.”

-Ugor?

Should I mention the underground mansion?

No.

“Recall the dark underground of Limepolis.”

A closer scene.

“There, you dug holes to live in. In each hole, about thirteen goblins huddled together. Among them were young goblins. Born without ever seeing the sun fully, never felt rain on their skin, never freely smeared mud.”

-.....

“Picture the children.”

I pressed the Earth Spirit Tribe's strongest warrior.

“Every morning and evening, a few fish are rationed in the hole. That's all the food. Mothers carefully roast the tiny fish. Have you pictured it?”

-...I have.

“The narrow hole gets smoky. Mothers cough, children cry. But they can’t go out. The Ghost Tribe guards are watching. Think of the smoky hole, the tender parents, the crying children.”

-There.

“A young Earth Spirit Tribe reaches for the half-cooked fish.”

I fend off the giant's punch with my blade.

“The mother strikes the child's wrist. Holds it. Might even hit. But these young ones, they keep reaching for the undercooked fish. They're hungry. When the mother stops them, they throw tantrums and cry.”

-Hmm.

“Eventually, parents have to give the fish to their children as soon as it's slightly cooked. The child quickly eats it. After eating, they look at the next cooked fish. Asking for it.”

I deflect the giant's wrist with my sword hilt. An opening appears. I swing my sword into the gap, further reducing the giant's size.

“Think of the child's gaze, the mother's eyes watching the child, the child's touch, the mother's hand stopping the child. Draw all the paths in the smoky hole at once.”

-.....

“You can do it.”

-Ugor.

“Capture it.”

The giant swings his fist.

“Imitate it.”

I dodge and counter. The direction of the punch changes.

“Cry.”

I twist the giant's posture.

“Your tribe knows how to sing sorrow with fire. Flames are just fire, but you read emotions from the angle of the flames, the speed of the rise, the amplitude of the descent. Aura is no different.”

-.....

“A single character encompasses the sky. A rhythm sings of sorrow. Why can't aura capture the sky? Why can't aura draw sorrow. Imprint the impression,”

The giant's posture crumbles.

I strike his shin, balancing it.

I raise it.

The giant's punching shadow turns into a forward attack.

“Shout.”

At that moment, flames erupt from the giant's fist.

The flames split into five tongues.

Each splits again, turning into twenty-five touches, flickering.

-.....

Uburka stares blankly at his fist.

Some flames were tender, others were intense.

None resembled Uburka's gestures.

"Hmm."

Still at a beginner's level.

But undoubtedly, it was a strike resembling the Demonic Heavenly God Art.

“Not bad. Truly exceptional talent.”

I nod approvingly.

“That’s how you do it, kid.”

Uburka slowly speaks.

-My father... is too strong.

Chapter 176: My Son is Too Strong (3)

---

A great warrior keeps winning.

An even greater warrior, when defeated, accepts defeat gracefully.

-I lost.

The Muscle Pig was quite the great warrior.

-I am confident I won't be outdone in the total amount of Aura, but the intricacy of handling Aura is as different as heaven and earth. Ugor. It seems I've been too simplistic in my use of Aura until now.

"Don't blame yourself."

I stroked Uburka's head.

"I didn't figure it out on my own either. I was taught martial arts by my masters. No matter how exceptional an individual's talent is, it's hard to surpass the history of a clan. Behind me stands a thousand years of history of the Demonic Cult's world."

-Kekerkker.

"Mm."

-Dad.

"I don't even wish to be called father, so wouldn't you at least call me something else? Being called dad by someone with such a huge body like you shakes my identity."

-Understood, daddy.

"Ah... Adding just one character changes the feel so much. Well, if that's what you want to call me, go ahead...."

-Daddy, I have a question. Why have you been climbing on my head since earlier?

"Because you're so huge, Uburka. When people see a giant like you, they want to climb on you. Humans have this innate urge to climb, you see. It's very hard for me to resist this urge."

-Indeed. Such an urge exists.

Uburka nodded his head. Shake, shake. As I was on this child's head, I naturally experienced a zero-gravity Viking ride.

This is kind of fun.

"Now that you've lost to me, just quietly listen to my advice. Of course, whether to follow it after listening is up to you. If you have a better idea, say it."

-Ugor.

"Forcing a peace negotiation won't end the chaos in the world."

I scratched Uburka's head.

"The parties involved need to be presented with a convincing negotiation plan. Not just the Mountain Calamity Tribe, but the other five races need to gain some benefits too."

-What benefits can we offer them?

"It's simple. Put your own standpoint aside for now. Think from the perspective of each race. Then the answer will come."

I said.

"The Mountain Calamity Tribe will welcome the peace negotiations. It means they can escape the brink of destruction. However, the solution of [destroying Limepolis to eliminate the root of the conflict] will be hard to accept. Why do you think that is?"

-Because it's a holy site?

"Tsk, tsk. If Limepolis is destroyed, they won't have any city to live in."

I flicked Uburka's forehead.

"It's good to overcome the crisis of destruction, but it's unsettling not to have a guaranteed future. In other words, if we can somehow alleviate this anxiety, the Mountain Calamity Tribe will likely be okay with the peace negotiations."

-A new city. A new place to live.

"Exactly. It'll be painful to destroy the holy site, but well. As you said, [making it so no one can have it] will be a total annihilation. There's some emotional acceptance in that."

-I understand.

Uburka nodded his Viking head.

-We'll promise to protect the Mountain Calamity Tribe if they settle in a new residence we provide. If we set up their residence near the five races, they'll feel anxious, so we should guide them to a place as far away as possible.

"That's right. That's the idea. The Mountain Calamity Tribe has good technology, right? Make receiving some of their technologies a condition. Then the discontent among your Earth Spirit Tribe warriors will decrease a bit."

-Is that so?

"Specifically, it'll decrease to the extent of dam' hardships."

-Just removing one character changes the feel quite a bit....

The complete elimination of discontent won't be possible.

But within the Earth Spirit Tribe, the law of the survival of the fittest is strong. They will follow the will of Uburka, the leader of the council and the top ranker. With a magical phrase like 'If you have complaints, come at me', everything can be settled.

"Uburka, it's good to have the ambition to prevent the extinction of a race. But if you want to live ignorantly, you can't be ignorant. It's a good thing that's barely achievable even if you rack your brains out."

-Hmm. Daddy. What do the other races need?

"I just said it."

I smiled slyly.

"Think from their perspective, won't you?"

---

-We'll help you too when it looks like you're going to be destroyed!

On a night with a full moon.

Eventually, the alliance and the Mountain Calamity Tribe came to the meeting. Everyone's expression wasn't too great. It was more like they were 'dragged out' rather than just 'coming out'. Unfortunately, there weren't many armies that could withstand the Muscle Pig's red laser beam.

Under the tent where representatives of each race gathered, Chairman Uburka boldly declared.

-Look. Even the empire of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, which boasted the greatest glory since the primeval forest burned, has fallen. Eternal prosperity does not exist. The alliance is currently in a good position, but someday, one of you will decline. It's an inevitable law of the world.

-.....

-The defeated race will become slaves to the victorious race. The enslaved race will repeat the humiliation from six hundred years ago, and the ruling race will repeat the mistakes that the Mountain Calamity Tribe made over the last six hundred years. It's sad! Either way, it'll be damn, and eventually, the world will be filled with damn!

Uburka really looked sad. In other words, he opened his mouth wide, bared his fangs, scrunched his eyebrows tightly, and twitched his nose.

There weren't many attitudes people could take when the strongest hobgoblin made such a face.

-Hmm. Umm....

The vampire spoke cautiously.

-So, you mean you'll help us in the future, just like you're helping the Mountain Calamity Tribe now?

-Yes. When you're in danger of destruction. I, Uburka, promise in the name of the chairman of the Fire River Council. If you have any questions, feel free to ask.

-Excuse me, but is there any guarantee that this promise will be passed down through generations?

-There isn't.

-Then, sorry, but this discussion is....

Uburka grabbed his axe handle. Startled. The representatives shrank back like frightened deer.

-There isn't, so let's create it now.

-What?

-Wait here.

Chairman Uburka slowly approached the Earth Spirit Tribe warriors. The warriors had gathered around the tent where the meeting was held.

-Hear me, members of the Fire River Council! From now on, I will negotiate peace in the name of the council. If any of the races gathered here face the threat of extinction, we will help them.

The warriors looked at each other blankly.

Among them, one who seemed to have some seniority spoke up.

-Do as you wish, Chairman.

-This promise will remain valid even after I die.

-Uh? How can that be?

-Because from now on, you will swear [My descendants will never break the promise I made]. If your descendants break a promise with me, they'll be considered disgraceful and full of sins.

-What if we don't want to swear?

-Then beat me.

-Damn.

The experienced warrior cursed and raised his spear.

-I oppose this agenda! My name is Murk. I'm a descendant of the great warrior Gorgir who ran with Kekerkker, ranked 49th in the Fire River Council, and the elder brother of Murmu who honorably died in a duel in this war!

Chairman Uburka casually slung his axe over his shoulder.

-Nice muscles. I'll beat you up just enough not to kill you.

The experienced warrior got nicely beaten up.

-Guuwek!

Uburka's punch landed squarely in the warrior's abdomen, and the warrior exhibited the contents of his meal for the world to see.

The exhibit was titled [Two Fish & A Bit of Centipede Chicken]. A piece notable for its thin gastric juices and thick chunks.

The fellow Earth Spirit Tribe members trembled with emotion as they witnessed this great work of art.

-Still brutally strong...

-What on earth does the chairman eat to be so monstrous!

-A double-digit ranker blown away in one hit. Unbelievable.

-He seems even stronger than before the war...?

-I think this agenda is excellent, Chairman! The Chairman is our tribe's blessing and glory! Long live the Chairman!

-Who was that just now?

-A filthy sycophant.

-Get rid of the sycophant!

Several more warriors stepped forward for the agenda duel. There were those ranked within the top 100 and even the 6th ranker. But none could draw out an axe swing from Uburka. All were knocked out with a single punch.

When the number of nicely beaten-up warriors reached 33, the Earth Spirit Tribe had to unanimously sing in one voice, one syllable.

-Damn...

-Damn...

Uburka put down his axe and crossed his arms.

-Weak. Why so weak? It's almost pitiful to hit you. Pitiful beings, agree to this agenda before I feel even more sorry for you.

A great warrior keeps winning. An even greater warrior, when defeated, accepts defeat gracefully. In that sense, the Earth Spirit Tribe members were great warriors.

-We agree.

-We agree, Ugor.

-If anyone opposes, shout out now.

Silence.

Only the quiet crackling of campfires here and there. All members of the Huahaping Council, all warriors who went to war, agreed.

Uburka surveyed the surroundings and nodded his head.

-Good. I, as the chairman of the Fire River Council, declare the agenda [If one of the six races faces extinction, we will help them] unanimously passed. Those who shouted in favor, those who remained silent in opposition, and their descendants, cannot defy this agenda. Everyone, swear upon the sacred earth.

Uburka hit the ground three times with his axe handle.

Thud! Thud! Thud!

The Earth Spirit Tribe warriors also silently raised their weapons and struck the ground three times.

-Hmm.

Uburka returned to the meeting tent and sat down.

The representatives of the six races stared blankly at Uburka.

Uburka, arms crossed, faced the representatives.

-I have ensured our promise will be passed down through generations.

-.....

-Any more questions?

-.....

The vampire respectfully bowed his head.

-It's sufficient. I have no more questions.

One bowed, and another raised his head high. It was the representative of the Ghost Tribe. The one-horned dokkaebi, displeased about something, wore a fierce expression.

-Hey, moldy. Are you really that strong?

-Stronger than your father.

-This son of a...

-You're mistaken. We're not sons of dogs. Kekerkker descended in a lion's body. Therefore, we are lion's children, and dogs' children would be more fitting for the Mountain Calamity Tribe over there. Disappointing you don't know such basic racial knowledge. Correct yourself to lion's children.

-What? What? Da-, anyway!

The Ghost Tribe representative drew his sword.

-We came here, pouring the grain our people worked hard for. And now, you tell us to retreat with [We'll help you once in a crisis]? No! What about the grains and seeds already lost to the void!

-What do you want to do?

-Compensate!

-We're not exactly a prosperous race ourselves. We take pride in living day by day. Even if we wanted to compensate, we couldn't.

-Then I can't negotiate!

-Ugor, that's not it.

Chairman Uburka stroked his chin.

-What you're really worried about is something else.

-What?

-The problem is returning with no achievements despite massive expenditures. The lords and landlords who were extorted by you will complain, and beyond complaining, they might even revolt. As a result, you'll lose power. If you're unlucky, you'll lose your head. Isn't that what you're worried about?

Uburka artfully recited the words I had taught him in a dream. Caught off guard by the unexpected statement, the Ghost Tribe representative was flustered. -But... that's...

-Just once. If a rebellion occurs in your country, I will personally go and help.

-.....

-This won't be an official agenda. It's a personal commitment. I alone, with one axe and twelve spears, can easily handle a bunch of rebels. How about it? Will you join in destroying the holy site?

Uburka bared his fangs.

-If you still need an excuse, come at me. Saying you were defeated in a duel will serve as an excuse to your Ghost Tribe as well.

-You, you...

The Ghost Tribe representative, red-faced, raised his sword.

-Alright! Let's duel! If you think I'll go easy, you're gravely mistaken!

-If you think I won't go easy on you, that's a real mistake. I'll go somewhat easy.

The Ghost Tribe representative was suitably beaten up. His single horn bent at a suitable angle, his nose broke revealing a suitable curve, and a few teeth fell out, making his appearance suitable. Becoming the embodiment of suitability, the representative of the Ghost Tribe groaned, upside down in a hole (also at a suitable angle).

-Damn... bastard....

Uburka smiled contentedly.

-Now you look like a warrior!

When a person is upside down in a hole, there's not much to say.

That night, representatives of the seven races signed the peace agreement.

Chapter 177: The Giant's Legacy (1)

---

Let's talk about a city.

Limepolis.

This city thrived on mining and trade.

Renowned as the empire's best rock salt mine, Limepolis boasted its prominence. It was a place where people asking, 'Can you really dig up food or money from the ground?' could be answered with 'Yes, both, actually.'

-Great Caves.

-The Skull of the Earth Mother Goddess.

-We collect the teeth of the goddess.

That was the kind of place it was.

A city prospering from mining digs up glory along with the land. As the land gets excavated more, the days of glory deepen. Then at some point, when you swing the pickaxe, clank! A sound rings out.

You've dug to the very bottom.

[The mining efficiency of Limepolis is deteriorating!]

There was still rock salt left. But it required digging deeper to retrieve it. The work time increased, and the difficulty rose.

[The cost of Limepolis' salt industry is increasing!]

Slaves began to escape. The Mountain Calamity Tribe's skin is weak against salt. They could only swing pickaxes at the mine entrance or manage workers but couldn't crawl into the deep shafts. This was why slaves from the six races were needed. As slaves disappeared, the economy of the salt city rapidly shrunk.

[The control of the Mountain Calamity Tribe weakens!]

The Gill Fishes Race, resembling mermaids, found seawater too harsh for their skin, so they only frolicked in the river called Daeha.

But then, a mutant was born among them. This mutant could endure the seawater, thinking, 'Oh, it's a bit salty.' Those who mixed blood with the mutant could also withstand the sea.

[The Gill Fishes Race evolves!]

The sea was a Demonic Realm difficult for the Mountain Calamity Tribe to traverse, and the ability to live there meant the Gill Fishes Race could avoid the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

Then one day, another mutant of the Gill Fishes Race accidentally tasted the mud in a tidal flat. 'Oh, this is very salty.' It made sense since the tidal flats were washed by seawater. 'Can it get saltier?'

Still harboring memories of their slave days in Limepolis, they had the notion that 'to get salt, you must dig a pit.' The Gill Fishes Race dug a hole in the middle of the tidal flat, stuck in a wooden stick, wrapped it with reeds, and then plastered it with mud. A primitive jar.

A week later, they checked the jar. Seawater had collected in it. They scooped it out and boiled it in a kiln. It tasted very salty. It was self-produced salt. When old notions met new environments, new technology was born.

[A new technology is born!]

[The Mountain Calamity Tribe's competition grows stronger!]

The Gill Fishes Race were also natural sailors. The amphibious mermaids didn't die even in storms. The once-feared sea, the Ocean God, now became their guardian deity. Ships loaded with salt traveled the sea and waterways like their own living room. The production and distribution of the salt industry shifted to the Capable Scribes Race.

[Ideological conflicts arise!]

The Mountain Calamity Tribe couldn't accept this. According to their myth, salt is the 'tooth' of the goddess. The fact that salt from seawater didn't cause stomach upset was hard for them to accept.

When it's hard to acknowledge the opponent, people can take several attitudes.

-Witchcraft.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe chose the easiest attitude.

-The devil is behind it.

-Self-produced salt is cursed food, tainted by the devil's breath.

-The Gill Fishes Race are all devil-worshipping demons!

-Their ability to endure seawater is also proof of devil worship!

Perhaps the Mountain Calamity Tribe could have taken a more arduous path. They could have altered their myth. [Actually, the goddess split in half when she died; half her body was buried on land, and the other half sank into the deep sea].

They could have tried that.

As the empire's territory expands, traditional myths become precarious. Salt, thought to only come from land, also comes from water. The world expands. As the world widens, myths lose their uniqueness, and the characters in the myths become more generic.

Someday, the empire might abandon the 'distinctive regional myths' and adopt a 'universal, odorless supreme deity' as the new faith. [Limepolis] might no longer be just a city's name but could have become the name of the empire itself, like Rome.

-Those who consume salt made by demons.

-Regardless of the reason, they will be punished for blasphemy!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe couldn't do so.

-Salt dissolves in water. Water dissolves salt. How could salt come from water? It's a devil's trick, a wicked scheme to delude people into false beliefs.

They justified their inability to change.

-From now on, all citizens must only eat rock salt produced by the empire. Anyone who mines salt from unofficial mines, turns water into salt, or brings such water salt into the empire will be punished!

-Trade in water salt is forbidden. Block all rivers and waterways. Confiscate and sink Gill Fishes Race ships and vessels carrying water salt!

Old priests supporting the myths advocated this. Slaves and warriors who fought wars echoed it. Citizens who still looked down on the six races cheered. Their advocacy, echoing, and cheering became the nobles' capital for power.

No one could stop priests, warriors, citizens, and nobles at once.

‘Aha.’

‘From now on, I shall serve you as my master.’

The god who could do so had already fallen.

[The Mountain Calamity Tribe destroys the Gill Fishes Race's

port bases.]

[The Mountain Calamity Tribe loots the Gill Fishes Race's trade ships.]

[The Mountain Calamity Tribe forces rock salt trade on other races.]

[The Gill Fishes Race resists the Mountain Calamity Tribe's actions!]

When an old power declines and a new power rises.

When the industrial leadership changes hands.

When one side cannot accept new ideologies and misses the golden opportunity for reform, what must happen, happens.

[A power struggle war breaks out!]

This is the story of the past 600 years.

-Uburka.

There were six wars.

The empire fell.

-Now, according to the peace agreement of the seven races, we will destroy the holy land.

Priests lost their religion. Warriors lost their victories. Citizens lost their peace. Nobles lost their power.

What remained were the glory of 600 years ago and the mined-out rock salt mines. But a sentence in a history book couldn't block the swords of the equator, and the empty caves couldn't feed the people.

By the time everyone realized this, it was too late.

Far too late.

-You have three choices.

Chairman Uburka said.

-First. I alone destroy everything! I can do it. And I want to. The title [The One Who Destroyed a City Alone] is enticing. But I'm not only powerful but also generous. I'll put aside my greed for now.

Uburka posed like a bodybuilder.

His left pectoral muscle twitched.

-Second. Mountain Calamity Tribe, you destroy the holy land yourselves! You can do it. But you probably don't want to. The title [The Ones Who Destroyed Their Own Holy Land] will be shameful. I understand your shame and will let this pass too!

Chairman Uburka's right pectoral muscle quivered.

-Third. All seven races, take up hammers.

Uburka grinned.

-Destroy the city until your anger subsides. Smashing something eases the mind. Soldiers who came all the way here and citizens who suffered during the siege, just smash everything! You can do it. And you will want to.

The last remaining king of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, the Mountain King, asked in a trembling voice.

-Mighty warrior. What if we let you into the city and a fight breaks out?

-Don't worry! Our Earth Spirit Tribe will keep watch. The hammers you hold will only be used to break buildings, not people's heads.

-There are things that must be preserved, not destroyed. We engrave our history on stone pillars.

-Dismantle them and move them. What's so hard about that?

-They're very heavy....

-Only take what can be moved. History too heavy to bear is not pride but stubbornness. Letting go will lighten the burden, and being light will bring freedom, and with freedom comes strength.

-Limepolis is our last city. Where do you plan to lead us?

-To a place lighter, freer, and stronger than here.

-...Among our citizens, there are those who do not trust you.

-That's good!

Uburka clapped his hands together, exerting strength.

His biceps bulged.

-Encourage them to attack all at once!

944 citizens of the Mountain Calamity Tribe stepped forward. Unable to rush in all at once, the 16 bravest snails led the charge. Despite the fall, they were soldiers seasoned in the ways of war.

-I will bestow upon you the honor of witnessing my true form!

The Giant of Aura descended.

-What?

-What?

-Crazy.

As the soldiers uttered short exclams, Uburka's punch sent the Mountain Calamity Tribe flying. Not just the 16 in the front but also the 28 waiting behind were cleanly home-run.

-Uhahahahaha!

The giant burst into roaring laughter.

-Come at me if you dare! Little ones!

-.....

-My chest is broad! Whether it's 900 or 9000, I'll accept them all! Unfortunately, no milk will come out, but I have enough muscles to turn you brats into adults! I'll be your daddy!

Not many among the Earth Spirit Tribe wanted to be under such a 'father'.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe chose to release their stress by smashing their ancestors' buildings rather than getting beaten up by the Muscle Pig. A wise choice.

-Shit.

-Damn!

For a day and a night, Limepolis was demolished.

As the seven races cursed in unison, the city turned to dust.

The finishing touches were handled by Uburka.

-Hup!

Transformed into a giant, Uburka pounded Limepolis. Thud! Thud! Thud! It went on for more than half a day. The cave housing the city was shattered, and the mountain encompassing the cave collapsed. Rocks poured down as the cave ceiling broke.

-Insane...

There it was, a massive hobgoblin burying a city all by himself.

-Hmph.

Chairman Uburka curled his lips into a satisfied smile, similar to a child who had just trampled a sandcastle.

-At least I've earned the title [The One Who Destroyed a City].

-.....

-I hereby declare the peace agreement fulfilled. Earth Spirit Tribe, pack up. Mountain Calamity Tribe, drag along those worthless stone pillars of yours.

Unprecedented.

A warrior like no other in the history of the Earth Spirit Tribe spoke.

-We return to Guru.

[The power struggle war comes to an end.]

[The multi-race alliance achieves an incomplete victory.]

[The Mountain Calamity Tribe escapes the brink of extinction.]

This is the end of this stage.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe gains the authority of a Hegemon!]

[The prestige of the Earth Spirit Tribe rises.]

[The power of the Earth Spirit Tribe increases.]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe has a greatly increased chance of unlocking new traits.]

[You have gained 9000 race points!]

[Your current race points are 9800.]

Fellow Hunters murmured.

"Man, that's a real monster..."

"Surely not all Earth Spirit Tribe members will keep being born with such size...? That would be unfair to our kids."

"Probably not."

The Paladin shook his head.

"That's a once-in-a-lifetime warrior, a rare gem across ages. It's just a coincidence that such a talent was born in the Earth Spirit Tribe. In another era, heroes from other races will emerge. We just need to persevere until our golden age."

The Tower's voice rang out.

[You can now declare stage clear.]

[Would you like to declare stage clear now?]

"Huh?"

The Black Dragon Witch flipped her hair.

"So, a race didn't necessarily have to fall. Just overcoming the brink of extinction was enough?"

"Who knows? Perhaps some race was on the verge of falling without us knowing."

We watched as the military forces of each race dispersed into the distance.

Eight hundred years since the primeval forest burned.

Although we still reigned supreme like constellations, those children had slowly begun to tread their own paths, no longer just stars in the night sky.

"Hmm."

I began to speak.

"Good work, everyone."

"Was there any hard work? Your race's child solved everything alone. This is the first time a stage was this easy."

The Black Dragon Witch smiled pleasantly.

"I'll declare clear after watching the kids live for about ten days. What about you, King of Death?"

"Then I'll also stay for another ten days. I have something to teach Uburka."

"What else are you planning to teach that monster...?"

"Don't worry. It's something good. Really good."

We agreed to declare stage clear after ten days and parted ways.

Yes.

I still have something to teach Uburka, something to pass on to the Earth Spirit Tribe.

[Purchasing 'Appearance in Dreams'.]

[100 race points are consumed!]

[Your current race points are 9700.]

Uburka, floating above a mud pond, looked at me.

-Ugor. You're back, daddy.

"Yes. Dad's here."

-I guided the Mountain Calamity Tribe as dad advised. Now, praise me.

"Ah, my child. Did you save a race from extinction? Good job, really good job. My child is great! Proud of raising our child! Earth Spirit Tribe is the coolest in the world, and my child is the coolest in the Earth Spirit Tribe! You're even better than me!"

-Ugor, ugor.

Uburka grinned foolishly.

After showering him with praises for about ten minutes, I broached the topic.

"Uburka, there's something I want you to learn."

-Ugor?

"Exactly, I want you to learn it and then spread it widely among your people. So even if you die, even 100 years after your death, and another 100 years pass, this teaching will not be forgotten."

-What teaching?

I smiled.

And raised a red Aura in my hand.

"I will teach you the fire of the world."

The new Demonic Heavenly God Art.

I will pass on my own special technique to the Earth Spirit Tribe.

Chapter 178: The Giant's Legacy (2)

---

"Uburka, observing how you manipulate Aura, I realized a particular intricacy."

-Are you talking about the Damn Aura Method?

"The linguistic destruction of your people is so tragic that it pains me... But yes, exactly. I saw profound potential in the Damn Aura Method."

I said this while sitting atop Uburka's head.

"It's all about Formation Methods."

-Formation Methods?

Uburka tilted his head in confusion.

-What is that, dad?

Formation Methods.

Before meeting my master, I had barely read a few lines of martial arts novels, but later, I intermittently learned the common knowledge of the Martial Realm from Guardian Spirit.

Formation Methods are, as the name suggests, the methods of forming formations.

"Martial arts are fundamentally about managing oneself. Formation Methods, on the other hand, are about executing them with others."

-Ugor. Is it like combat?

"Similar. But it's different from a mere brawl."

I explained.

"Imagine people from different clans with different intricacies fighting on the same side. That could be a joint attack or a cooperative attack, but it's not a Formation Method. Only when you share the same doctrine and the same way of manipulating Aura does it become a Formation Method."

-Are you planning to teach me Formation Methods?

"Yes, exactly. First, I'll teach you Demonic Heavenly God Art, and then together, we will develop Formation Methods. I haven't experienced Formation Methods myself, so I'm worried about how it will turn out, but what's the harm in trying!"

-I don't quite understand. Why do we need to learn this?

"Hey, hey. My child, if you start questioning the purpose and value of everything from the beginning, nothing will ever get started!"

I playfully tapped Uburka's forehead.

"Just try it out casually! If it doesn't work, we can give up. If it feels right, we'll delve deeper. Okay?"

-Is it really just a casual thing?

"Yes. Just casual."

I smiled broadly.

"But, my child. There's something I want to ask you."

-What is it?

"Have you ever gone hungry for more than a week?"

Uburka blinked.

-Hungry?

That's when I started teaching him the 'casual' Demonic Heavenly God Art.

"Demonic Heavenly God Art consists of nine different techniques. The first one is the Sword of Starving Death. It's a sword technique inspired by the desperation and struggle of hunger. The reason you're starving right now has to do with this. Ah, dreams are wonderful! Time stretches as you wish, and no matter how long you starve, you don't die!"

-Kill me!

Uburka, who felt like he had been starving for a week in the dream, cried out. Clang. He was chained by the hands and feet. I sat in front of him, eating delicious fruits and fish.

It was the result of fairly defeating Uburka in a duel.

-Just kill me!

"Are you suffering?"

-I'm suffering!

"Does it hurt?"

-It hurts! Every muscle in my body is screaming!

"That's exactly it! My child. You wield the sword with that pain and suffering. I also starved for a week once. But it's not enough just to starve thoughtlessly. Imagine a farmer somewhere in the world starving to death, or their child. You have to starve while thinking of them."

-Daddy is insane!

I continued teaching.

"Dreams are really great. If you think of a snowy field, a snowy field appears, and if you think of a plague, a plague breaks out. It's the perfect environment for learning Demonic Heavenly God Art. Back in my time, we didn't have such things, ah."

-Cold... Daddy, it's so cold...

"That's the Sword of Frostbitten Death! Imagine the heart of a peasant without even a blanket, scraping leaves together to cover themselves."

-I might freeze to death before I can even imagine...

"Don't worry, you won't die. You're the strongest warrior in the history of the Earth Spirit Tribe, aren't you? This is nothing for you, right?"

-For the first time in a long while, I find myself forced to use this word. Damn...

I continued teaching.

"Is it hard to learn? Does burning hurt too much? Okay, I'll burn with you. If we hurt together, it's a bit better. Still not okay? Still hurts? Of course, it's supposed to hurt. But, my child. I can't hear your voice. If your vocal cords are burned, use Aura to speak. Look at me. I'm talking freely without moving my lips. Now, you try."

-This... is hell...

"Ai, as expected of my little one. Quick to grasp! Demonic Heavenly God Art is essentially unfolding the hells of the human world in sequence."

-This... such a dreadful martial art... How did you ever learn it, daddy?

"Indeed."

I smiled wryly.

"I wonder how I came to learn it."

I continued teaching.

[Purchasing 'Appearance in Dreams'.]

[100 race points are consumed!]

[Your current race points are 8800.]

For ten days.

While other fellow Hunters were busy caring for their respective races, I devoted my time solely to Uburka. In terms of perception, it felt much longer than ten days spent together in dreams.

"Hmm."

I scratched my cheek.

"Well, not bad. Not too bad. A bit disappointing, but I'll be satisfied with this."

-Is that all?

Uburka ground his teeth.

-I've experienced a living hell for ten days!

"No. Uh. That's the thing... I realized something while teaching you. It turns out I was exceptionally talented in Demonic Heavenly God Art. Even with overflowing talent, it's hard to grasp."

-Of course! Who would be crazy enough to vividly comprehend and manifest Swords of Starving Death, Parched Death, Submerged Death, Frostbitten Death, Noxious Death, Plague Death, Contusing Death, and Scorching Death! People can only die once, and once they're dead, that's it! Even I wouldn't have dared to learn it if it weren't in a dream!

"Indeed..."

Our Demonic Cult is indeed a tough place.

-It's odd in the first place for daddy to freely execute such a terrifying martial art! How can you do that? Maintaining sanity while doing so is a miracle in itself!

I smiled.

"Thanks for the compliment. Now, before I bid farewell to this era, let's sketch out an initial concept for Formation Methods."

-.....

"Although you haven't deeply grasped Demonic Heavenly

God Art, you've at least reached the stage of Novice Demon. Uburka. Now you and I breathe in the same way in this world. Since we can share dreams, it should be possible to unfold them as well."

Ahem.

I jumped off Uburka's head.

"Sit down."

-Ugor.

"Formation Methods, unlike martial arts, don't have a well-organized intricacy. They're chaotic. First, there are clans that create Formation Methods at the level of cooperative attacks."

I took several pebbles and lightly summoned Aura. The pebbles began to roll in my hand like marbles.

"Imagine each pebble as a martial artist."

-Understood.

"Five out of six move in a certain rhythm. It's like a kind of music. The opponent becomes accustomed to the rhythm of these five. At that moment, the remaining one charges with a completely different rhythm."

Whoosh!

One of the pebbles suddenly shot out. Uburka, caught off guard, was hit in the chest muscle by the pebble.

-.....

With zero damage but shocked by his inability to react, Uburka looked at me blankly.

"This is a cooperative level of Formation Methods. Humans have intellect, which is the power to grasp rules. Rhythm is also a rule. The core of such Formation Methods is to inversely penetrate human cognitive abilities."

-...Isn't that amazing?

"Indeed. It's the most basic level of Formation Methods."

I grinned.

I felt rewarded for learning various things from Guardian Spirit whenever I had time after inheriting the Demonic Sect's teachings.

"The next level is Illusionary Techniques."

I raised Aura in my palm.

"What does it look like?"

-Like a flame.

"Right. It's not a flame, but it looks like one because I'm imitating a flame with Aura. Uburka, the fact that you seem giant without actually growing is also a kind of Illusionary Technique."

I focused Aura on the six pebbles.

The pebbles ignited.

"Imagine if six people were to burn Aura together. Picture being surrounded by them. There. It would feel like you've fallen into a pit of fire, right?"

-Ugor.

"This is the kind of Formation Methods we'll develop together."

Thump.

I grabbed the marbles from mid-air.

"There are only two of us now who have learned Demonic Heavenly God Art. But what if there are three? Or six? Twelve? Twenty-four?"

-.....

"What if a hundred, three hundred, six hundred people learn

Demonic Heavenly God Art and can all unleash the same technique simultaneously?"

Uburka's eyes slowly widened.

I smirked mischievously.

"Alone, I can only create a small inferno within a radius of five steps. But together, we can extend it to ten or fifteen steps. And if hundreds join...."

-The whole battlefield could be engulfed in flames.

Uburka opened his mouth.

Caught in the imagery I painted.

-Hundreds of warriors burning their souls with the same vision, the same intricacy. The battlefield will turn into hell in an instant.

Exactly.

Not an individual skill, but a collective technique.

My newly conceived Demonic Heavenly God Art will become a Formation Method.

-You called it an Illusionary Technique, but I think differently. When illusion engulfs reality, it becomes the truth.

"How about it? Worth trying?"

-Yes, I'd like to try.

"Okay. Let's proceed step by step."

I smiled.

"For this Formation Method to succeed, we all need to harbor the same image. To sing in chorus, we must memorize the same lyrics. Uburka. Not only will you widely spread Demonic Heavenly God Art among your people, but you'll also disseminate the sceneries we'll share."

-What sceneries?

"I'll show you now."

I drew a mansion on the ground.

"It was when I met children's dolls in a remote mansion---."

And I told the stories.

Of all the things I've experienced.

Of the sceneries I've seen.

The 1st scenery.

The Dolls in a fiery hell mansion.

The 2nd scenery.

The Shadow Demon King in a remote village.

The 3rd scenery.

Peonies blooming in a ruined winter.

The 4th scenery.

The moon robbed of its heart by a mirror.

The 5th scenery.

Tears shed on a rooftop.

Sometimes drawing on the ground, sometimes creating shapes with Aura, I recounted the stories and sceneries I've encountered.

These were just stories for now, not yet taking shape or form to be called Formation Methods.

But someday, they would become the seeds of Formation Methods.

"These are the images I have. Five. There may be more in the future, probably will be, but for now, there are five."

-Is that so.

Uburka murmured.

-Daddy... You've lived diligently. I pride myself on living more fiercely than anyone, but daddy is even busier than me. The density of time you've experienced....

"I've wandered a lot here and there."

-Can I also travel to such places like dad?

"Well."

I stood up.

"Maybe. You've undergone a transformation on your own. You might be able to return to youth. I'm leaving this era, but we might meet again in the next era, and the one after that, and so on..."

-I'll have to live a long time.

Uburka smiled.

-I'll widely share daddy's stories among our race. I'll turn them into plays and stage them. Tell them to growing children. I'll create five stories into five Fire Paintings, and I'll personally demonstrate them every darkest full moon. I promise. Just as daddy cares for our race, we will not forget daddy.

I extended my hand.

Uburka bent down and reached out his large hand.

My small hand was enveloped in the palm of the hopgoblin, and we shook hands.

"Uburka."

-Hmm.

"You're a fine child. Continue to spread your awesomeness across the world."

Uburka grinned, showing his fangs.

-Of course, daddy.

And then.

'I declare, stage clear.'

[Stage Clear!]

[You have cleared the 33rd floor.]

[Reward tallying will be conducted after entering the 34th floor.]

[Sequential layer progression - You will be forcibly transferred to the 34th floor!]

White light enveloped me.

Chapter 179: The Giant's Legacy (3)

---

The place the light led to was as serene as the light itself.

A place where it seemed as if the horizon itself was cloaked in pure white bedding.

There, someone else had already arrived.

“Oh?”

“Hmm.”

Our eyes met.

The other person, with a feline-like smile, chuckled softly.

"Welcome, King of Death. Right on the dot, ten days as promised. Nothing is more reliable than a young man who keeps his word."

The Countess, holder of the Tower's gold coin and leader of the Merchants Union, was already there.

Dressed in traditional Indian attire, the Countess, despite her immense wealth, wore a plain single-colored sari. However, the fan she held was ornately decorated, perhaps as a counterbalance to her simple attire.

"Thank you. Oh, how are the Fairy Tribe children doing?"

"My, don't even get me started. They've become utterly shameless since I last saw them!"

The Countess flicked her fan. Gold leaf patterns and arabesques glittered as they moved.

"I diligently taught them about money management, given their lack of financial sense. Can't live on leaves alone, right? But then, those kids got so addicted to handling money that now they assess everything based on profitability. It's the end times!"

"....."

The fate of the Elves is indeed peculiar.

Before my regression, they were a bloodthirsty warrior race under the rule of the Flame Emperor. Now, under the Countess's guidance, they've evolved into cunning money-grubbers.

Like parent, like child.

"They're faithfully following the Countess's teachings, aren't they?"

"Oh my. You see me as such. I merely view money as water. It should fall as rain, flow as a river, and be accepted as the sea."

"In other words, you spend money like water."

"Oh my, correct. Can't even show off in front of the King of Death."

The Countess chuckled behind her fan.

"By the way, when are the others coming? Everyone's getting a bit lax with their timeliness these days."

Huh.

"Weren't you always on good terms?"

"We were just acquaintances. Used to call each other best friends and sisters, but things got colder after the Great Purge. They warmed up again after you arrived."

"Heh."

"Of course, some have always been close."

Sisters, huh?

'It's been quite a journey.'

I'm pretty confident about my relationship with my fellow Hunters, but I'm still in the dark about their pasts. The Heretic Inquisitor, Bambolina's childhood, I only recently became privy to.

"Oh, right."

Speaking of the Heretic Inquisitor reminded me of something.

"Does Paladin have a romantic partner? Do you know who it is?"

"Hmm? Why do you ask?"

"Just curious. The Paladin almost always wears her helmet. I was wondering if she wears it even on dates..."

"Impossible."

The Countess laughed as if amused.

"You might not know, but the Paladin is very particular about her hair care. When she takes off her helmet, it's magnificent."

"Really?"

"Certainly. Like wheat bathed in sunlight, it sways beautifully. The reason she always wears her helmet in the first place is....."

Pop!

Just then, a comical sound interrupted our conversation. The Countess and I turned our heads simultaneously.

"Sorry, sorry! Got a bit held up with Tower-related stuff."

The Constellation [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] appeared, hugging a pillow. She seemed busy for some reason. She wiped the sweat from her forehead and said, "Phew..."

"Let's see. Oh, cleared up to the 33rd floor. Have you two finished your chat?"

"Chat? We were just waiting for the others."

"Eh?"

The Princess looked puzzled.

"Why wait? The others are waiting for you."

"What?"

"Oh... Ah. Sorry. I've been negligent in explaining. It's been so long since I've been in charge of a stage, I keep forgetting things. Really. Ever since I fell from grace to become a Constellation, my intelligence has been nerfed. Almost to the level of my main body in Zuraqua...."

What's she talking about?

Receiving our bewildered glances, the Princess flicked her fingers.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages announces the dropout of the 33rd floor stage.]

I turned to the Countess, who also looked back at me in surprise. No dropouts this stage, right? We all got through nicely, didn't we?

The Princess spoke up.

"If you completely give up on sovereignty or fall to a point where you can no longer aspire for it, you're out. Simple, right? The Mountain Calamity Tribe did that on the 32nd floor. And this 33rd floor...."

The Tower's voice echoed.

[The Countess has been eliminated on the 33rd floor.]

My eyes widened in shock. The Countess's mouth hung open.

The Tower reiterated as if hammering in a final nail.

[Announcing once again.]

[The Countess has been eliminated on the 33rd floor.]

"Wait just a minute! That makes no sense!"

The Countess protested.

She was so flustered that even cat ears popped out of her head.

"Why am I eliminated!?"

"Umm, the Fairy Tribe gave up on sovereignty. Since you were in charge of them, it's an automatic dropout. I know you might resent it, but I have to follow the rules too. Sorry."

"That's absurd! Throughout this stage, the Fairy Tribe was quiet! They didn't actively participate in the war, nor did they deplete their forces significantly. How could they possibly drop out!?"

"Well, about that.... Ugh, it's tedious! Just see for yourself."

Boing.

That ridiculous sound effect accompanied the appearance of a projection in the air. Are these sound effects also chosen by the Constellation? If so, that's utterly absurd.

-Hmm.

In the projection, several members of the Fairy Tribe were gathered. True to their Elf nature, all had elongated ears.

-The Earth Spirit Tribe has become a monster.

-Heard legends, but a real monster? Beyond imagination.

The Elf elders murmured, twitching their long ears.

-Thought the general was lying to avoid responsibility, but it wasn't a lie.

-Do you have spies in the expeditionary force? You traitor.

-Who doesn't plant spies? What if our own generals suddenly turn on us? I know you all have spies too. Drop the pretense.

-That's true.

-Indeed.

-We can't blindly trust our kin. Our trust is too precious, our existence too valuable.

-Cute rascals. In our camp, commanders didn't engage in warfare but reveled in espionage. No wonder the holy expedition failed.

Hmm.

This wasn't the noble dialogue I expected from Elves....

-What to do? The funds invested in organizing the multi-race alliance are a pity.

-We intended to enslave the Mountain Calamity Tribe to break even.

-It's not about breaking even. The Earth Spirit Tribe emerging as a victor itself is problematic. After investing centuries into controlling the Gill Fish Tribe, some random ruffians wreaked havoc. We need to reassess our grand strategy.

Wait.

I looked at the Countess in confusion.

"Merchant Union leader... you didn't...?"

The Countess seemed just as baffled.

"I just taught the kids a bit about money, that's all."

"More like money madness. How did you teach them to grow up as schemers...?"

"I didn't mean to! I told you, the kids grew up weird! No, more importantly, this is a racial secret. Why are you showing it to the King of Death so casually!?"

The Countess lashed out at the Princess.

This was unexpected.

While I was nurturing the Earth Spirit Tribe with a pure heart, the Countess, behind the scenes, was aiming for an economic victory. If I hadn't seen this footage, I wouldn't have known until clearing the 40th floor.

'Wait, didn't I also move according to the Countess's advice?'

At the time the Earth Spirit Tribe clashed with the multi-race alliance, the Countess advised me to [Negotiate in a direction beneficial to all tribes]. Following that advice, I entered Uburka's dream.

In other words.

"You were aiming to suck the honey through trade all by yourself.... And how exactly did you take control of the Gill Fish Tribe? Crafty as a ghost."

"Damn. It wasn't control, but mutual aid. The Gill Fish Tribe lives in water, so building ships for trade isn't hard. On the other hand, the Fairy Tribe lives in forests and are masters at handling wood...."

"Oh my. You mean the Elves made ships for you to trade salt?"

"More like lent them."

The Countess groaned.

"All trading ships driven by the Gill Fish Tribe are owned by the Fairy Tribe. They pay a ship rental fee every time they come and go. Ships rented from the Fairy Tribe can only dock at ports operated by the Fairy Tribe...."

"How could you do that?"

"Docking at Fairy Tribe's ports gets a 30% discount on the ship fee. Plus, free repair services...."

"Wow."

"And the Gill Fish Tribe, though they can swim in waterways, can't supply salt to towns or cities in water. The Fairy Tribe took care of that."

"Riding Elf ships, using Elf ports, you'd naturally use Elf carriages. As the Gill Fish Tribe diligently produces salt and transports it to the port... the Elves play with distribution margins in the middle? The more the Gill Fish Tribe works, the more money the Elves make for free?"

"Exactly."

I was astounded.

What a ruthless business strategy.

"Sang-Ryun leader, really... truly... you're something else."

"To make big money, you need to control the platform!"

The Countess heated up.

"I just taught the kids the obvious truth about life. Moreover, I don't appreciate that look from someone who raised children to be muscle-brained goblins!"

"No. I just wanted them to be strong so they wouldn't get beaten up anywhere. Pure intentions."

"Pure has frozen and twisted into a mummy. So, you also slightly hinted to the kids about the truths of the world so they wouldn't work themselves to the bone!"

"A child needs some hardship to grow properly!"

"Ha. Hardship just makes life harder, what nonsense!"

"Because of parents like the Sang-Ryun leader, today's children have narrow minds!"

"Because of parents like the King of Death, today's kids are mentally ill!"

"Oh, this woman is really stingy."

"And you're the one to talk, with a name like Kim Gong-Ja."

"What's wrong with Kim Gong-Ja?"

"Isn't it full of scholar-like qualities?"

"This is crazy."

As we bickered, the Princess commented.

"You two are kinda funny.... It reminds me of my mother...."

Amidst this debate over parenting philosophy, the hologram projection continued.

-Let's direct the alliance's blade towards the Earth Spirit Tribe next.

-No, the cost-effectiveness is too poor. The Mountain Calamity Tribe had a holy land, but what does the Earth Spirit Tribe have? What's the point of conquering a settlement filled with mud?

-Mud is said to be good for the skin....

-Get prettier, cutie. Not interested.

-Surrender.

The Elf elders blinked.

-Surrender. We can't win, and there's nothing to gain from winning. Pouring money in is pointless, and gaining anything is futile. It's a losing business. It's over. Let's sell it cheaply.

-You're crazy? To give up?

-Let's lay out a new mat.

An Elf elder spoke.

-Let's become a vassal to the Earth Spirit Tribe. In return, ask for protection.

-Vassal?

-Protection?

-All ships and ports we own will fall under the Earth Spirit Tribe. The whole continent is terrified of the Earth Spirit Tribe. Sailing and trading under the Earth Spirit Tribe's flag will be much safer. We'll be the first to offer vassalage and they'll be pleased. The more they like us, the more they'll trust us. We can almost freely use the Earth Spirit Tribe's name and power. Mutual benefit.

The elders pondered.

-Surrendering willingly....

-If we have to surrender, better do it cheaply.

-It hurts our pride.

-What we lose in pride, we'll gain back in money. As long as we make money, right?

-True.

-We'll pay tribute to the Earth Spirit Tribe annually. If we say it's 10% of our profits, they'll be happy.

-10%? Isn't that too high?

-Actually, give only 1% but lie it's 10%. It's okay. No one in our tribe can't handle double bookkeeping.

-Also true.

I've never heard of Elves using double bookkeeping, but it seemed like common sense to them.

The elders simply concluded.

-Yeah. Surrender.

-Just becoming a vassal, no big deal.

-What does the Earth Spirit Tribe like? Mud? Will they like mud mixed with gold?

-Under what pretense should we surrender?

-From what spies say, they're incredibly stupid. Just pathetically beg, 'We are enamored by your magnificent muscles, and wish to cling to your bulging land. We have some money, but where do we have muscles like yours?'

-Really? Are they that stupid?

-It's truly astonishing that such a stupid tribe exists, but the stupider they are, the easier it is for us to suckle. Let's be thankful to the heavens.

-Thank you, mighty cat.

-Thank you.

-Today, under the guardian's protection, we milk the fools.

-Like today, let us make free money tomorrow, and insert our straws into the workers. Port tax, land tax, logistics tax, distribution tax, warehouse tax, suck all the honey under various names. Thank you.

The elders drew something in the air. It seemed to be a Fairy Tribe's sign of the cross. Their simultaneous bowing was quite solemn.

"....."

I was silent.

"....."

The Countess couldn't help but be silent too.

"Yep. So, they surrendered."

The Princess grinned.

"They had no interest in sovereignty, just happy making money. Genuinely. Wanted to parasitize the Earth Spirit Tribe forever and suckle the honey... Hmm. Voluntarily gave up sovereignty, so I processed it as a dropout. Any questions?"

"I have a complaint!"

"Sorry. Not accepting complaints."

[The Countess fails to clear the stage.]

[The Countess is eliminated from the stage!]

"It's unfair!!"

The Countess's figure blurred.

She was probably being transferred to the 1st floor.

"It's nonsense! I just taught them how to suckle life's honey, why does that translate to giving up power! Power! Power is the ultimate destination of wealth, why!"

"The Fairy Tribe has always been less greedy. Once they learned the joy of making money, they no longer needed anything else. Maybe they just wanted to suckle honey like you said."

"King of Death!"

The Countess reached out to me.

"Help me! Protest with me! I can't accept this kind of elimination!"

Hmm.

Ummm.

"Sorry, Countess. But honestly, it seems like you made your own grave. Definitely not because you called me a scholar, just saying...."

"No!"

The Countess screamed and vanished in light.

Her desperate scream echoed for a while.

Whoosh-.

Next moment, the Sword Saint, Black Dragon Witch, Viper, and Paladin were summoned.

The Black Dragon Witch looked around.

"...We waited a bit this time too. King of Death, what happened?"

I shook my head.

"Nothing happened. Let's move on to the next stage."

I won't forget your absurd elimination, Countess.

Make a lot of money.

Chapter 180: Our Children Changed (1)

---

It was impossible to just brush it off by saying, "Nothing happened." Everyone was curious about why the Countess had been eliminated. I roughly shared what I had heard and seen.

"That person is really... beyond pathetic, it's pitiful."

Black Dragon Witch displayed a look of disbelief.

She usually keeps her composure, but once Black Dragon Witch moves her facial muscles, her emotions are blatantly obvious. For instance, just by making a look of disbelief, she can turn the other person into a truly pathetic being. Impressive.

"It was a mistake to choose the Fairy Tribe in the first place. The less greedy you are, the easier it is to be satisfied. By introducing those kids to the taste of money, there's no way they wouldn't get distracted by other things."

"Countess....."

The Paladin looked up into the air, seemingly in pity. It was as if the Countess's apparition was smiling and waving at us. We observed a moment of silence for the Countess's absurd existence.

"By the way, what about the points the Countess had? Are they distributed among us now?"

"Yeah, that's right. But it won't be a honey-sucking situation like with Heretic."

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages yawned.

"The Countess spent her points thriftily every time they accumulated. So...."

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages is settling the points.]

[You have gained 2 points!]

[Your current race points total is 8802.]

"There aren't many points left to distribute among you."

Damn. We all shuddered at the Countess's miserly spirit.

"Ah. There was 1 point left over, not rounding up. I'll give this to Sword Saint. You're the top of our ranking, right? I should take care of you at least. Take it gratefully! It's my mood!"

".....Th-thank you."

"You're welcome!"

Ultimately, what the Countess left us after her elimination were considerations of an absurd existence, the preciousness of a single race point, and the stingy elves gone crazy over money.

Why is it that our companions scatter nuisances across the universe each time they are eliminated? I'm seriously afraid that by the time we clear the 40th floor, our tower's name might change from City of Ascension to City of Idiots....

"Okay, now I'll send you to the 34th floor. Anyone want to buy items before entering? Choose quickly.

"Hmm."

I glanced at the civilization store. There was an item I had my eye on.

+

[Race Evolution]

Rank: Undecided

Effect: Your race can evolve twice. The cost of the second evolution is much more than the first!

Cost: 30,000 race points

Unlock Condition: Your race must acquire at least six traits.

+

I clicked my tongue. It was too expensive.

'It'll be difficult to go for the final evolution for now.'

I want to see our children grow rapidly and conquer the world, but unfortunately, it seems my wish will have to be delayed.

-Crazy bastard, if they grow more from there, what will you do!

'Do you know what happens if Hobgoblins evolve once more?'

-Eh? Let's see. Dwarves? Or maybe Trolls?

'This gentleman really can't grasp it.'

I chuckled inwardly.

'Just wait. Once the kids are all grown up, you'll understand why I chose the Earth Spirit Tribe. Then don't come saying, "Ah, Sir Gong-Ja, ah, I didn't recognize the Earth Spirit Tribe, I'm sorry."'

-Zombie... don't laugh like that. When you laugh sinisterly, it's fucking disgusting.

Such harsh words.

The other companions chose items according to their needs. Seeing that we were ready, The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages nodded.

"Okay. All the items you bought will be reflected in history! No refunds, so please understand. Then, if I turn back time to the next stage.... This time, 300 years have passed!"

300 years.

A thousand years had swiftly passed since the era when the primeval forests burned away.

Before I returned, I remember that from this point on, the Flame Emperor's unification of the world started in earnest. Elves, who worshipped the Flame Emperor as a fire god, set the continent ablaze.

Well, being addicted to making money rather than burning people is healthier nowadays.

"I'll open the 34th floor now. There was no quest last time, but there will be one this time. However, it's not a joint quest that everyone completes together, but individual quests! I'll distribute a separate quest for each race."

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages put down her pillow and grinned.

"It's about time for your children to end their childhood. In human terms, [adolescence]? It's when problems build up and explode internally. It's time to experience the growing pains."

Clap.

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages lightly clapped her hands.

"Everyone, do your best! Scary kids have started roaming around, so be careful!"

Do your best, everyone.

I realized the meaning of those words after a white light enveloped us.

My vision blurred, and the Tower's voice echoed in my head.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe has acquired a new trait 'Noblesse Oblige!']

Apparently, the changes in the Earth Spirit Tribe were reflected as history unfolded.

While waiting for the 34th floor stage to unfold, another voice was heard.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe's trait 'Bad Friend Doctrine' is changing!]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe has acquired a new trait 'Demonic Cult'!]

'What?'

Demonic Cult?

Before I could fully ponder the meaning of that voice, I was transported to the next era.

---

As soon as the transfer was complete, a difference from the previous stages was apparent.

I found myself in the middle of a deserted street, looking around.

"...Black Dragon Witch? Sword Saint? Hello? Is there no one here?"

None of my companions were in sight.

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages's phrase "Do your best, everyone" meant that we were indeed separated to complete our quests individually.

Perhaps everyone was scattered to the cities where their respective races were established.

-Ugor. Let's have a drink after training this evening.

I, too, had landed in the city of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

-These days, watermelon is in season. Mixing watermelon with alcohol makes for a tasty drink.

-Doesn't drinking alcohol affect the muscles you've worked so hard to train?

-Occasionally soaking the muscles in alcohol actually makes them more flexible.

Groups of Earth Spirit Tribe members were wandering the streets in twos and threes.

Despite the Earth Spirit Tribe emerging as losers in the last stage, the city was surprisingly unremarkable. There were no splendid buildings or dazzling streets.

It resembled a neatly constructed termite mound, perhaps?

Rows of uneven white buildings stretched out.

-Tonight, there's a Cave Fire Drama! Featuring popular actors! Over two years of continuous box office success! Seats are selling out fast, and there are only a few standing tickets left!

In such a city, there were occasionally large circular buildings, which were theaters. Ticket sellers were brightly smiling and selling standing tickets in front of these theaters, and surprisingly, they were all elves.

-Come on, come on! Almost sold out! Hurry!

What was even more astonishing was the title of the play.

-A unique experience for tonight only! With your lover! With your colleagues! Experience [Raviel and Kekerker] presented by a prestigious theater troupe with 300 years of tradition!

“Pfft!?”

I spat out my drink.

-A love story of the century! A romance of the heavens! Why did the most beautiful princess in the empire leave the Crown Prince for the unremarkable Kekerkker? What sweet words did Kekerkker use to charm the princess? The play teaches us that in life, it's all about sweet-talking. [Raviel and Kekerkker]! Get your insane talking skills here!

“Are these guys serious?”

I rushed towards the theater. At the intersection in front of it, posters drawn with ink were plastered all over. There were portraits of actors playing Raviel and me, and unsurprisingly, they were both portrayed as Hobgoblins.

Hobgoblins chattered in front of the Hobgoblin portraits.

-So beautiful...

-Ugor. Honestly, haven't we seen [Raviel and Kekerkker] too many times since we were kids? I could recite the lines with my eyes closed.

-You don't understand. These days, it's trendy to reinterpret classic masterpieces. In the play I saw recently, Raviel ended up with Goldencup.

-That's nonsense. Isn't that [Silver Lily and Goldencup], not [Raviel and Kekerkker]? That's title fraud.

-Don't dismiss it. It gained enormous popularity in certain circles...

-Right. I heard someone even spent their entire fortune because they were obsessed with that play.

-Fairy Tribe writers are making a fortune.

But that wasn't all.

-A golden opportunity! The best Cave Fire Drama is this one! [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] is coming to you tonight! Watch the spectacular flames performed by the 16th rank warrior of the Martial Plains Council! For the role of Sword Emperor, especially...

-A unique large-scale Cave Fire Drama! Sixty-six extras involved! [Ester, from Saintess to Witch]! Only the Gamtang Theater in Guru can bring such a play to the stage! Great value for your money, book now and get a free watermelon beer!

Elves were screaming and promoting aggressively.

There were several theaters crowded together just at the intersection. With theaters competing across the street from each other, aggressive canvassing was inevitable. Elves selling tickets even got into disputes, grabbing each other's ears.

-Hey! Using watermelon beer to lure customers? What kind of cheap trick is that? If you're a theater company, compete fairly with the quality of your plays!

-What's wrong with using business strategies! Develop your own products! Losers talk too much!

-Ugor? Are you getting into a fight now?

-Let's watch the play of the ticket seller who wins the fight.
I'll be the judge, go ahead and fight.

A scene of shock and horror unfolded.

“These crazy people...”

Of course, Uburka had mentioned it.

He would turn my stories into Fire Paintings and pass them down through generations.

But I had imagined something like a grandmother telling stories to her grandchildren, not such full-scale commercialization.

-Could this be the influence of the Fairy Tribe? I heard the elves are crazy about money.

Guardian Spirit chuckled.

-Hey, that one looks interesting. Let's check it out!

He pointed to a theater where [Raviel and Kekerkker] was being performed. I followed Guardian Spirit, half out of my mind.

The circular theater resembled a vast cave. It was dark all around, but the actors freely controlled their aura as they recited their lines. Was it more of a musical than a play?

-Ah, Raviel. I have realized my feelings.

-Silvia.

-A clam nurtures illness in its heart. A white disease. A shining sickness. When the disease hardens into a pearl, it's like my fate. Raviel. I cannot reject this beautiful illness.

A Hobgoblin on stage was delivering a passionate performance. Given that she was called Silvia, this Hobgoblin must be playing Lady Goldencup.

-Silvia, no. Stop. If you say any more...

-It's not the sun of the empire I love, nor my butler. Raviel. Duke. I yearn for you.

-My God.

My God.

-Have you lost your mind, Lady Silvia!

These kids have lost their minds!

-No. I am perfectly sane. Tomorrow, I'll tell the Crown Prince that we're breaking up. He'll be angry, but his anger cannot consume my love. No. Let it consume me! I'll gladly burn.

-Lady!

I watched the Cave Fire Drama, stupefied.

The storyline went like this: Raviel couldn't accept Goldencup's feelings, the Crown Prince and Goldencup broke up, and despite the breakup, the Crown Prince, unable to let go, plots an assassination. Finally, the climax. In an attempt to stop the assassination, Kekerkker, the butler, dies...

“I shouldn’t die, you bastards!?”

I shouted involuntarily.

It's titled [Raviel and Kekerkker], isn't it! Just like what one Hobgoblin said, it's title fraud!

But my voice didn't reach the Earth Spirit Tribe children around me. Instead, after the Cave Fire Drama ended, they murmured as if moved.

-Tonight's fire was splendid too...

-I've seen it four times already, and I'm not tired of it. All the actors use their aura so well.

-Gor. To be honest, I was moved. I want to be on stage one day too!

No.

Something's not right.

I knelt at the intersection in front of the theater.

“What do I do? Our children have become strange...”

Guardian Spirit wore a complicated expression.

-Your children have always been strange, zombie.

Chapter 181: Our Children Changed (2)

---

“What are you talking about? My children are pure, cute, robust, and sincere... They’re born with all the world’s goodness. What does a blind guy like you know about my kids?”

-Yeah, sure. Overprotective parent. In your next life, you should be born as a goblin.

Guardian Spirit clicked his tongue in disapproval.

At that moment, a voice echoed in my head.

[A quest for the 34th floor has been assigned.]

Was the stage situation vaguely perceived by the Tower? A quest was issued. Letters appeared before my eyes, spreading like ink.

+

[Theatrical Warring States: Crisis of the Classics]

+

The quest name was ominous.

I looked up at the quest window while remaining on my knees in a defeated posture.

+

[Theatrical Warring States: Crisis of the Classics]

Difficulty: B+

Objective: You have successfully bestowed mythology upon the Earth Spirit Tribe. The Earth Spirit Tribe grows up listening to your stories, watching your deeds, and learning your beliefs. But the excitement is short-lived. Tired of hearing the same stories for hundreds of years, the new generation of the Earth Spirit Tribe has grown bored of the ordinary 'classics'!

Recently, secondary creations of classics have become popular in the Earth Spirit Tribe society. This trend, which has gone beyond phenomenal popularity to almost a frenzy, now threatens to usurp the place of the original mythology!

'Ugor. I prefer the scheming Kekerkker over the kind-hearted one.'

'Goldencup and Silver Lily belong together. That's the tradition.'

'Constellation Killer and Sword Emperor are good too.'

'You don't know anything. Sword Emperor should be with the Heavenly Demon for it to be classic.'

Disaster!

The Earth Spirit Tribe has started to conflict over which is the real mythology. If this continues, the Earth Spirit Tribe might lose their common mythology. If the common mythology collapses, the Earth Spirit Tribe will be unable to perform Aura Formations!

Noble White Lion. In the Earth Spirit Tribe, what's performed in theaters is the mythology, and the play that garners the most intense cheers is the official history. You decide what the true mythology and real history are! Unify the mythology and establish Aura Formations!

*However, if you fail to guide them, your race will lose the trait 'Demonic Cult'.

+

"....."

I read the quest window several times.

"So... my stories have been twisted so much that it's hard to tell what's real and what's fake? If I leave it as is, the Aura Formations I devised will be nullified."

-That seems to be the case.

“Hmm.”

I stroked my chin, pondering.

What to do?

Several ideas crossed my mind instantly. But the first thought was,

“Do I really need to fix this?”

I felt like it might be okay to just leave it as it is.

“If I were them, I’d get bored hearing the same stories every day. If the kids are trying out new plays out of a desire for something fresh, I don’t see a reason to spoil their fun.”

-Oh? What about the Aura Formations you ambitiously prepared?

“That's just my ambition. Uburka thought it would be fun and agreed to start it. If the kids of this era find it boring and reject it, well, that's their preference. I don't plan to interfere with their fun and games.”

-Oho.

Guardian Spirit clapped.

-For the first time, you seem like a mature parent.

“I've always been a mature parent.”

-Your nonsense is dazzling. If there were a competition for the most childish parent in the world, you'd overwhelmingly win, zombie.

“Oh. That play over there looks interesting.”

I pointed to a theater across the street.

There were many theaters in this city. The circular theaters at the intersection were like big corporations, while this one seemed like a small theater company targeting the alley market. However, the advertisement for their play was attractively done.

-The Epic of Kekerkker! Witness the Cave Fire Drama [Sword Dance of Flames] by Kekerkker!

An elf ticket seller shouted.

-[Demon King Ester], [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon], [Raviel and Kekerkker], all stories start and end here! Two companions always together in mythic journeys! Their story!

The poster featured a somewhat frail-looking Hobgoblin with black tattoos and another muscular Hobgoblin.

Both were back-to-back, staring fiercely at the front.

“It’s definitely us, right?”

-It seems so. That's our story.

Guardian Spirit seemed intrigued as well.

We entered the small theater, filled with anticipation. Several cleanly scraped logs were placed around, with Earth Spirit Tribe spectators sitting on them. It was packed, even the standing room.

“Wow.”

The anticipation rose with the surprisingly well-maintained facility.

“It’s small but neat. Feels very elite.”

-But among the stories you told Uburka, was there anything about you and me?

I guess not?

Apart from [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon], there wasn’t much.

“Well, maybe this is also a secondary creation. Ah. It’s starting. Let’s watch quietly... No need for that.”

-It’s kind of sweet that we can chat without others hearing.

“Don’t they sell popcorn here? Watermelon beer? Watermelon rind fries? What’s with these kids and watermelons?”

We chattered and watched the play [Sword Dance of Flames]. The excitement didn’t last long. Our faces, no, our expressions soured in real-time as the play progressed.

“What the hell.”

-Shit?

We both stormed out in the middle of the play.

-Have these bastards lost their minds?

“Crazy.”

-That wasn't me on the poster, it was the Flame Emperor!?

"Crazy."

-Why is the Flame Emperor hogging the scene where the Heavenly Demon and Sword Emperor are dueling!?

"Crazy."

The word 'crazy' kept spilling out of my mouth. Triple crazy. Triple shock. Strike three.

"Now that I think about it, I guess I should clarify what the real mythology is. The children's fun? Of course, it's important. But not the Flame Emperor. Definitely not the Flame Emperor. Crazy. These kids have crossed the line."

-You're right! We need to overhaul this!

Guardian Spirit and I were united in our resolve to complete the quest at all costs.

“Let’s figure out how to resolve this situation.”

I wandered around the city until nightfall.

The result: I realized that this era was facing a critical issue, intertwined with the Earth Spirit Tribe’s newly acquired trait.

+

[Demonic Cult]

Category: Religion, Military, Politics.

Origin: [Bad Friend Doctrine]

Description: The White Lion faith has finally established itself as a religion, evolving from [Guru Doctrine] and [Bad Friend Doctrine]!

The first apostle, Gorke, recognized the White Lion as a friend and father to the Earth Spirit Tribe. The second apostle, Uburka, introduced the Earth Spirit Tribe to the myths of the White Lion.

However, the Demonic Cult is now facing a crisis of identity! There's a proliferation of sects, each interpreting the White Lion's myths differently. These sects accuse each other of heresy, each claiming to be the true heir of the White Lion's teachings!

Earth Spirit Tribe members believing in different myths develop different mental images. Depending on the mental image they hold, the appearance and efficacy of their aura vary greatly! Resolve the issue of doctrine interpretation!

*However, this trait may change depending on the course of history.

*Warning! 16 sects are in conflict over doctrine interpretation. If the conflict intensifies, religious schism and possibly even tribal division could occur!

+

“Ah, this is troubling.”

I roughly understood how the last 300 years of history had unfolded.

“This seems to be a problem that arose after Uburka's death. If he were still alive, he could have subdued them with force...”

-Exactly. Those who couldn't make a peep under his rule have started to voice their opinions.

“That makes sense.”

Uburka was powerful. Too powerful. With his absence, disagreements among the Earth Spirit Tribe couldn't be resolved by one person's will alone.

A natural conflict.

Like everyone goes through adolescence, the Earth Spirit Tribe was experiencing growing pains.

-Come one, come all! If I can't have it, I'd rather destroy everything! Witness a different charm of Ester!

-This is the traditional Cave Fire Drama! All those fake plays can go away!

-Who are you calling fake? Heretics!

-The Flame Emperor was actually a good person!? This is the story of a man sacrificed to Kekerker's schemes...

...Although those growing pains were evolving in a strange direction.

For the Earth Spirit Tribe, art and religion are inseparable. Whoever performs the Cave Fire Drama becomes a priest, the theater stage is their temple. Which play you attend reflects the sect you believe in.

‘Depending on the image in their mind, their aura changes entirely.’

Art. Religion. Military.

Key areas are intertwined.

Definitely not just an issue of Flame Emperor worship.

As I was solidifying my resolve, a commotion erupted.

-How can this be!?

In a remote alleyway.

In this poor area where Earth Spirit Tribe members lived in dugout holes, a shrill voice echoed. Looking over, I saw an argument unfolding in front of a small, shabby theater.

-I was clearly the best in the audition! My acting was overwhelming!

The protagonist of the argument was an elf, shouting shrilly. A large Hobgoblin, arms crossed, stood before him.

-Then why was someone else chosen for the role, not me? Is it bribery? Nepotism? The stage should be purely based on talent, this is unacceptable!

-We don't take bribes. Nor do we choose based on connections. Poor as we may be, we're a theater company with 130 years of tradition. Don't underestimate us.

-Then why wasn't I even selected for a minor role! Is it because I'm an elf? Ridiculous! This is racial discrimination! I will formally complain to the Martial Plains Council!

-It's not because you're an elf. We follow Kekerkker's teachings of equality. But...

The Hobgoblin theater director spoke solemnly.

-You're... just too weak.

-What, what?

-What is that body?

The director's eyes critically scanned the elf.

-Your waist is bent. Shoulders too narrow. Muscles flimsy.

Arms and legs wobble like spider legs, they seem like they could snap if touched. Thighs... are those even thighs? I wonder how you stand up.

The director shook his head.

-What's the use of good acting? Nowadays, audiences care about muscles. With your flimsy body, you can't even charm a snot-nosed kid. You're not qualified.

-B-but acting is all about the performance!

The elf flared up, but self-consciously covered his body with his hands.

The director continued, exposing his thick muscles.

-No. An actor is a priest who spreads Kekerkker's teachings, a warrior who leads battles, and a combatant who attends the council to duel.

They're still doing council duels? These adorable lunatics.

-That's why the audience applauds actors. They recognize the authenticity in their illusions. Who would be enchanted by a warrior who only talks on stage?

-Ugh. Ugh...

-Your muscles are weak. First, grow your chest muscles four times bigger, then we'll talk.

-I, according to the myths, Kekerkker had internal muscles! I'm also internal! Stronger than I look!

-Ugor.

The director chuckled.

-Then become Kekerkker instead of an actor. Transform into a lion and help your race. At least in our theater, we don't believe in internal muscles.

-Wait, director! Just once more!

The elf fell to his knees, clinging to the director's feet.

-Please let me audition again! I'm confident I can act much better than before. After seeing my performance, you won't care about those muscleheads! I'm a genius in acting! If you choose me for the lead role, or even a Four Demon Lords role in [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon], I'll revolutionize Guru's theatrical world!

-An actor does not kneel.

The director dismissed him.

-Work out. Build muscles. That's all I can say.

-Ah! Damn it! Elves can't grow muscles like you, you ignorant pigs! Is your brain also a muscle?

-No more words are necessary.

The Hobgoblin easily shoved the elf away. The elf screamed and rolled away.

-Ah, I'm dying! Ah! Discrimination against elves! It's hard being born an elf! If I were born a goblin, I'd have debuted on stage long ago! Why am I suffering this treatment just for having big ears! Would Kekerkker allow this!

-Pathetic... Go earn some money.

-I prefer acting over money!

The director sighed and shut the theater doors.

The aspiring actor elf wept.

-O great Cat! Kekerkker! Please grant me the talent of an actor! Let me be on stage just once! Take my soul if you must! Or any demon, take my soul! Take it and debut me! Please!

Hmm.

I stroked my chin.

"I have a good idea."

-What?

“Let’s make a top star actor.”

Let’s show the Earth Spirit Tribe a true play, amidst their faith in false stories.

Chapter 182: Our Children Changed (3)

---

-The bad guys... Those ignorant fools who only know muscles...

The aspiring actor elf sobbed for a while before heading home, crying all the way, bitter about life's unfairness.

-Where have you been wandering around until now?

At home, he received the same scolding.

-Don't tell me you've been hanging around theaters again?

-You've grown old enough but still can't get your act together. Child, all those Cave Fire Dramas and such are just brainwashing by the Earth Spirit Tribe. It's all about worshipping Kekerker. What's so great about drooling over that?

Unlike the Earth Spirit Tribe, elves lived in grand mansions and indulged in luxury. The family of the aspiring actor was also wealthy. To the merchant-born elves, this aspiring actor was an anomaly.

-That's not true...

Muttered the elf while picking at his dinner.

-There's no Cave Fire Drama about worshipping Kekerkker...
In fact, they are stories about what Kekerkker worships...

-What are you saying?

-Can't hear. Speak up.

-You're an adult now. We've kept a ledger of all the expenses on you since birth, without considering inflation and interest-free. Pay it back soon. If not, leave the house.

-How can our family think only about money?

The aspiring actor elf retorted hotly.

-Why is our tribe obsessed with making money?

-Making money is fun.

-It's not fun at all! How is swindling those stupid Earth Spirit Tribe members enjoyable!

-It's always fun to take advantage of the gullible. So, will you pay the upbringing costs, or not?

-This tribe is insane.

The aspiring actor stood up indignantly.

-Paying back all the money spent on you since birth is tradition and duty. And everyone accepts it as normal...!

-It's your expense, of course it's normal.

-They even listed the cost of the midwife from the day I was born, along with food and clothing! Are they sick? Does this tribe die if they don't keep ledgers? Enough. I'm sick of this home! I'll just run away.

The aspiring actor left the house in large strides. As he was about to leave the gate, his family called out.

-Hey! Ssonia!

-What?

-Even if you leave, take the debt papers with you! Here!

The family brought out a cart.

The cart was piled high with rolls of papers.

All were debt documents.

-If you run away, you're no longer family, so I'll calculate the inflation and interest. Don't worry too much. I'll only charge the lowest interest rate. Just get a job at any company and work for 12 years to pay it off. Work hard and earn money.

-Damn, these dog-like...

-Each curse word you say now will increase the interest rate by 1%.

-.....

-Ah. I've included the cart's price too. I thought you might run away someday. I prepared it in advance. It's sturdy yet cheap, be grateful. What are you waiting for? Sonia. Leave the house.

With a gloomy face, the aspiring actor dragged the cart.

The cart's wheels clattered sorrowfully as it rolled away.

Guardian Spirit and I watched this sad scene of a young elf.

“Surely there isn’t a single normal race in this world, is there...?”

-Really. I knew your tower had a lot of crazies, but now I'm starting to feel uneasy...

The elf couldn’t afford a shabby inn room due to lack of money. He just crouched next to a theater, using the cart as a windbreak to sleep. Sobs and sniffles echoed mournfully in the moonlit streets.

[You have purchased 'Appearance in Dreams'.]

[100 race points are consumed!]

[Your current race points are 8702.]

And now it was my turn to appear.

“Ssonia.”

I entered the aspiring actor elf's dream and spoke to him.

Unlike Gorke and Uburka's dreamscapes, the elf's was... well, quite vulgar. A luxurious party. Muscular Hobgoblin servants were pampering the aspiring actor elf.

-Sorry, Ssonia the Great Actor. We never recognized the genius of such a great actor...

-Ahahahat! Muscles without acting skills! Hurry up and pour the drinks!

-Ugor. What an honor to fill Ssonia the Great Actor's cup...

Impressive.

The most impressive was the Countess, who had corrupted the subconscious of the Fairy Tribe to this extent. A literal fairy. A bewitching spirit.

“Ssonia, Ssonia, wake up.”

-Huh? What? Why is there a weak human here?

“I am the guide of the Earth Spirit Tribe. What you call Kekerkker. Since your Fairy Tribe joined under the Earth Spirit Tribe's banner, you naturally fall under my jurisdiction.”

-Ha?

“Didn't you wail today, asking for Kekerkker, or even a great cat, or a demon, to debut you as an actor? Be happy. I have descended upon hearing your miserable cries.”

-What nonsense...

A brief moment ensued to establish mutual respect through my fists.

-I'm sorry for my ignorance! Kekerkker!

“I forgive you. Gorke also doubted me at first, thinking I was a demon. But eventually, he realized my sincerity and praised me. One mustn't forget to be skeptical in this harsh world.”

-Yes! Thank you for forgiving me! Kekerkker!

“From now on, when you call me, refer to me as [the Merciful and Kind Kekerkker].”

-What?

Ssonia looked up at me with his knees on the ground. His eyes seemed to say, ‘What kind of new idiot is this?’ I smiled and raised my fist.

“What? Do you have a problem?”

-No, not at all. The Merciful and Kind Kekerkker!

“Now you’re ready to talk.”

I sat on a silk-cushioned chair, sipping watermelon beer. What is this? It tastes like ground cucumber mixed in, with an oddly sweet flavor... Why are my children hooked on such tricky drinks?

“Ssonia, don’t fear me. I just want to grant your wish.”

-Yes, yeesss...

“So, you want to become an actor? I will make you one.”

-I-Is that true!?

“Of course. I, Kekerkker, have never lied to you guys. But before I lend you my power, I need to verify your beliefs.”

Ssonia blinked.

-Verify my beliefs...?

“Lately, false stories have been misleading many children. Kekerkker cannot endure such misery. I ask if you truly qualify to be the third apostle. Answer me.”

I spoke earnestly.

“What kind of person is the Flame Emperor?”

-Uh...

Ssonia hesitated.

-He's a bastard, right? According to the most classic Cave Fire Drama... Kekerkker was living a normal life when one day, he met the worst person in the world and had a great awakening. That person's name was the Flame Emperor. Recently, there's been an increase in portraying the Flame Emperor in a good light, but I don't view it favorably. There are bastards in the world. And while people might change, bastards cannot...

"Ssonia."

Thump.

I placed my hand on the aspiring actor's shoulder.

"You really have a promising future!"

-Really?

I grinned broadly.

“They say you can tell a promising tree by its sprout. Ah, this child is not just any great tree but a talent that can devour the World Tree!”

-Ah... okay...

“How did such a kind-hearted child like you come from a money-grubbing tribe like the Fairy Tribe? A lotus blooming in mud, a black pearl in an oyster. Truly a beautiful fate!”

-I-Is that so? Hehe. You're making me blush with such praise...

Ssonia scratched his head, slightly embarrassed. A warm friendship blossomed between us, transcending race and time.

-But how exactly do you plan to help me?

"It's simple. I'll just borrow your body for a while."

I had already spotted an item in the civilization store.

+

[Character Possession]

Rank: A-

Effect: You possess the chosen person. The original owner of the possessed body becomes a spirit and stays by your side. The spirit returns to its body when the person dies, or when you declare the end of possession.

Cost: 2,000 race points

*However, you can use this item only if the person agrees to the possession.

+

This was an upgraded version of the animal possession item.

-Borrow my body... Ah! Don't tell me?

"Kid, I don't know what nasty thoughts you had, but I'm solely devoted to Raviel."

-Ah... Right. I forgot.

"I'm simply saying I'll possess your body. I won't stay long. Just enough to make you a top-notch actor. Even if you want me out sooner, I'll leave."

Ssonia rolled his eyes.

-Do I have to offer my soul or something...?

"Goodness, what would I do with your soul? Even after I possess you, your consciousness will continue to exist in a corner of your mind."

-.....

"If you don't like it, just say so. There are plenty of Earth Spirit Tribe members who'd love to be possessed by me."

-No, no! Not at all!

Ssonia hastily spoke.

-Please do possess me! Merciful and Kind Kekerkker! I'll do anything to debut on stage!

"Good. That's the spirit! If you want something, you should chase it to the ends of the universe to achieve it."

I immediately purchased the item.

[You have purchased 'Character Possession.']

[2,000 racial points are consumed!]

[Your current race points are 6702.]

"No regrets?"

-Yes!

"Any complaints?"

-None!

"Alright. Since you've agreed, I'll now possess your body."

-Come in!

Swoosh!

A sound like water draining from a toilet echoed, and my vision blurred. I closed and opened my eyes. Suddenly, it was early dawn, and the cityscape filled my view.

"Hmm."

I opened and closed my fist repeatedly.

Delicate hands.

Never held a sword in their life, judging by the softness of the palms.

"A bit awkward, but... better than the first time I possessed a lion. I'll get used to it quickly."

-Oh my goodness. The great Cat.

Ssonia's surprised voice came from within my mind.

-You really possessed me...?

"I said it, didn't I? I never lie to you guys."

-Sorry, I half suspected it was a demon's scam... Lately, there have been rumors about being possessed by demons, seeing strange monsters...

I tried moving aura through the energy channels. Was the Fairy Tribe naturally sensitive to aura, or did Ssonia have hidden talent? After a few times, flames appeared on my palm.

-Wow.

He's surprised, so not much talent there.

-It's unbelievable! The soul's flame this easily....

-Who's loitering around at dawn?

Creak. The theater door opened. The director who harshly rejected Ssonia yesterday stood holding the doorknob, looking like he slept there.

-Ugor? You again.

As our eyes met, the director looked fed up.

-The audition is over. The roles for the next Cave Fire Drama are decided. There's no role for you, so stop bothering us.

You're an elf, so you'll live well without acting, right?

"Director."

I respectfully knelt.

"I ran away from home."

-What?

"Look at this cart. It's full of debt papers my family charged for feeding and clothing me. They threw me out, saying to pay back even the interest. I'm truly desperate!"

-.....

"I have nowhere to go!"

I exclaimed passionately.

"Even a minor role is fine. I don't mind a cameo. Please, just let me on stage! Look at my acting, not my muscles! I swear on Kekerkker, Gorke, and Uburka, I'll repay your faith!"

-Ugor, how did such an elf come to be...

The Hobgoblin director held his forehead.

---Alright. I'll give you one last chance. But I can't just hand you a role. You have to prove you can enchant the audience even with your feeble muscles.

"How can I prove it?"

-Perform an act right here.

The director sat on the ground and crossed his arms.

-A special audition opportunity. There's no greater privilege than this.

Okay.

"What should I perform?"

-Every actor has a role that's like a gateway. How well they perform this role determines their caliber. It's an old piece, but very difficult, revealing the actor's true qualities.

"A difficult role..."

The director solemnly said.

-[Raviel and Kekerkker]. Perform the scene where Kekerkker confesses his love to Raviel, revealing his heart.

Oh.

-Don't complain it's too hard. As I said, you're already receiving a great favor. Some directors only allow Earth Spirit Tribe actors. This is your last chance.

I tilted my head.

"Will that do?"

-As expected of a novice.

The director snorted.

-The confession scene of Kekerkker to Raviel is difficult even for seasoned actors. Kekerkker saw Raviel as a goddess, and had to praise her beauty using all languages, sincerely, as if he would die without her love. It's not easy!

"Hmm..."

-Untalented actors try to get through this scene with tears and sobs. No! Kekerkker isn't begging or clinging to love. He simply wants to enhance Raviel's glory by purely expressing his love. Completely surrendering himself to her. It's impossible without experience.

Really...?

I'm confident I could praise my beloved 360 hours non-stop.

"Easiest task ever."

"Anyway, perform the scene where Kekerkker confesses to Raviel?"

-Right. Though I doubt a stingy elf like you can understand love.

"Understood."

I took a deep breath.

I imagined Raviel sitting in front of me, chin propped, hair like a silver fox about to hibernate, slightly sleepy thin eyes, red irises. 'Sleepy, huh?' Whispering breath. 'Try waking me up, my Gong-Ja.'

Your existence makes me love the world a bit more.

"Raviel. My soul. My eternal red. I didn't know red until I met you. I thought I knew, but your eyes, those eyes. When I look at them beside you---"

I opened my mouth, and...

Exactly 2 minutes later, the director's expression changed.

-Impossible!

The director jumped up in shock.

-This tongue play... this unbelievable love confession... this desperate, chicken-like charm... Everything is perfect! As if you are Kekerkker himself!?

That's right. My dear.

Daddy's here.

Chapter 183: Rookie Actor (1)

---

[Mud and Dust] is an ancient Goblin theater troupe.

To be more precise, it only has its antiquity left. Once prosperous, its glory days are long gone. After the previous director disappeared leaving a will amidst financial troubles, the phrase 'theater with a will' became more of an insult than a compliment.

-Come inside.

"Did I... pass?"

-Of course, you passed, Ugor. Even though you're a puny elf, I can't dismiss such a passionate performance. That would mean I'm unfit to run a theater.

The Hobgoblin director grunted as he led me inside the theater. Creak. As the main door opened, the 130-year-old theater revealed itself. There stood a building, worn out over 130 years.

"Wow."

The dimly lit interior. They called those torches lighting, but it was barely better than darkness. The ceiling and walls were covered in soot. Moreover, Earth Spirits liked damp places, so the floor was covered in what seemed like stagnant water.

A terror to both sight and smell.

"This is a bit..."

That wasn't all.

Spiders, centipedes, various insects.

A whole world of bugs gathered to prove their love for damp places. Thanks to them, even this tiny theater was overflowing with love, life, and above all, spider webs.

"What in the world..."

-You're moved, I see. I understand. I was thrilled too when I first saw a theater as a child.

The Hobgoblin seemed proud, completely misunderstanding my reaction.

-My heart raced, like falling in love for the first time. Looking back, that heartbeat guided my life to this point.

My heart was racing too. My left and right ventricles were pounding at the sight of the sprawling spider webs.

"Director, when was the last time this place was cleaned?"

-Cleaned?

"....."

The goblin's 'What's that?' expression made me lose all hope.

Right. These kids were born loving mud. No point nagging them to clean now. They won't listen.

-Even with my lacking muscles, I really passed the audition! Unbelievable! Amazing! Truly Kekerkker!

By the way, the original owner of this body, aspiring actor Ssonia, became a spirit hovering around me. Unlike the Guardian Spirit, he floated around like a ghost.

Only I could hear their voices, suddenly having two ghosts following me.

‘It’s like two mosquitoes buzzing simultaneously in the summer...’

-What?

‘Nothing. Ssonia, why are you so obsessed with such a shabby troupe? If you're determined to act, why not aim for a better place?’

-I initially aimed for famous troupes like [Flame] or [Fire Horse]...

Ssonia sounded disheartened.

-But well-known troupes wouldn't even interview me. They said a frail elf like me was useless... This was the only place that gave me a chance.

‘Huh.’

Ssonia was a victim of racial, or rather, muscle discrimination. How did my kids end up being a race that only screams about muscles...

-Follow me. I'll introduce you to our troupe members.

I followed the director deep into the building to the dressing room. There, amidst old theater props, two Hobgoblins were sound asleep.

-Wake up, you parasites!

The director smacked their heads with his massive hand.

-What time do you think it is? Still sleeping!

-Ugor... Ugorr....

The Hobgoblins struggled to open their eyes. One was one-armed, and the other one-eyed. They rubbed their faces and glanced at me.

-Woah. An elf here, director?

-Did we hire a new ticket seller?

-I'm tired of your whining. He's not a ticket seller, but a new actor! Didn't I tell you? Some elf keeps pestering to be cast as an actor.

-Ah, the annoying elf...

Only then did the Hobgoblin actors wake up fully.

-Wait, did you really cast him as an actor?

-Why not? I just passed him after the final audition.

-Are you insane? How can he take the stage with such a trashy physique?

That's too harsh.

-Don't worry. I know what I'm doing. His physique may be unimpressive, but this elf's acting...

"My name is Ssonia, director."

-Right, Ssonia. Ssonia's acting surpasses any actor I've seen. Nowadays, the audience only cares about muscles, but seeing Ssonia might change their minds.

The director asserted confidently.

The actors' faces began to show interest.

-Hmm.

-The director speaks so highly...

-Anyway, a junior has finally joined. Show some example, seniors. Will you only sleep in the dressing room? Get up, wash, and assemble on stage.

-Alright, alright.

The actors got up.

Clatter!

Props piled up like Lego bricks collapsed. Surprisingly, not two, but three Hobgoblins were sleeping in the dressing room. The last one was buried among the props, hugging a lion plushie and snoring. Cute.

-Hurry up and wake up!

-Ack? Aaack!

The director dragged the last one by his remaining ear. Even while being dragged, the actor held onto the lion plushie. Adorable.

-As you know, the next theater play, [The Fiery Sword Dance], is in two weeks.

Soon, the actors gathered.

The director paced in front of the stage with hands behind his back.

-Normally living Kekerkker one day meets the universally admired Flame Emperor, whom he always respected. Their meeting starts a new life for one and ends the life of the other. Recently, there's been a trend to reinterpret Flame Emperor as 'actually a good guy,' but we'll stick to the classic.

-Director.

The one-armed actor raised his hand.

-That's too outdated. We should follow the latest trends, right?

-Right. Audiences want something new.

The one-eyed actor chimed in.

-Even if it's cheesy, we need to exchange lines that seem like love-hate. It's what the audience enjoys.

-Ugh, nonsense! True flames don't choose their fuel!

The director's eyes bulged.

-The theme of [The Fiery Sword Dance] is about being disappointed in people and how that affects one's life. Anything else is heresy!

Hmm.

The actors murmured.

-He won't change his old-fashioned ways.

-Are we heading towards ruin...?

-Quiet! Haven't I compromised by adding a few lines due to your complaints? No more. Stretch for 20 minutes. Practice starts soon!

-That's not enough... Anyway, understood, director....

As the junior, I quietly sat in the audience, watching the seniors rehearse.

30 minutes passed.

‘Wow.’

I concluded.

‘This is a complete mess.’

It was utterly terrible.

Cave Fire Drama is about using Aura in acting. When enacting anger, the actor doesn't just spill lines but also bursts out flames of Aura from their body, manifesting anger.

If you're familiar with Aura, you excel in acting. If you're skilled in acting, you become proficient in Aura. Thus, Cave Fire Drama actors naturally become great warriors and Aura users.

It should be simple...

"Why are they so stiff?"

I murmured unintentionally. The words slipped out before I realized. The director, who was coaching the actors, turned to look at me upon hearing my comment. -What are you talking about?

"Oh. Nothing. It just seems like they're using Aura in a very predetermined way..."

In the scene where Kekerkker realizes the Flame Emperor's atrocities and becomes enraged.

The actors focused too much on "anger." Or rather, they failed to focus on it at all. For instance, to express "anger," they would explosively unleash Aura like a wildfire. When expressing "sadness," they would just droop.

As if there's a set formula for Aura.

‘It's flashy but...’

I watched as the Auras dramatically expanded and then diminished in real-time. It was dazzling.

But that was it.

‘It's meaningless like this. Really.’

I spoke up.

"Cave Fire Drama is the art of Aura. And Aura is a power manifested by rooting in a certain will, emotion, or mental image. Emotion comes first. If you prioritize mere physical movements or lines, the Aura loses its vitality. How should I put it? It doesn't vibrate. Right. It lacks impact. It's deflated."

The director frowned, looking like a gangster from his youth.

-What's with this Kekerkker's babbling?

"Is that a goblin proverb? ...No, never mind. Anyway."

I stepped up to the corner of the stage.

The senior actors had stopped their practice and were watching me.

"See, if you have a set motion for every instance of anger, and another set motion for every instance of sadness, that's not going to work. Does everyone shed tears when sad? No, right? Situations vary. You have to be able to adapt instantly in completely different circumstances for Aura to be meaningful."

The senior actors snickered, amused.

-The director brought a teacher instead of a junior.

"Teacher! Show us a model performance!"

"Hmm."

How can I make them understand?

I looked around.

"First, let's extinguish these torches."

I scooped up a handful of dirt from the floor and, infusing it with Aura, flung it. The torches hit by the pebble arrows lost their flames and went out.

The Hobgoblins panicked.

-What?

-How did...

The surroundings darkened in an instant.

"Okay."

Every Cave Fire Drama is modeled after the city of the Mountain Calamity Tribe. A large cavern. Surrounded by walls but with a hole in the ceiling. The Earth Spirits have long forgotten their days groaning as slaves. Yet, time leaves its mark, shadowing their architectural style.

"Please be a bit quieter, everyone."

As the torches went out, only the light from the small hole in the ceiling streamed in. The light of dawn. The slightly shadowed blue light settled on the shabby stage.

"It's not about delivering special lines."

A quiet carpet of dawn.

"You don't even need lines. Aura isn't magic... Okay, let me just show you. Let's say we're expressing anger."

I assumed a push-up position on the stage.

"Any familiar posture is good. Something everyone can recognize. No need for exaggerated expressions. Hup!"

I slowly lowered and raised my chest and waist, maintaining a specific rhythm.

"Normally, this is the speed for push-ups. Ordinary. But, if you change it like this..."

I abruptly heightened my Aura.

Red flames surged around my body. Amidst them, I repeated push-ups much faster than before, at an abnormal speed.

Rapidly.

Mechanically.

Expressionlessly.

"....."

Silence all around.

I stared ahead, silently, doing nothing but fast push-ups. I moved my whole body. Above me, blood-red Aura fiercely blazed.

"...Hoo."

After 30 seconds, I dusted off my hands and stood up.

"See? It's just push-ups. A familiar movement. But how is it? Even with the same action, changing the speed completely alters the feel."

-.....

"If I were sweating profusely, taking an unstable posture, and doing push-ups manically, how would it be? The feeling would change again. If the previous was refined anger, this would be wild, uncontrolled anger. That's what it's about. It's not about reciting special lines or doing unusual movements."

The Hobgoblins seemed to understand, yet they didn't. It was a bit frustrating. Only then did I realize I had met [children with no talent for Aura] for the first time.

"Hey, senior."

I pointed at the one-eyed actor.

The actor playing the Flame Emperor in the play.

-Me?

"Yes. Flame Emperor has a strong ego, right? How would you express the Flame Emperor's egoism?"

-Well...

"How would you express egoism with Aura?"

The one-eyed actor, flustered, picked up a hand mirror from the nearby props.

-Something like this, I guess...

He looked into the hand mirror. A faint Aura emanated from his body, wriggling sneakily like a snake.

Indeed.

"It's not the worst, but it's strange. It doesn't fit."

-Strange how?

"Look. The Flame Emperor is like a self-proclaimed macho man. Would such a guy delicately look into a hand mirror? Would the Flame Emperor carry around a hand mirror? For what? Why?"

-Well...

"You're caught in the notion that 'people with strong egos often look in mirrors.' Plus, you assumed egoism is sly and wriggly, so you shaped your Aura that way. That's wrong. You're just imitating something. You need to root in your own emotion."

-Then, how would you do it?

"The same."

I heaved and maneuvered my Aura.

Like Uburka, I also cloaked myself in Aura. Artificial muscles. I made it seem as if my whole body was bulging with muscles.

"Huff... hoo, huff..."

And then I did slow, deliberate push-ups. I exaggeratedly added heavy breathing.

Not an act of [improving the body] but a [display of a good body].

"Done, right? Simple?"

-.....

The one-eyed Hobgoblin's mouth fell open.

-Who are you?

"A rookie actor, why?"

The Hobgoblins stared at me as if I were crazy. Why, though?

Chapter 184: Rookie Actor (2)

---

The Earth Spirit Tribe has a very good culture.

The strongest one is always right.

If you have a complaint, talk with your fists, not with your tongue.

"First, let's clean up. Seniors."

And here, I'm the strongest one.

"Look at the state of this theater. What is this? Are cobwebs part of the décor? Are you decorating with mold? Ah, the stench of rot is overwhelming. It's like a garbage can. If a customer walks in here, they'll think they're in organic waste."

-But... However...

"Are you stronger than me? Are you a better actor? Do you handle Aura better?"

-No...

"Then pick up a mop, seniors. We're not amateurs. Practice for the Cave Fire Drama, or whatever it is, comes after the environment is set. The environment reflects the state of your mind. If the theater is a trash can, what does that say about your minds? Now, are you going to pick up the mop or not? Do you want to get hit?"

I wasn't one to make empty threats about hitting someone.

A gentleman doesn't make threats. He just acts.

I provided a punch massage service to the particularly lazy Hobgoblins.

"Do you want to be hit again?"

The actors reluctantly picked up the mops with sullen faces.

'Thought a weak Elf joined as the junior, but turns out he's a tiger,' their faces read.

"Being damp is good. That's an Earth Spirit trait. But who likes rotten water and stench? That's just laziness. And if you excuse it with 'Earth Spirits naturally like dampness' or 'true actors don't care about the environment,' everything around turns into a mess. Are you dogs, seniors?"

-But, junior. Aren't you being too harsh...?

"Ha. Still no words of remorse? So you are dogs. From now on, when I say something, you answer 'Woof.' Understood?"

-Woof...

"Speak up!"

-Woof!

Good. Now, mop in hand, let's clean the theater. While doing so, cleanse your minds of the dog-like thoughts within. Keep cleaning until those thoughts run away. Got it?"

-Woof!

For two days straight, we did nothing but mop.

The one-eyed actor tirelessly moved between the well and the theater with a bucket.

"Senior, don't just mindlessly draw water. Pretend you're a noble's servant. Immerse yourself in the role. What a precious opportunity! Clean thoroughly, drive away the inner dogs, and get comfortable with the role of a servant. Killing three birds with one stone."

-Woof, woof!

The one-armed actor scooped out stagnant water and dug up rotten soil from the theater floor.

"Digging isn't just digging. It's the height of absurdity. Congratulations. You're experiencing the absurdity of a thousand lifetimes for free."

"Imagine this, you're a warrior who lost an arm in battle. The war is so fierce that even with an arm lost, the commander doesn't let you rest. You have to keep building barricades and digging moats. Keep digging, even doubting whether you're still a warrior, and amidst that doubt, dig vigorously."

-Waaah, digging...

The one-eared actor followed my instructions perfectly.

"Did you throw out the trash?"

-Woof, junior.

"Now, let's make new chairs out of logs. Ready?"

-Woof

"Chairs for guests. Let's say the Cave Fire Drama lasts an hour. Guests won't stare at your face for an hour straight, but their butts will be on the chairs. In this theater, the only thing serving the audience from start to finish is the chair. If the chair is uncomfortable, so is the play."

-Woof. I understand the importance, junior.

"Let's make some spanking new chairs together today. While we're at it, let's make both regular and special seats.

-Woof woof. Loyalty.

And then,

The director became adept at catching spiders.

-Now... Ssonia, I may be just the director, but...

A very severe curse.

-Upon reflection, it's wrong to have bugs roaming around!
I'll clean them up right away!

[The members of the troupe 'Mud and Dust' submit to your authority.]

[The troupe 'Mud and Dust' recognizes you as the real power!]

Even after the big clean-up, I didn't stop.

Guided by the voice of the Tower, I thought of more improvements.

-Um, Ssonia...

"Yes?"

-May I ask what you're doing with that ladder? Or should I say, may I inquire?

I climbed up the entrance with a ladder, radiating Aura from both hands. Right in front of me was a signboard engraved with 'Mud and Dust.'

"As you can see, I'm changing the signboard."

The Hobgoblin director was startled.

-Changing the signboard?

"Yes. A 130-year tradition is great, but frankly, our troupe is at the very bottom. We need a name that actively appeals to the audience, rather than something seemingly cool like 'Mud and Dust.'"

I flipped over the worn-out signboard.

The blank backside.

I etched letters into the wooden board with my Aura-infused nails.

"Okay. Looks cool."

I admired the new signboard I created.

[The Dog Noise Troupe]

-.....

The Hobgoblin looked back and forth between my face and the signboard.

-Um... Ssonia?

"Speak."

-Still, Dog Noise? We have a 130-year tradition...

"I've heard from the seniors. Director, you owe quite a bit to the elf trading companies, right?"

The director flinched.

"Every fortnight, at least one elf comes to press for debts."

-Those bastards, telling everything to the junior...

"Tradition isn't always admirable. You need to take responsibility for your people first. You're the owner of this troupe. You need to attract customers, gain popularity. The actors shouldn't be sleeping in the dressing room; they need proper lodging. Right?"

-.....

"I'm an elf. I know business better than the goblins. We need to attract even one more customer right now. If we continue like this, the troupe will collapse."

I walked out onto the streets, flyers in hand.

"The Dog Noise Troupe! Next Saturday evening at the Dog Noise Troupe, witness the fiery sword dance!"

-Woof.

Passing Hobgoblins chuckled.

Even Elves from other troupes promoting their plays laughed.

-What's that? Dog Noise?

-Who's this kid?

Good. A reaction. Better than complete indifference.

Now the tide has turned. It's my role as the promoter and ticket seller to steer this in a positive direction.

"Woof! Woof! Come witness the banquet of Dog Noise, unseen and untasted anywhere else in this city! Tired of 'Flame Emperor was actually a good guy'? Think bad guys should be truly bad? Come on over! Ah, there's no bigger bastard in the world! The true scoundrel is coming to you!"

-The Hobgoblins strolling the streets chuckled at me.

-.....

The director, who had followed me, stared at me blankly.

When a small crowd gathered, I decided to unveil my secret weapon.

"Listen up, brave warriors! This isn't your everyday Fire Drama!"

I snapped my fingers.

Ding-!

A lively sound echoed through the air, startling the passersby.

-What was that?

The source of the sound was simple. I had sent two streams of Aura to collide with each other, creating a piano-like note through the vibration of the air and Aura.

Quite a complex Aura manipulation, but not difficult for me.

"Expect great things!"

I continued to create sound waves with my Aura.

Even I, a music novice, could imitate this tune - Chopsticks March.

"Look! Even an elf ticket seller like me can manipulate Aura like this! The Dog Noise Troupe! How extraordinary must their Fire Drama be to go to these lengths!"

Under the bright sky, in the sunlight-filled streets, I played the melody with nothing but my fingers.

It was effective.

-Is that a sound coming from hitting air?

-Incredible. How can that be?

-Is that sound really made with Aura...?

Finally, the passersby stopped and focused on me. Not just the bystanders, but also the ticket sellers from other major troupes were stunned.

"At the Dog Noise Troupe's performance, there will be no dialogue! Flame Emperor, Kekerkker, no one will speak a word! Fire doesn't talk, it just burns! Witness the first-ever no-dialogue Fire Drama!"

-No dialogue...?

The Hobgoblins gawked at my flamboyant hand movements.

-Can a Fire Drama really exist without dialogue?

-Well, not saying a single word seems...

People were astounded by the Aura performance and suspicious of the no-dialogue advertising.

[How can he do that?] and [That can't be true] - the best two emotions for advertising mingled in the air at the crossroads.

"If the actors utter even a single word, we will give a full refund! One word equals a full refund! Two words, double the ticket price! Three words, and I'll give away all my wealth!"

I cheerfully handed out flyers to the people.

"This isn't your everyday Fire Drama! Bring this flyer and your companion enters for free! One free companion per person! Free admission available! Not just a show, but a chance to earn money! Thank you! Yes, thank you!"

The people had no strength left to refuse the flyers I handed out.

They absent-mindedly received them, as if intoxicated by a strong scent.

The flyers quickly ran out.

"Thank you! Until the day of the actual play, I will perform here every day! Of course, the concert is free! Oh no, our theater director is deep in debt to the trading companies! He's desperate!"

I grabbed the director's hand firmly.

He was a bit surprised but willingly accepted it. As the crowd's attention focused on us, he even managed a forced, awkward smile.

Good.

"Is there any better actor than one driven to the brink of bankruptcy! There's no better acting than from those who are homeless! Talent inversely correlates with one's financial situation! Dog Noise Troupe, I'll be performing too. Next Saturday evening. Next Saturday evening is the show! Thank you. Dog Noise! Next Saturday evening!"

I bowed to the crowd.

The director, whose hand was still in mine, naturally bowed as well.

There was no applause or cheering, but the atmosphere wasn't bad. It was great, in fact. I scattered my salesman's smile, taught by the Black Dragon Witch, and quickly left the street.

-Wow.

The Guardian Spirit behind me muttered.

-Aren't you embarrassed?

‘What's there to be embarrassed about when doing my job?’

-You're the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult.

‘The Demonic Cult was established by farmers and miners who were driven out or fled. What's wrong with handing out flyers on the street? This is also work.’

-Really... You could be dropped in the middle of a jungle or desert and still survive. The Flame Emperor did well to release someone like you into the world.

-Kekerkker...

The elf Ssonia, now just a soul, seemed unable to decide how to react.

A mix of admiration and self-deprecation, like a half-and-half chicken.

-You're amazing, but, how should I put it, so different from the Kekerkker I imagined... Or is this more like the real Kekerkker...?

Exactly.

This is me.

Later, after leaving the street, the director spoke up.

-Are you serious?

"About what?"

-About the no-dialogue Fire Drama. How can you not speak a single word on stage?

"Of course, I'm serious. Do you think I would lie to prospective customers?"

-But...

"Don't worry. I'll do everything in my power to make it worth the entry. If it doesn't work out, I'll take the stage alone. You don't have to worry about lying to the audience."

-.....

"Besides, we have work to do. By now, new chairs should have been installed in our theater. Please select only the VIP seats, mark them clearly, and set the price at twelve times the regular seats."

-Twelve times?

The director was astonished.

-Isn't that too expensive?

"Expensive, yes. But only those who don't mind the price will buy them."

Ding.

I lightly produced a sound with my Aura.

"From what I've seen, proud warriors will want to watch my performance up close to learn from it."

-.....

"[A show's attendee] might find it too expensive, but [a warrior seeking to learn Aura] will find it a fair price. We attract the former for free and earn from the latter. Trust me, director, and set the price high."

The next day.

From noon, several Hobgoblins began to loiter around the theater.

-Is this the Dog Noise Troupe?

-I heard there's a show next Saturday. I want to reserve front row seats.

-Is that elf in the play? I want tickets to a play featuring that elf.

Despite the price, the Hobgoblin warriors easily bought the seats.

After selling VIP tickets to four individuals, the director looked at me in disbelief.

He had never seen such a thing since opening the theater.

"How about that?"

I smiled warmly.

"My words were right, weren't they?"

Two days later.

All VIP seats were sold out.

Chapter 185: Rookie Actor (3)

---

-Special seats are all sold out!

-Has this ever happened since we joined the troupe?

The actors were thrilled.

-Never. We were lucky if half the seats were filled....

-Are we becoming blockbuster actors?

-Our youngest is a real gem! Ugor!

Even for a third-rate theater in an alley, or rather because of it, the news of VIP seats selling out was a cause for celebration.

But their expressions changed upon hearing the next performance's plan.

-Perform without a single line of dialogue?

The seniors were shocked.

It was unimaginable.

-How on earth....

"Think of it in the opposite way."

I spoke calmly.

"You may not know, but Fire Drama originally had no dialogue. No script either. It was all about moving the flames with Aura. That's the origin of Fire Drama."

-Really?

-Hmmm.

The seniors pressed their upper lips to their philtrums, looking uncertain.

'Well, of course.'

It's obvious for me since I've seen it, but not for these kids.

'It's a story from 900 years ago.'

It's closer to a thousand years than nine hundred. The original form of Fire Drama is beyond the knowledge of today's Earth Spirit Tribe.

I'm the only one in this era who can say this with certainty.

"Seniors, within you, within the Earth Spirits, lies the ability to be immersed in sorrow just by looking at flames. You know? That's a wonderful sensitivity. I believe you can awaken that sense."

-.....

"Dialogue only gets in the way. The reason your acting is poor isn't because you are. It's because you treat Fire Drama as [someone else's story]!"

I looked at each Hopgoblin.

One-eyed.

One-armed.

One-eared.

Actors who had lost something were there.

"Seniors, you all have shining gems in your hearts. They're just buried. A gem or a pebble, it makes no difference if it's buried in a sand dune. I'll take you to that sand dune. And I'll help you love acting sincerely."

-How can you say such embarrassing things so casually.

I nodded.

"It's the truth."

-.....

"In the next seven days."

I infused Aura into my hand.

Then, I carved a large [7] on the theater wall.

"I'll teach you how to use Aura without sleeping for the next seven days."

That night, the special lessons began.

---

"Sit comfortably. As relaxed as possible. Stretching your legs is fine."

The actors comfortably sat on the stage.

"Good. Anyone with stiff shoulders? Any discomfort, let me know. I'll massage it out. No one? Okay. Let's start."

I spoke in front of the seniors.

"Now, usually, Aura is dismissed as something mental. [Manifest your will] or [Awaken your spirit]. Just a bunch of indecipherable words. Seniors, try to manifest your will and raise Aura."

-Uh....

The actors tried to raise Aura, somewhat bewildered.

A faintly wavering mirage.

No clear shape or direction.

Compared to Uburka, the legendary warrior, one could say they had no talent.

"Not working well, is it?"

The actors looked embarrassed.

-Uh, well. Sometimes it works ...

"Right. There are days when it [scratches well]. Good condition, emotions flowing, and Aura coming out smoothly. But that's not enough."

-Not enough?

"From now on, you should be able to pull out Aura freely whenever you want."

-Ugor.

The seniors laughed awkwardly.

If only it were that easy.

A smile rooted in life's resignation.

I too smiled.

"Let me suggest something. Let's not use the word [will] here. It's true that Aura moves with will. But the activation of Aura is not due to will."

-Hmm?

"Aura is activated by [memory], not [will]."

That was my conclusion.

A truth learned in the world of the 'The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon,' from my master.

"Seniors, you need to learn [how to recall memories well]. Not some vague notion like [strengthening your will]."

-Recalling memories well....

"Yes. As vividly as possible."

I earnestly looked into the eyes of the Hopgoblins.

"Seniors. Think of the [sea]."

The actors closed their eyes.

-Hmm.

"Did you think of it?"

-Yes.

"Okay. Let me guess. You imagined a horizontal line stretching on both sides, right? Like a painting on canvas. Pretty blue. Right?"

The seniors all nodded in unison.

I grinned.

"That's the most basic level of memory. A memory association to be avoided when using Aura."

-Ugor?

"You didn't think of the sea. You just recalled the word [sea]. Such basic memory can never fully unleash Aura. Now!"

I clapped my hands.

"Stand up!"

The actors got up uneasily.

"Now imagine standing on a sandy beach. The feeling of sand around your ankles. Imagine it. Ssshhh. The seawater flows between your toes. It covers up to your ankles and then retreats. Ssshh."

-.....

"What's the color of the seawater? Blue?"

-No. It's clear.

"How does the water feel between your toes? Hot?"

-Cool.

"Refreshing, right? And the seawater? Just clear?"

-No... there are muddy particles.

"The waves bring in the mud. Okay. Now imagine sand getting stuck between your toes, and tiny dirt particles clinging to your ankles."

-Hmm.

"I personally dislike that feeling. It's scratchy, right? The grains mixed with salty water feel sticky."

-Right.

"You went into the sea and got your calves soaking wet. The saltiness feels uncomfortable. What will you do now? What's your next move?"

The actors each had a response.

-I'd go to a well and wash my feet first.

-Since I'm already at the sea and wet, might as well swim....

-Are there any clams?

Okay.

"That's a much [stronger memory]."

I said.

"Seniors, from now on, when you try to recall something, never start from a word, like [sea]. Start from a very specific sensation, like [the feeling of your feet submerged in seawater]. Your memory will naturally assist you."

I looked at the one-eyed Hoptgoblin.

"How was it when you first thought of the [sea]? It was just a simple blue, like a simple canvas painting, right?"

-Ugor.

"But how about when you imagined dipping your feet? It's clear, right?"

-Yes.

"Not just clear, but you also recalled the uncomfortable sensation. You even thought about what to do next. That's it."

The proper way to recall a memory.

Like the feeling of a grain of sand caught between toes, recalling the most specific sensation.

If you can do that adeptly, Aura naturally intensifies.

"---If any of you have a memory of [almost dying in a fire]."

Fwoosh.

A flame easily ignited in my hand.

"With your Aura, you could even depict a hellfire. The brink of death forces a memory onto a person."

-.....

"There might be people born with natural acting talent. Just naturally exuding sad emotions, acting vividly as if in the midst of a real battlefield. You seniors might envy those actors. Even feel jealous. Seniors, want to know the secret of how they acquired such talent?"

I spread the flame wider in my hand.

"They have memories."

Trauma.

"How can they act as if they're really in the middle of hellfire? Simple. To them, the world itself is hell. Always, every day. They're trapped in the shadow of memories they can't escape no matter what."

-.....

For example, Uburka.

Even the strongest warrior in the history of the Earth Spirit Tribe was the same.

He suffered severely from albinism.

Sunlight, a blessing for others, was a hostile blade for Uburka. Walking under the sun was like battling and overcoming enemies. Naturally, the boy surrounded himself with Aura.

"The play we will perform next week, [The Fiery Sword Dance], is about Kekerkker's disappointment and anger towards the Flame Emperor. You are not Kekerkker. Nor the Flame Emperor. But, don't you have experiences of being disappointed by someone?"

I looked at each actor in turn.

One-eye. One-arm. One-ear.

I saw the children, each broken in one way or another.

"Ever disappointed someone?"

-.....

"Unlikely you haven't."

I extinguished the flame.

"We've all experienced being scumbags, and we've all been scumbags to someone else. Any of you seniors can be Kekerkker. The Flame Emperor... Ah... that's a bit more difficult. His very existence is a challenge. So, I'll take the role of the Flame Emperor in the next play."

Even with special lessons, there's a limit of time.

Among us, I'm the only one who can embody Yoo Soo-Ha.

The remaining three actors looked up at me with six eyes.

-So...

-Who will play Kekerkker?

-Who's going to take the role?

"One of you."

I answered.

"The one with the highest achievement over the next week will get the lead role."

In other words.

"The one who's been most profoundly disappointed by people, who is still feeling that disappointment, will take the lead."

The seniors fell silent.

---

-My father gambles.

The one-eyed actor's name was 'Arika'.

-He's been like that since I was a kid. He started working in a forge when he was young, got into gambling following his colleagues. Turned out he had a knack for it.

There are a few worlds where those without talent are more miserable than those with it.

Gambling is one of them.

-Some days he'd win a mountain of gold coins. On such days, he'd buy villas, even had me live there. Hired expensive tutors, housekeepers. Got anything I wanted.

"How long does it last?"

-At most 2 years. At least 3 days. Usually about 2 months...

The one-eyed Arika muttered.

-When he wins at gambling, he starts a business. Hostels for gamblers, lending money to swindlers. Sometimes it goes well. But when business falters...

Business always has its ups and downs.

If riding the wave during good times is skill, enduring the bad times is a talent.

-He always tries to cover losses with gambling.

Arika's father simply lacked the ability to endure.

-This is how it is. If the daily revenue is 3 gold coins and it falls short, he makes up with gambling. He says it's business, an inevitable trade strategy.

The one-eyed Arika sighed.

-I don't have a home. It's always been villas or inns. No place I stayed long enough to call home. The most intense gambling cities, then to slightly less intense, then to even worse...

The one-eyed Arika slowly wrapped his head.

-One day, a woman came to the inn. My lifestyle was a mess, so even long past noon, I was sleeping in my inn room. Someone knocked on the door. I opened it with a scowl.

「Are you Mr. Arika?」

-At a glance, she seemed significant. I thought my dad had caused trouble again. Occasionally, people who lent money to my dad would come, or maybe it was someone from the inn.

「Is your father here?」

「No.」

-I had just woken up, looking a mess. My expression completely wrinkled. So, I held the doorknob, ready to close the door if necessary.

「Who are you?」

「.....」

The woman didn't answer.

She mumbled something and left the inn.

The one-eyed Arika closed the door, feeling puzzled. In the evening, he mentioned the woman to his father.

-That woman was my mother.

"....."

-She left when I was three. I didn't recognize her.

Arika's eyebrows furrowed under his hand-covered forehead.

-It's okay. But I keep thinking about the expression I had then. I was annoyed. Looked at her as if she was a huge bother. Held the doorknob. I hate that. I don't understand.

Arika looked down at the floor with his one eye.

-But why did my mother call me [Mr. Arika]? Why [Mr.]? I don't understand. I heard my name was thoughtfully chosen by both my father and mother. But why [Mr. Arika]? I don't get it.

His muttering flowed out.

-Damn.

Next.

The one-eyed actor left, and the one-armed actor entered.

White tattoos ran across his torso, stopping at his right shoulder.

-I'm a drug dealer.

The one-armed actor's name was 'Yumar'.

Chapter 186: Flame

(1)

---

-I was born in a pathetic little village.

The one-armed Yumar said.

-In the countryside, there's nothing to do even as you grow up, so I just hung around with kids my age. Sometimes watching for tigers coming down from the mountains, collecting tolls from merchants passing through the village... It was a village as poor as dried-up tree bark.

Yumar scratched his forehead.

Green frown lines creased.

-Have you ever killed someone?

“Yes.”

-So, quite a few, I see.

The one-armed actor nodded.

He didn't seem too surprised.

-Where was the first place you saw blood? On the battlefield?
Or...

“It was on a hunting ground. I killed with an ambush.”

-Ah, not exactly a warrior's feat.

Yumar lifted the corners of his mouth.

Anyone confessing to murder smiles at least once during the conversation.

Everyone does.

It's not about laughing or talking about murder. It's mocking oneself for bringing up such a topic, for the act of confessing. They subtly hope that others will join in their mockery.

“Yes, right. I was no warrior.”

That moment is crucial.

That's when you must not join in their laughter.

I asked calmly without changing my expression.

“What about you, senior?”

-.....

The smile faded from Yumar's lips.

-...A few years ago, I think it's been 13 years. The village chief kept going to other villages. At first, I thought he was visiting friends, but he went too often. After 7 months, the chief came back looking triumphant.

「I've created a business for our village. You fools.」

The business the chief learned from the neighboring village was drug manufacturing.

-At first, he gathered the loafers in the village. There were about six of them. Villages like mine had plenty of aimless young men like me. Um, it was called [Dogwood Flower]. The one that kills your Fairy Tribe instantly. They extracted it and solidified it into pills....

“You're not just a simple drug dealer, but the head of an organization, senior.”

-.....

The one-armed Yumar shut his mouth.

-How did you know?

“I can tell just from a little conversation. Senior, you're smart. Exceptional memory. You remember that the village chief lurked in the neighboring village for 7 months 13 years ago, right? You're good with numbers.”

I poured tea into Yumar's cup on the table.

Thanks to my direct training from Raviel, my tea ceremony skills had improved dramatically.

It's a pity that this troupe only has cheap tea leaves.

“You even know how to manufacture drugs. You remember everything about the village chief, so you're not just a henchman. Either a boss or at least a deputy. You were a core member of the organization.”

-...You're quick-witted.

Yumar gave a bitter smile and lifted the cup with his one arm.

He took a sip of tea and looked slightly surprised.

-Damn. Why does it taste so good?

“Then what was it really like?”

-...Yeah, right. I was the head of the village organization. Turned out I had a knack for managing the kids. Also had good luck.

It was more than just luck.

He was a genius.

Yumar's [business] expanded rapidly.

-I had a talent for business.

He gathered the village youths to form a militia and swallowed the neighboring village to expand his organization. Boss Yumar personally supervised the drug manufacturing process, ensuring quality.

Yumar's drugs were recognized as top-quality and spread along the waterways of the Elf ports.

「 Essence of Saintess. 」

「 Scholar's Powder. 」

All were hit products initiated by Yumar.

Despite lacking special talent in Aura, Yumar commanded a hundred subordinates. His men called him [a warrior among warriors].

Just when his group was about to grow from a hundred to five hundred, Yumar had an intuition.

-I felt it coming. If I continued like this, we'd be screwed.

It was instinct.

-The Fire River Council is lenient. They don't mind if you sell drugs to non-goblins. Rich elves, for instance. But if those street thugs number 100 or 500, it's a different story.

Yumar's organization had grown too well.

-No evidence, no suspicion, but I just felt it. It's now! If I don't cut ties now, we'll all be doomed.

Yumar gathered his friends.

Let's end the business.

The friends who used to extort tolls together in the village had become organization executives, with their fangs grown.

-Those bastards nodded in agreement in front of me.

“So, you ended it?”

-Not at all. That very night, they all barged in and tied me up. Threatened me to reveal the drug manufacturing method. The daggers they wielded were even ones I bought for them, threatening my life. Those motherfuckers.

Yumar spilled his know-how while crying.

He swore never to touch the business again, nor seek revenge.

His childhood friends admired Yumar's oath.

-My right arm was gone.

But he saved his life.

The boss of the organization became 'the One-Armed Yumar'.

-I didn't join the troupe with any acting ambitions. Just roamed the streets, and the troupe leader took pity and took me in. That was 10 years ago. All in the past. Well, acting turned out to be fun.

“What happened to the organization?”

-.....

“It collapsed.”

The one-armed Yumar quietly looked at his tea cup.

-Not long after I was ousted, it was annihilated. I heard the Council sent 13 of the top 100 to handle it. All five hundred members were killed.

“What happened to your childhood friends?”

-Dead. They were executives.

Yumar sniffed.

“You think it's your fault, senior.”

-.....

“You think it's wrong because you were too outstanding, because the organization grew too well. If the business had just rolled on or failed completely, those village people wouldn't have died. You blame yourself for not stopping the village chief back then.”

-Damn.

The Hopgoblin gulped down the rest of his tea.

-Good riddance. Those idiots.

Next.

Finally, the one-eared actor entered.

Holding an old lion doll in his arms.

-I used to be a servant in a prestigious family....

The one-eared actor's name was 'Sakum'.

-Saw the master of the house sleeping with someone, not their spouse. Well, I didn't actually see it, heard it through the wall. Wasn't even trying to listen. Didn't feel anything about it. But because they knew I heard their moans, they cut off my ear...

The one-eared Sakum muttered expressionlessly.

-Isn't that too much?

The one-eyed Arika.

Son of a gambler.

The one-armed Yumar.

Former drug boss.

The one-eared Sakum.

Former servant of a prestigious family.

"Yes."

I nodded in front of the actors.

"Let's dance. Seniors. We have a week."

In one week.

The day of the play arrived.

The house was full.

---

-Is this the 'Dog Noise Troupe'?

-Strange. I've been here before, but it didn't have this name...

The audience started gathering 30 minutes before the play.

Spectators who saw the street performance and came, those who heard rumors, and those who just wandered in seeing the crowd. Not only the VIP seats but also the standing areas were packed.

-No watermelon beer? What about watermelon fries? Ugor, unbelievable.

-Does this theater even want to make money...

-Really. There's one Fairy Tribe member working here who is amazing. They can manipulate Aura at will, making sound out of thin air. No, really! Why would I lie...

-Ugor. If someone doesn't come clean about touching my butt, you'll witness not a Blood Flower but a bloodbath.

-It's a play without a single line of dialogue.

-Just an exaggerated advertisement.

-They even offer refunds?

-There are too many people!

The place was bustling like a market.

Backstage, the seniors peeked at the audience.

-Damn.

The seniors were tense.

Especially the one-armed Yumar.

-I saw it! In the VIP seats, someone with red tattoos, that's definitely Morcan, ranked 21st in the Council. Damn.

"Who's that?"

-A madman who adds a centimeter of tattoo for every enemy head he takes on the battlefield. Look at the tattoos all over that guy!

The one-eared Sakum also muttered anxiously.

-Actors from the troupes 'Flame' and 'Fire Demon' are here too.

-Ugor. Where?

-There... the two wearing masks in the VIP seats. I can't see their faces, but I recognize them. One is Sormakunda, the ace of 'Flame,' and the one next to him is Jamahan, recently popular in 'Fire Demon'...

-Why are they here to see us!?

-Not here to see us.

The one-eyed Arika spoke.

Arika kept checking his makeup in the mirror, seeming uncomfortable.

-They're here to see Ssoniya.

There was nothing special about the makeup.

Bare body. Just a cloth tied around the waist and black tattoos all over the body. That was it.

-Right. It's incredible. Isn't our youngest just a rookie, debuting after only a week of selection? This is their debut performance. Filling the house on their first stage is unprecedented among elf actors.

-Even including our tribe, it seems unprecedented...

"Let's start soon."

I opened my mouth.

The seniors, who were chatting to ease the tension, suddenly fell silent.

"We've practiced hard for a week. Don't worry. Even if your body doesn't move or your limbs don't cooperate, it's fine. Just relax."

-Are we going to fail...?

"I'll control your bodies with Aura. Don't resist needlessly."

-That's impossible... No, it must be possible. Damn.

The four of us joined hands.

I lightly sent out Aura.

"Relax."

Red Aura flowed through the seniors' arms.

They twitched, their shoulders moved.

But maybe because they got used to my Aura during the last week's special training, the seniors soon inhaled deeply and calmly accepted the Aura. I massaged their muscles like the whole body, relaxing them.

-Uhm.

-Ugor....

Their expressions relaxed.

Definitely less tense than before.

"You don't need to worry. As you know, no one out there expects much from this Fire Drama. Expectations are at rock bottom. Just doing what we practiced will be a hit for the audience. Okay?"

The seniors nodded cautiously.

Okay.

"Let's begin."

I rolled my foot.

Kwoong!

My footwork vibrated the air with Aura.

-What's that?

-What's happening?

From the other side of the stage, the audience was surprised. Startled by the sudden sound, the Hopgoblins stopped their chatter and looked around. I kept moving my feet, undeterred.

Kwoong, kong! Kong!

The sounds of my feet were not just rhythms. Each footstep carried a pitch.

-Aura?

The audience too noticed the specific pattern in the sounds, showing surprise in a different sense. The most astonished were those sitting in the front row of the VIP section.

-My goodness. It's not a voice but a sound made solely from Aura?

-Right. It's Aura. I told you, even in the street performance....

At that moment, the one-eyed Arika burst forth.

On the dimly lit stage.

Arika ran with his legs spread as wide as possible, like a sprinter, infusing each step with a vast stride. Naturally, the audience's gaze was drawn.

Thud-

The focus of the audience wasn't just because of the appearance of one character.

Boom-

Every time Arika's feet touched the stage, a new melody embroidered the air.

What was a single melody line expanded into a complex one.

Before the audience could fully settle their surprise, the one-armed Yumar and the one-eared Sakum, one after another, burst onto the stage.

The same was true for them.

With every actor's step, rhythm flowed throughout the theater.

Three melodies. Three strands intertwined, finally starting the music.

-Good heavens.

The auditorium became quiet.

Not a few spectators opened their mouths, but not intentionally. They were unwittingly murmuring, mouths agape.

-Could they really be producing all that...

-Using Aura to create sound?

Yes.

Not dialogue, but music.

Not a play, but a dance.

I was conducting a one-man orchestra through Aura.

Chapter 187: Flame

(2)

---

In the dark space, the sound of drums echoes.

Doom...

No, it's not the sound of drums. Thud. It seems like footsteps, but since no one is moving their feet, it's not that either. Thud. Thud. Thud. The actors – one-eyed, one-armed, one-eared – who were already isolated on the stage, swiftly turn their heads towards the direction of the sound.

I am there.

Wrapped in flames, I crawl onto the stage.

-Wagar...

Flame Emperor.

The actors shiver.

-Kar...

-Ke.

-Karkasa...

A fearful trembling. The actors, like snakes hidden in the shadows, whisper among themselves, vibrating the hollow stage with their tremors.

-Shi.

-Lak.

-Gur.

This is not a language of the present. It's from a time long ago, under primitive trees, when voice and speech were indistinguishable. The actors murmur in whispers from that era. Shi. Lak. Gur. Shi. Lak. Gur.

-.....

The ominous whispering has silenced the audience.

The Hopgoblins could not understand the language murmured by the ancestors in ancient times.

But it's not about understanding.

The audience holds their breath. They can feel the eeriness and unease that the green-skinned creatures naturally exude in their vocal cords.

-Shi.

-Lak.

-Gur.

The actors circle around me in fear. Shi. Each step they take resonates with my Aura, playing music. Lak. As their steps slow, so does the music. Gur. As their steps approach me, the music intensifies.

-Wagar.

My flames spread across the dark stage.

[Yes.]

I move on all fours like a beautiful savage.

[I am the Flame Emperor.]

A growling moan escapes my lips.

The approaching actors hesitate and flinch.

[I am the fire of the world.]

My voice transforms into Aura.

A beast-like growling emanates from my mouth.

[I am the successful one.]

The stage floor shakes, and the air in the dark audience area trembles.

Aura smelling of blood.

The melody is strange, and the rhythm is odd. Shi-lak-gur. Bizarre music plays. Shi-lak-gur. With a mocking laughter that insults the world and ridicules humans, the audience in the front row shudders.

[Envy me. Be jealous. Worship me.]

What comes from my mouth is merely a hiss, a flick of the tongue. No need for more words. I speak not with words but with sounds of Aura.

[The world is just kindling to burn me a little more.]

Shi.

[I find your jealousy tiresome. I want you to recognize my annoyance. Fire cannot burn alone. You, insignificant beings, must exist as endless fuel around me.]

Lak.

[I laugh at my success. Thus, I laugh even louder at your failures. I mock your attention. Therefore, I mock you even more for not receiving attention.]

Gur.

[I am humble.]

[I observe everything with indifferent eyes. With a calm face, I look upon all life. Even my success loses its heat before my eyes. But since I am more successful than anyone, I constantly remind you of my success.]

[Indifferent eyes.]

[With a calm face.]

[Thus, your success is not success before me. Your struggles become worthless because you have not succeeded. From your greatest hardships to your smallest successes, everything is insignificant before me.]

I step forward.

Flames rise.

The actors scatter in shock. They are fleeing.

-Wagar!

Laughter clings to my teeth.

[You act like humans.]

[But there is only one human in this world.]

[The name of the only human, it's 'I'.]

The flames grow fiercer.

My fire envelops the stage and swallows the audience.

-Gasp

Groans echo among the seats.

Some spectators instinctively release their Aura to counter my fire.

I laugh deeper, and the music plays louder.

[Only I am human.]

My flame easily twists and captures the audience's Aura.

And then, gently strokes the necks of the audience with six tongues of flame.

-....., Ugh....

A spectator in the front row convulses. Was he the 21st ranked warrior? His eyes bulge as he sweats profusely.

The theater is now a hellfire.

[I introduce my success and say 'it's nothing.']

[Then what are you, who haven't even achieved nothing?]

[Less than nothing.]

[Merely dust that failed to become anything.]

The laughter of the Flame Emperor.

The movements of the Flame Emperor's arms.

I look around the stage with the Flame Emperor's smile.

The actor, the one-eyed Arika, flinches as our eyes meet.

[I love beasts that expose their tender necks.]

I charge.

The one-eyed Arika screams and runs away.

[The purity of trusting someone. The innocence of exposing oneself.]

[These are soft enough to swallow in one bite!]

Flames rise where Arika tries to escape.

The one-eyed Arika shrieks and turns to run in another direction.

I block him again with a curtain of fire.

I corner the prey.

-Save me!

Arika's mouth moves, but no sound comes out.

Just as Aura can create sound, it can also block it.

I snatch Arika's scream midway, crushing it.

[Why run?]

-Save me, please....

[Do not run. I am your father.]

Arika screams until his throat is hoarse.

-Please! Save me, don't kill me... Don't kill me...!

But his voice does not reach the audience.

To them, Arika merely mouths silently and struggles desperately.

-.....

The audience watches in breathless silence as the mute death throes unfold.

[My child.]

I slink towards Arika.

[I will not harm you.]

I imprison Arika within a curtain of fire.

Closing in, narrowing his space to move.

Arika collapses like a child trapped in a small room.

-Don't kill me...

[It's okay.]

-Please....

The one-eyed child sheds tears.

-Save me, mom...

At that moment.

I open my jaws wide and bite Arika's neck.

My fangs do not pierce the flesh.

Instead, Aura, filled with murderous intent, slices into the flesh.

-Aaaaaaaah!

Arika struggles.

He screams, engulfed in agony.

I no longer contain the sound. I let his screams burst out and resonate through the theater.

-Aaaah! Aaaaaaaah!

The audience, who until now had only witnessed silent struggles, flinched at the sudden eruption of screams. What unfolded before their eyes couldn't be dismissed as mere 'acting.'

-What...

-That, that....

Some swallowed hard. Some groaned. A few in the back rows, mistaking it for reality, got up and ran out of the theater. But most of the audience, mesmerized by the flames, stared blankly at the stage.

[I am the fire of the world.]

The hunt doesn't stop.

In the midst of the inferno.

I become a beast intoxicated with blood, chasing the next prey.

The one-armed Yumar and the one-eared Sakum scream and flee.

-Save us!

The music flows.

-It's chasing us! The monster is chasing us!

I am not at fault.

If there is any fault in me, it's the fault of the world that birthed me. It's the fault of the world that made me this way.

People just flow in the shape the world has bent.

If they live as they were made, where is my fault in that?

[Let's dance!]

Shi, Lak, Gur.

[The whole world is my stage!]

Shi. Lak. Gur.

[Do not resent me. I am just like you. Merely a being born of this world.]

[I am just stronger.]

[It's nature's law that the weak are eaten by the strong. So, should you not blame the world, not me?]

Scattered flames.

I become wild, running rampantly.

Spewing fire at will, freely gnashing my teeth.

-Aaaaaah!

The one-armed Yumar falls. The one-eared Sakum is downed.

It's okay. They are mere beasts.

To humans, beasts are nothing more than meat, so this is not murder, but merely slaughter.

Doom!

The drumming intensifies.

Doom!

Blood-red flames incinerate the theater.

After all three actors collapse, my roar shows no sign of stopping. Shi! Lak! Gur! The audience trembles, watching the fiery dance writhe on the stage.

-Ugh...!

A young spectator faints. Frothing at the mouth, he collapses onto the shoulder of the person next to him, who is too stiff to help.

Doom!

Finally, the music reaches its climax.

A group of guards burst into the theater, slamming the doors open.

-Everyone stop! We are the law enforcement under the Fire River Council!

Burly Hopgoblins swarm in, surrounding the audience.

-Everyone, stop! Stop everything!

-We received reports of mass murder and arson happening here! Anyone who moves against the warning will be arrested as a suspect! That was the breaking point.

The tense atmosphere snapped like a string.

Only then did the audience begin to breathe, having held their breath till now.

-Gasp

-Guh... Oh, Huh...!

People collapsed here and there, as if shedding their skins.

Their strength drained, sliding off their seats.

"Uh."

I too break out of immersion, frowning at the law enforcement officers. I wonder how serious the report was to barge in like this, but the Hopgoblin officers were on guard in all directions.

-Start the rescue!

-Where's the arsonist!?

-There are people down on the stage!

The Hopgoblins rushed towards the actors. The one-eyed Arika, the one-armed Yumar, and the one-eared Sakum. They mistook the actors lying on the stage for 'casualties.'

Of course, there were no actual casualties in the performance.

-No... wait a minute.

-No need to help me up. I'm fine!

The actors waved off help, rising one by one.

-Any injuries? Head wounds?

-No, I'm totally fine!

-We heard there was a mass slaughter here. Where did the perpetrator flee? Were you taken hostage?

-What...

The one-eyed Arika looked incredulous.

-What mass murder and hostage? That never happened.

The one-armed Yumar shouted.

-We were acting! In the middle of a performance!

The officers hesitated.

-...Acting?

-Yes! During a performance! We are a troupe! Dog Noise Troupe! This is a theater, and we were in the middle of a play!

-.....

Meanwhile, I was being held by officers who had misunderstood the situation. I could easily break free if I wanted, but I went along with them, astonished by the absurdity of it all.

The officers slowly turned to me.

-We received a report of a fire...

I nodded.

Whisk.

Aura flared from my fingertips.

"It's my Aura. It resembles fire."

...We heard a beast was savagely attacking innocent people.

"I was playing the role of a bastard, and those senior actors were playing the victims. Naturally, I took them down during the play."

In short.

"It seems the acting was so realistic that someone reported it."

-.....

Realizing their mistake, the officers' expressions changed from alert to embarrassed.

The audience already began to stir.

-What's this.

-Who reported it...?

Reactions quickly escalated.

-What about the play?

-Don't tell me it's over like this?

-What's happening!

-These stupid law enforcement runts!

-Always barging in first and thinking later!

Buzzing all around.

The chief officer's face quickly soured.

I grinned broadly and approached him.

"What now, sir? Seems like today's performance is ruined."

-Uh...

"Sorry, everyone! Due to an unfortunate incident, today's performance ends here! Following the law enforcement's 'cease' warning, our Dog Noise Troupe stops! Everyone, please exit orderly following the officers' guidance. Oh, but..."

I smiled widely at the officer.

"Will you cover the refunds for the performance?"

-.....

The audience exploded.

The city's theater scene also exploded that day.

Because of a play that was "too realistic and resulted in a police report."

Chapter 188: Flame

(3)

---

In the Earth Spirit Tribe, there exists a word for 'everything'.

About 1000 years ago, a word encompassing all human emotions – from the tenderest joys to the deepest wounds of life – was born. Whenever the Earth Fairies felt joy or sorrow, they would invariably utter this one-word phrase.

-Damn!

Today was a day many people used that word.

-It was going so well! It was really, truly great! Those damn bastards, as worthless as dog shit!

The one-eyed Arika spat out vulgar curses.

The other actors also vehemently expressed their outrage.

-Right. How can they interrupt us, especially at the climax!?

-It's not just about refunding the audience. We should get refunded too. How much we've been beaten up for today's performance. All our efforts have been trashed because of this.

The senior actors grumbled.

Their irritation about the interrupted performance, and more than anything, their anger over the broken 'immersion,' was significant.

-But, we had to move upon receiving the report....

The Hopgoblin law enforcement officer sweated profusely.

It must have been frustrating for them too. Who would have thought? In a world where crazy reports are commonplace, to receive a report mistaking a play for reality.

-It wasn't just one or two people. Exactly five people simultaneously made the same report.

And it was a report with high credibility.

-Five reports of arson and indiscriminate murder at the same time, how could we not respond...

-So, you're saying it's our fault?

-Well, maybe if you had acted a little less realistically...

-Is that some kind of joke?

Hearing such a remark from the Dog Noise Troupe, the officer looked wronged.

"Alright. I understand the situation of the law enforcement," I said.

We had come to the police station for an investigation.

Though it was clear we were not guilty, an investigation had to be conducted for formalities' sake.

In one corner of the police station building hung a sign that read, "Prevention is better than cure." Maybe a motto for the law enforcement?

"Still, we'll be claiming compensation. We have to at least break even. We can't just live off dirt. I know you law enforcement officers didn't know, but our troupe is really in a tough spot. If this performance had failed, we were close to shutting down."

-Ugh...

The officers looked dismayed.

They had already completed their investigation about me.

Everything from [Can you really manifest Aura resembling flames?] to [Do you have the skill to flip a theater upside down with Aura?] and [Is it true that you can freely play music with Aura?].

Of course, it all turned out to be true.

I had demonstrated Aura myself at the police station.

The officers' gazes at me were mixed with astonishment, as if wondering, 'Where did this monster drop from?'

"But," I smiled slyly.

"As I said, I understand your position. So, if you agree to just one condition of ours, I'll only take a minimal apology fee."

-A condition...?

"I'll give you complimentary tickets to the VIP seats. Please come to our next performance."

The senior actors turned their heads sharply to look at me.

-Junior! What kind of nonsense is that!

-To give away VIP seats for free when we should be milking every penny!

-I think that's not quite right, Junior.

Ah, these seniors really don't know how to do business.

I grinned.

"Ahem."

-.....

Thud.

The actors who had been grumbling fell silent. Then they sneakily glanced at me. After a week of hellish training, the seniors had learned when to press and when to hold back.

"Where was I? Oh yes, inviting to the VIP seats."

The officers looked at me with a strange expression.

Grown Hopgoblins, calling a delicate elf 'Junior! Junior!' - it was like watching a mafia don with his henchmen. Definitely not a normal sight.

"We invite the law enforcement officers to our troupe. Formally. I know you're all very busy, but if even four or five of you could make the time to come, we'd be grateful. Then we'll really take only the bare minimum of the apology fee."

-Why...

The officer seemed confused.

-I mean, that's fine by us. But why would you formally invite us?

I slightly lowered my eyebrows.

Trying to look as pitiful as possible.

"It's just... seeing you officers getting scolded by the audience at the theater, it broke my heart."

-Ugh? It broke your heart?

"Yes. You were just fulfilling your duty as law enforcement. Thinking about how you might be getting scolded everywhere else, I wanted to do something for you.... We are actors, after all. I thought it would be nice if you could come and watch the performance and find some comfort...."

This was the killer expression that Raviel praised as "like a wet puppy's eyes, subtly tickling the edges of the heart." I even got my head patted four times for it.

Sure enough, the Hopgoblins were moved.

-This is unbelievable.

-What kind of elf is this? Is he an angel?

-We stopped such a young actor's performance. Our fault is great!

You guys trust people too easily.

I'm starting to worry about this dad.

-Troublesome... you rascal....

'What? Why?'

-...Nothing. Right, I have nothing to say to you.

Guardian Spirit, sighing deeply. Why is he like that? Do ghosts get senile?

Anyway, the officers happily accepted the invitation. They might not bring many due to their schedules, but they promised to show their gratitude.

On the way back to the theater from the police station.

-I didn't know our Junior had such a commendable heart....

Yumar, the one-armed actor, muttered.

We were dragged out in the middle of acting, so we were still in our theatrical attire. Walking down the street, only wrapped in cloth around our waists and covered in black tattoos, passersby glanced at us curiously.

-Right. It was a bit unexpected.

-I always thought our Junior was a demon who came out of Kekerkker's disguise.

-We were just angry about the interruption of the performance.... But after seeing Junior, I felt ashamed.

Tsk tsk.

I clicked my tongue.

"Really, don't you get it? Seniors. We've received a huge compensation."

- Ugor?

"Money is something we can earn by performing a few more times. We can even do another show tomorrow. But, what we've created just now is a [bait]."

The three senior actors tilted their heads in unison.

-What's that, Junior?

Come on. They're so cute.

Reminded that the Earth Spirit Tribe is the cutest in the universe, I calmly explained.

"We have the skills and the works to perform. All our troupe needs now is public attention. And probably by tomorrow, everyone in the city will be talking about what happened today."

「The law enforcement rushed in after receiving a report of a fire.」

「 But it turned out to be just a play. The Aura was so lifelike that the audience mistook it for a real fire and reported it. 」

"This is exactly what bait is."

In other words, a topic of conversation.

"Every person in the Earth Spirit Tribe is a potential customer. Everyone, young and old, watches fire dramas. If they hear [The Aura was so realistic that they mistook it for a real fire], wouldn't they be intrigued?"

I added the final piece of bait.

"And if the rumor spreads that our troupe, which suffered damage, invited the law enforcement to the VIP seats?"

-Ugor....

-Indeed.

The actors looked intrigued.

-So, more audience will flock to us?

That's the idea.

"Of course."

But that's not all.

"Besides, I am an Elf. The seniors might not think much of it, but if I continue to succeed like this, surely there will be Earth Spirit Tribe members who'll secretly envy me. Definitely."

Blood plays are an intrinsic part of Earth Spirit Tribe culture.

But imagine a sudden Elf newcomer capturing popularity?

Positive responses would be difficult to come by.

"If they start making up stories and causing trouble, it's better to have the law enforcement on our side. We are actors selling our performances. Being on good terms with law enforcement can only be beneficial."

-.....

"Who knows? Maybe later, when trouble arises, they might subtly take our side. At the very least, they will now blissfully ignore any ridiculous reports."

-That's impressive....

The seniors admired.

-Sometimes you don't seem like an Elf, but with such cunning, you're definitely an Elf.

-Junior is a talent with the heart of Earth Spirit Tribe and the mind of an Elf.

-If only you had more muscles, it would have been perfect....

You guys can keep your muscles.

Unless Raviel suddenly develops a taste for beefy men.

'Gong-Ja.' Raviel whispers in my ear. 'Wouldn't it be nice if you put on a little more weight?' Softly. 'Just a bit more.' Whispering. 'I would like to see your arms thicker than they are now.'

Hmm.

I should get training from the best trainer on the first floor of the Tower right away. What? Internal muscles? Nonsense. Throw it away.

-Junior is grinning foolishly....

-Sometimes he just smiles for no reason.

-I don't know what he thinks about.... Honestly, it's creepy....

-It's scary... It feels bad....

Quiet.

Do you guys know love?

Even if you know love, you wouldn't know Raviel, so essentially, you don't know love. My children.

-There they are!

Just then.

-Ah!

-The actors are back!

A considerable crowd had gathered in front of the theater. One audience member pointed at us. The Hopgoblins loitering around the gate rushed over.

Thud! Thud!

Dozens of Hopgoblins with hill-sized bodies converged.

-What, what's this?

The seniors got nervous.

-What's going on...

-When is the next performance!

One Hopgoblin shouted.

-We paid for the tickets! We are the victims unfairly deprived of the show!

-Exactly!

-We have the right to sit in the seats first at the next show!

-Tickets! Give us the tickets!

It was like a swarm of ghouls.

The seniors were dumbfounded.

-Wait, wait a moment...!

Someone squeezed through the crowd. It was the troupe leader. He had deepened wrinkles as if harassed by the audience while waiting for our return.

-Huff. These people, even when I say we'll surely refund them...

-We don't need refunds!

The Hopgoblins shouted.

-Exactly! We're not asking for refunds!

-Just give us tickets for the next show! There will be a show, right?

-Can the special seats be upgraded to VIP? I heard it's six times more expensive than the regular ones. Can we pay more to upgrade? Just tell us how many VIP seats are left!

The troupe director sweated profusely.

-Ah, the schedule hasn't been set, I tried to tell them, but they are stubborn. There's nothing I can do....

I currently hold the real power in the troupe.

The director did his best by not hastily promising another performance and dealing with the audience until now.

"Everyone."

I smiled brightly and bowed.

"Thank you for loving Dog Noise Troupe's performance. Did you enjoy it?"

-It's not about fun! Ugor!

-That kind of Aura, I've never seen before. But it wasn't just the Aura...

-Anyway, it was amazing! It was intense like fire! There was something!

The audience was excited.

I thanked them again with a bow, but the seniors reacted differently.

More dramatically.

-Our performance...

-.....

Yes.

For one-eyed Arika, one-armed Yumar, and one-eared Sakum, it must be the first time they received such attention.

Like children who saw Santa's gifts for the first time, they didn't know what to do.

"The next play is still being scheduled. Unfortunately, we didn't plan to perform [The Fiery Sword Dance] again."

-That's nonsense!

-It's the tyranny of the law enforcement!

"However, hearing your praises makes me want to repay you, even if there were no plans."

I displayed a business smile (created by Black Dragon Witch).

"Next Saturday, we will perform [The Fiery Sword Dance] once more!"

-Ohh!

"Wait, there's more! Dog Noise Troupe always prioritizes our audience! We will not open tickets to the general public, only to those who attended today! A special performance just for you! A secret performance!"

The audience who missed the climax of the blood play erupted in excitement.

"Thank you for your passionate support! Now, those who want a tattoo, please come in order. We will apply it for you."

In the Earth Spirit Tribe, there's a culture of signing on the skin.

Instead of signing on paper, popular actors imprint tattoos on the skin with soft clay.

Hence, fans of popular actors often flock to theaters with the same tattoo.

"But!"

I grinned.

"To receive a tattoo from us, there's one condition."

-What is it?

"Shout 'Yoo Soo-Ha, the bloody dog,' before getting the tattoo."

The audience laughed.

They probably thought I was joking.

But I was serious.

-Yoo Soo-Ha, the bloody dog. Like this?

"Yes, thank you."

-Yoo Soo-Ha, the bloody dog!

"Thank you."

-Yoo Soo-Ha, the damn dog!

"Oh my. No need for such words. You're wonderful, sir."

The audience giggled, thinking they were joking with an actor, and happily left with tattoos on their shoulders, chests, and backs.

By the way, the tattoo I drew was a dog.

Promoting Dog Noise Troupe and imprinting the fact that Yoo Soo-Ha is a bloody dog, a truly double-purpose tattoo.

-Troublesome... you rascal....

'What? Why?'

-...Nothing. Right, there's no point talking to a madman.

Guardian Spirit sighed again.

This ghost has gone senile. Definitely. Poor thing.

[The power of the heretical sects decreases among the Earth Spirit Tribe!]

[The 'Return to the Ancient Ways' begins to gain popularity among the Earth Spirit Tribe.]

[The possibility of a renaissance opens for the Earth Spirit Tribe.]

[Progress in the quest 'Theatrical Warring States: Crisis of the Classics'.]

[Current Heretical Erosion Rate is 86%.]

There.

Even the Tower is cheering for my actions.

I smiled at the troupe leader and seniors.

"Are you ready to become a hit troupe?"

If not, get ready now.

When daddy starts something, he runs to the end.

Chapter 189: Prima Donna (1)

---

-Sold out! All seats sold out again!

The response to the dance drama was nothing short of explosive.

-The legendary Fiery Sword Dance, so lifelike that even the law enforcement was dispatched! Followed by Burning Grave! Even with the Demon King Ester! The myth of sold-out seats continues!

-The actors' expressions and the dance unfold in the dance drama!

-Board the trend of a new era!

The scale of the Dog Noise Troupe expanded rapidly.

We hired ticketing staff and added more actors.

Even then, unable to keep up with the demand, we could only scream in joy.

-Welcome!

[Current Heretical Erosion Rate is 44%.]

-Where every gesture turns into ecstasy, and every movement becomes temptation!

-Until every life becomes a dance!

[Current Heretical Erosion Rate is 32%.]

-Celebrate the fire of Aura!

I trained the actors even more vigorously.

"Keep your chin up! Always stay relaxed! Anger makes fists clench, and disgust furrows the brow. Your body must react according to your emotions. The more your emotions align with your body, the more naturally your Aura manifests! Ready!"

Clap!

At my clap, the troupe members simultaneously executed the movements.

"Good! Next!"

Clap!

The actors moved their limbs following the choreography I devised. Hefty breaths of the actors flowed on stage. Sweat droplets fell from their foreheads.

"Next!"

Body movements commonly used by Earth Spirit Tribe in primitive times.

Martial techniques accumulated over countless hours by
Demonic Heavenly God Art.

Blending these two origins, I taught the troupe members the choreography.

"Okay! Next!"

Thump!

With the most primal rhythm and the most lethal moves,
the Hopgoblins stamped their feet.

The three original members led the way, and the newly joined actors supported them. In total, twenty-four members danced in perfect timing.

[Current Heretical Erosion Rate is 28%.]

I smiled.

"Good. Take a break."

-Ugor!

-I thought I was going to die!

-So tired... Junior's training is too harsh...

The Hopgoblins collapsed, groaning here and there. Yet, the actors' faces were far from gloomy.

A satisfied expression of sweating pleasurably.

A smile that only those whose daily life isn't disconnected from life itself could wear.

'Hmm.'

Is this good enough for now?

'I think I should retire soon.'

-What?

Ssonia was startled.

Ever since he was possessed by me, Ssonia had been floating around as a spirit, delighted every day as his body earned fame as a renowned actor.

-Kekerkker, retire?

'Yes, retire from your body. I came to this era for a mission. Now that the mission is nearing completion, I should return your body to you.'

-No! I mean, that's impossible!

Ssonia jumped.

-You've come this far, and now you talk of retirement! Kekerkker, you're the top actor of Guru, a legend in Earth Spirit Tribe's history, and the first Elf in history to achieve great success in a blood play! Retirement is impossible! Impossible!

'Good.'

I grinned.

'Wasn't becoming a successful actor your dream? Well, you've succeeded. Now enjoy your successful life to the fullest.'

-But, but!

'Are you scared?'

-.....

Ssonia fell silent.

I shrugged.

'Understandably so. Although you've always wanted success, this isn't your own doing, but something I single-handedly created. If I suddenly leave, you'll be overwhelmed, right?'

-Err... Errr....

'Retire, then.'

I suggested the simplest option.

'Legend of an actor, appeared like a comet but disappeared like one too! Announce retirement and say [I've reached the top, so I have no more interest]! Sure, it'll cause a stir. But maybe it'll even garner more admiration.'

-.....

'Sounds cool, right?'

From the outside, it does.

'If you don't appear on stage, no one will know you've changed. You've earned money, and your fame is tremendous. Enjoy a glamorous retirement.'

-That... seems fine.

Ssonia hesitated, then glanced in the direction the ticketing elf ran off to.

Time passed.

[Black Dragon Witch successfully completes the quest!]

News from my teammates, who had been quiet for a while, began to come in.

Unlike last time, each of us were working on our quests separately.

'Black Dragon Witch finished first.'

Though she lost her rank to me, she still reigned as the top hunter in the strongest guild in the Tower.

'Such experience.'

As I marveled inwardly, a well-groomed elderly vampire visited as a client just two days later.

"Hello."

I was as usual training the members.

Though we surely had closed the theater doors for practice, somehow the elderly vampire managed to enter easily. He then looked at me with a beaming smile.

‘Could he be a stalker fan?’

I had started to notice this sort of fan recently.

However, the vampire's attire was a bit too grand for a stalker fan. A bit too conspicuous, perhaps? A black suit, leather boots, a cane with a gold-plated handle, and silver rings jingling on his shirt.

“Ah, sir. Sorry, but it's not showtime now. If you want to see the actors training, you should make a reservation with the guide....”

“Hmm.”

A deep voice came from the old man.

“We need to make reservations to meet, huh? I didn't know that. Should I apologize for not knowing?”

Wait.

His voice was like a cool elderly voice, but somehow the way he spoke... felt familiar?

"....."

Without him noticing, I raised my Aura to wrap around the old man, but it stopped as if blocked by a transparent barrier.

To stop Aura like this required a profound mastery of its use.

A black aura slowly seeped from the old man's cane.

“Wait, could it be....”

“Hehe.”

The unfamiliar-faced old man chuckled in a familiar rhythm.

I instinctively pointed at him, my mouth agape.

“Black Dragon Witch...!?”

“Exactly. I knew it was you.”

The vampire smiled like a child who had succeeded in a secretive prank.

“Why, how did you....”

“If people hear that the King of Death has possessed an elf, they'll love it.”

The troupe members, engrossed in their practice, glanced over here. Sensing danger, I quickly took the vampire to a dark corner of the theater.

“How did you know it was me? And, didn’t you clear your quest?”

“Yes, I cleared my quest, but I haven’t declared stage clear yet. I didn’t want to be left waiting alone in case you guys didn’t clear in time. Thought it’d be boring, so I came to see what others are up to.”

“Wow....”

Amazed, I observed the vampire, no, Black Dragon Witch.

Somehow, his attire seemed flamboyant, just like Black Dragon Witch's taste.

“You look fantastic in your elder years...”

“Thanks.”

Black Dragon Witch smiled gently.

A smile I had learned to emulate.

“You should take a picture and show it to the Duchess. She’ll love it.”

“I’ve been dying to see Raviel recently....”

“Sounds like that's a recent thing. By the way, I knew you were the King of Death because I asked if there was anyone who suddenly became famous in the largest city of the Earth Spirit Tribe.”

“That's all you needed to guess it was me?”

“Well, who else could it be? The King of Death. You have a knack for monopolizing all the craziness in the world.”

“This girl really knows how to flatter.”

“Anyway, I'm here to see.”

Black Dragon Witch peered out to look at the stage.

“Huh. You really are running a troupe. Dance?”

“Yes, something like that.”

“You dance well? I didn’t know that.”

“It’s called dance, but it’s actually a martial dance. I adapted martial movements into choreography. It’s tough, but I’m managing with my Aura.”

“Modesty is...”

Black Dragon Witch watched the troupe members practicing and then suddenly said.

“I want to see it.”

The vampire's eyes sparkled with curiosity.

“The Fire Drama?”

“Yes. I’ve heard a lot about it. How amazing must it be for the whole city to be ecstatic? When is the next performance?”

“It’s not scheduled yet....”

“Eh.”

“I have a repertoire ready. Um, this is a bit embarrassing, but do you want to see just the beginning of ‘Burning Grave’? It’s set in the 10th floor of the Tower.”

“That would be great.”

“Okay. Find a comfortable seat.”

I went on stage and clapped my hands.

The Hopgoblin troupe members practicing choreography looked at me.

“Alright. Last practice for today. Start with the group choreography from the beginning of Burning Grave. Everyone remembers, right? Good. I’ll play the music, and you start.”

I slowly played the background music with my Aura.

The members demonstrated the choreography, familiar with the movements.

Burning Grave, or [Hellfire Mansion], depicted children frolicking around.

Sometimes flashy.

But always following the movements once cherished by the primitive Earth Spirit Tribe.

The first part of the blood play ended with the choreography of children running around to escape from a slave trader.

“Great work, everyone! Dismissed! Feel free to stay and practice alone. Let me know if you're staying to practice. Yes, great job. See you tomorrow!”

After bidding farewell to each member, I headed to the audience seats.

In the middle sat the elderly vampire, Black Dragon Witch.

“How was it?”

"....."

Black Dragon Witch was silent.

Lost in thought?

She just leaned her chin on his hand, looking at the now-empty stage.

“.....That’s amazing. Why didn’t anyone think of this before?”

“Huh?”

“I’ll come back tomorrow.”

Black Dragon Witch stood up abruptly.

“Black Dragon Witch?”

“Just wait. King of Death. Even if you clear, don’t declare it! Absolutely not! Ah, try to stay here tonight. It’s annoying if we miss each other.... Teleport!”

Black Dragon Witch disappeared. I felt her Aura presence above. Looking up through the hole in the roof, I saw Black Dragon Witch’s figure floating, but soon she disappeared too.

Left alone, I wondered, “What was that...?”

The next day revealed everything.

[Paladin has successfully completed their quest!]

Thirty minutes after hearing Tower's voice.

Whoosh-

Black Dragon Witch’s signature teleportation was activated.

And the sight before me was surreal.

“You! Why are you in such a rush!”

Splash!

An odd sound echoed in the dirt and stone theater. Water. Splash. Where the sound came from... there was a [bathtub].

Yes, a bathtub for bathing.

“Mermaids cannot maintain their energy without water! How many times have I said this! You shouldn’t just throw me into an aquarium and transfer...!”

In the tub, a gilled mermaid splashed, furiously thrashing her tail. Black Dragon Witch, seemingly unapologetic, casually said, "Yeah, sorry, sorry" while comforting the mermaid in the tub.

Mermaid.

Could it be.

“Paladin...?”

Pause.

The mermaid slowly turned her head, meeting my gaze.

“Paladin, right?”

"....."

The mermaid's tail, which had been splashing furiously, slowly submerged in the water.

But it was a bathtub, so everything was clearly visible.

Her limp tail in the water... Yes, it resembled the flapping tail of a flatfish in a fish tank at a restaurant.

She was fully clothed.

Only her flatfish-like tail flapped in the aquarium.

"Sorry."

In the heavy silence pressing down on the theater, Black Dragon Witch casually spoke.

"I know you don't want to show yourself like this to others. But there's something you really need to see. You'll be surprised why nobody thought of this before. You studied music, Paladin. Among us, you're the closest to being an expert...."

"Black Dragon Witch."

"Uh-huh?"

"Die."

Splash!

That was when Black Dragon Witch got doused in tub water.

Chapter 190: Prima Donna (2)

---

"So."

The splashing of the Mermaid in the tub was fierce.

The bathtub water drained in an instant, and Black Dragon Witch had to refill it, following Paladin's order.

"Anyone would think I did something wrong. I even helped with the quest clearance," grumbled Black Dragon Witch.

Paladin sighed at his shamelessness, seemingly used to it.

"Why have you brought me here? Do you need a [Lie Detector] or something?"

"No, that's not it. I don't need your skill. I need your musical talent."

"...My musical talent?"

Paladin furrowed his brow.

Black Dragon Witch nodded earnestly.

"Yes. You used to play a lot before joining the Vigilante Corps, right? You earned way more than you do now with your Vigilante salary, right? To exaggerate a bit, you practically raked in the money, didn't you?"

"That's ancient history... Before I even got my Alias, a story from a very long time ago."

I was perplexed, listening quietly.

Paladin. Ranked seventh.

The Vice-Captain of the Vigilante Corps, responsible for the security of the City of Ascension.

With Sword Saint declaring retirement, Paladin effectively took over the duties of the Corps leader.

I knew he was a refugee from Venezuela and graduated from a music college, but that was all.

Like the other comrades, Paladin seldom talked about his past, so I knew almost nothing about the deputy commander.

"Raking in money? What's this about, you two?"

"It's nothing. Just a worthless past..."

"An untold story. This guy used to earn by playing in jazz concerts."

Despite Paladin's attempts to evade, Black Dragon Witch bluntly interrupted. Paladin glared at him, but Black Dragon Witch just shrugged.

"When we first entered the Tower, there really wasn't much to enjoy. Most people just drank or used drugs for fun. But when Paladin held a concert, hunters flocked..."

"Black Dragon Witch!"

"She gets angry whenever I bring that up. Picky, isn't she? Oh, what was Paladin's nickname back then? Something like 'Diva of the Nigh...'"

"Speak one more word, and it's a declaration of war!"

"Alright, alright. Sorry."

Huh.

This was news to me.

Before regressing, I was quite a fan of famous hunters, though not as much as Flame Emperor. I collected every magazine with Black Dragon Witch, Saintess, or Heretic Inquisitor on the cover. But...

‘There was hardly any information about the early days of the Tower.’

There are stories I don't know, like this one.

I tried to recall.

‘Right, Paladin never appeared in any photo books...’

Not even as a magazine cover model.

Despite being one of the hunters considered the conscience of the Tower, along with Saintess and Master Alchemist.

‘A secret backstory? Could it be that wearing a helmet all the time isn’t just a fashion statement but hides some secret?’

My fan instincts, dormant for years, started to flutter.

I was on the verge of intruding on privacy, so I held back.

"....."

Paladin, noticing our gazes meeting, cleared his throat loudly.

"...I haven't heard why I was called here yet. Black Dragon Witch. If you just wanted to show the King of Death my mermaid form, then I'm willing to expose your dark history too."

"Oh my. What dark history could I possibly have?"

"What you write anonymously and publish in your spare time....."

"King of Death! I want Paladin to see the performance too."

Black Dragon Witch hurriedly interrupted.

What secret? Why am I the only one left out of these secrets? It's so intriguing.

"What do you write anonymously?"

“Sir Gong-ja.”

Black Dragon Witch grabbed my shoulder.

It wasn't a joke; dark Aura was swirling around his body. Even a subtly menacing smile twitched at the corners of his mouth.

“Everyone has a secret they don't tell others. Isn't that right, King of Death? You often brush things off with excuses like being a prophet or something.”

"Uh."

Did she know that was a bluff!?

“But I don't pry too deeply. Because you are my comrade and fellow warrior. True friendship is proven not by what we say to each other, but by what we don't say to each other.”

“That's well said.”

“Sir Gong-ja. We're friends, right?”

I nodded awkwardly. If only the fingers digging into my shoulder were a bit gentler, I would have nodded easily.

“Yes, yes. Of course, we're friends.”

“Yes. My most cherished close friend.”

Suddenly, I became close friends with Black Dragon Witch.

“I thought it would be nice to show Paladin our fire drama.”

I complied with my friend's request.

How could I ignore it?

"....."

Throughout the performance, Paladin remained silent.

The troupe members, who came early in the morning for practice, were slightly taken aback. It was distracting to have a large bathtub in the audience and a mermaid splashing her tail in it.

“.....Indeed.”

Unperturbed by the troupe members' glares, Paladin murmured.

“Remarkable. King of Death, did you invent this yourself?”

“No. Fire Dramas have always existed.”

“Really? A play combining dance and music has always been there?”

“Ah. Not exactly. Choreography and music like this... I thought it would be good to introduce them...”

Paladin's eyes sparkled.

“Why did you think so?”

Fire Dramas originated as an art form of Aura. If they learn dance moves based on martial arts, they'll become more familiar with Aura, and if they learn to play music with Aura, they'll become even more innovative.”

“Ah, I see. A completely different concept!”

Paladin's mermaid tail fluttered on the water's surface.

As if excited like a dog, according to the dog's interpretation method.

“King of Death. Do you realize how exciting your discovery is?”

Paladin looked at me with sparkling eyes.

This was the first time I'd seen Paladin like this.

“What, what is it?”

“You’ve founded a comprehensive art form through Aura.”

Paladin spoke with excited breath.

“Usually, operas and musicals are considered comprehensive art forms. But among these, [music] has always been an unresolved issue. No matter how naturally it's inserted, no matter how much effort is put into making it seem natural, music fundamentally remains detached from the actors.”

“Uh....”

What is she talking about?

“It means the actors can’t interfere directly with the music.”

Paladin explained excitedly.

“Whether you play background music or hire an orchestra, the music that fills the theater isn’t created by the actors. In musicals, they can sing, but it's limited.”

“Hmm...”

I just nodded along.

“Audiences, knowing that the music they hear is actually coming from speakers, still forcibly accept the illusion that it's part of the story unfolding on stage. It's a tacit agreement. But in your fire drama... the actors themselves perform the music! Through Aura!”

Paladin raised his hand.

“This is a significant advancement!”

Paladin flicked his fingers.

Complex and agile melodies infused with Aura resonated in the air.

"Wow."

I was honestly amazed.

Is this what a specialist is capable of?

“Oh, right. I want to learn music from Paladin. I want to play for Raviel...”

“No! That's not the point right now!”

Paladin thumped her chest in frustration.

[not the point]

That was a bit harsh.

"You need to understand what a fantastic discovery you've made! King of Death! People immersing themselves in music recorded by someone else and dancing or acting is meaningful, but being able to pull music, dance, and acting directly from within themselves is amazing! It's innovative! Imagine figure skaters not only performing but also creating music with Aura. How incredible would that be...!"

"Could you summarize that in a sentence, please...?"

"It's freaking awesome! Are you satisfied now?"

So it was a compliment after all.

Then just say that.

"Thank you. It was nothing much."

I grinned sheepishly, scratching the back of my head.

"...Unbelievable."

Paladin seemed frustrated about something, looking up as he pounded his chest.

"The very person who made this discovery doesn't understand its significance... King of Death. This could potentially spark a trend in [Aura Art]. It's a tremendous thing."

"Come on. It's not that big a deal."

I thought Paladin was exaggerating.

"Aura is commonly used to enhance voices for singing, right?"

"I'm not saying you created something that didn't exist in the world. I'm saying you connected things that existed but were never paid attention to."

Paladin sighed deeply.

"Everyone saw Aura only as [for combat] or [for physical enhancement], but you discovered Aura can also be a [transparent instrument]. Now actors can bring forth inner music without relying on props or devices. Not just actors, but musicians, dancers, singers, everyone....."

"And."

Black Dragon Witch naturally joined the conversation, grabbing Paladin's shoulder.

"We've got something to boast about to the outside world now."

Black Dragon Witch smirked.

"People in the outside world always criticize us. When we fight, we're seen as barbarians who know nothing but fighting. If we don't earn money, we're beggars. When we start earning, we're labeled as crude beings who only care about money. Now, if we achieve incredible success in art, I wonder what they'll call us? Wealthy artists? Would that be an insult?"

"Black Dragon Witch..."

It was disheartening.

"I shouldn't be the one to say this, but you're too competitive with the outside world. It's sometimes pitiable."

"Quiet. You have no idea how much our Tower is underestimated."

Her words were harsh, but her expression was soft.

Black Dragon Witch's gaze at me was like looking at a treasure.

She placed a hand on both Paladin's and my shoulders, wearing a contented smile.

"King of Death."

"Yes?"

"Paladin."

"What is it, so ominous."

"I want to push this as a national project."

Black Dragon Witch smiled like an angel.

A smile she never showed to comrades, only in interviews or for magazine photos.

"I did some checking, and King of Death here adapted his experiences into Fire Dramas. Isn't he our Tower's proud rookie and top star?"

"....."

"If we take this and perform it in the Tower, film it, and spread it to the outside world, it would be really good. I wonder if the outside world's artists will be shocked, trying to master Aura and rush into our Tower?"

"Umm....."

Paladin, initially hesitant, gradually changed his expression.

"It's true that I've received several movie offers, but I rejected them all. I was afraid they'd distort our King of Death's image."

Movie offers?

That happened too?

"Now that I see it, Fire Dramas seem much better than movies. Right. Our own art form from the Tower, telling the story of our top star. How good is that?"

I was bewildered.

The conversation was becoming too big, beyond my imagination!

"Wait, just a moment. I didn't really..."

"Certainly."

Paladin slowly nodded.

His mermaid tail fluttered as well.

"Our Tower is poor in terms of art. There's some entertainment in jazz concerts and novels, but there's hardly any large-scale performances."

"That's what I mean. I tried forcing it a few times, but all failed. We keep showing movies from the outside world, and the royalties are astronomical. They charge us more just because it's our Tower. Isn't it annoying?"

"Hmm."

"Let's strike back. Aura is unique to us, the hunters in the Tower. Now we'll move from being a cultural importer to an exporter."

"Not bad..."

Wait.

Black Dragon Witch and Paladin were both staring at me.

"....."

"....."

They nodded to each other, then grinned.

"King of Death, you're amazing."

"Right. It's clear you're a genius for thinking of this."

Wait, what?

"Please... just stop... I'm getting dizzy..."

"King of Death! So glad you're my comrade. I'm so proud!"

"Right. I'll be remembered as a legend just for climbing the Tower with you."

"Please....."

"Amazing!"

"Incredible."

"Absolutely phenomenal!"

"King of Death. He's a legend..."

"I always knew it!"

"I can't believe it!"

I can't breathe.

"Thank you. I appreciate the compliments... but that's enough..."

"We're thinking of creating a separate art guild and appointing you as the guild leader. Would it be okay if we just borrow your illustrious name for a while?"

"Sure... as long as you stop... I think I'm going to die..."

"Don't worry, I'm planning to join as vice-guild leader. Just lend your name, and we'll handle the rest. We can't trouble someone as great as you."

"I'm really dying....."

"Here's the seal."

Guild leader?

I stamped the seal Black Dragon Witch handed me, not fully understanding.

"Thanks. King of Death. You might suddenly see a lot of money in your account, but don't be surprised."

"I'll use it well."

As my head spun, I heard Paladin's sigh from afar.

-Tsk. Such an easy kid...

-.....

And Ssoniya looked at us with an indescribable expression.

Chapter 191: Prima Donna (3)

---

The Black Dragon Witch and the Paladin were in perfect harmony, as if they had never been at odds.

"King of Death. Let us participate in this performance too."

"I may have given up on composing a long time ago, but my head is full of musical scores. I'll incorporate the music of our world. Just imagining it is exciting...."

Why are these people so enthusiastic?

Their eyes are sparkling.

It feels strange to see them like this.

"Your music is quite excellent too, but if you appoint me as the music director... no, the assistant director, it will be even better."

"Then I'll take charge of the scenario. Since it's a dance drama, should I say a director rather than a scriptwriter? The chief director? Hmm. It's a new art, so we probably need a new title."

"Huff."

I took a deep breath to calm myself.

Somehow, I managed to calm down.

Though my head was still buzzing.

"Alright. Your help will certainly elevate the level of the performance. After all, it will be a cultural heritage that enriches the lives of the Earth Spirit Tribe children...."

"Right."

The Black Dragon Witch smiled faintly.

It was a smile like the watercolor hues of a sunset.

"I like that aspect of you."

"Me?"

Was she about to bombard me with compliments again?

I looked at the Black Dragon Witch with eyes full of suspicion.

Then she chuckled.

"You always set the answer first and then reap the benefits. Always."

"What do you mean?"

"It means setting up a flag first and then gathering sand. It seems a bit risky from the sidelines, but well, I guess your soulmate will handle it well enough."

Her words were cryptic.

Seeing my expression, the Black Dragon Witch laughed again.

"Let's decide on the name of your guild."

"Good idea."

The Paladin chimed in.

"Names are important."

"Hmm, if I remember correctly, there are only a handful of art guilds registered in the City of Ascension. About thirty jazz performance guilds?"

"There are 26. One chamber orchestra and 11 string quartets.

Including the guilds that have ceased operations, it doesn't exceed fifty in total. Most of their members are enrolled in multiple guilds."

"It really is a pitiful number..."

The Black Dragon Witch sighed.

"Do you have any good name ideas?"

"Well..."

Ah.

"How about [Raviel] for the troupe? It seems to fit perfectly."

"Hmm. Nothing comes to mind..."

"Coming up with a name is always hard."

"How about Black Dragon?"

"No good. How about Order Watch?"

Wait. Did they just smoothly ignore my suggestion?

It was so natural that I almost didn't realize I was being ignored.

"The sound of Raviel is really nice..."

"If you keep that up, we might end up with [Kim Gong-Ja] as the name."

"Let's seriously consider the name."

The three of us brainstormed together.

Several suggestions came up: Tomorrow, Sound of Ink, Babel, Aura....

"This won't do."

As the naming discussion seemed endless, the Black Dragon Witch made a decision.

"At times like this, it's customary to derive the name from the founders. Let's combine the names of the Black Dragon Witch, the Paladin, and the King of Death into something impressive."

"Is that possible?"

"Yes. We can base it on the language used by the King of Death. He's the founder, so we should show him this much consideration."

The Black Dragon Witch inquired about the language of my hometown.

We each spoke Ukrainian, Venezuelan, and Korean, but it was translated automatically by the power of the tower.

We had to ask and confirm with each other to understand how each other's aliases sounded.

"Okay."

After hearing my explanation, the Black Dragon Witch nodded.

"Taking [Heuk] from Black Dragon Witch, [Gi] from Paladin, and [Sa] from King of Death, we get [Heukgi-sa]* which translates to [Black Knight]. Simple."

*They took a letter each from the respective Korean spellings to make that name.

"Wow."

I felt a chill run down my spine.

"Black Dragon Witch. Hey, Black Dragon Witch."

I tapped the shoulder of my comrade and close friend, feeling a thrill down my spine.

"Can you see my hand?"

"...I can see it fine. Why?"

"It's all twisted and bent right now. Can you straighten it for me?"

"Okay. That's easy enough."

The Black Dragon Witch grabbed my fingers and twisted them in the opposite direction.

"Aaaaack!?"

"Done?"

"That's so messed up!"

I jumped up.

"Who names a troupe Black Knight? It's embarrassing! It's humiliating!"

"King of Death. Your alias is King of Death. [King of Death], you know. I'm sorry to say, but do you still have any face left to lose?"

"No, [Black Dragon Master], you shouldn't be saying that to me!"

"Don't translate it into English!"

The Black Dragon Witch grabbed my collar.

"Do you want to die!?"

"You started it, Black Dragon Witch!"

"Don't do it if I say don't! And to the English speakers, my alias is translated to Queen, not Master!"

"Ah, so you're not Black Dragon Master but Black Dragon Queen. Must be nice. Is the abbreviation BDQ? Sounds like a name that would deliver chicken in 30 minutes."

"Fine. I get it. We'll go with [Kim Gong-Ja]."

"Black Knight sounds cool."

I admired it.

"Just listening to it feels sophisticated. It rolls off the tongue. There can't be a better candidate for a troupe name. Black Dragon Witch, you're the best. Not only is your guild the best, but your naming sense is unmatched. Black Knight, it's good. Let's go with that."

"Should've surrendered earlier."

Watching our petty quarrel, the Paladin had a bittersweet smile.

The mermaid's tail gently rippled in the water of the bathtub.

"They really get along well.... It's quite fascinating."

The Black Knight Troupe.

I will be the guild leader, and the Black Dragon Witch and the Paladin will be the deputy leaders.

It's an unprecedented luxurious lineup with the second, third, and seventh-ranked members collaborating.

'Even in arts, with such members.'

My lips curled up.

Once the guild officially launches, it's going to cause a stir.

I was starting to find this quite interesting.

"I'm curious about how people will react."

"Right? Isn't it exciting?"

The Black Dragon Witch grinned like a mischievous child.

Even with the face of an aged vampire, her playful smile suited her.

"I guarantee it'll turn many heads. Ah. Of course, it's a secret from the others. Let's invite the Sword Saint grandpa to our first performance. Really, I wonder what expression he'll make?"

Suddenly, I wanted to see the Black Dragon Witch with her original face wearing the same smile.

For some reason, I thought that smile would be incredibly cool.

"Alright."

I smiled too.

"That's good."

We talked all night about the next performance.

The play was decided to be [Raviel and Kekerkker].

Following the Black Dragon Witch's argument that Kekerkker sounded too odd, the performance's name was changed to [Silver Heart].

"The protagonist must definitely be Duchess Ivansia. There's no room for disagreement. Let's not focus on casting characters but instead express Duchess Ivansia's psychological changes through choreography."

"The moment of falling in love must be depicted dramatically. We'll use [The Ballroom] as the stage background. We'll cover the stage with countless white live flowers, and let the actors dance on them."

"Ah. That will be beautiful!"

Everyone was excited.

Around us, several empty bottles of wine were rolling about.

We had been drinking while planning.

"Hmm. The moment Duchess Ivansia falls in love, the flowers crushed under her feet will turn from white to red. One flower, two flowers, three flowers... and thus, a red stepping stone path will be laid upon a white sea. The King of Death will only step on the flowers that have turned red, stepping on them, crossing over to Duchess Ivansia."

The Black Dragon Witch stood up.

"This won't do. It's too good. Let's test it right now!"

"Is it okay without a flower shop here?"

"Just teleport and fetch them. Let's go!"

The Black Dragon Witch and I entered the Paladin's bathtub and held each other's hands. The three of us teleported somewhere. We didn't know where we were headed. It didn't matter.

Somewhere, where white flowers seemed likely to bloom.

We teleported, gauging the slopes of mountains and following the scent of flowers. It was night. The flowers under the night sky were fragrant. There were valleys where yellow flowers bloomed and hillsides full of purple flowers. We set out in search of only white flowers, our laughter lost in the night air.

"It's nice."

Laughter kept escaping me, as if I were drunk.

"Do you know we're flying in a bathtub right now?"

"If you upgrade a magic carpet, it naturally becomes a bathtub. People are born from water, after all."

"You're out of your mind..."

"We're drunk. This is a big deal. If the people of the tower see this..."

We landed on a flowerbed.

Bending down, the ground was covered in full bloom, white.

As soon as we landed in the flowerbed, the Black Dragon Witch quickly got out of the aquarium and kicked off her shoes.

"This is perfect! King of Death!"

"Haha."

"I've turned into a fool, Paladin!"

"Indeed."

With a resigned face and a faint smile, the Paladin raised both hands.

Her fingers, well-shaped, descended.

Slowly.

Even more slowly...

As her fingertips approached thin air.

The Paladin's face had already become expressionless.

_____.

The melody playfully stirred the night sky.

The Paladin's fingertips tapped on the air as if there were invisible piano keys spread before him.

The petals trembled. Each time her long fingers touched the invisible white key, the night sky's Aura vibrated.

"You haven't lost your touch!"

"Quiet."

"Your jealousy over your lover is really something."

"That's even more embarrassing."

The melody intensified.

The piano sound buried the voices.

The chatter subsided, and only the laughter of the vampire spread over the tune.

"Fool! It's been too long since we played Libertango!"

The Black Dragon Witch stepped on the white flowers with bare feet.

The petals she stepped on turned black.

____ , ____ , _____.

The Paladin's hands stirred the night. The Black Dragon Witch's feet wounded the flowers. Black ink, colored Aura, flowed like blood from the petals scratched by her small toenails.

One melody, one dance move.

One gesture of the hand, one gesture of the foot.

Black and red ripples spread over the white flower field.

"King of Death!"

"Beautiful..."

"You're such a fool!"

"I like white..."

"Ah, idiot. Too fast!"

"Quiet."

The sounds of our laughter, music, and steps seemed to merge and dissolve. We were three children dotting the night sky on a white canvas. The Paladin hummed a tune.

"I love the tower so much!"

The Black Dragon Witch laughed, intoxicated by the dance.

"If only it had existed a little earlier. Then my father could have lived with us..."

"I also love the tower."

"It's too late, King of Death."

The scent of the black flowers was dizzying.

"It's always too late."

"That's right."

"Can we live well?"

"Yes."

"I want to be happy. Forever..."

"We're friends."

"That's right!"

"Everything will turn out well."

"Of course."

The aged hand of the vampire held my fingers.

"Let's dance, Kim Gong-Ja."

If life is just a game, perhaps we were simply looking for someone to play with.

We danced in a circle.

The white flowers trodden by the Black Dragon Witch were painted black.

The petals crushed under my feet turned red, deeply red.

As we danced, black and red ripples formed on the path we took, and the white garden was drenched in black and red.

"_____."

The Paladin played the piano and quietly opened her mouth.

Lascia ch'io pianga

mia cruda sorte, e che sospiri

la liberta---.

e che sospiri

la liberta---.

The tower swallowed the Paladin's song once and did not let it go again.

It was just left in the night air.

We became three abandoned in the night, playing with the white flowers, falling down in a trance.

-.....

It was broad daylight when I woke up.

Blinding sunlight.

The Paladin was lying in the aquarium, gasping for air, and the Black Dragon Witch was asleep with her nose buried in the flowerbed. They were the epitome of drunkards.

"Uh..."

Holding my throbbing head, I stood up.

Standing quietly in front of me was Ssonia.

"Huh?"

-Kekerkker.

Her voice was serious.

"What... why...? Wow, my head really hurts. Was the drink bad...?"

-I want to act in the next performance.

I looked up at Ssonia.

Some nameless desire lurked in her blue eyes.

-Like you... no.

Ssonia said.

-I want to live like you all.

Chapter 192: Prima Donna (4)

---

Words of resolution.

I was just waiting for those words.

"Hmm."

I circulated Aura through my body.

The drunkenness gradually peeled away.

'My mind is clearing up.'

In our tower, there is an unconventional convention: [It's impolite to sober up alone with Aura while everyone else is drinking].

Although I love this alcohol ceremony, it's even ruder to listen to Ssonia's serious talk while drunk.

'What about my clothes... What? Why is my top all messed up?'

How drunk was I last night?

Maybe it's because it's been a while since I've had a drink.

"Sorry, Ssonia. Can I wash up quickly and then start the conversation? I want to hear this story with a clean body."

-Ah. Um, you don't have to...

"I do."

Anyone who confides a significant resolution to me deserves respectful treatment.

"There must be a stream nearby. I'll wash up quickly, so can you wait a bit?"

-...Yes.

Ssonia replied with a somewhat shrinking voice.

I went to wash in the stream. It was a place I had briefly seen last night while flying in the bathtub. Immersing myself in the cool pool, the mental waste washed away cleanly. After mentally reviewing the Demonic Heavenly God Art from the first to the seventh form, I stood up.

"Let's sit and talk."

-Yes.

I sat facing Ssonia.

"Do you want to try acting in the next performance?"

Ssonia nodded vigorously.

"So you want to continue being a Fire Drama actor without retiring."

-Yes.

"If it's okay, can you tell me why?"

Ssonia pondered. She was seriously choosing her own words.

Watching her earnest face, I suddenly thought of something completely unrelated to the current situation.

'I'm just like the director. Me.'

Whenever a child tried to confide something, the director always prepared carefully. First, by calming the body and mind. In my actions, fresh from waking up, dispelling drunkenness, and bathing, the director's influence was deeply ingrained.

"....."

That's right.

I patiently waited for Ssonia.

-It's not that I hate being treated this way.

As my hair dried in the sun after being wrung out with Aura, Ssonia began to speak.

-Rather, I'm really happy to enjoy such a windfall for free. Yes. My family and kin can no longer ignore me. And the gold in my warehouse is tremendous. Thanks to Lord Kekerker, I could live a pleasant life forever...

Ssonia turned her head slightly.

In the flower garden, the Black Dragon Witch and Paladin were sleep talking. The Black Dragon Witch muttered incomprehensible words like "Uh" "Ah" "I'm starting up slowly..." The Paladin groaned things like "No" "It's a misunderstanding" "Not that".

What the start-up or misunderstanding is about remains a mystery.

My colleagues, such amusing friends...

-Yesterday, I was certain.

Ssonia alternately looked at us.

-While you all were drinking, chatting, telling stories... dancing, playing music, singing, I felt life. I thought, 'That's life'. No, I wished that could be life.

Ssonia's hands on her lap clenched tightly.

-Why does life seem to exist only in your laughter and breath? I don't know. But I want to be part of it too. I'll go on stage. Like you all... I want to become beautiful.

I nodded my head.

I have been in the same situation as Ssonia.

Therefore, I knew what the most crucial words for Ssonia were at this moment.

"I'll help you."

I opened the Civilization Store.

[You have purchased 'Appearing in Dreams.']

[100 race points consumed!]

[Your current race points are 6602.]

"You have been watching me closer than anyone else until now. You've learned all about my choreography, stage, and Aura utilization methods in real-time, like a lesson. There's nothing more to teach theoretically, so what's left is experience."

-Yes!

"But before I help, just one question."

I smiled kindly.

As the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult and the successor of the Demonic Heavenly God Art, I must possess what's called grace.

"How many days have you gone without eating, Ssonia?"

Silence fell.

The fairy of a rich merchant family tilted her head.

-...Hmm?

Good response.

It didn't take even 30 minutes for Ssonia's cute expression to turn into a scream.

---

After going through hellish training, the day of the performance finally arrived.

For me, it's the last performance I'm directing in this world.

But for Ssonia, it's going to be her thrilling debut stage.

[Quest 'Theatrical Warring States: Crisis of the Classics' is progressing.]

[Current Heretical Erosion Rate is 11%.]

The quest's progress on this stage is very smooth.

The Blood Fire Drama, my creation, has already spread throughout the city.

Not only [Dog Noise], but other troupes are quietly joining the trend.

Now, if I just leave it be, the quest will complete on its own.

"Aha. This is my first time watching as an audience."

I smiled contentedly.

Below, guests were filling the seats, buzzing with excitement.

"It feels new again like this. How about you, Black Dragon Witch? Aren't you nervous?"

"What nervousness..."

The Black Dragon Witch swept her side hair back. She looked relaxed. But her other hand was clenching her fingers.

She seems nervous despite her appearance.

I restrained my laughter and turned my head.

"How about you, Paladin? You look totally fine."

"Uh. I've been on stage many times and even ran a jazz bar. I'm somewhat used to it. Not that I don't feel nervous."

"Oh? You ran a jazz bar?"

"It's an old story from my second year in the tower."

The Paladin gave a wry smile.

"I once wanted to live playing jazz. Fortunately, people liked my music."

"Heh."

By the way, the Black Dragon Witch was no longer a vampire, and the Paladin was no longer from the Gill Fish Race. They were floating in the air in their original forms, looking at the stage.

All three of us had escaped from [Character Possession].

"I boldly opened a jazz bar in the outside world, a dream I couldn't fulfill. It was a wonderful experience in many ways."

The Black Dragon Witch tilted her head.

"You said not to bring up those times. Why suddenly talk about it to the King of Death?"

"I changed my mind."

"Hmm. Anyway, you're also quite back and forth... What was the name of that jazz bar? I can't remember."

"Little Venezia."

"Ah, right. Venezia. You went totally bankrupt with that."

The Black Dragon Witch chuckled.

"You rashly borrowed money from thugs and ended up deep in debt. I heard it while drinking with the mafia. Some S-rank sucker walked right into their trap and hit the jackpot or something."

"Managing money has always been difficult for me...."

"Fix that. It's why the Vigilante Corps is always strapped for funds. Well, thanks to that, you met a good connection...."

"Ah."

I pointed to the stage.

"Shh, looks like it's starting."

The Black Dragon Witch and the Paladin immediately shut their mouths and watched the stage. The Black Dragon Witch wrote the script, the Paladin composed the music, and I choreographed the dance. The direction was a collective effort by all of us.

Our first collaborative work.

The actors adorned the dark stage with their dance.

"....."

The Black Dragon Witch trembled anxiously.

She didn't even shake when giving a speech to soldiers on the walls of the Aegim Empire. Maybe she gets unexpectedly nervous in situations like this.

I gently grabbed the Black Dragon Witch's arm.

".....King of Death."

"Yes."

"Why are you grabbing my elbow...?"

"Holding hands would be the norm, but I'm only allowed to hold hands with Raviel. Holding hands between friends feels somewhat embarrassing. And if I put my hand on your shoulder, it might come off as condescending, right? So I compromised with the elbow."

"Hah....."

The Black Dragon Witch gave a small laugh.

"You're really crazy."

“I'm aware there's a minority opinion of that, Black Dragon Queen.”

“Really... ”

The Black Dragon Witch sighed. Her face relaxed while watching the performance. Her feet no longer trembled.

The dance continued on stage.

“...Oh no. Seems like everyone is still inexperienced with Aura.”

“That's already quite skilled. We can't expect them to be at our level.”

“Seems hard to play music and dance at the same time... No, but the music is actually not bad. It's not unbearable to listen to.”

We murmured among ourselves.

Whispers also came from the audience below.

-Ugh. Isn't it worse than usual?

-Is it? It's my first time, and I think it's great.

-Not sure, but the Aura feels a bit weak...

-Subtle.

As expected.

'The audience can tell right away.'

It was the impact of my absence from the performance.

Until now, I've been coordinating the actors from the center of the stage. I filled in where Aura was lacking, intensively fired up the weaker parts, and conducted the music.

But in this performance, all actors were involved in Aura, dance, and music.

My absence was felt by the audience.

-Huh.

-Huh...!

Arika with one eye, Yumar with one arm, Sakum with one ear, all danced their best, barely managing to produce their assigned melodies.

And of course, Ssonia too.

I could see every drop of sweat shed by the children.

‘It’s okay.’

I clenched my fist.

‘It’ll work out. Our kids.’

You’re ready to succeed.

‘Hang in there.’

The murmurs in the audience grew louder. The regulars, who were fanatically devoted to Dog Noise Troupe, felt a deep disappointment.

What is this? Something’s off.

Such remarks were openly made.

"....."

The three of us silently swallowed our saliva.

The climax was approaching on stage.

-.....

The actors suddenly stopped all movement.

The music, played by vibrating Aura, also ceased.

The dark theater was engulfed in silence, and just as the confusion of the audience was about to grow, Raviel Ivansia, portrayed by Ssonia, opened her lips.

-Lascia, ch'io pianga---.

The orange skirt, imbued with red Aura, resounded majestically.

As the song barely leaked from her lips, the audience twitched.

Ssonia, as if coughing up blood, recited the song he had learned through blood and sweat.

-mia cruda, sorte....

It was impossible to teach them to use Aura at my level in such a short time.

So, the three of us brainstormed a minor direction.

Introducing a scene where [an actor sings alone] for the first time in our troupe.

"Good."

Surveying the audience's reaction, the Black Dragon Witch whispered.

"It's working, hey! It's catching on."

Our troupe's Fire Dramas were famous for having no dialogue.

Occasionally, actors made sounds while dancing, but they were meaningless like "Oof!" "Huh!" or just primitive, distorted pronunciations.

None in the audience expected an aria from an opera.

-la liberta....

A gap in expectations, not unpleasant but pleasurable, was filled by Ssonia's skill.

Solely focused on training and teaching for this moment.

A lone elf sang in the still darkness.

-la liberta....

The hobgoblins watched the aria in a daze.

From their eyes, we sensed our success.

“That’s a relief.”

“Yeah. A bit of a trick, but...”

“It was a situation that called for a trick. Even if the overall level drops, if the climax is worth its weight in gold, it can somehow be mitigated. We’ve caught our breath...”

We watched the performance continue with satisfaction.

[Current Heretical Erosion Rate is 10%.]

[You have successfully reduced the Heretical Erosion Rate to below 10%.]

[Quest Clear!]

Just then, the tower's voice announced the completion of the quest.

I looked at Ssonia and the other actors, then stood up.

“Shall we go?”

“Already?”

“I'm satisfied seeing the kids do well even without me. If I watch them getting applause, I might end up crying. Let's leave now.”

“You're surprisingly tearful, aren't you?”

“Not as much as the Black Dragon Queen who bawled on the 11th floor....”

“You really want to get hit?”

The Black Dragon Witch and the Paladin also stood up.

It was a bit early, but we applauded silently for the actors.

The aria ended on stage, and the dance resumed.

‘It'll be fine.’

I watched Ssonia, sweating and performing passionately.

‘Take care.’

And then.

“I declare stage clear.”

The three of us announced simultaneously, without delay.

[The Black Dragon Witch declares Stage Clear.]

[The Paladin declares Stage Clear.]

[Stage Clear!]

Just before my vision turned white, Ssonia’s eyes scanned the air.

In my direction.

It was impossible, but I thought Ssonia and I made eye contact.

[The 34th floor has been cleared.]

[Reward tallying will be conducted after entering the 35th floor.]

[Sequential layer progression - You will be forcibly transferred to the 35th floor!]

White light enveloped us.

Chapter 193:

Unintentional Act

(1)

---

The light that filled my vision faded.

The three of us were dropped into a stark white space.

The Black Dragon Witch, the Paladin, and me.

“Hmm. It was good to have unexpected gains in this stage!”

The Black Dragon Witch stretched. It was a sight, hands locked and leaning from side to side, reminding one of badminton club uncles warming up behind a village hill.

“I can’t wait to go down to the City of Ascension and establish the Black Knights...”

“It will be difficult. We have to conquer up to the 40th floor continuously.”

“That’s true.... Ah, really! If word gets out that the [Diva of the Night Sky] is making a comeback, there’ll be more than a few who’ll lose their minds! There are quite a few who miss the Paladin’s piano.”

“It’s not entirely decided yet.”

The Paladin gave a wry smile and tapped the Black Dragon Witch’s shoulder.

“Ah. Why?”

“Didn’t I tell you not to call me by old nicknames? Anyway, my return to the stage isn’t confirmed. I need to seek understanding and permission from my person.”

“Permission? More like [Imperial Consent], I suppose.”

The Black Dragon Witch clicked her tongue.

“Talking about your lover... That's also a disease. Too obsessive. Isn't it absurd to always have them only show their face to others while wearing a helmet?”

“It's valid. Such possessiveness is what makes it endearing.”

“Look at this. Sick, this is sickness...”

It was at that moment when the Black Dragon Witch sighed.

[Viper leading the Ghost Tribe declares Stage Clear.]

[The Sword Saint leading the Pure Humans Race declares Stage Clear.]

Our colleagues who did not join us started to arrive.

It seemed they had already cleared and were waiting for others to declare their clearance.

Paaaat, light spread.

After a moment, the one-eyed swordsman and the elderly swordsmaster stood there.

“Yo. Long time no see.”

The Celestial Guild Master, the Viper, waved his hand languidly.

A typical dashing swordsman's demeanor. However, having read the inner thoughts of the Light Novel Emperor, even his casual greeting of "Yo" couldn't be taken purely by me anymore.

Sad, indeed.

I wish I hadn't known....

“All of you declared clear as if it was planned. Hey, you three didn't secretly form a federation or something, did you?”

“Hmm. We made something much more intriguing than a mere federation.”

“Oh? Really? What is it?”

“It’s a secret.”

Viper prodded with curiosity, but neither the Black Dragon Witch nor the Paladin were easy targets. If a [Poker Face Acting Contest] was held in our tower, these two would undoubtedly vie for the trophy.

Eventually, Viper, unable to glean anything, fumed in frustration.

“Damn it. What’s with you three suddenly getting so close? You guys are known for being aloof. Damn, I feel left out.”

"....."

Meanwhile, the Sword Saint looked at us with an incredibly complicated gaze.

Surprise? Regret? Remorse?

The emotions were so mixed that even I found them hard to read.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages appears.]

While we chatted, the Constellation responsible for this stage silently appeared. The Princess, as always, had a drowsy look as if she had just woken up from a nap.

“Is everyone here? No one is missing?”

We nodded our heads.

“Good. Well done, everyone. So, to get straight to the point, there were no failures in this stage. There’s no one who didn’t clear the quest. Usually, there’s at least one dropout per floor...”

That’s a bit troublesome.

The Princess muttered to herself.

“I don’t like to fuss over minor things, but Mula... the Tower Master values aesthetics a lot. Sorry, but I have to pick the one with the worst performance among you and eliminate them. Let’s see. It’s obviously not the King of Death....”

“Wait.”

The Paladin raised his left hand.

“Does one of us have to be eliminated?”

"Yes."

“For what reason?”

“There are various reasons. I’d like to tell you as much as I can... but I’m restricted here. Hmm. Normally, I could access up to security level 6, but now it feels like I can only mention up to level 3.”

At that moment, the Princess’s eyes turned towards me.

"In truth, I shouldn't be doing [this kind of work]."

"....."

Indeed.

I remember the Princess's true identity.

'An existence with higher authority than the Constellations.'

A pillar of the tower.

I have faced these pillars before. When I accepted Preta as my ally. And when I acquired the skill [A Certain Returner's Love] for Raviel.

A secret unknown even to the Sword Saint, known only to me.

"The theme after the 30th floor is self-awareness."

One of the pillars spoke.

The Black Dragon Witch, who adored the tower more than anyone, instantly reacted.

“Theme? Self-awareness?”

“Alright. I’ll answer one question per person.”

The Princess smiled brightly.

“It’s your reward for clearing the 34th floor. Since you’re unique kids, I guess you’d prefer this kind of reward over race points?”

The eyes of my fellow hunters sparkled.

We live in the tower, yet we know little about it.

Why did the tower suddenly appear in the world?

Why is each floor of the tower structurally different?

Many hunters were burning with curiosity but couldn't find answers. There was no one to answer their questions.

Now, that someone appeared before us.

"You can ask in order of lowest rank. Ah! No consulting each other. If it's something I can't answer, I'll honestly say so. Don't worry. If that happens, you can ask something else."

"....."

Silence ensued.

We exchanged glances. The condition of 'no consulting each other' sealed our lips. The Paladin looked at each of us, then nodded.

"What is the purpose of the tower's existence?"

"That's too broad a question. The tower is a world unto itself. If you ask why a world exists, I can only get philosophical. Hmm, is that what you want?”

“...No.”

“Then refine your question.”

The Paladin pondered deeply.

“.....I want to know how the tower is established. Our world has a tower. But there are worlds without one. [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] was such, and so was [Tales of Sormewin Academy]. How are towers created?”

“Ah-. Straight to the core. Should I say it? Hmm. I guess I can.”

The Princess reached towards the white floor. Swoosh. The ground split like tofu, and a pillow emerged. Holding a peach-designed pillow, the Princess slowly opened her lips.

“Live the life of the most miserable person in that world.”

“What?”

“Bear with me if my answer seems vague. As I mentioned, my security level has been downgraded. But anyway... there is a master who established the tower. That master lives the life of the most miserable person in each world. The worlds where towers are erected are those where the master has already lived and passed through. Worlds without towers are places the master hasn't visited yet.”

"What....."

“Next.”

The Paladin tried to ask more, but the Princess decisively shifted her gaze away.

Next in line was the sixth-ranked hunter, Viper.

Viper frowned with his one eye.

“The most miserable person? Can such a thing even be determined?”

“That’s true. It’s a difficult task. Misery is relative, after all. Sometimes, there are ambiguous candidates who are hard to judge.”

The Princess smiled.

“So, they have to live multiple times.”

"....."

"Next."

The Countess and the Heretic Inquisitor, ranked fifth and fourth respectively, had already been eliminated. Thus, it was the Black Dragon Witch’s turn.

After hearing these unexpected answers, the Black Dragon Witch glared sharply at the Princess.

“What do you mean by the theme you mentioned earlier? To beings like you, is the tower just an amusement park, and we are merely struggling spectacles within it?”

“Ahaha!”

The Princess burst into laughter.

“Ah, if only it were that simple! Life would be so much easier for me. But no, absolutely not! A theme is simply like the intention behind a test.”

“The intention of a test?”

“Yes. For example, people grow themselves throughout their lives, right? It’s often said that they raise children, but in raising children, they are also growing themselves. It’s about understanding oneself. In that sense, the theme after the 30th floor is self-awareness. That’s all.”

“Why put us through such a test.....”

“Next.”

The Princess’s gaze turned to me.

“What will the King of Death ask?”

I looked at the small Princess in front of me.

‘Before my regression, such a being did not exist.’

More precisely, did not appear.

Before my regression, no matter which strategy guide I looked at, the name [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] was not seen. There was no mention of her.

‘The appearance of the Princess is probably because Hamusutra is no longer a constellation.’

Hamusutra was said to be a fairly high-ranking Constellation.

She must have descended to fill the void left by Hamusutra’s fall.

‘And since Hamusutra’s fall was because of me... It’s highly likely that the appearance of the Princess is entirely my fault.'

Then.

I decided on my question.

"Why do you show particular favor towards me?"

It was curious.

The Princess often sleeps. She doesn't seem to enjoy working.

And yet, the Princess, who herself said she shouldn't be doing [this kind of work], the cause of which was me, had been approaching me with favor. Even though there was no reason for her to have positive feelings towards me, as I was the cause of her predicament.

"Umm."

The Princess seemed troubled.

It was as if she received a question she didn't want to answer.

“...There are too many people listening right now. I'll answer you separately later.”

“Huh?”

“Next.”

“Wait, just a moment---”

“Ne-xt!”

The Princess forcefully moved on. I had no choice but to close my mouth.

“Hmm.”

Finally, it was the Sword Saint's turn to ask, being the last with the right to question.

“What lies at the very top of the tower?”

“Ah, all the memories you have gathered, shining like beautiful treasures.... Sorry. Just kidding. Anyway, I can’t answer that question. If I do, Mula-Gaga... Nail!”

The Princess tightly clenched the pillow.

“Really! Anyway, the tower’s master would be furious.”

“I understand. Then, who is the strongest swordsman you know?”

For some reason, the Holy Sword tensed its shoulders.

Shiny also shivered, seemingly signaling something. Is it sending Morse code? L... e... f... a... n... t...

However, mercilessly, the Princess mentioned a completely different name.

“The Absolute Sword Master.”

It was an immediate response.

“If we only consider the strength of a swordsman, no one can match The Absolute Sword Master, Zaku.... No, isn't this restriction too severe? Anyway, They're the duke of a kingdom and a noble with the right to kill anyone other than royalty without being punished. In other words, they're strong enough to kill anyone, right?”

“How big is the gap in skill between them and me?”

“It's meaningless.”

The Princess bluntly stated.

“Such a gap in skill can only be discussed when there's a comparable level.”

The Sword Saint's eyebrows twitched.

“...You mean I'm not even worth discussing?”

"Yes."

"....."

"Don't be hurt in your pride. The Absolute Sword Master is the First Duke, a monster who has lived for over two thousand years. Oh, I shouldn't call him a monster.... Anyway. They're like a natural disaster. You're unlikely to ever meet them, so don't worry."

Squeeze.

The Sword Saint clenched his fist.

Not only I, but the other colleagues also seemed slightly shocked.

‘Incomparable.’

He was an elder who abandoned all wealth and status in the outside world to plunge into the tower. He had honed his skills with only his sword, but now he was disregarded to his face. Though he maintained a poker face, it was clear his pride was wounded.

“Okay, then. While I give my answer to the King of Death... the rest of you wait a bit.”

Snap.

The Princess clapped her hands softly.

Then, my colleagues were enveloped in light and disappeared in an instant, transported somewhere. In the white space, only the Princess and I were left.

"....."

The Princess awkwardly glanced at me.

Why would such a high-ranking being, surpassing Constellations and even becoming a pillar, act like this towards me?

“What’s wrong with you since earlier?”

“Um, uhhum...”

The Princess put down the pillow.

"Sorry!"

And then, suddenly, she bent over and started hitting her head on the pillow.

I was taken aback.

"What are you doing right now....."

"I'm really sorry! King of Death!"

With her head still against the pillow, the Princess shouted.

"It was me who gave the skill to the Flame Emperor!"

What?

I froze as I was about to help her up.

“That, you mean the golden skill the Flame Emperor has?
The one you brought...”

Could it be.

“Are you talking about [Returner’s Winding Clock]?”

“Yes. Right. That one.... It was actually a skill I gave.... ”

What?

“How did that happen?”

Chapter 194:

Unintentional Act

(2)

---

“So what happened was... actually, how about I just show you? Yes, that would be better.”

The Princess, still with her head buried, clapped her hands. It was quite a bizarre spectacle. As she clapped, the space, which had been purely white, started to color vibrantly.

It was as if a landscape unfolded around us like in VR.

“Huh?”

But this scene. Somehow it felt familiar.

“...This is the second floor hunting ground, isn't it?”

“Right.”

It was unmistakable. Before regressing, when I was struggling as an F-rank hunter, I roamed this place daily. It was also where Yoo Soo-Ha, before rising as the Flame Emperor, had obliterated.

A familiar voice echoed in this familiar space.

-Ah, fuck. How long do I have to keep grinding here?

A man with a ponytail, his black hair tied back.

Yoo Soo-Ha.

Every time he opened his mouth, he spewed curses as if his tongue would sprout boils otherwise, masterfully weaving together a symphony of curses at the end of his sentences. Just listening made one want to cleanse their ears of the vulgarity.

-Damn. What's there in life? Just gotta step on those who can be stepped on, fuck.

The VR-rendered Yoo Soo-Ha started chasing a slime.

-Hey! Dude! Don't just stand there!?

The slime scurried away as Yoo Soo-Ha gave chase. His hunting style reeked of inexperience. He couldn't have been more than F-rank at best.

“...How old is this Yoo Soo-Ha?”

“Very old. In your terms, it would be [before regression].”

The Princess, still with her head buried, answered.

“At this time, the Flame Emperor was like you, roaming only the second floor. He hadn't awakened his skill. But then...”

Before she could finish, a blonde girl appeared in the VR. It was [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages].

The VR Princess strolled through the bushes, humming a tune, walking as leisurely as if on a stroll.

-What? Why is a brat like this here?

Yoo Soo-Ha, too, noticed the Princess and approached her.

-Hey, kiddo.

Yoo Soo-Ha walked up behind the Princess and abruptly grabbed her by the collar. Despite the Princess's childlike appearance, it was extremely rude. However, Yoo Soo-Ha lifted her as if it were the most natural thing.

-What are you doing here?

As their eyes met.

-Congratulations!

The Princess beamed, holding up a sign with both hands.

On the sign, written in crooked letters, was [Golden Goblin Lottery].

-The first person to find and catch me gets a golden skill! You're really lucky. Today, you are the luckiest person in all the towers!

-What, what? What's with this crazy kid....

-Just check your status now, and you'll see the golden skill. Bye!

With that, the Princess vanished as if her task was done.

Only Yoo Soo-Ha remained in the bushes.

-What is this....

The VR illusion ended there.

The space I was standing in returned to its blank, white state.

The Princess, looking just as she did in the vision, was still burying her head at my feet.

"....."

I stared down at the back of the Princess's pretty head.

"I don't understand. Explain, please."

"I sometimes hold a [Golden Goblin] event. It's kind of a game. I appear in any tower and wander around thoughtlessly, and the first person to find and catch me..."

"You can't possibly give out a golden skill, do you?"

"Yes. That's exactly what I do..."

"This is insane."

It was unbelievable. My mind went blank.

What came to mind, strangely enough, was how the Flame Emperor scowled whenever people asked him the secret to success.

「Flame Emperor! Please define the secret to success in a single phrase for aspiring people!」

「It's destined for those who are meant to be.」

The Flame Emperor never elaborated.

「That's it. No more questions, don't follow me.」

Until now, I thought his response was nothing but arrogance.

But what if he really caught a [Golden Goblin] by chance and obtained an EX-grade skill?

No one would believe it if he told them. He'd just be branded as crazy.

It's literally a life of 'destiny for those meant to be' based on sheer luck!

“Why, why would you do such a thing?”

“There are two reasons: a very personal one and a very public one. Which one do you want to hear first?”

“Let's start with the public one.”

“There are two factions among the pillars: the observers and the interveners. I'm from the interveners. I'm in favor of actively intervening in the lives of those climbing the tower. Holding various events like the Golden Goblin is part of that activity...”

“And the personal reason?”

“It's fun.”

“Bury your head deeper, please.”

“Yes...”

Now I understand why I've been favored by the high beings of the tower.

I was a victim murdered by Yoo Soo-Ha, the Flame Emperor. And the skill [Returner's Winding Clock], which led to the Flame Emperor's success, was a technique whimsically given by one of the pillars. In other words.

“Compensation for the victim...”

“There wasn't entirely none of that.”

My head began to hurt.

“It was always strange why someone like Yoo Soo-Ha had such a great skill. But even so, this is more than just a prank that killed a frog with a thrown stone...”

“Really sorry.”

“Tsk.”

I sighed.

“So, did you descend to be punished? You, a pillar?”

“Yes. Mula... the Tower Master ordered me to come down and learn a lesson. Even put restrictions on me. Now, compared to my original state, I’m weakened in every aspect: strength, power, intelligence, charm. Isn’t that a bit too much?”

“The Tower Master truly is a wise ruler.”

A truly sagacious judgment.

“Anyway, I personally want to compensate the King of Death. I’ve subtly sided with you during meetings so far, but that feels insufficient, right?”

“Hmm.”

I pondered, chin in hand.

‘I don’t really want compensation for the Flame Emperor matter at this point.’

Thanks to Yoo Soo-Ha having [Returner’s Winding Clock], I was also able to activate [I Want to Become Just Like You]. I lived a successful life and met my master and Raviel, becoming happy.

I was unfortunate, but not unhappy.

-Hey. Zombie. What are you talking about, pillars and stuff?

Lost in thought, the Guardian Spirit spoke to me. The Guardian Spirit had shared every journey with me, except for when I met the pillars.

‘That exists. I’ll explain later... Ah.’

Seeing the Guardian Spirit floating around, I changed my mind.

“That’s right. I should receive compensation from you, Princess.”

“What do you want? Shall I give you a lot of race points?”

“That’s tempting, but... no.”

I shook my head.

“Show me how the kids lived after I left.”

"Huh?"

“Ssonia, Arika, Yumar, Sakum. The kids who were under my care before I left. I want to see how they lived after I disappeared. If possible, Uburka and Gorke too.”

The aftermath of my children.

I wanted to see it.

Desperately.

"....."

Slowly, the Princess raised her head.

Looking up at me, her eyes were filled with kindness.

“The King of Death is really greedy.”

“Yes.”

“Alright. I'll grant you that much.”

The stark white space transformed into a landscape.

Soon, the faces of the children appeared.

---

Ssonia didn't give up acting.

-It's okay.

After my departure, Ssonia faced harsh criticism. Accusations of his aura skills deteriorating, not performing as well as before. To the now discerning Earth Spirits, Ssonia's Fire Dramas were no longer satisfying.

-It will work out.

But Ssonia didn't quit.

He practiced relentlessly, to the point of breaking his nails and toenails.

-I can do it.

Ssonia became quieter. He barely spoke, except when performing or practicing, as if refusing to live unless on stage.

By Ssonia's side were Arika, Yumar, and Sakum.

-Starting anew with such a mindset is enough.

Despite the decline in the troupe's reputation, the actors didn't mind.

-In the beginning, the dance drama was innovative and shocking, but now the audience is used to it. Don't be disappointed and keep performing. Praise will return someday.

-Ugol.

An outdated troupe.

Even with such a reputation, the actors diligently did their job.

Arika's long-gone mother returned. Having missed the opportunity to share their lives, it was hard for them to bond as mother and child now. However, Arika allowed her mother into his life, occasionally allowing shared meals.

Yumar generously donated a significant portion of his earnings from acting to his hometown. With most of its youth gone, the village was declining. Thanks to Yumar's contributions, the village could breathe until the next generation grew.

Sakum learned that his former master's family had fallen into ruin. Not one to miss such an opportunity, he rushed over and threw a coin at his former master, now a beggar on the streets. Leaving the dazed master behind, Sakum gleefully departed.

Time passed.

-.....

Wrinkles now marked Ssonia's face.

Ssonia, who had lived his life on stage, had bright eyes. His life was narrow but fulfilled in that confined space.

Sitting alone in an empty auditorium, he gazed at the theater stage, the wooden floor that his feet had touched every inch of.

-I've lived well.

Ssonia peered into the darkness of the stage with his slender eyes, reflecting on the shadows of his past dances.

-I should have been kinder to people.

Ssonia slowly closed his eyes.

Lost in thought, perhaps.

-Lord Kekerkker...

Then the scenery changed.

Unlike the delicate Ssonia, there was a Hopgoblin with a mountainous body – Uburka, acknowledged as the most formidable warrior in Earth Spirit history and the chairman of the first rank in the Fire River Council.

-I can no longer govern for the better.

Over 20 years after sending me off, Uburka had reigned supreme.

Countless warriors challenged Uburka over the decades, but he never faced defeat.

An undefeated warrior.

Then one day, he abruptly announced his resignation.

-Now, I shall step down from my chairmanship and walk only the path of martial arts.

The Hopgoblins were in an uproar, becoming accustomed to Uburka's iron rule. The idea of the emperor abdicating was bewildering.

But Uburka was resolute.

-Rather, it's not too late. Ugol. It was bothersome to stabilize the Mountain Calamity Tribe and conquer the continent. Since the mess I started 20 years ago has settled somewhat, I will now live for myself. Don't worry. I won't return. I sever ties with the mortal world.

-Where do you intend to go, Chairman?

-It's not me who is going.

Uburka grinned.

-I'm waiting for my daddy to come.

Uburka left Guru and climbed the mountains.

The most treacherous spiritual mountain in the continent.

Snowstorms raged all year round.

At its peak, Uburka sat in meditation.

-My daddy descends to the earth every few hundred years.

Uburka murmured, immersed in meditation.

-With my current state, I can only endure for about a hundred and fifty years. I need to transcend my limits.

Joy was evident in Uburka's voice.

-Come quickly, Daddy. I'm waiting.

The snowstorm buried Uburka.

Just as the scenery seemed about to fade, it continued.

"....."

The Princess didn't withdraw the after-story's scene.

Even after a minute, then three, the snowstorm of the spiritual mountain continued to rage around me.

"Princess?"

"Yes."

"It seems we've seen all of Uburka's after-story."

"No, not yet."

The Princess smiled enigmatically.

"It's not over yet."

Her smile hinted at a secret joke.

"....."

Could it be?

My heart started to race.

Despite thinking it was impossible, I asked.

"Is he still alive?"

Uburka.

The child who smiled and said 'I have to live very long' when we parted. I assumed he was dead by now. To the Earth Spirits, Uburka had already become a legend.

But if Uburka succeeded in rejuvenation.

“Did he manage to survive?”

My voice trembled slightly.

Seeing me, the Princess’s lips curled up.

"Yes."

“Do you want to meet him?”

The next stage.

On the 35th floor, the child I must meet was decided.

Chapter 195:

Unintentional Act

(3)

---

We were ready to enter the next floor.

In the last stage, everyone succeeded in their quests. It was difficult to single out someone to drop out, but luckily, one of our comrades volunteered.

“If you must choose someone, let it be me.”

The one who offered was the Paladin.

It seemed unnecessary, but the Paladin shook her head.

“It’s fine. To establish the Black Knights, I need to go down to the 1st floor anyway. I’m also uneasy leaving the Vigilante Corps for too long. And to be honest, I don’t particularly wish for the Gill Fish Race to dominate the continent. Just having enough to live is sufficient.”

Typical of her, donating most of her earnings to an orphanage.

“Hm.”

The Black Dragon Witch seemed to know something more.

“Is that really the only reason?”

“...What do you mean?”

“Just thinking you might be lonely alone.”

The Black Dragon Witch grinned like a cat basking in the sun.

“Anyway, I’ll leave the establishment of the Black Knights to you. If anyone from our guild tries to interfere, tell them, ‘The Witch’s Cafe is past the crossroads, in a basement alley.’ If they ask for a menu, say, ‘Pumpkin latte, hold the ice.’”

“Black Dragon’s code?”

“Yes, this month's. It hasn't been updated yet.”

“Your taste is still unique...”

The Paladin chuckled and looked at me.

“I’m sorry to leave the vanguard first. King of Death. I’ll make sure to build a solid foundation for the guild. By the time you clear the 40th floor and return, everything will be ready.”

“Um, if you truly feel sorry, could you do me a favor?”

“Of course. Speak.”

“When this expedition is over, could you teach me music?”

The Paladin raised her eyebrows.

“That’s right, there was such a talk. You wanted to play for Raviel Ivansia?”

“Yes. I promised to learn music and play for her when I confess.”

“Good. Jazz is love.”

The Paladin smiled, seemingly pleased.

“Having such a romantic partner, you’ll certainly need music. I’m not skilled in teaching, but I’ll do my best.”

“Then, I’m counting on you, teacher.”

"Hmm."

We shook hands.

“Take care of the rest, young master.”

The Paladin's smile was swallowed by the light.

[The Paladin has been eliminated from the stage!]

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages is settling the points.]

[You have earned 1510 race points!]

[Your current race points are 7112.]

The points the Paladin had were distributed among us.

Race points, akin to child support, should ideally be used for all races, not just the Earth Spirits.

‘But the immediate priority isn’t the welfare of the race.’

I clenched my fist.

An eager child has been waiting for me for hundreds of years.

‘Wait for me, Uburka.’

Enveloped in light, we transitioned to the 35th floor.

‘Daddy is coming!’

---

Immediately upon arriving at the 35th floor, I coaxed the Black Dragon Witch to move with me.

“Quick! Just head to the highest mountain on the continent!”

“You’re not treating me as a taxi, are you?”

“I always deeply respect you in my heart!”

“If you can’t even say that much...”

The Black Dragon Witch sighed but complied with my request. Using her [Teleportation] was much faster than moving around in spirit form.

“Over there?”

We soared across the sky, stepping on clouds. Before long, mountains spread below us. Tall mountains, where the earth seemed to have folded and left its mark. As we went deeper, the mountain peaks turned white.

“...This seems higher than the Himalayas.”

The Black Dragon Witch made a grim face as she surveyed the mountain range.

“Just looking makes me feel cold. Are you sure your apostle is here? It's not logical.”

“The Princess showed me in a vision.”

I was certain it was around here.

I looked around.

“He should be near...”

A foreboding feeling suddenly gripped me.

There's a gap of about 150 years between the last and this stage.

Maybe Uburka didn't survive past 150 years.

"....."

My heart sank.

‘I’m too late.’

My heart constricted.

‘I arrived too late.’

The mummy's face was deeply wrinkled, but I sensed Uburka's remnants.

A face free from worldly suffering, now lightened.

Unable to cry, I stared at the peaceful expression.

'I'm sorry...'

Just as I reached out to touch Uburka's head.

"Daddy?"

A familiar vibration resonated in my ears.

I stopped reaching out and turned my head.

"Ugor."

There was a certain world-weary tone in the voice, always holding a hint of laughter deep in the heart, echoing through the atmosphere of the snowy mountain.

“Really, it’s Daddy.”

Uburka stood tall on the white snowfield.

Behind his shoulders stretched the rugged mountain range.

Here, being the highest point on the continent, no one else shared our altitude in this world.

"U..."

I began to speak.

“Uburka...?”

“Good to see you. It's been roughly 363 years and about seven months, my Daddy. And you’ve brought an unfamiliar noble with you.”

“Good heavens.”

I was spellbound, alternating my gaze between Uburka and the mummy.

“How, how did this happen? I thought you had died and became a mummy...”

“Ah. That?”

Uburka approached the mummy with an unconcerned face.

“This is not a corpse but a husk. Just like a caterpillar must endure the prison of a cocoon to become a butterfly, this is my cocoon.”

Uburka tapped the mummy with his large finger.

The mummy lost its balance and melted away, sinking into the snow.

“A husk...?”

“After meditating for 60 days, enlightenment came to me. Ugor. Visions like dreams appeared before me, and stepping forward, I suddenly found myself living in that dream.”

Uburka shared something about a realm I had never heard of.

“In that dream, I was born as a son of a prestigious martial family. However, born with the inability to use aura. Despite being the eldest, I faced all sorts of scorn and neglect for not being able to use aura. Ugor, eventually, I took over the family head position through politics and schemes.”

“Such a detailed account for a dream.”

“Perhaps, it was my past life. Though I died of illness at the age of 26. When I awoke from the dream, my original body flowed away like a shed skin.”

Uburka laughed, revealing his fangs.

“I originally planned to leave it as a memento, but since Daddy has returned, it doesn’t matter. Proof of waiting is only kept for the joy of meeting. Now that we’ve met again, my wait has already become joy.”

“Uburka...”

I felt a lump in my throat.

Our child had grown up so magnificently.

"King of Death."

Then, the Black Dragon Witch tapped my shoulder.

“It’s fine to show your affection, but haven’t you noticed something strange? We haven’t used any items.”

The Black Dragon Witch looked at Uburka with deep eyes.

“We haven’t used [Animal Possession] or [Character Possession]. We’re still in a spirit state. Humans in this world can’t recognize us. But how can that kid see us so naturally?”

Ah.

That's when I felt the strangeness.

‘Right?’

In a spirit state, no one should be able to recognize us. This had been a constant rule from the 31st to the 34th floor. Yet Uburka conversed with me as if it were natural and even recognized the Black Dragon Witch's presence.

Moreover.

‘I spread aura around earlier, but no life was detected.’

It was a peculiar situation.

I locked eyes with Uburka.

“Uburka, how can you...”

“Ugor.”

Uburka rotated his neck in all directions.

Crack! The sound of bones aligning loudly echoed.

“Upon achieving enlightenment and transcending life, I began to see things I couldn’t before. The world is the ultimate other. If one can perceive the world as a single entity, then one could also be considered an entity comparable to the world.”

“Uh.”

What was this child talking about?

When difficult words hit my brain, it starts to stutter. I didn’t understand a word Uburka said.

“Kid. What are you talking about?”

“Simply put, it means this, Daddy.”

Uburka snapped his fingers.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' is looking at you.]

What?

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' is delighted to reunite with you!]

Incredible.

I stared dumbfounded at Uburka.

It felt like being hit on the head with a shovel.

“You, you...”

“Many wonders exist in the myriad of things.”

Uburka's smile deepened as he looked at me.

“Seeing Daddy's dumbfounded face, I'm glad I practiced diligently. How about it? As far as I know, there's no one in this land who has reached a higher realm than me. I've officially become the strongest warrior of all time.”

“No...”

A Hopgoblin becoming a Constellation.

I knew he was a genius, but I didn't expect this level.

“By the way, Daddy.”

The son, now a Constellation, smiled slyly.

“We can always share our stories later. Today, our father and son duo have fortunately reunited. Shouldn't we share the joy of 350 years of longing?”

“Ah, yes. That's right.”

It had only been a short time for me, but for Uburka, it was a long and lengthy period.

The joy shared between a parent and child who have reunited should be expressed through actions, not words.

I spread my arms wide.

“Come here, Uburka. Although I'm tiny compared to you, I'll hug you with joy...”

“Ugor. Then I will not refuse the invitation.”

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' challenges you to a duel!]

Huh?

“Brace yourself, Daddy.”

Uburka clenched his fists.

“I might have been miserably defeated 350 years ago, but today will be different!”

With each step he took, the mountain range quaked. The snow on the peak collapsed and soared into the sky, changing the direction of the blizzard.

“Wait, just a moment. Son. Wait a minute---.”

“I’ve eagerly awaited the day like today!”

Uburka launched a punch.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' roars.]

At that moment, heaven and earth shook.

Chapter 196:

Erosion (1)

---

Among all the Constellations I've met, the most powerful was undoubtedly Preta, the Demon King of Autumn Rain.

The saintess of the demons once piled up mountains of corpses with a single slash of her sword. The continent was dyed in red blood under her blade, turning mountain ranges into pools of blood and rivers fragrant with blood.

“Hahaha!”

However, today my heart's ranking might change.

“As expected of Daddy! You dodge like a slippery eel!”

A fist whizzed past my face. The sheer noise it created splitting the air was violently loud. Thank goodness I braced my legs; otherwise, I would have been swept away by the air pressure.

“Ah, son!”

“Speak! Daddy!”

“Do we really need to do this among ourselves!”

I shouted with earnest desperation.

“After so long, we could share our joys, indulge in pleasant conversations as father and son...”

“This is the most fun for me!”

“Are you trying to kill your father!”

“If you die by my fist, it just means Daddy’s abilities were only so much. Don’t blame me, blame your own frailty!”

An explosion resounded.

Turning back, I saw a part of the snowy mountain collapsing due to Uburka's aura.

“Incredible.”

While not quite at the level of severing the world's edges with a thought like my teacher, his destructive power was immense.

What would happen if I got hit by that fist? Considering whether my skull or the mountain peak was sturdier, the calculation was clear.

“Spare your Daddy!”

I cried out.

“People of the town! Here's a disrespectful son trying to crack open his father's skull! After teaching him Aura Manipulation and passing down the Demonic Heavenly God Art, this ungrateful brat now seeks my death!”

“Yours truly! Will commit parricide with fists!”

Spouting such nonsensical words, Uburka readied himself. It was a posture all too familiar to me.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

Aura erupted from all around, engulfing my body. I opened my eyes wide. The mastery of aura was incomparable to the old days.

-Ho.

The Guardian Spirit let out an exclamation, which stretched endlessly in our prolonged perception. His voice sounded like 'Hoooo' to me, and before the snowstorm could catch the end of his words, I launched a counterattack.

'If we clash head-on, I'll lose.'

I drew upon the aura from my entire body.

It was a situation where even a second's lapse in concentration meant defeat.

‘Can I do it?’

As time crawled, I came up with a counter-strategy.

‘Let's try.’

My movements were quicker than my decision.

I stepped forward. Crunch! The snow under my feet shattered. My aura rapidly infiltrated the finely broken snowflakes.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

I didn't counter Uburka's attack. Instead, I overtook it.

The Demonic Heavenly God Art ultimately depends on the caster's memory, the mental image. No matter how many directions it attacks from, if one thoroughly understands the caster's mental image, it can be unraveled.

'It depends on how well you understand the art.'

I quietly observed his offense.

To my eyes, the flames of aura appeared as vivid gestures.

Uburka chose two main attack paths.

'Let's see.'

One breath.

I first broke the most violently rushing flame. Hunger's agony. It was an attack filled with a child's scream.

‘Classic.’

I skillfully maneuvered the art. Recalling the gestures of a mother who has to hear her child's screams right before her eyes.

Pain and agony clashed. My aura twisted Uburka's, like hands wringing a neck.

The direction of the attack reversed.

".....!"

Two breaths.

Uburka's eyes became ferocious. He grasped my intention to fight not with physical strength but with the understanding of martial arts.

“Daddy always picks the most irritating ways!”

To anyone ordinary, Uburka’s words would have sounded like mere ■. Just a meaningless, single syllable.

However, ■ twisted and bent with aura, stretching endlessly in our slow-motion time. It required a high level of mastery.

“You make me out to be a dim-witted musclehead!”

“Exactly.”

Our father and son proudly displayed a high-level conversation.

“If you don’t want to lose, release the Demonic Heavenly God Art first.”

“Never! I will beat you with the art! I want to crush you utterly, make you acknowledge my strength from the depths of your heart!”

“After three hundred years, you've only learned bragging. Just succumb to my grasp.”

“Ugor!”

Ugor in the Earth Spirit Tribe's language roughly means 'No', 'Not really', 'Enough', 'Go away', 'Damn this guy', and carries a variety of other rich meanings.

“I've waited for over 360 years; I can't lose again!”

“Three hundred or three thousand years, it doesn't matter.”

Three breaths.

I began to dominate the Demonic Heavenly God Art unleashed by Uburka. It was like adding colors to a sketch he drew, or more precisely, adding my impromptu performance to his music.

“I have no intention of quietly handing over the leader's position.”

As Uburka embedded his child's pain, I painted the image of parents feeding only their child while starving themselves.

Which hunger more aptly depicted universal screams?

Two interpretations of the same art intertwined.

“My child.”

“What!”

“Since you've reached a substantial level, we can now have a more profound conversation.”

I deflected Uburka's punch with the back of my hand. It wasn't a forceful deflection. Anticipating his attack, my body was already prepared to evade. The backhand strike was merely the final motion needed for evasion.

Ugor!

Uburka, his anger reaching its peak, lunged at me.

“We live among people, especially as members of the Demonic Cult. If one only wishes to contemplate the world’s pain, they should become a monk. The Demonic Heavenly God Art is a vow to reside in pain. We dwell amongst people.”

Each punch Uburka threw demolished parts of the mountain.

However, none of his strikes hit me.

Rumble-

Centered between us, avalanches erupted in all directions.

On the fringes of dark and light arts, petals blossomed profusely.

Blood Blossoms.

The snowstorm collapsed into a white cascade.

“Good heavens...”

Twenty steps away from us, Black Dragon Witch murmured dumbfounded. Was she astonished by Uburka's immense strength, or was she in awe of how I deftly handled such a precarious situation?

I continued talking to Uburka, paying no heed.

“Be careful. Our Demonic Cult can easily degenerate into a showroom of pain. Anytime, as much as possible.”

“A showroom of pain?”

“Don’t compete over who suffers more. Ensure your pain doesn’t become a power for you alone. I know you're not that kind of person, but it's still worth mentioning.”

Four breaths.

I successfully occupied all of Uburka's attack routes.

Though Uburka was moving, the paths his aura could extend were limited.

“Ugh!”

Uburka clenched his teeth. His red aura fiercely flared up in an attempt to break free, but I skillfully caught the tips of the flames and directed them where I wanted.

“If you bear the pain alone, the people around you will wither away. The ones who cherish you the most will suffer the most. I want to stop you, but how can I argue if you wish to shoulder the world's pain? If pain is the proof of being human, then you alone are a human.”

I wondered if Uburka was keeping up with me.

There was no certainty.

Yet, I continued to weave through the flames.

It might be too early for such advice, but as Black Dragon Witch said, it's much better to be early than too late.

“Don't make those you care for miserable while claiming to act for the world. It's a contradiction.”

"....."

“Find companions. Find fellow travelers. Convince people with your ideals. If you’ve attained enlightenment on the mountain, it’s time to descend. Find people to trust your heart with, to think in your stead. Talk a lot with them. To become human, be with them.”

“That kind of person...”

“There’s already someone.”

Five breaths.

I spread out my aura.

“Look, child!”

My reflection appeared in Uburka's eyes.

Like mirrors reflecting each other, our eyes endlessly captured each other.

“Why do you think I passed on my will to you!”

Aura burst forth.

Not from my power.

It was the torrent of aura released by Uburka.

I merely steered the flow.

“To share the same sky!”

And then, I painted the long-dreamed scenery with red brushstrokes.

Uburka was the infinite palette, and I was the brush.

The same aura manipulation, the same Demonic Art, the same mental image – a feat only possible when shared, descended on the white mountain top.

Demonic Formation Art.

The First Method.

Wandering Mansion of Flames.

Six breaths.

The landscape changed.

Red aura swirled, forming various shapes.

Candlesticks. Candles lit on the candlesticks. Even the melting wax.

Lavish floors, stairs, decorations adorning the mansion – all made of aura.

“Wait. This place is...?”

Black Dragon Witch was astounded.

The scene seemed familiar to her.

Hundreds of candle flames rose, and between each candlestick and candlestick, shadows made of aura hid.

-Hehehe.

A familiar sound.

A laughter that slithered like dripping candle wax.

-Hide and seek?

-Who's...

-Play with...

Then, the scenery crumbled.

It probably lasted only about three seconds.

Despite Uburka's immense aura and my precise manipulation, maintaining objects, sounds, and an entire space was difficult.

But we did it.

Even if it was fleeting.

I successfully recreated the hellfire mansion.

"....."

Uburka looked around, dazed.

The scenery had returned to the snowy mountains.

But everyone present knew that what they had just witnessed was neither a hallucination nor a fantasy.

“Uburka.”

I gathered the little remaining aura in my body.

“That formation I mentioned to you 363 years ago, this is it. It’s not just about embedding mental images into the aura and shooting them. It’s about bringing those images to life with aura.”

Passing down the Demonic Heavenly God Art to Uburka.

Spreading the Blood Fire Drama among the Earth Spirit Tribe.

It was all to unfold a realm of existence impossible to achieve alone.

“I alone can’t sustain it for even a second. My aura would deplete instantly, and I’d collapse within ten steps. Even combining our auras, three seconds is the limit. But what if twelve warriors join us?”

"....."

“Twenty-four, hundreds, no, a thousand Earth Spirit Tribe members performing the formation together. What then?”

Uburka imagined the scene I described.

His gaze traced some landscape.

“It's an impossible feat, normally. But over the past few centuries, the Earth Spirit Tribe has shared and refined these images. Only we can accomplish this. We are musicians sharing the same score.”

“That's...”

Uburka began to speak.

“It's singing the song of pain...”

“But it will be beautiful.”

“Ugor. It will be beautiful.”

An exciting prospect.

“Descend the mountain with me.”

I smiled.

“Even if we sing of pain, our lives will still be joyful.”

“How is that possible?”

“I’m a remarkable man. So are you. You respect and like me, someone who strives for the best. How can my days not be joyful?”

I extended my right hand to Uburka.

“I become a little happier because of you, and you’ll smile a bit more because of me.”

“Let’s go down, my rebellious son.”

Uburka took my right hand.

[You have created a new skill!]

Just then, the Tower's voice echoed.

[Creating skill card!]

Chapter 197:

Erosion (2)

---

A rectangular card shone in my left hand.

A familiar skill card.

However, the color of the card was unfamiliar.

‘Purple? Violet?’

The color of the card indicates the skill's rank.

From F to C rank, they are bronze-colored, often mocked as 'poop color.' Most hunters possess this rank of skills, and there are plenty who lament not even having this.

From B to A rank, they are silver-colored, commonly referred to as jackpot skills.

Above S rank, they are golden. Surrounded by highly skilled colleagues, it's easy to forget that conversing with a hunter who has a golden skill is extremely rare. There is no mention of a [purple] card anywhere.

‘Could it be a glitch...?’

I scanned the letters etched on the front of the card.

+

[Demonic Formation Art]

Rank: Undetermined

Effect: Based on Demonic Heavenly God Art, this formation materializes shared mental images of the casters. The more casters join the formation, the more skilled they are in Demonic Heavenly God Art, and the clearer the shared mental image, the more powerful the formation becomes.

This formation's effectiveness has not been proven yet!

You are the first to conceive this skill. Now, you must demonstrate the potential of Demonic Formation Art. As sufficient data accumulates, the rank and description of this skill will be revised.

*The current skill rank is not yet determined.

+

‘Ah.’

Now I understood why the card was purple.

A kind of prototype. It seems untested skills are imbued with a purple color.

‘Such cases exist too...’

-That’s awesome!

I was startled. Guardian Spirit suddenly leaned close to my ear and shouted.

‘What the heck?’

-This man right here is seeing a purple card for the first time!

Guardian Spirit's eyes sparkled.

-Yay, so glad I didn't just die and became a ghost instead!

‘It's just a uniquely colored card, why the fuss...?’

-Listen, Zombie. You're usually sharp, so what's this? Doesn't it strike you as odd? Would you use purple as the default color for a test version? Typically, it would be white.

Hmm.

That was a valid point.

‘Right? I wouldn't set purple as the basic color. Usually.’

-My point exactly.

‘Hmm.’

Could the Tower's master favor purple?

As I pondered about the enigmatic Tower Master whose face remained shrouded in darkness, Uburka spoke.

“Daddy.”

“Ah, sorry. I got lost in thought for a moment.”

“It’s alright.”

Uburka shook his head. I was still holding his giant hand.

“More importantly, I need to explain the current era to you. There must be a reason why you’ve descended at this specific time. Something big is happening, not just in the continent, but perhaps in the world.”

“Something big?”

“Yes. Perhaps it’s not just a continental issue, but a global one.”

Uburka spoke cryptically, his smile mysterious.

“A new continent has been discovered.”

At that moment, the quest updated.

[The quest for the 35th floor has been given.]

The name of the quest in the window read:

[The Age of Exploration].

---

A new continent.

Its discovery dates back 24 years from now.

“I spent over three hundred and fifty years in the snowy mountains, but occasionally I visited the city to eavesdrop on the world. A member of the Gill Fish Race reportedly saw an unknown land on a map.”

Gill Fishes typically live in rivers, but there's always an exception.

One of them was curious about what lay at the end of the sea. Luckily, they had the capability to realize their curiosity and the courage to stake their life on it.

「 Please support me. 」

The Gill Fishes captain spoke before the admirals.

「 The Earth Spirit Tribe has the right to dominate the land, as even our tribal name starts with Earth. Fairies, being cunning, should control the gold. But the water is exclusively our realm, the Gill Fishes, and there should be no waters or routes unknown to us! 」

An argument without logic, yet the admirals applauded.

「We grant you one ship, a Vampire, and forty fishermen.」

Thus, a legendary voyage began.

It's like their minds are as free as their swimming in water. Developing salt and being involved in unique incidents in this world seem to be the forte of the Gill Fishes.

“What happened to that captain?”

“He achieved his dream. Sixteen months into the voyage, he discovered the new continent.”

Uburka spoke calmly.

“And on his triumphant return, he was eaten by a killer whale.”

That's tragically unfortunate.

“Being eaten by a killer whale is quite common. Ugor. The leading cause of death among Gill Fishes is crocodiles, followed by killer whales, and third, drowning.”

“Drowning? They’re merfolk.”

“I don’t know the details.”

The mystery deepened.

As father and son pondered, a sigh came from nearby. Black Dragon Witch.

“You guys... just teleport.”

Right beside us, she sighed heavily, looking up at us.

“Can you not just comfortably chat among yourselves while using someone as a driver? Teleport. It's irritating to just listen quietly from the side. Teleport.”

Black Dragon Witch repeated 'teleport' in her speech because we were currently using her teleportation bus.

I was snugly nestled in Uburka's enormous arms, and Black Dragon Witch was comfortably seated in my lap. Thus, we were able to repeatedly perform stable instant teleports.

“If you look from afar, do we resemble a Matryoshka doll or a kangaroo?”

“Hey, I’m offering a comfortable ride in exchange.”

“I might be comfortable, but it’s troublesome for me. Teleport. Do you know how burdensome it is to continuously cast a skill? Teleport.”

“We’re almost like family now. So close. I was wondering if I could call you ‘sister’ since I’ve entered the Tower. I’ve been wanting to have a siblingly relationship with the Black Dragon Witch.”

“You’re the type who gets obnoxiously clingy once you get close, huh... Teleport.”

Our trio flew over the sea.

Yes, the sea.

No land or even a rock reef in sight, just endless blue stretching to the horizon. We were slicing through the ocean, heading straight for the new continent.

“‘Sister’ is not acceptable. I don’t like it.”

“How about ‘Your Majesty, the Black Dragon Queen’?”

“Our King is quite amusing.”

Black Dragon Witch smiled slightly.

I experienced a brief moment of getting smacked.

“I won’t tease you anymore...”

“Good thinking. Teleport. If you really want to change how you address me, call me ‘senior.’ Teleport. I’ll allow that much.”

“Oh, that’s great, senior. You can also call me ‘Gong-Ja’ if you like.”

"....."

Black Dragon Witch didn’t respond to my words. She just turned her head forward, her expression emotionless, and continued muttering ‘teleport.’ Silence naturally ensued.

Listening to the sound of the waves crashing below, I checked the quest window once more.

+

[The Age of Exploration]

Difficulty: A-

Mission Objective: Exploration! Adventure! A new continent has emerged for the seven tribes. The route opened by the Gill Fishes has now drawn other tribes as well.

‘I want to live somewhere else, not here.’

In every era, there are those who dream of other worlds. Unfulfilled desires, unmet miracles, unexperienced excitement. People board ships, pinning everything they haven't achieved in this life to a land beyond the sea.

However, the new continent is a fresh world only for the seven tribes.

Others have already established their homes and live on this land. At present, there is imminent discord between adventurers and natives! A one-sided massacre might even occur.

Is it invasion, coexistence, or expulsion?

The seven tribes are at risk of annihilation. Lead them!

*However, failure in leadership may result in the extinction of one or more tribes.

Massacre. Annihilation.

These ominous words struck my eyes.

This was the reason we were hastily heading to the new continent.

“Are our children massacring the natives?”

“I don’t know. Teleport.”

Black Dragon Witch responded.

“But it’s possible. Similar things often happened during new route explorations in the outside world... Teleport. I hope the people of this world don’t do such things, but teleport. We can’t always expect our children to grow up as we wish.”

“I want to prevent any massacres, for whatever reason.”

“I support you.”

“Ugor.”

Uburka suddenly spoke up.

“There’s something over there.”

He pointed towards the horizon. I couldn't see anything. But upon hearing his words, I instantly enhanced my vision with aura.

Something was floating in the vast ocean.

“A ship?”

It was a massive vessel.

I frowned.

“Black Dragon Witch. I mean, senior. There’s a ship over there. Let's stop by.”

“Why?”

“There are no sailors on the ship.”

“Teleport.”

Black Dragon Witch also seemed to have noticed the ship. We instantly moved to the deck.

As soon as we set foot on the wooden planks, we already felt something was off.

"There are people here, but....."

Black Dragon Witch looked around.

“...are they all asleep?”

The sailors were sprawled out on the deck.

They belonged to various tribes, mostly Ghost Tribe and Gill Fishes, with a few Pure Human Race mixed in. Regardless of tribe, every sailor looked terribly emaciated.

I approached the helmsman, who had collapsed by the ship's wheel, and gently held his wrist.

“He's malnourished.”

I circulated aura around the sailor's body, thoroughly checking his condition.

“He shows severe dehydration symptoms. Seems like he's been starving for about three to four days. Hmm. No injuries, and the head is fine, but....”

Having mastered Sword of Parched Death in Demonic Heavenly God Art, I was quite knowledgeable about dehydration. I examined other sailors, but the symptoms were all the same. Severe malnutrition and dehydration.

And.

“This is not just simple sleep.”

The sailors were breathing comfortably, sound asleep.

Not unconscious or passed out, merely in a state of sleep.

“Did you try waking them with aura?”

“Yes, I deliberately stimulated them, but they won’t wake up. This is really strange.”

“Wait a moment.”

Black Dragon Witch approached and touched one of the sailors. Her fingertips flickered with black aura.

Soon, she narrowed her eyes.

“...they're not cursed.”

“Could it be drugs? Are they drugged?”

“It’s possible, but given the symptoms, it seems too mild to be drug effects. I can’t feel any traces. There might be drugs unique to this world that I’m unaware of, but....”

Black Dragon Witch pondered.

Meanwhile, Uburka had been dragging sailors from various parts of the ship.

Interestingly, the captain was a member of the Mountain Calamity Tribe. It’s quite bold for a Mountain Calamity Tribe member, who deteriorates or even melts upon contact with salt, to venture into the sea.

“This is certainly peculiar.”

While setting down the Mountain Calamity Tribe captain, Uburka sniffled.

“It seems these people fell asleep suddenly while working. It’s as if they were all abruptly overcome with drowsiness in the midst of their tasks.”

“All at once?”

“Ugor.”

In total, 32 sailors lay asleep on the deck, seemingly having forgotten the living world.

Indeed, the mystery only deepened.

“...shall we briefly enter and exit their dreams?”

After pondering, Black Dragon Witch suggested.

“Dreams?”

“Yes. Using [Character Possession] would be more certain, but it consumes 1000 points. We can’t waste points here, so let’s use [Appearance in Dreams].”

That’s a hint of her character. She must be the type to meticulously distribute the guild’s budget, penny-pinching every cent. Debating between a dessert cafe and convenience store desserts, she would eventually choose the latter for better value.

‘Meanwhile, Raviel would probably rent out an entire dessert cafe just to eat.’

She must even have a reserved seat there.

Impressive.

I instinctively thought of our noble Countess and then nodded.

“That sounds like the quickest solution.”

“Okay, then I’ll go first...”

“Senior, you’ve been through a lot, scaling mountains and crossing seas. You’ve covered all terrains. Let me handle this.”

“...sometimes you act so admirably, it’s hard to scold you.”

“Senior, I’m here to take care of you.”

I opened the Civilization Store.

[You have purchased 'Appearance in Dreams'.]

[100 race points are consumed!]

[Your current race points are 7012.]

I then used the item on the Mountain Calamity Tribe captain in front of me.

Whooosh!

My vision swirled.

It was like a whirlpool in a bathtub, swirling before my eyes. After a breath, two breaths... as my breath quickened, my sense of time became numb. At some point, I had closed my eyes.

A while later.

-Gong-Ja.

Someone whispered in my ear.

-Open your eyes, Gong-Ja.

I opened my eyes wide.

Right in front of me was a woman who looked exactly like Raviel.

"....."

Hmm.

I quickly scanned Raviel's white neck and long fingers. No necklace, no wedding ring.

Certainly, there was no use for money here. Before climbing to the 30th floor, I spent half of all my assets on a wedding ring that was nowhere to be seen.

-Chuckle.

Just in case, I looked around a bit more.

A bedroom in the Ivansia Duke's residence.

I was lying on a soft bed. The woman with Raviel's face hovered above me. I noticed a plant stand and a chair, but there was no golden skill card anywhere.

‘Okay.’

Situation assessed.

-What are you so diligently looking at?

The woman in front of me stroked my cheek.

Her eyes, identical to Raviel's, shone deeply.

I momentarily pondered whether to take this as a dream come true or a nightmare, but thankfully, I came to a conclusion in 0.1 seconds.

-Tomorrow is a holiday. My love. Let's enjoy a pleasant time...

“You bastard, using Raviel’s face to lie? Wanna die?”

The woman’s touch stopped abruptly.

“You have 10 seconds to get off me and kneel, or whether you’re a deity, an apostle, or some golden retriever-looking jerk from another world, I’ll obliterate your existence. Take this kindly warning. I don’t count to ten. Kneel within 10 seconds.”

-.....

The woman's face stiffened.

-How...?

She looked bewildered.

-You're still not fully asleep? No, that can't be. I've perfectly entered the dream world. How did you...

“Ten seconds are up.”

-What?

I smiled brightly.

“Let's start with a beating.”

Chapter 198:

Erosion (3)

---

A newly opened route to uncharted lands.

In the so-called New Continent, there naturally lived indigenous people.

However, the kind of tribe they were was extraordinary.

"Dream Demon?"

Quite extraordinary indeed.

-Yes, King of Death... that's correct....

Right after getting hit exactly 59 times by me, the Dream Demon raised its hands submissively. Incubus. Succubus. The Dream Demon tribe, often with names ending in 'bus,' were indeed the original inhabitants of the New Continent.

I cracked my knuckles left and right.

"Oh? My question seems to lack substance to you? Do you lose strength and become listless when asked? Should I take care of your spirit?"

-No, King of Death! We are brimming with energy!

"From now on, answer my questions politely. If your tone isn't polite, your face will become 'polished' instead."

-Yes! King of Death!

"Good."

I nodded in satisfaction.

The Guardian Spirit looked utterly overwhelmed.

-Kim Zombie, this guy... He's really mastered the art of beating people up!

Looking into the abyss makes the abyss stare back at me. Being trained by the Guardian Spirit and my master, I had unwittingly specialized in thrashing others.

"All the crew members on this ship have passed out. Did you do this?"

-Yes! It was our doing!

"How?"

-Our tribe usually parasitizes the dreams of other beings to survive!

The Dream Demon confessed.

-In fact, from our perspective, dreams are reality. What you call reality is, conversely, a dream for us. We thought we were the only sentient beings until you crossed the ocean, and since then, it's been one shock after another....

"Hmm."

A tribe that takes dreams as their true life.

"So, you don't have a physical body?"

-If you mean a body as you understand it... Yes, we don't. Our common sense is too different from yours for normal conversation.

"Yet, communication seems to be going quite well."

-Ah. That's because we are currently occupying the mind of this beast.

The 'beast' the Dream Demon referred to was the Mountain Calamity Tribe captain of the ship. From their habit of referring to people as beasts, I guessed the eccentric nature of the Dream Demon tribe.

-We share the memories of the beasts whose dreams we devour. Thanks to this, we know a lot about you. Over the past 24 years, we've been planning meticulously after the shock of meeting you.

"A plan?"

-We've never encountered beasts with such overflowing memories. From our perspective, it's like a feast. A banquet... The shock was beyond words.

"Hmm."

"Our children knew nothing about you."

-Well, we strictly parasitize in dreams... We don't have a true form. We choose an appearance from your memories that seems appropriate. You have never seen us, and even if you did, you would just dismiss it as a dream.

Incidentally, the current form of the Dream Demon was that of the Flame Emperor.

I had ordered it.

I couldn't bring myself to hit Raviel's face, even if it was fake. Before being my love, Raviel, with her beauty alone, is a treasure of the universe. How could I, as a cultured citizen, mistreat such a treasure?

-I... It's the first time someone whose dream has been devoured by us is still fine like you, King of Death.

The Dream Demon confessed softly.

-So, it's fascinating. How did you know it was a dream right away? How did you even enter our dream in the first place?

"My memories should tell you everything."

-That's the strange part, King of Death. Your memories don't read well. Only fragments can be scanned. This is... quite unusual.

The Dream Demon kept glancing at me with a look of wonder.

I roughly understood how things had played out.

‘Because of the [Appearance in Dreams] item.’

This isn't my dream. It's the consciousness of the Mountain

Calamity Tribe captain.

I used the item to enter the mind of another.

That's why my consciousness is only partially accessible to the Dream Demon.

'A race that lives only in the world of dreams.'

Fascinating.

"Well, it seems my mental strength is so strong that illusions don't work on me."

-Strange. That shouldn't be the problem...

"You are an interesting race, I get that."

I changed the subject.

"So why did you needlessly capture these sailors and put them to sleep? Because of you, this ship has turned into a ghost ship. They might die of dehydration."

The Dream Demon hesitated cautiously.

Seeing the Flame Emperor's face on this creature, performing such gestures, felt like my stomach acid was about to synchronize with my spit.

Moreover, it wasn't just any Incubus; the muscles seemed to be upgraded compared to the original Flame Emperor. Broader shoulders and a firmer chest. It seemed to even radiate a sparkling halo from the face.

Disgusting.

-Ugh!?

"Ah."

When I came to my senses, my palm had lightly made contact with the Dream Demon's cheek.

-Why are you hitting me again!?

"It's just that... your face kind of provokes a beating...."

-King of Death, didn't you order me to take on the appearance of this creature!

"Sorry. Anyway, why did you capture a perfectly good ship?"

The Dream Demon started to stammer, then hesitated.

-This... I'm not sure if I should tell you. This matter might be confidential to our tribe.

"Might be?"

-Yes. We had never imagined there were beings beyond the sea. Especially such delectable ones. So, after 24 years of deliberation and discussion, we only recently came to a conclusion.

The Dream Demon opened its mouth.

-We decided to invade the land where you live.

Invasion.

-Currently, this ship isn't the only one under our control. All 33 ships crossing the ocean are under our control.

-We put all the intruding beasts that entered our territory to sleep. The vanguard already set sail ten days ago. We are part of the follow-up group.

That's when I realized something odd.

'The quest window.'

A hologram appeared before my eyes.

It listed the tasks to be completed on the 35th floor.

I focused on the part written in the lower paragraph.

+

...the new continent is a fresh world only for the seven tribes.

Others have already established their homes and live on this land. At present, there is imminent discord between adventurers and natives! A one-sided massacre might even occur.

Is it invasion, coexistence, or expulsion?

The seven tribes are at risk of annihilation. Lead them!

*However, failure in leadership may result in the extinction of one or more tribes.

+

‘I see.’

I realized.

‘It's not the [natives] of the New Continent who are in danger.’

The quest window clearly stated that [the seven tribes are at risk of annihilation].

‘It's our children who might be massacred!’

The counterattack of the natives.

That was the crisis of this era.

---

As soon as I woke up, I immediately informed my comrades of the situation.

As the story unfolded, the expressions of Black Dragon Witch and Uburka grew increasingly grave.

".....Indeed. This is completely opposite to the history of our world."

Black Dragon Witch murmured.

“We were prejudiced. We thought that the ones being invaded would be the New Continent, and the natives would be the ones massacred.... Exactly. If the natives are stronger, the direction of invasion would be reversed.”

“It's not a matter of strength, Ugor.”

Uburka frowned.

“No matter how strong a warrior is, there are things in the world that can't be resisted. Like [sleep]. Everyone must sleep. Dream Demons, you said.... A tricky tribe to deal with....”

“King of Death. You said the invasion has already started?”

“Yes, senior.”

I nodded.

“Parasites have infested the crew of the ship that set sail ten days ago.”

“Is there no way to wake up voluntarily from the dream?”

“That's up to the Dream Demons.”

I recalled the story I had just heard.

“They purposely give the happiest dreams to prevent waking. Conversely, they can induce nightmares to wake someone early. Hmm. In my case, the Dream Demon appeared in the form of Raviel.”

“.....That's dangerous.”

Sssshhhh, the waves rippled. The movement of the waves caused the ship to sway.

In the middle of the vast open sea.

Not a single one of the dozens of crew members had opened their eyes.

“Resisting unhappiness is one thing, but resisting happiness is another. Especially if one is lost in a dream that literally fulfills their [dreams]... They will not try to escape until their body dies.”

“Yes. The quietest massacre in history is about to happen.”

Black Dragon Witch clicked her tongue.

“We can't delay. Let's move quickly.”

“What about these sailors?”

“We can't just ignore them.... We have to save them.”

We tied up the 32 crew members with ropes, one after another. From afar, it looked like dried pollacks strung together.

Uburka took the end of the rope, and Black Dragon Witch firmly grasped Uburka's hand.

"....."

Uburka stared blankly at Black Dragon Witch's face.

"Hm? What is it, son?"

"Nothing. Ugor."

Uburka murmured softly and turned away.

Huh?

This guy, could it be...

"Boring. Teleport!"

As Black Dragon Witch activated the skill, a total of 35 people were teleported simultaneously.

Normally, since we are spiritual bodies, we can't directly apply skills like this without possessing someone else's body.

But Uburka, as the Constellation of this world, acted as a bridge. Black Dragon Witch contacted Uburka, and Uburka contacted the sailors, so all of us benefitted from the skill's effect.

“Great!”

With the success of teleportation, Black Dragon Witch's expression brightened.

The sea breeze blew hard, scattering her thick black hair.

“We'll move to the New Continent like this. Make sure you hold on tight so you don't fall off!”

"....."

Uburka kept sneaking glances at Black Dragon Witch's face. She was too busy using teleportation to notice. Or maybe Black Dragon Witch couldn't read the complexion of a hobgoblin. It's hard to guess another race's emotions just by looking at their face.

‘Uh-oh?’

But it was very clear to my eyes.

I could feel it.

My senses, honed while sharing a century's romance with Raviel, were subtly trembling.

‘Could it be that he's really...?’

While my romantic antenna was busy catching signals, we quickly arrived at the coast. There was a port built on the shore.

A pioneer village.

A place that adventurers, merchants, soldiers, anyone dreaming of the New Continent, crossed at least once.

We gently landed in the village square and looked around.

“.....It's too quiet.”

Eerily silent.

“There's no sign of life at all.”

Despite being a fairly large village, there were no sounds of people.

Not only was there no sound, but there were also no shadows moving in the streets.

A cold silence pressed down on the air.

It was like a ghost town.

“Have the Dream Demons already gotten to them?”

Anxiety crossed Black Dragon Witch's face.

“Probably. Let's explore for now.”

I entered a nearby building.

Sure enough, people were asleep in the bedrooms.

“It seems the village was invaded while most of the residents were asleep.”

The situation was similar in other buildings.

More than five hundred residents had collapsed.

“Most are lying in bed, with only a few sprawled in taverns or on the streets. The Dream Demons targeted when humans are most vulnerable.”

“The same is probably true for other pioneer villages....”

“Likely not much different. The Dream Demons said they've begun a large-scale invasion. Sadly, some have already died of malnutrition.”

“If the Dream Demons cross to our continent on the ships' crews, the situation will spiral out of control.”

It would spread like a pandemic.

The children of the continent would fall into an eternal sleep overnight without understanding why.

“.....There might be survivors who haven't been affected by the Dream Demons. Wait here, I'll check the other villages and come back. Wait for me.”

Black Dragon Witch didn't wait for a reply and disappeared with teleportation.

Her dark blue aura lingered like an afterimage in her vacant spot.

Uburka and I were left alone in the square. Uburka stared blankly at the spot where Black Dragon Witch had just stood.

'Hmm.'

It does seem to fit, right?

“Hey. Uburka.”

“Ugor. What is it, daddy?”

I asked straightforwardly.

“Have you fallen for Black Dragon Witch?”

Uburka clamped his mouth shut.

The strongest warrior in hobgoblin history, now turned into a Constellation, furrowed his eyebrows, twitched his lips, and finally...

“Daddy...”

His face flushed.

"I think I've fallen in love for the first time."

Volume 9 – Chapters 199-222

Chapter 199: The Mirror Reflected in a Mirror (1)

---

“Uburka...”

“This is the first time in my life I’ve felt this way. My heart is racing.”

“That... that so.”

I was at a loss for words and just fumbled with my lips.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' marvels at the sweetness of love.]

It was awkward.

‘What should I do?’

Should I bless a child who is feeling first love for the first time in hundreds of years since birth?

But Black Dragon Witch is a close friend who shared meals with me. It feels somewhat guilty to support my son behind Black Dragon Witch’s back.

“Anyway, congratulations on falling in love. My son. True love changes a person. It helps you progress in many ways...”

“Black Dragon Witch, you said.”

Uburka grabbed my shoulder with a thud.

It was heavy.

Uburka’s palm was as huge as my head. The glittering eyes up close were somewhat, well, a lot, overwhelming.

Our child has beautiful eyes.

“Is that her real name?”

“No... Black Dragon Witch doesn't like being called by her real name. Even 'Black Dragon Witch' is just a title meaning the owner of the Black Dragon Guild. Probably fewer than five people know her real name...”

“Oh wow!”

Uburka was impressed.

“The name itself is not easily granted! Excellent. Only the brave and capable are worthy to be with such a person. I can sense a meticulous character.”

“Uh-uh...”

Black Dragon Witch isn't really the type to test the courage of those approaching her....

If anything, it's quite the opposite.

Black Dragon Witch hardly expects anything from the world.

“What’s her favorite flower?”

“Uh, lavender and allium...”

“I don’t know these flowers. What about her favorite music?”

“She likes piano music... like melodies dropping note by note on a white canvas.... She surprisingly enjoys jazz too.”

“Sophisticated and elegant!”

“Yeah. She’s an amazing person....”

But should I really be telling him all this?

My heart feels more and more guilty.

However, Uburka didn't care about my feelings and gripped my shoulder even tighter.

“Her hobbies? Favorite food? What does she usually do? When is her birthday?”

Son.

Blinded by love, you don't see your father or parent.

I understand being in love for the first time, but my shoulder is quite sore.

“Her hobby is romance novels... Dammit. You should find this out yourself!”

I shook off Uburka's hand.

“Why are you even asking me? You should know what your loved one likes just by looking in their eyes. If you're not confident, prepare and gift everything that she might like.”

“Ugor? Is that how it works?”

“Yes. But remember, Black Dragon Witch is a person with clear boundaries. Don’t invade her space with your feelings unilaterally. Be polite. Ask for permission. Do you understand?”

“That’s complicated...”

“What’s so complicated about that?”

We both froze in shock.

Turning our heads, Black Dragon Witch had already returned.

“What are you so surprised about? You look like you’ve seen a ghost.”

“Oh, nothing. We were just discussing how difficult it is to deal with the Dream Demons.”

“Hmm... okay.”

Black Dragon Witch shrugged her shoulders. Luckily, she didn't seem suspicious of us.

Of course. It would be hard to imagine that the Constellation of the hobgoblins has fallen head over heels for her.

“I checked the other villages.”

“How was it?”

“The same. Everyone was asleep. But there was a significant discovery.”

Black Dragon Witch concentrated aura on the tip of her index finger. Sssh. The black aura drew in the air like ink.

“I found a map in the village chief's house. The maps in other villages were similar. It's evidence they were sharing information about the New Continent. The paths of the pioneers can be inferred from this...”

Black Dragon Witch drew the map with a serious gaze.

Determination to save the children engulfed in the slumber of the Sleep Demon was evident.

Stealing a glance at Black Dragon Witch's profile with her long hair cascading down, I fully understood Uburka's feelings.

‘Worth falling for.’

A beautiful person.

Black Dragon Witch rarely talks about herself. Even when she brings up old stories, it's not about her personally but about the past she shared with [comrades].

A person with a heavy fortress in their heart always looks beautiful to my eyes.

A mark of once having tried to protect something.

“...King of Death. Are you listening to me?”

“Of course. I'm listening attentively.”

I nodded vigorously.

“Senior, the problem isn't just our continent being invaded. If we wait a few more days, the children weakened by sleep will start dying in droves. We really don't have much time.”

At most, less than a week.

Hearing my point, Black Dragon Witch's expression hardened.

“You're right... Is there no good solution?”

“Dream Demons live in dreams, not reality. We need to enter the dream to persuade or subdue them.”

But.

"Persuading each Dream Demon one by one will never end. It will take too much time, and in the meantime, more children will die of weakness. We have no choice but to persuade the entire tribe at once."

"Persuade them all at once...? How?"

"We invite the Dream Demons collectively instead of going to each one."

I turned to Uburka.

"My plan is this. First, draw as many Dream Demons as possible into Uburka's dream. Then, senior and I will enter Uburka's dream to negotiate with the Dream Demons."

"Ugor."

Uburka blushed and shrank his shoulders for some reason.

Basically, he twisted his body like a worm.

“Are you saying that my daddy and his comrade will enter my dream? That... that’s a bit embarrassing. It feels like opening a secret that should not be easily shown.”

"....."

What’s embarrassing about that?

You’ve already received plenty of dream training from me.

This father is quite embarrassed by your shyness.

“...I’m sorry for not respecting your privacy. But we have to prevent a massacre, don’t we? Uburka. It would be great if our son could make a firm decision here.”

Uburka glanced at Black Dragon Witch’s face.

“I understand. Ugor. For the greater good, I willingly offer my mind! More than anything, preventing the sacrifice of the innocent is paramount!”

Goodness.

It was too obviously a rehearsed line.

The desire of Uburka to impress Black Dragon Witch was glaringly obvious, like direct sunlight, making me want to close my eyes and ignore the fact that he's my son.

".....?"

Unfortunately, Black Dragon Witch didn't notice anything. She tilted her head once and then quickly got back to the point.

"Alright, King of Death. Your suggestion seems like the fastest solution. How do you plan to invite the Dream Demons?"

"Ah. First, I'll use the [Appearance in Dreams] item on a few and enter their dreams. I'll beat up every Dream Demon I meet so my reputation spreads among them. Then I'll tell them if they have any complaints, they should come to Uburka's dream."

“Okay.”

Black Dragon Witch’s lips curled up.

“You’re reliable. It’s good that I decided to work with you in this stage.”

“Ah, it’s nothing. I always---.”

That’s when I felt it.

The moment I was about to share a smile with Black Dragon Witch, I felt an intensely fierce gaze.

"....."

Uburka was glaring at me with a ferocious look.

The gaze was too strong to be described as such, and even the term 'eyeball' seemed too weak. It was more fitting to call it an 'eyeball beam.'

In short, Uburka looked at me as if seeing the enemy of his life.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' considers you a thorn in the eye.]

What?

[Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' suspects you might be a romantic rival.]

No.

Hey.

Hey! You crazy?

'I'm just friends with Black Dragon Witch! Close friends!'

I discreetly wrote a message on Uburka's forearm.

Uburka pouted his lips.

‘Aren’t you also a male? Suspicious.’

‘I already have someone! You’re talking nonsense.’

‘What if your world allows multiple partners?’

I’m annoyed!

Even though he's my son, I’m incredibly irritated right now...!

‘Shut up! Don’t even mention such things! I’ll decapitate you for disrespect.’

‘Your strong denial makes it even more suspicious. Are you genuinely interested?’

‘Black Dragon Witch and I shared life and death together! We’re friends! Smiling at each other is natural!’

‘What? You shared life and death? Ugor. Doesn’t that mean you want to be together from birth to death? I didn’t know my daddy was such a promiscuous person. I’m deeply disappointed.’

‘You’re driving me nuts!?’

Black Dragon Witch watched the bizarre scene of father and son bickering, utterly clueless.

“.....What are you two doing?”

“Just now, my daddy was encouraging me. Ugor.”

Uburka forced a hearty smile.

“Anyway, daddy worries too much. Even though I’ve reigned as the strongest in the history of the Earth Spirit Tribe for a thousand years. He’s too overprotective.”

“Oh?”

Black Dragon Witch seemed interested.

"You're like that when you're together?"

"Exactly. Though you might not know, but to me, daddy is quite the nag. Personally, it's very noisy being with him."

"Heh."

Uburka managed to continue a conversation with Black Dragon Witch.

Suddenly, Uburka glanced at me with a smile in his eyes.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' is keeping you in check.]

This guy?

"Morning training, aura manipulation, deeper understanding of Demonic Heavenly God Art. He interferes with everything. I wish he would keep a proper distance.

Being close only tires me out.”

This brat?

“I wish he’d let me be independent. I can’t always take care of daddy, can I? He’s so clingy it’s bothersome. Didn’t you see it earlier? Carving words on the forearm to exchange secret codes... Frankly, it’s disgusting.”

This punk?

‘You ungrateful thing!’

I was trembling with rage.

Fatherly affection means nothing in the face of romantic emotions!

Is this why they say it’s all regret when raising a son?

“Ah ha.”

Black Dragon Witch chuckled, covering her mouth with the back of her hand.

“You really get along well. Both of you.”

Her eyes were filled with warm light.

But it was not favor, it was kindness.

“Arguing with a smile means you’re open with each other. When you first declared you’d raise a goblin, I wondered what you were thinking, but it was needless worry. King of Death. You’ll be a good friend to your children.”

Even that kindness was directed not at Uburka, but at me.

“Oh... thank you...”

“What for? I give praise when it’s due.”

A warm atmosphere enveloped between Black Dragon Witch and me.

"....."

Uburka's face soured.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' deeply resents you!]

This is crazy.

Black Dragon Witch has watched my romance with Raviel in real-time and knows that there's no man as harmless as me in this world. I only have eyes for Raviel. No matter how close we are, there's no chance of love or romance blooming.

'And this son of mine!'

What can I do?

As a father, I can't interfere with my son's love life.

I suppressed the exploding emotions in my chest and quietly stood up.

“I’ll... go threaten the Dream Demons. Black Dragon Witch, please wait here with Uburka...”

“Really? Are you sure? The [Appearance in Dreams] costs 100 points each.”

“It’s okay. I can always earn more points later...”

“I’ve got a good junior. Really.”

Black Dragon Witch smiled and patted me on the shoulder.

“I’ll look for a way to solve the nutritional issues of the sleeping children. Hurry back, King of Death.”

Pat pat.

Her touch on my shoulder overflowed with friendship.

Since friendship is also an affection, it wasn’t wrong to call her gesture affectionate.

"....."

I glanced at Uburka's face.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' clearly recognizes you as an enemy!]

As expected.

Uburka was glaring at me with eyes emitting a blood-red aura.

If I wasn't mistaken... that was murderous intent.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' resolves to commit patricide!]

This child is really living up to his nickname.

Chapter 200: The Mirror Reflected in a Mirror (2)

---

I wandered around the pioneer village, entering the dreams of the residents.

And in their dreams, I beat up every Dream Demon that appeared.

[You have purchased 'Appearance in Dreams'.]

[100 race points are consumed!]

[Your current race points are 6012.]

As expected, by the time I reached the tenth person, my reputation had spread among the Dream Demons.

In the tenth dream, an Incubus with the face of the Director screamed as soon as he saw me.

-Heek! A crazy thug!?

“Finally, my reputation is getting around.”

I smiled contentedly. It was satisfying. After using the [Appearance in Dreams] item a whopping 10 times, it was natural to see some effect.

This definitely wasn't just me taking out the stress I got from Uburka on them.

-Why, why would you interfere with our prey?

“Because you happened to catch my eye. Consider it bad luck. But why are you taking on our Director's face?”

-If I have this person's face, I get beaten less....

“Clever bastards.”

I gave the Dream Demons a fair beating.

-Argh! You're hitting me anyway!

"I said I'd hit you less, not that I wouldn't hit you at all. Child from across the sea. If you don't want to be hit more, spread my message to your tribe. Tonight, a hobgoblin will be sleeping in this village square. Make sure to bring as many of your kind as possible into the dream."

-Why....

"I am the guardian of the Earth Spirit Tribe. Under me, there are the Mountain Calamity and Fairy Tribes. So, I'm practically a guardian god for three tribes. How can I just sit back while you put our children into eternal sleep?"

-A god...?

The Incubus glanced me up and down. Skepticism filled his eyes. As I smiled widely and showed my fist, the Dream Demon quickly averted his gaze.

-Ah, alright. I'll pass on your message to my tribe.

That night.

We executed our plan as intended.

Uburka fell asleep, and Black Dragon Witch and I entered his dream. We intended to persuade the Dream Demons who also entered the dream. Essentially, Uburka's mental world would transform into a conference room.

"It's been a while since I slept after becoming a Constellation."

Uburka said that, but he fell asleep surprisingly quickly.

The quiet village.

This sea village, built by those who crossed the vast ocean dreaming of a new world, was truly silenced, captured by dreams. The waves lapped at the shore, and the village's cicadas cried in rhythm with the undulating waves.

"Shall we enter as well, senior?"

“King of Death.”

Black Dragon Witch called my name.

Her voice was soaked in the black echo of the waves and the white cry of the cicadas.

“Yes?”

“If you’re trying to set me up with your child, give up.”

I was a bit taken aback.

“Oh. You... noticed?”

“What do you think, how many times do you think I’ve been proposed to in my life? When it comes to romance, there aren’t many more experienced than me. Though I never thought I’d get attention from a Constellation or a goblin.”

“Uh. Sorry. I thought it wasn’t polite to keep it a secret, but talking about it seemed awkward...”

“I have no intention of dating anyone.”

Black Dragon Witch stroked her hair.

The summer night sea was drifting in the wind.

“Love is willingly allowing someone to be your weakness. I don’t want to be weak.”

“Doesn’t loving each other make you stronger?”

“Yes, it might. But are you confident you can live a life without Duke Ivansia?”

"....."

“If you lose Duke Ivansia, you’ll crumble. Even if the Paladin or I die, you as a structure will wear out. Even if the Viper or the Heretic Inquisitor dies, it would be the same.”

Black Dragon Witch drew in the air with her finger.

Maybe she bought an item from the civilization store.

“I find it hard to walk the tightrope of life with my life on the line.”

Black Dragon Witch looked at me.

“I want to be able to handle my life alone. I want to carry only the things I can discard when necessary... It’s embarrassing to share such thoughts with others.”

“No, senior. Thank you for sharing.”

“Alright. Tell your child to endure the ordeal of first love.”

My poor son.

Rejected even before confessing.

I looked down at Uburka, asleep in the square, with a pitying gaze.

“That’s enough serious talk. Shall we go save the children?”

“Yes.”

[You have purchased ‘Appearance in Dreams’.]

[100 race points are consumed!]

[Your current race points are 5912.]

Both of us dived into Uburka’s dream.

---

When I opened my eyes, a dense jungle unfolded before me.

Hmm.

The smell of damp soil filled the air. The scent that occasionally wafts up on a rainy night. There were no asphalt roads or dazzling signs, but trees as tall as buildings surrounded us on all sides.

“Welcome, daddy. And daddy's close friend.”

Uburka was sitting on a large rock.

“Where is this?”

“This is where I trained about 200 years ago. It's inhabited by powerful demon beasts, and I was quite indebted to them. It's a place known to be very dangerous and off-limits, but the more grueling the training, the sweeter the results.”

Uburka boasted about himself.

He didn't forget to subtly highlight his chest muscles.

Well, his muscles were indeed as vast as the Pacific Ocean...

“King of Death's son truly has a noble mindset.”

Black Dragon Witch just gave a kind motherly smile.

“He feels like a younger brother to me.”

“Ugor. A younger brother...?”

Uburka tilted his head and glanced at me.

‘Daddy. Feeling like family means this surely has a good meaning, right? It's overflowing with possibilities.’

No.

You've just been rejected as clearly as possible....

Please, pay attention to the fact that she specifically called you a [younger brother].

Black Dragon Witch keeps praising me in front of you as a gesture for you to give up. Kid, how are you going to survive in this harsh world of romance with such a lack of perception?

-Grrr...

A beast's howl echoed from the forest.

The three of us immediately stopped chatting and turned our heads.

-.....

-...Grr....

It wasn't just one or two beasts.

In the shadowy, dark jungle.

Hundreds of pairs of eyes glittered blue under the trees like wildflowers. Some beasts had antlers larger than their bodies, resembling stags, while others hissed with the mouths of snakes.

“So many demon beasts...”

“Probably all the ones I defeated in the past.”

The beasts surrounded us.

For a moment, they prowled around threateningly. Rough breathing. Savage footsteps. As hundreds of beasts exhaled simultaneously, the jungle air heated up.

“You’re Dream Demons, right?”

But Uburka and Black Dragon Witch had long lost their fear. Black Dragon Witch faced the demon beasts as if looking at neighborhood dogs.

“We are the guardians of the tribes from across the sea. We’ve come to protest your unilateral invasion. Honestly, are you in your right mind?”

-.....

“Because of you, many children have become dehydrated and malnourished. Lives are at stake. Many have already died, and more will follow. Call your leader. We need to know why you’ve done this.”

The beasts looked at each other, realizing that their numbers wouldn't intimidate us.

-A guardian god, we heard... Indeed. Maintaining sanity in our world is impressive, but you are still an outsider. It's impossible for you to significantly harm us, let alone stop us.

A stag stepped forward from among the beasts.

As the stag moved, the shadow of the jungle leaves on its luminescent back cascaded like fish scales.

I opened my mouth.

“Are you the king of the Dream Demons?”

-A foolish question. We have no king.

The stag's eyes examined my face.

“If there's no king, then why do you step forward?”

-Don't judge us by your standards. You might think you're conversing with me, but it's not true. We simply possess your dreams and speak according to your memories.

Black Dragon Witch frowned.

“What do you mean?”

-We have no form, no appearance. Inevitably, we lack individuality. We can't use words you don't know, nor can we mimic people you're unfamiliar with.

I recalled the ten Dream Demons I had beaten up.

“Despite that, their reactions were quite vivid. Their manner of speaking was frivolous too.”

-Those you met reflected your mind. If their speech was frivolous, it's because your speech is frivolous. If they dislike being beaten, it's because you dislike being beaten. Foreigner. We are merely mirrors.

“.....All that was just mimicking me?”

-Exactly.

I was shocked.

“That’s impossible! I’m not that frivolous! I’m known for my serious charm as a hunter!”

"....."

"....."

“What’s with you two? Why are you both staring at me like that?”

“It’s nothing, King of Death.”

“I didn’t raise any objections, daddy.”

“See! Even my colleague and child agree with me!”

The stag opened its mouth as if amused.

-We have no interest in your reputation, foreigner. Our interest lies solely in the nearly infinite dreams of your races.

“Interested in dreams?”

-Your dreams are exceptionally delicious.

Crunch.

The stag crushed a jungle centipede under its hoof.

-Until we met you, we had only fed on animal dreams. It was like eating bland porridge. Compared to that, how varied are the dreams of your kind!

The stag flicked its long tongue.

-We were quite primitive before meeting you. Insignificant intelligence, negligible memory... We didn't even know there was another reality beyond our own, nor did we fully understand we were a species that lived by parasitizing dreams. Thanks to eating your dreams, we have developed rapidly.

I understood the Dream Demon's words.

“So, you should be grateful to our children, right? Even unintentionally, you became smarter because of them.”

-We have already repaid enough. Haven't we given you the happiest dreams possible?

“But what's the use of happy dreams if they're going to die like this?”

-Happy dreams or miserable reality. You prefer the latter, it seems.

The stag sneered.

Its laughter, produced by a beast's vocal cords and tongue, was bizarre.

-But the people of your kind we have met so far think differently. Why not wish for their happiness, foreigner?

“Sounds plausible, but it really just seems like you want to gorge on delicious food.”

-You maintain sanity in our world, but you are still an outsider. It's impossible for you to significantly harm us, let alone stop us.

The stag, true to its nature, had a stiff neck.

-Don't worry. We have no intention of exterminating your races. After crossing the sea, we will restrain our dream-eating to ensure your kind can continue to reproduce. But your dreams are so attractive that we might overindulge.

Alright.

I got the gist.

“So, you're saying you can do whatever you want because you can't lose.”

-That's one interpretation.

People only show humility to those who can hit them back.

The same seems true for Dream Demons living in dreams.

“Good that you’re easy to understand.”

-You speak as if you can attack us.

“Exactly.”

I opened the civilization store.

“I don’t know how grand your dream world is, but...”

I purchased an item.

[You have purchased ‘Character Possession’.]

[2000 race points are consumed!]

[Your current race points are 4012.]

“I’ve experienced all sorts of worlds, kids.”

I'm genuinely curious about what it feels like to become a Dream Demon.

Smiling, I chanted toward the stag.

“Activate item. Character Possession.”

That instant.

The infinite world of dreams unfolded before my eyes.

Chapter 201: The Mirror Reflected in a Mirror (3)

---

-What?

My vision turned completely white.

In my mind, or rather, within my spirit, the demon beast let out a sound of panic. The Dream Demon had realized that something unusual was happening.

-What are you doing... Attempting to invade [our world]? Impossible. You have no terminal to connect to us. How can you...

“Feeling scared?”

I let out a mocking laugh. I could feel the Dream Demon flinch. Though I had no mouth to express laughter in my current state, my taunting intent and emotions were clearly conveyed.

-Insolent...!

“Got no confidence, huh? Ah, but you're a stag, so you naturally have a long tongue.”

-You, living in a wretched material world, are so arrogant. We govern the dreams of all beings. Even if you step into our world, do you really think you'll remain sane for even a moment?

“So, you're saying you allow me to enter?”

-Come if you dare!

Okay.

I smiled inwardly.

“I'll take that as your consent. Guest.”

The view, which was solely white, transformed.

My consciousness overlaid with the consciousness of the Dream Demon.

[Congratulations!]

[You are the first foreigner to visit the Dream World.]

[You have achieved a unique accomplishment.]

[You are awarded 3000 race points!]

And the world that unfolded before me was extraordinary.

A pink sky.

The color was so enticing, it seemed like it would sweeten my mouth just by looking at it. It was as if a child's imaginative coloring of the sky had been carefully brought to life by some transcendent being.

".....! Uh!"

The pink not only filled the sky but also invaded my consciousness. My consciousness? No, it was indistinguishable from inside and outside. At this moment, I was the consciousness itself.

“Ah...”

Memories rapidly receded.

The components that made me. The steps Kim Gong-Ja had taken were being erased. Like footprints on the beach washed away by a single wave. Quickly, the pink wave eroded the beach of my memory.

"-----."

Somewhere, the sound of children laughing echoed.

Hallucinations.

Delusions.

Before I knew it, the sky was no longer pink but yellow. The color of my consciousness also turned yellow.

The sky turned blue. My consciousness also became blue.

"Um."

My existence was like water in a triangular flask, transparent. As the world dropped dollops of colorful paint, my water turned red, yellow, blue.

A world where moments flickered rapidly.

This was the place where the Dream Demons lived.

"This is a bit dangerous."

The past vanished. Memories faded.

As the past disappeared, my ability to act freely diminished, and as memories faded, my shadow became fainter.

Feeling intoxicated, my consciousness was hazy.

Now, all I could perceive was the present.

If I let my guard down even slightly, I feared I would lose myself.

‘If I were alone, I would have been helplessly overwhelmed.’

But what constitutes a person is not just oneself.

In a rush of anxiety, I shouted desperately.

"---Ghoul Reincarnation."

Suddenly, my shadow expanded.

[Activating skill.]

My shadow was pitch black. Not a translucent shade but pure black. The blackness spread rapidly in all directions.

Swoosh-

The blackness consumed the pink sky, swallowed the yellow, and even the blue.

My shadow became thousands of fingers, scratching the corners of this world's sky. Wherever my black nails touched, the sky bled colorful blood.

“What the hell?”

Where the pink paint melted and flowed, my Ghouls, borrowing fragments of my memory, started to reveal themselves one by one.

“What kind of messed-up place is this?”

Flame Emperor.

A handsome man with a ponytail looked around irritably.

"....."

Preta.

A girl, hiding half her face with an animal bone mask, looked up at the sky. Her eyes were filled with coldness. Preta gazed at the world as if looking at a dead animal.

"No, I'll brew the tea again immediately. I'm sorry! My lord! I'll brew it with a feeling of being reborn... Huh? What? What the hell is this?"

Goldencup.

A young lady in a maid outfit looked around blankly, kneeling on the ground. By the way, Lady Goldencup, Silvia Evanair, was serving as a maid in our Duke's household.

‘Raviel...’

It seems she was summoned while being scolded by our Duchess.

Happy to see you enjoying life, my love.

“Where is this?”

“Look over there. The sky’s color is quite strange.”

“It’s too bizarre for the Peach Blossom Spring. Really. Our young master sure knows how to find interesting places!”

“Hmm...”

Four Demon Lords.

The elite of the Demonic Cult, clad in dark robes, were summoned. As their robes fluttered once, twice, the entire army of the Demonic Cult, numbering thousands, was also summoned.

“Phew.”

Finally, I sighed.

A place to accommodate my breath was prepared here.

“Nice to see you all again.”

The Ghouls turned to look at me. I looked at them. As our gazes met, the distant past returned. Memories became clear. The outline of my existence became more defined.

To the Flame Emperor, I am an enemy.

To Preta, I am a ruler.

To Goldencup, I am the lover of a rival.

To the followers, I am the Vice-lord.

My vengeance, duty, love, responsibility. All were reflected in the eyes of the Ghouls. Just as they became Ghouls reborn through me, so too had I reached the current Kim Gong-Ja through them.

As long as they were with me, I wouldn't disappear.

“Good to see you all. Except for that chimpanzee over there swearing.”

“Huh? Are you talking about me?”

Yoo Soo-Ha frowned.

“Of course, brat. I was summoned while working, what do you expect? Getting called out like this by some kid who can't even properly behave. I was already frustrated in life, not even reaching E-rank, and now I have to clean up after a brat even in death...”

“Go dance over there.”

“Damn it!”

While Yoo Soo-Ha performed a hip-hop dance, I explained the situation to the Ghouls.

“Interesting, a race that parasitizes dreams.”

Hearing my story, Lady Goldencup stroked her chin. Despite wearing a maid's outfit, her elegance, known as 'The Flower of the Imperial Social Circles,' still shone brightly.

“Is this a dream within a dream? The dream of succubi living in dreams, now distorted by the Constellations. How romantic! I find it quite romantic, Butler.”

“I am not your butler, but the Duchess's.”

“Ah, don't sweat the small stuff, Butler. You'll go bald worrying like that. I sense an aura of baldness around you! I see it, I really do! The Duchess sighing and stroking your bald head...”

“Go dance over there too.”

“Damn it!!”

While Goldencup danced a waltz next to Yoo Soo-Ha, the rest of us, the sane ones, discussed our strategy.

“As the golden-haired maid pointed out, the Dream Demons' traits do seem similar to a Constellation.”

Preta spoke.

“They’re not a combat-type Constellation but rather a characteristic-type. They infiltrate their ideologies into reality, distorting phenomena... Such beings can’t be defeated by force.”

“So they’re the type who set their own rules.”

“Precisely, my Lord.”

Clink.

Preta fiddled with her skull mask.

“Dreams are a reproduction of experiences and a realization of wishes. Recollecting the past or contemplating the future. Among these, my Lord, I believe the latter should concern you. If you can fulfill their wishes more satisfactorily than the dreams created by the Dream Demons, then naturally, we could subdue this world..."

Preta suddenly stopped speaking.

Not only Preta, but everyone else was startled.

-Hahaha! Can you guess who I am?

Slap.

On one side, a lady in a luxurious carriage appeared. Humans, not horses, pulled the carriage. The lady joyfully whipped them.

-Come on, hurry!

-You are the brightest moon of the empire, the majestic Silvia Evanair Empress!

-Ah, your words are music to my ears! But your voice lacks passion. A more agonized, wrung-out tone, please praise me with that!

-Oh, gracious and beautiful Empress...

-More!

It was Goldencup.

Precisely, a dream figure resembling Goldencup.

"....."

"....."

Hmm.

We all turned our heads and stared at one side.

There, the real Goldencup, still in her maid outfit, was earnestly showcasing her waltz skills.

“That’s not me! It’s a false illusion! A fabrication by the ignorant masses!”

“But this is the world of dreams. In other words, [that] is your dream...”

“How unpleasant, Butler! I’ll sue you in the imperial court!”

“Half of the judges in that court receive funding from our Ivansia Ducal family. You know that, right...?”

“Damn it! This is why I hate the powerful!”

The real Goldencup performed a triple axel.

Beside her, the Goldencup of dreams, or rather the fragment created by the Dream Demons, laughed ‘haha’ while relentlessly whipping the people tied to the carriage.

Truly a world of dreams.

Chaotically absurd.

“Ah.”

Preta, realizing late, murmured.

“It seems... our dreams are starting to be reflected as well.”

“Seems so.”

“Here is a different realm, my Lord. The longer you stay, the more your common sense and knowledge will warp and twist. It’s essential we find the core of this world quickly to minimize damage, to hold onto...”

Preta probably meant to say ‘to hold onto our sanity’ but couldn’t finish.

There was a reason for Preta's stuttering.

-Yoo Soo-Ha, here is the signature cocktail you ordered.

-Ugh, it's not good. I can get this in any local bar.

-I'm deeply sorry. To sully your refined taste, I deserve to die a thousand deaths.

-No need for that, just...

-Oh, Yoo Soo-Ha, such modesty. They say even a ripe rice stalk bows its head, but with your virtue, not even a grain could fit.

-Hey, hey, don't exaggerate, man.

-I'm sorry, I just spoke my true feelings...

The dream world's Yoo Soo-Ha was dressed in a tank top and sweatpants.

An endless stream of well-dressed gentlemen surrounded him.

-Yoo Soo-Ha, here is a watch our brand will soon release. If you would grace our humble junk with your noble wrist, it would be an honor for our ignorant kind.

-Eh, it's so-so. But out of kindness, I'll wear it. Just for two days, and then I'll throw it away.

-We will remember those two days for a thousand years.

-Yoo Soo-Ha, I've gathered the most famous chefs from the Tower to prepare a full course. If you could enjoy our food just a bit...

-Ah, so noisy. Just bring it.

-You are calling me noisy... I'm so moved.

In the distance, the sky shimmered pink.

We quietly observed the 'real' Yoo Soo-Ha.

He looked like he had swallowed spit that somehow refluxed back onto his tongue.

“What. You think you’re cleaner than that?”

“...My Lord.”

Preta spoke.

Behind the skull mask, Preta's eyes were serious.

She clearly didn't want to be lumped in with such beings as Ghouls.

“Please, if you plan to accept more under your command, please choose wisely.”

Somehow, I felt guilty.

Chapter 202: Black Dragon (1)

---

We headed towards the heart of the Dream World.

-Hahaha! Hurry and pay homage to this Empress!

Behind us, the succubus impersonating Goldencup was still whipping away, but we ignored it and moved on. No one in our group wanted to get involved with that.

As we walked, we encountered bizarre and peculiar landscapes.

First off, the sky above us was unusual.

"The moon... has eyes, my Lord."

"Indeed."

Blink.

The moon blinked its eyelids. As Preta mentioned, the full moon had eyes, and its pupils were red. The red-eyed moon blinked at us.

"Kind of creepy, but the eyes are pretty. Makes you want to keep looking up."

For some reason, my heart fluttered.

Preta gave me a subtle look.

"Uh, well, I think that's influenced by your subconscious, my Lord. Perhaps it imitates the eyes of the Duchess..."

"Oh? Really?"

Looking again, they did resemble Raviel's.

Just with the eyes, she steals my heart. Truly, our Duchess is enchanting, not a single unattractive trait from head to toe.

Next, we arrived at a place influenced by Preta.

"Hmm."

Under the red moon, a field of yellow wheat stretched out before us.

Between the stalks, farmers bent their backs, laboring.

"....."

Preta's expression noticeably stiffened.

I immediately recognized where this place was modeled after.

"It's Ester's village."

"Yes, my Lord."

It was the village annihilated by the Aegim Empire and the allied forces.

Children I once saw in Preta's trauma were playing in the wheat field.

-Spirit! Spirit!

Something lay amidst the ripe wheat grains.

A massive beast.

A blue-furred wolf with half-closed eyes watched the approaching children.

-Here's a gift for you!

-We picked the prettiest ones to make this!

The village children offered the wolf bouquets of flowers.

However, the wolf's head was too large for the bouquets to fit. The children, slightly puzzled, then simply hung the bunches on the wolf's ears. Suddenly, the wolf sported flower earrings.

-Grrr.

Seemingly pleased, the wolf let the children ride on its back.

The wind caressed the wheat field, and the children's laughter rippled through the air.

Their laughter carried on the wind was named happiness.

“That beast is...”

“It seems to be my fantasy, my Lord.”

Preta murmured.

“If I hadn't devoured Ester and remained a beast instead of becoming human... such a possibility. Then I wouldn't have become Ester, revered as a saintess, nor would I have been reviled as a witch. The village wouldn't have burned down either."

Preta's tone was even.

"I was foolish."

She quietly gripped her sword.

"If I hadn't consumed humans, I wouldn't have understood human hearts. I only understand what I've devoured, only after digesting them. If I hadn't eaten Ester, I wouldn't have harbored the wish to be with humans. This landscape laid before us is a contradiction filled with wishes."

Preta approached the wheat field.

The wolf carrying children stopped.

A silent confrontation.

The doppelganger coldly gazed at its imitation.

“Die.”

Preta drew her sword and cut down the wolf.

As soon as it was sliced by Preta’s blade, the wolf melted into pink paint.

The children riding it, the farmers working the field, even the village itself, all instantly melted away.

“...Phew.”

Only Preta remained under the red moon.

She slowly turned her head to look at me.

“Let’s move on, my Lord.”

“...Quite decisive. Even though that was a scene of your happiness.”

“It may be presumptuous to say, but I haven’t lived a life light enough to be swayed by such contradictory fantasies. I vividly remember drinking Ester’s blood and consuming the flesh of a child. How could I pretend it never happened, even in a dream?”

I nodded.

“You’re right.”

We continued our journey.

Along the way, we encountered the dreams of the cult members, Uburka’s dreams. In this Dream World, Uburka was laughing hysterically, having crushed me underfoot, shouting Ugor! Ugor! Since Uburka was also in contact with the Dream Demons, it seemed his subconscious was reflected.

“Are we still far from the core of this world?”

“No, my Lord. We are almost there.”

Preta kicked Uburka aside and pointed ahead.

“There, I sense a presence comparable to a constellation.”

Ahead was an old barbed wire fence.

Sitting in front of the shabby barricade was a Dream Demon.

As we approached, the succubus tilted its head, saying, “Heh, really keeping your wits about yin this place. Fascinating.”

The succubus looked familiar.

Smaller and more fragile than the person I knew, I realized who she was modeled after.

“Black Dragon Witch?”

-Yes, the person you call by that name. This human.

Maybe seven or eight years old.

A much younger Black Dragon Witch stood up, saying, “Eucha,” and stretched.

-We don't have natural faces. We need to borrow the form of another creature to converse. The only person you treasure yet can have a cold conversation with you is this child.

“What do you mean?”

-It's simple. She doesn't easily get swayed by emotions.

The succubus glanced over my shoulder.

Yoo Soo-Ha, Preta, Goldencup, the Four Demon Lords, and the cult members followed behind me.

-So many guests, but not a single table to entertain them. Sorry. But understand our plight. We have nothing to plunder in this wretched place. Why did you bring so many soldiers?

“We're not the ones who intruded. Isn't it you who invaded across the sea?”

-Nature dictates that wild beasts are drawn to the scent of blood.

“If that's the case, then it's only natural for the strong to subdue the weak. So, it would be nice if you just quietly listen to me.”

-Scary.

“Want me to be scarier?”

Step.

I left the others behind and approached the succubus.

“Seems like you're taking us lightly since physical force doesn't work well here...”

-Oh? And if that's the case?

“Then if we can't negotiate, I'll have to play my trump card.”

-Interesting.

The young succubus smiled.

-Tell me about this trump card of yours.

“I have the skill to resurrect the dead. I'll kill you all and then revive you.”

I summoned the [Ghoul Reincarnation] card.

The golden card sparkled in my hand.

"Any being that dies by my hand becomes obedient to my commands after resurrection. Subjugating your Dream Demon clan will be a piece of cake for me."

-.....

“Think I’m bluffing?”

I looked directly into the succubus’s eyes, just inches away from me.

I had already obliterated [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness] once.

There was no reason, at least for me, not to do the same thing again.

The hint of a smile vanished from the Dream Demon’s lips.

-...No, I don’t doubt your sincerity. King of Death, you are a terrifying person.

The succubus, who had been staring into my eyes, shook its head.

-It's just regrettable.

“Regrettable? What do you mean?”

-Actually, it's not us but the original creature this body is based on that feels regret. In the end, even your way of persuasion resorts to the logic of force.

That's when it happened.

Gunshots rang out from behind the barbed wire.

“Lord!”

“Vice-lord!”

Preta and the Four Demon Lords instantly surrounded me for protection. However, there was nothing wrong with me. Neither Preta nor the Four Demon Lords seemed to be injured.

Watching our reaction, the succubus chuckled.

-Don't worry. According to your way of speaking, this is also just a fantasy.

The gunshots continued behind the barbed wire and fence.

Looking in the direction of the gunfire, I saw a man clutching a small child, running frantically, as if being chased.

-How deep of a mark even a single moment of experience can leave on you. The more I know, the more astonishing it is.

The man kept looking back but made sure the child never turned around, protecting the child with his body.

-Don't ever look back. Understand?

-Yes.

Hearing the child's voice, I realized.

This was Black Dragon Witch's childhood.

Both the man and the child were dirty, as if they hadn't washed for a long time. Mud stained their clothes, solidifying at the hems, weighing them down. Dragging their heavy steps, the man and child were fleeing.

「 It was when I was seven. There was a civil war outside, and my father passed away. 」

There was a small door in the fence.

The man pushed the child through the door first.

The gunshots were getting closer.

「 We were fleeing with my parents, and it seems soldiers were chasing us. My father stayed behind. 」

The child screamed as it got stuck in the door.

-Dad! Dad...

-Don't look back! Go ahead! I'll follow!

The man forcefully pushed the child through the fence. The child continued screaming, but as per the father's instructions, kept moving.

「 I really didn't look back and just ran. 」

What happened to the man afterward was not captured in Black Dragon Witch's memory.

But at the end, just behind the young Black Dragon Witch, there was a thud, like something hitting the ground.

That sound marked the end of the fence scene.

"....."

I could guess what the sound meant.

The man must have tried to climb the fence after sending the child through.

Climbing it like a tree, he was likely shot and fell to the ground.

The last sound Black Dragon Witch remembered must have had such a backstory.

-No matter how strong you are, you can't reverse the irreversible.

The succubus spoke indifferently.

-That's why it's best to prevent problems before they happen. Always prepare and be on guard. The original being of this body thinks that way. She has a habit of imagining the death of everyone she meets first. Sadly.

"I know, even without you saying it."

-Huh. Then you must also know that this person has prevented eight kidnapping and assassination attempts on you so far?

"...What?"

I was shocked and turned to look at the Dream Demon.

-The world knows you've grown rapidly. It wouldn't be strange if some nasty forces took interest in you. The original has smashed and obliterated them, but there are still spies sent from the outside world remaining in the Tower.

"....."

-Without power, you can't even protect the lives of those around you.

Crash.

The moon in the sky of the Dream World shattered.

The red moon broke into pieces and fell toward the horizon.

-King of Death. Since you have power, I'll bow to you for now. I'll order the Dream Demons who sailed across the sea to return. But you can't stay on the continent forever, looking after the seven tribes, can you?

The earth became soft and turned into a pink sea.

Splash, splash.

The fragments of the moon that fell plunged into the pink seawater.

-You have only temporarily subdued us. You haven't truly persuaded us. That's the law of force after all.

A tidal wave rose from the sea where the moon had fallen.

Just as the wave was about to engulf us, the form of the succubus melted away too.

-See you next time. King of Death.

And the Dream World collapsed.

---

“---King of Death? Are you okay, junior?”

I suddenly came to my senses.

Black Dragon Witch was looking at me with concern.

"Senior?"

“Thank goodness. Your eyes are back to normal.”

I looked around.

We were no longer in the jungle landscape that unfolded in Uburka’s dream.

I lay in the square of the harbor town.

“The Dream Demons...”

“Right after your conversation with the stag, we were suddenly ejected from the dream. What happened? Did you succeed in persuading them, or did you fail?”

“I guess I succeeded.”

As if to prove my words, the people lying in the square began to wake up one by one.

Despite being stiff from dreaming for so long, they thankfully seemed to have no life-threatening issues.

“Sigh...”

Black Dragon Witch let out a deep sigh of relief.

She finally seemed to have relaxed.

“We can talk about what happened later... Right now, it’s...”

“Senior.”

I grabbed Black Dragon Witch's wrist.

She turned to me, tilting her head in confusion.

“I have something to tell you.”

“Why so serious all of a sudden?”

“It’s a serious matter.”

A strange silence lingered between us.

I took a deep breath.

Then, looking straight into Black Dragon Witch's eyes, I spoke.

“Senior. I am a returner.”

Chapter 203: Black Dragon (2)

---

“.....What?”

Black Dragon Witch blinked.

The leader of the top guild in the Tower fluttered her eyelids, slowly digesting the information. A fleeting moment passed.

Gradually, she furrowed her brows.

“A returner? What are you talking about?”

“Since before, I’ve been pondering. You and I traveled across the Aegim Empire together, didn’t we? It would have been easier to reveal my identity back then, but I didn’t fully trust you yet. That’s why I’ve been hiding it until now.”

"....."

As I continued, Black Dragon Witch's expression grew more solemn.

She was clearly realizing this was no joke.

"You often said to me, where did such an unusual rookie come from? Too cunning for his age. You were right. I am not a rookie."

I summoned a skill card.

"Skill card, open."

The card shimmered with a golden light.

Flipping the shining card in my hand, I showed it to Black Dragon Witch.

+

[Returner's Winding Clock]

Rank: EX

Effect: Activated automatically on death. You will return 24 hours back in time from the moment of your death. Your memories and stats are preserved while returning.

*However, there is a greater penalty the higher your rank.

*Skill copied from Yoo Soo-Ha

+

“Wait a minute.”

Black Dragon Witch reached out her left hand and grabbed mine, the card in hand. Consequently, the skill card was obscured, preventing her from reading the description.

She unintentionally blocked what I intended to disclose.

“No.”

Her eyes, deep and dark, resembled a bottomless well, seemingly desperate. She looked at me urgently, a thin layer of cold water rippling silently in the depths of her gaze.

“Don’t do this. Please.”

The voice was always familiar, yet its tone and tremor were new.

“There's something you're about to say, and I don't know what it is, but I know the outcome. There are lines that shouldn't be crossed between people. No matter how close or intimate, that line must not be breached.”

Black Dragon Witch spoke as if she had predicted such a situation long ago.

That naturalness might have stemmed from past experiences.

“Don’t share your secret with me. Don’t divulge it. If you reveal it now, King of Death, we’ll cross a river of no return.

When people rely too much on each other, it's not reliance but dependency."

"I understand. I know."

"...You and I are good friends. Reliable comrades. It's not right to expect more in a relationship. I will solve my own problems, and you live your life. Isn't that the best way?"

Black Dragon Witch was seeking my agreement.

Her earnest words made me ponder again. Deciding the nature and extent of relationships was always difficult.

Soon, I reached a conclusion.

"Then listen to what I have to say, and decide."

"It's too late once I hear it."

"No, it's not. We can turn it back. We can make it as if this conversation never happened. I have that ability."

"....."

Black Dragon Witch fell silent.

In the square of the seaside village, people were waking up and instinctively searching for a well. They were expelling the toxins accumulated from their long sleep with moans and groans. Groans and gasps resonated from all directions.

“...Let's not talk about it here.”

Black Dragon Witch muttered, still holding my right hand.

“Teleport.”

In the next moment, we were out of the square.

At the village dock.

Ships were tied to ropes, creaking with the waves. The discordant sounds made by the boats were embraced by the sea. For a while, we listened to the sound of the waves.

“Okay. I understand.”

Having finally made up her mind, Black Dragon Witch nodded.

“I’ll listen to what you have to say first. But I can’t discuss such a topic sober.”

With a wave of her hand, a black whirlpool appeared in the air, looking like a piece of the world cut out and painted black. Black Dragon Witch effortlessly reached into it.

Shortly after, she pulled out a bottle of liquor.

I was slightly surprised.

"A skill?"

"Yes. [Item Storage]. It's limited to storing only certain items, but there's no skill more convenient for disposing of evidence after killing someone."

Black Dragon Witch casually said this and then took out two cups as well.

“Consider yourself honored. No one else knows I have this skill. Among the living hunters, you're the first to witness this skill, King of Death.”

I took the cup from Black Dragon Witch.

For a while, only the sound of the bottle emptying filled the air.

Before the alcohol could cloud my consciousness, I spoke up.

“I am a returner.”

I stated it clearly once more.

“I'm not sure where to start... I have a skill that can turn back time. Specifically, it's an ability that takes me back 24 hours upon death. Thanks to this ability, I've overcome countless difficulties. The 10th floor, the 20th floor, all of it was survived using this returner skill.”

I showed Black Dragon Witch the skill card.

This time, she did not avert her gaze.

“...I see.”

She sighed, as if she had finally found the last piece of a long-sought puzzle.

“Did you suspect this?”

“A little. At least I knew the [Prophet] thing was a lie.”

Black Dragon Witch tilted her cup.

“It was too convenient an excuse. I've been watching you all along, and you weren't acting on [pre-existing knowledge]. You fought as if it was your last time, every time. Ah, so it wasn't foreknowledge, but traveling back to the past.”

Black Dragon Witch looked at my face anew.

“There's something I've been wanting to ask you.”

“Please, go ahead.”

“The battle on the 11th floor.”

She let out a long-held curiosity.

“On the 11th floor, our Tower experienced its first group battle. Everyone, excited that the stage following the 10th floor had opened after years, rushed into the 11th floor. We fought against the Demon King's army there. Remember?”

“Yes.”

“Miraculously, not a single hunter lost their life. There were injuries, but no deaths. But...”

She hesitated.

“Did you...”

“Yes.”

“...return until there were no casualties?”

“Yes.”

Black Dragon Witch closed her lips.

A bit more water rippled in the well beneath her eyes.

“How many times...?”

“Many.”

“Ten times? Twenty?”

“It was a bit more than that.”

“Even on the 12th floor?”

“And since then, continuously. Until I met Raviel, that's how it always felt.”

"....."

Black Dragon Witch's breaths became shorter.

“Why? For what reason...? You didn't have to go that far.”

“It wasn't because I am inherently good. If I had been alone on the 11th floor, I could never have repeated it dozens or hundreds of times. It was always you all who pushed me forward.”

I looked directly into Black Dragon Witch's eyes.

“Every time the number of humans dying on the stage decreased, Black Dragon Witch smiled a bit.”

The smiles she couldn't remember.

“At that time, I had never seen Black Dragon Witch smile genuinely. Not a mocking smile, but one that truly shone with happiness. When hundreds of hunters were dying during the conquest, you coldly did what you had to do... But as the casualties decreased to two digits, Black Dragon Witch changed.”

The transition of her that only I remember.

「Wow! Maybe not even 40 hunters died!」

「Incredible... Maybe not even 10 died. It's possible. In a battlefield like this.」

The blossoming smile like a tightly closed flower blooming.

I still vividly remember that moment.

“I thought it was beautiful.”

“.....”

“I was happy. For the first time, I realized I could genuinely make someone smile. It was me.”

I smiled.

“Thank you, Black Dragon Witch. Senior.”

“Why.....?”

“I was able to walk the path I could never have walked alone, thanks to you. Now, I love my life. I'm with the person I love. Although you may not have intended it, your smile that day helped me take that step.”

That's what I wanted to say.

What I wanted to convey.

“You give strength to others, Senior. At least to me, that's true. You're not alone. Even if you worry about saying goodbye to everyone you meet, you don't have to worry about me.”

I have the skill to turn back a dead day.

“I’m fine.”

I don't die.

“You don’t have to stop attempts on my life. Don’t fret about what will happen if you fail. I’m here, and as long as you allow it, I will always be here.”

"....."

"It's okay to fail."

"You shouldn't say things like that..."

"It’s alright now. You don’t have to fear failure anymore. You can pursue whatever you want, however you wish. Even if something goes wrong, I can give you another chance, multiple times."

“That’s something you shouldn’t say.”

Black Dragon Witch was afraid.

I already knew what she feared the most.

Even when drunk with the Paladin, Black Dragon Witch had mumbled.

「It's too late. King of Death.」

「It's always too late.」

The fear of something irreversible happening.

That's what Black Dragon Witch feared most.

Therefore, I decided to give her the most earnest gift I could offer.

Something only I in this world could give.

“It's okay to be a bit late.”

"....."

Stung like a thorn, Black Dragon Witch flinched.

“With me by your side, there's no such thing as irreparable. We can always start over. So, go ahead and take more risks and gambles. Senior. You deserve it.”

The wind from the sea tousled Black Dragon Witch's black hair.

“Senior, you're much more skilled than me. Managing organizations, starting businesses... governing the entire Tower. These are talents I lack. Likewise, the talent to start over was given to me, not you.”

My precious friend.

“We can achieve much more together.”

Therefore, I didn't see the tears she shed.

I just slightly bowed my head and held Black Dragon Witch's hand.

“I'm already relying on you, so please rely on me too.”

“You... really.”

Black Dragon Witch swallowed her words sip by sip.

“You're a terrible person. You talk like this and say you can make it as if it never happened? That if I want to erase this conversation, I should ask you to die...?”

“Yes.”

“You're insane.”

Black Dragon Witch gripped my hand tightly.

“Insane...”

She murmured.

“Just watch. I’ll use you until you’re sick of it. What? A returner? With such a power, you dare to share it with me? You have no idea who the head of the Black Dragon Guild is. Just watch. Insane, you insane bastard...”

I waited for Black Dragon Witch's trembling to subside.

As time passed and she calmed down a bit, she spoke.

“Anastasia.”

"....."

“That's my real name. Kim Gong-Ja.”

I slowly raised my head.

Black Dragon Witch was wearing a diluted smile.

“Use it properly, I’ll let you, so be prepared.”

“Of course.”

I also smiled sincerely.

“Senior Anastasia.”

Among the climbers of the Tower.

For the first time, I had a companion who shared my secret.

Chapter 204: Black Dragon (3)

---

“Ah-ah-ah. Somehow, I felt this would happen.”

As the sound of the waves became familiar and tranquil.

Black Dragon Witch stretched out leisurely, her expression brightened.

“Well, I kind of expected that you and I would end up like this someday.”

“Oh, really?”

“Yes. I can pretty much gauge a person the moment I see them. To what extent I can get close to them, how to become friends with them. Since I turned 25, my intuition has never been wrong.”

“That’s amazing.”

“All thanks to experience.”

Black Dragon Witch chuckled.

“After repeatedly getting my hopes up and failing, I’ve come to understand human perseverance. Ah, right, right. In front of others, I’ll continue to use your alias instead of your real name. Is that okay?”

“That’s fine, but... why?”

“Why? Because it would be embarrassing to call you by your real name only in front of others.”

She said it with a completely unembarrassed face.

“Try to avoid calling me [senior], too. It sends shivers down my spine. I really hate showing off relationships in front of others.”

“Not that there’s no point, but... isn't it more awkward to call each other differently when we’re alone...?”

“A difference in philosophy, I guess. Alright, our opinions diverged quickly.”

Black Dragon Witch then took something out with her [Item Storage] skill.

A cubic object studded with round dots, a dice, commonly used in casinos worldwide.

Not just that, but she also took out paper and a pen.

"Kim Gong-Ja."

Black Dragon Witch looked at me with serious eyes.

“What, what is it? You're scaring me.”

“From now on, you and I will sign a [Friendship Contract].”

“...What?”

A what contract?

“I’ve always believed that human relationships should be documented.”

Black Dragon Witch was assertive.

“Humans make mistakes. Whether it’s from staying up all night or working 20 days straight, screw-ups are inevitable. Even if there seem to be no problems, tiny emotions can accumulate over 5 years, 10 years, eventually becoming a real problem.”

“Uh....”

“To prevent such unfortunate incidents, contracts must be written. They’re essential for a healthy and sound relationship.”

What in the world?

Seriously, what?

“Of course, the [promise] should be made in agreement between you and me. Neither side can impose. I’d like to include as the first clause of our contract: [In case of disagreements, roll the dice and follow the opinion of the person with the higher roll].”

"....."

“What do you think?”

-Indeed.

The previously silent Guardian Spirit snorted.

-I get it, zombie. You made friends with a troublesome one....

I was flustered.

I’ve never met anyone like this in my life.

“Uh, well, um. Maybe it’s okay?”

“Think seriously!”

Black Dragon Witch got angry.

Why is this happening?

“People think being blunt and straightforward without question is friendship, but it's not. Such relationships are only possible when people happen to have compatible personalities. To really maintain a relationship, you need to use your brain! Yes, your head. You have to use your head diligently to establish friendship!”

“Okay, you’re right, but a contract...?”

“Breaking the contract means you can immediately end the friendship, which is convenient.”

What is this? Confusing.

My concept of friendship is being shaken.

“Being wishy-washy only leads to a wishy-washy relationship. Kim Gong-Ja, if you're going to start, you should lay a solid foundation from the beginning. Quickly agree to the clause or present a well-reasoned argument against it.”

"....."

I thought hard, using even the parts of my brain I normally don't.

As a result, our [Friendship Contract] began with a very historic first sentence.

+

[Friendship Contract]

This contract is established upon the agreement of Anastasia Zelensky (hereinafter referred to as A) and Kim Gong-Ja (hereinafter referred to as K).

A, not trusting the shelf life of human emotions, believes that only a diligent attitude and an industrious intellect can solidify the relationship between two people. Accordingly, A and K agree as follows:

1. All promises are valid only when both parties agree.
2. All promises can be voided if both parties agree.
3. However, the establishment or voiding of a promise is only possible on weekends (Saturday or Sunday).
4. In case of disagreements, roll the dice and follow the opinion of the person with the higher roll.

Signature: Anastasia Zelensky

Signature: Kim Gong-Ja

+

I looked at the contract with a somewhat stunned mind.

Is this really the best way?

"....."

"Come on, stamp it already."

Black Dragon Witch urged.

Kind of scary.

"I don't actually have a stamp..."

"You have fingers, don't you? Use your fingerprint."

"Right...."

So I stamped it.

As I pressed my thumb down, leaving a red print, I thought, 'At least she didn't suggest writing a blood oath, so that's a relief.'

In these 30 minutes, I had a very detailed understanding of Black Dragon Witch's character.

"Good."

Black Dragon Witch looked satisfied as she scanned the contract.

"This is not bad for a start. Well, we'll probably hit a rough patch in the second or sixth year, but can't help it. I'll have to do my best."

"There's still a rough patch even after doing all this...?"

"Kim Gong-Ja."

Black Dragon Witch murmured softly.

"Don't underestimate human fickleness. Furless beasts like us change into different beings in just six months."

Such a strong assertion.

“Daddy’s friend! Friend of my daddy!”

A familiar voice called out. My son, Uburka, was running towards the pier.

“Where did you two disappear to! I’ve been looking for a long time.”

“Oh, sorry. I had to talk with Ana...”

Black Dragon Witch stepped on my foot before I could finish saying, Anastasia.

“Ugh! Cough!”

Pain surged from my foot to my throat, exploding into a splendid scream.

That wasn’t the footwork of someone who had stepped on a foot for the first or second time.

“...I just had something to discuss with Black Dragon Witch.”

“That’s right. King of Death and I had to share a talk that only the two of us could.”

Black Dragon Witch smiled gently.

“Your daddy and I have a somewhat special relationship.”

Uburka stopped dead in his tracks.

“A s-special relationship?”

“Yes, a unique relationship to each other.”

“Unique...?”

“Embarrassing. What am I saying in front of a child. Anyway, we’ve finished talking. What brings you here?”

“The villagers... they’ve all woken up... It seems like the problem has mostly been resolved... I came to report that...”

Uburka mumbled and then suddenly looked at me.

His eyes were fiercely shining.

[The Constellation ‘The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide’ demands an explanation from you!]

No, it's a misunderstanding, kid.

This is just her using me to get rid of you!

“Daddy, is what she just said true...?”

“King of Death. Was there anything wrong with what I said?”

My son and friend looked at me side by side.

I've never faced such a situation even in my countless repeated deaths.

Is it the paternal love supporting my son's love, or is it the friendship understanding the heart of a friend?

"...My son."

"Speak, Daddy."

"Black Dragon Witch here and this daddy are indeed..."

I swallowed.

"...indeed in a special relationship."

Uburka's expression contorted.

Silence.

The thick lips of the Hobgoblin trembled, and the long eyelids vibrated.

“I really hate you, daddy!”

With a line straight out of a teenager’s playbook, Uburka ran off into the distance. His flight, aided by Aura, was like a form of light martial arts. Leaving behind only tears, Uburka disappeared beyond the horizon.

The moment my centuries-long first love shattered.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' is deeply hurt.]

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide's distrust in humanity increases.]

Ah, ah, ahh....

I was in despair.

“No, Uburka. My son. This daddy has always held only one person in his heart till death.... How could you misunderstand like this... Even if I talk nonsense, you should’ve understood perfectly...”

“Thank you.”

Immediately after Uburka disappeared, Black Dragon Witch became indifferent.

Slightly, she swept her hair back with the back of her hand.

“Thanks to you, I got rid of a burdensome kid. I’ll ask for your help often in the future if I get annoyed by someone, Kim Gong-Ja.”

“Aren’t you using me a bit too freely for someone who’s supposedly a friend...?”

“What are you talking about? Really.”

Black Dragon Witch laughed brightly.

“You use friends conveniently.”

That was the third smile I'd seen from her.

And probably, a face I would see countless times from now on.

---

There's an epilogue to tell.

“You are wrong.”

-.....

The seven-year-old Anastasia looked straight at me.

The Dream World.

All the pioneers of the New Continent who had fallen into sleep were now awake. The sailors who had departed across the sea returned safely, except for a few unfortunate casualties. Consequently, Black Dragon Witch and I had to spend race points.

“I came back to say this.”

After the incident concluded, today, I re-entered the Dream World.

-...I don't understand what you mean by wrong.

The young incubus replied bluntly.

Behind the Dream Demon, the same fence stretched as before.

The remnants of some civil war – rusted barbed wire and old fences.

The dream species was parasitizing the scars turned into wounds.

“You said it when we first met. Anastasia imagines the death of people she meets first, trying to prevent it preemptively, and thus, she seeks infinite power to prepare and be ready endlessly.”

-Right.

“But I became an exception for her.”

Gunshots echoed.

“You saw it too.”

A man holding a child’s hand was running towards the fence.

Just like a broken tape repeating the same part over and over.

In a world of broken images, I said quietly.

“You can only grasp Anastasia, not change her. It’s a natural limit. After all, you only live in past traumas.”

-.....

“I suppressed you with power. You also fled from power. But thinking our relationship in that other world is based solely on power is a misunderstanding.”

-What do you want to tell us?

“Don’t mess around, brats.”

I emitted red Aura in all directions.

The pink-tainted world became a bit darker.

The Dream Demons flinched, their shoulders tightened.

“You can talk all you want. About [power] and [logic], making it seem like you can tailor the world to your liking. But the world isn’t thin enough to be cut by your scissors.”

-.....

“According to your logic, what under this sky isn’t power?”

I filled my hand blade with Aura.

“Suppressing someone is power. Persuading someone is power. Sharing and walking together in someone’s past is also power. You are merely capable of repeating human dreams, nothing more than that.”

-We are....

“You can never change Anastasia. I did. You are weaker and more incompetent than me, and in the end, you lost.”

I swung my hand.

Aura split the space.

The fence was cut and instantly turned into pink bubbles and vanished.

The father and child trying to escape through the narrow exit also melted away.

“Next time I come, be more competent.”

-.....

“If you repeat the same thing after giving you hundreds of years, well, I might have to turn back time and make you extinct.”

It's simple.

The Dream Demons will just be added to my ghoulish collection.

I got up from my seat.

-How many will that be?

The Dream Demons glared at me.

-One? Two? Ten? Twenty? A hundred? Even if so, they mean nothing in the world you live in. What's the point?

I snorted.

“If numbers worry you, help yourself.”

-.....

I spread Aura to disconnect the surrounding area from the Dream World.

If my master were here, he could have annihilated this place in one strike, but that level is still difficult for me.

Just ensuring my own space to maneuver was the best I could do at the moment.

[Quest Clear!]

And my best worked even on this stage.

Just before leaving the Dream World, I looked at the Dream Demons.

The young Black Dragon Witch was biting her lip, seemingly very frustrated.

“Look forward to our next meeting.”

I declared the stage clear.

Murmuring in my mind, bright light enveloped my vision.

[Stage Clear!]

[You have cleared the 35th floor.]

[Reward tallying will be conducted after entering the 36th floor.]

[Sequential layer progression - You will be forcibly transferred to the 36th floor!]

Towards the place where my friend waits.

Chapter 205: Easter Egg (1)

---

I have one particularly important task to handle.

Completely unrelated to conquering the Tower, but it's something I must resolve.

With a grave expression, I stated, “I want to introduce Uburka to Raviel.”

Right after clearing the 35th floor.

We were summoned to the usual white space.

Amidst the celebration with my companions, I made a request to the Constellation [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages].

“No, I must introduce him. I've been delaying it, but I can't postpone it any longer.”

“Hmm...”

The Princess stroked her chin thoughtfully.

“Is that so?”

“Yes. Uburka might not be my biological son, but I consider the Earth Spirit Tribe my children. We're a married couple. It's something Raviel needs to know, and I need to tell her.”

“Although I understand it's a personal matter for the King of Death... You are currently continuously conquering from the 30th floor. A resident participating in the conquest can't just wander off to another floor.”

“Can't we invite Raviel here for a while?”

“No, no!”

The Princess crossed her arms, forming an X.

“Raviel didn’t participate in the conquest. Moreover, she’s not yet officially a part of your Tower. It’s impossible to call her here. That’s the Tower’s rule! Even if you have complaints, it’s difficult to change.”

I pondered.

“...What about Uburka and I briefly visiting Raviel’s world?”

“Well, that’s difficult too. Uburka, being a Constellation himself, does have the right to visit other floors...”

Of course. Uburka is The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide.

Sorry, son, for not being able to support your first love....

“By rule, it’s possible, but whether it’s permitted, I’m not so sure? Because, King of Death, you’re also in the middle of a conquest. Unless you drop out of the expedition, you can’t just come and go as you please.”

“Okay. Let’s do this then.”

I smiled.

“As a reward for clearing the 35th floor, grant Uburka and me a visitation permit. At the very least, allow Uburka to stay here.”

“Eh?”

Interest sparked in the Princess’s eyes.

“Why is that?”

“Uburka would have died of old age if he hadn't become a Constellation. If we move to the 36th floor, hundreds of years will skip again... I don't want to leave Uburka alone while that happens.”

“So, it’s about [parental responsibility]?”

“You could say that.”

“Alright.”

The Princess nodded.

“If it’s for that reason, I have a valid argument to persuade the higher-ups. The Tower Master values maternal affection, parental duties, and such things! Just wait a moment.”

The Princess closed her eyes.

Suddenly, her bangs rose and bent like antennas. They swayed left and right.

...Is she communicating through that?

“Yep. Communication complete.”

The Princess opened her eyes.

“The King of Death’s request has been accepted.”

“Great.”

“But! You can't meet in the world where Raviel was born. The only place allowed for the meeting is the 29th floor. King of Death, Uburka, Raviel, only the three of you can meet there.”

".....?"

I couldn't help but tilt my head at her words.

“Thank you for listening, but, uh. Why only the 29th floor?”

The 29th floor isn't just any floor.

It's Kim Yul's stage.

The floor where Shinseo High School and its surrounding commercial district are replicated.

“It's not even the real world.”

Exactly.

Named by the Head Librarian as [The Side Story] of the City of Ascension.

A city manifested as a mere fantasy, not incorporated into the main history of our world.

There's no unique resource or tourist attraction.

Why treat only the 29th floor specially?

“---Sorry.”

Suddenly, the Princess turned expressionless.

“I can't tell you why.”

A resolute will emanated from her face.

“I owe the King of Death a lot. I have [debts]. So, as much as possible, I want to fulfill your requests. But this, I can’t.”

“I’ll acknowledge The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide as a Constellation. If the King of Death becomes his guardian, granting a visit to the 29th floor is permitted. Is this compensation enough?”

I nodded slowly.

‘There’s a secret on the 29th floor.’

Seeing such a strong rejection, how could I forcefully inquire further?

The Princess is my ally. There’s no need to push a Constellation that favors me.

‘I’ve achieved what I wanted.’

Freeing Uburka from hundreds of years of waiting.

Introducing Uburka to Raviel.

I've accomplished both goals, so there's no need to rush.

‘But...’

What kind of secret could make such a powerful being so serious?

I buried my curiosity deep in my heart and replied.

“Yes. The compensation you mentioned is enough.”

“Great! Then, I’ll have those currently visiting the 29th floor exit for a while-.”

[The Constellation ‘The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages’ temporarily inherits the management authority of the 29th floor.]

[The Constellation ‘The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages’ is expelling all hunters from the 29th floor.]

The Princess waved her hand, saying, "Yap."

"I'll adjust the local time too."

[Administrator Authority - 'Lockdown' activated.]

[The 29th floor is sealed from the City of Ascension.]

[The rank required to enter the 29th floor is upgraded.]

[You are granted the right to enter the 29th floor!]

"Good."

The Princess smiled contentedly.

"Until the King of Death comes out, no one can enter the 29th floor. Not even the Constellations. It's a place prepared solely for the King of Death. Enjoy a heartfelt conversation with your family!"

“Uh... Thank you?”

“You're welcome.”

Not fully grasping what had just transpired, I bowed anyway. There was an air suggesting some significant authority had been exercised on my behalf.

“Go ahead to the 29th floor. I'll soon send Raviel and Muscle Pig over. Consider it a service. Take it easy.”

The Princess snapped her fingers crisply.

“When you want to return, just think of my face and say ‘Return’. I won't interfere with the 29th floor until then. Have a good trip!”

With the Princess's beaming smile as the last sight...

[Verifying the King of Death's eligibility.]

[Permission granted to enter 'City of Ascension - Side Story'.]

Dark shadows enveloped my vision.

---

When I opened my eyes, I was standing in the middle of a crosswalk.

Beeeeep!

Car horns blared at the intersection, loudly disrupting the peace. Shaken out of my post-transportation dizziness, I turned to see a driver gesticulating at me.

“Hey! Wanna die? Move it, kid!”

Despite his rudeness, he had a point. The traffic light was red. A clear sign to stop walking.

“Sorry about that.”

“Sorry my foot, just move! These youngsters...”

I moved out of the crosswalk, allowing the halted cars to start moving. The drivers shot me glances, but that was all. They quickly disappeared into the distance, the 'city' becoming wholly indifferent to my existence as they continued on their schedule.

Just as the city lost interest in me.

"Um."

I lost interest in them too.

Because across the crosswalk, a dearly missed face was waiting.

"Raviel!"

Dressed in a simple gown.

An attire too alien for a modern city.

Raviel stood under the red traffic light, creating a sanctuary of her own.

“.....Gong-Ja?”

Seemingly still dizzy from the teleportation, Raviel lightly touched her forehead.

“Is this a hallucination? Or another Constellation’s invasion? To think my consort is right before my eyes, yet I must first worry about its authenticity. How sad...”

“Are you feeling dizzy? Should we sit? No, it’s too hot here. Let’s go into any shop and rest. Just lean on me for now.”

“Hmm, my overprotective husband. You’re indeed my love.”

Raviel relaxed her furrowed brow and finally smiled.

“I’m sorry for doubting you, even for a moment, Gong-Ja.”

“It’s alright. We are each other’s greatest weakness, so we always need to be cautious. I also encountered a dream demon imitating you while conquering the 35th floor.”

“Oh? That sounds intriguing. Did you see through its disguise in seconds?”

“In one second. I realized it wasn’t you even before I finished exhaling.”

I beamed.

“That foolish demon didn’t even bother wearing a wedding ring.”

“Indeed. A critical mistake.”

Raviel chuckled softly.

Before her laughter faded, I took her left hand gently, caressed the wedding ring on her ring finger, gently pulled her towards me, and kissed her.

“I missed you.”

“I’m happy to see you.”

“Is everything okay at the manor?”

“Ah, yes. With the mistress and even the Goldencup maid suddenly gone, there have been serious disruptions in the manor’s operations. Had the lord of the house been any less capable, our fortunes might have dwindled.”

“That’s unfortunate. Whoever married such a competent person must have saved a country at least three times in a past life.”

“From what I’ve heard, he saved the world a few times over.”

This time, Raviel leaned in for a kiss.

We spent a moment exploring each other’s eyes.

“...But what’s going on, Gong-Ja? I was in the middle of my morning duties when suddenly a blonde child popped out of the floor, saying, [Hello? Sorry. The King of Death asked for a favor, so I need to take you to the 29th floor for a bit!].”

“Ah, that person... is a Pillar.”

“A Pillar?”

“Yes. A Constellation above Constellations, you might say. One of the people managing the Tower. I asked her to let me meet you briefly as a reward for conquering the 35th floor, and she agreed. Though, I didn’t expect such a blunt method of transportation.”

“Ah.”

Raviel caressed my cheek.

To reiterate, this is an intersection.

Cars pass by, and naturally, pedestrians roam around.

“Kids these days...”

“Education is in serious trouble...”

“Classroom collapse isn’t just a rumor...”

Bystanders stopped one after another, looking our way and murmuring. Understandable, given a beauty like Raviel openly displaying affection in broad daylight. Anyone sane would be captivated.

Of course, we paid them no mind.

Why would I offer even an inch of my consciousness to others when I'm reunited with Raviel after months? My mind is busy capturing and storing every detail of her face and smile.

[City of Ascension - Side Story] might as well be a world created for me, so such behavior should be excused.

"A cute request. You missed me that much?"

"Actually, Raviel. I have something important to tell you..."

"Daddy?"

At that moment, the world stopped.

“That’s definitely daddy.”

Raviel and I slowly turned our gazes.

There, Uburka stood with arms crossed, glaring at me.

Raviel tilted her head.

“...[Daddy]?”

My heart sank.

"Uh. Wait. Raviel, about that..."

“Oh my!”

Uburka scowled.

"Disappointing! Just recently, you were giggling with a colleague, and now you're kissing and sharing love with someone else. I'm losing hope in you as a father!"

Raviel's eyebrows lowered slightly.

"...Colleague? Giggling?"

Raviel stared at me intently.

"Gong-Ja. That stranger uttered some interesting words. If my linguistics knowledge isn't failing me, my suspicions and deductions are hard to ignore."

"No. No. No! Raviel! It's not like that!"

"Truly shameless daddy. After boldly confessing to having a 'special relationship' with the Black Dragon Witch, how do you have the audacity to meet another? I can't comprehend!"

"....."

Aha.

Raviel's lips curved into a smile.

“Black Dragon Witch? That must be the person from the engagement ceremony.”

Raviel reached out and grasped my neck.

Her grip was not strong.

But never had I felt such fear, not even when captured by a Demon King.

“I trust your love. There's no place for infidelity or betrayal in your life. However, I can't help but want an explanation. It's strange. Gong-Ja. I'll give you exactly 60 seconds to explain, for your life and for my peace of mind.”

I'm innocent!

Chapter 206: Easter Egg (2)

---

"Indeed. There was a minor misunderstanding."

Raviel nodded her head upon hearing my desperate explanation.

A fast-food restaurant.

I would have preferred a café, but the era of the [Side Story] still lingered in the past. The countrywide proliferation of cafés was still a ways off. Sadly, there weren't many places where one could freely enter and converse.

"Well, it's unlikely that you would turn your eyes to another while leaving me aside. It's more plausible to hear that the universe has abandoned the laws of physics. Even someone of my stature can get swept up in emotions."

"No, I'm really grateful that you believe me...."

Honestly, I thought the world was ending.

"Hmm. From what I saw, the Black Dragon Witch was a competent individual. Had she been born in the empire, she would've flourished as a noble. To share a genuine friendship with such a person is a wise move on your part. You have good people luck. Of course...."

Raviel glanced through the front glass window of the shop.

"Though I never expected you to return with a goblin as your child."

Outside the window, Uburka stood with his arms crossed, his back turned to us.

Despite the giant hobgoblin in the middle of a modern city, passersby seemed not to notice anything unusual.

While some were startled by Uburka's immense size, none recognized him as a hobgoblin.

"Could it be that we are under some kind of perception-altering magic?"

"Perhaps."

Clink.

Raviel stirred her cola, the ice cubes clinking against each other.

"In this place, the attire I'm wearing is quite alien. It would be normal to stand out. But while many steal glances at my face, none seem to pay attention to our clothes."

Raviel was dressed in an imperial gown. Yet, when the store clerk saw us earlier, there was no reaction to our attire.

It was the beauty of Raviel, not of this world, that caused their eyes to widen.

"The conclusion is clear. To their eyes, we all appear to be wearing ordinary clothes."

"A world-scale perception alteration... that's too excessive."

"It signifies that the entity accommodating your convenience is omnipotent. You do have the knack of gaining favor with the powerful, Gong-Ja."

"Haha."

A quick glance around showed that all the customers in the shop were sneakily glancing at Raviel. Perhaps the perception alteration didn't apply to looks.

In an era with smartphones, they might have secretly taken our pictures.

"Then bring over that child you consider as your son."

"Is that alright?"

"Yes. He may not be your blood, but he is a bond you've formed with your heart. Who knows, he might even find favor in my eyes and be recognized as part of the Ivansia Ducal Family."

It was rare for Raviel to show kindness to others.

Before the Duchess's mind changed, I quickly brought Uburka over.

"....."

Uburka sat down, taking up a chair with each of his left and right buttocks. Still with his arms crossed, he looked down on Raviel, who was much shorter than him.

"....."

"....."

The silence continued.

What's this?

Why do I feel the most tense being caught in between?

".....Silver hair mocking the moon and red eyes mocking the cockscomb."

Uburka was the first to break the silence.

“Now that I see it, your appearance reminds me of someone from the legends. Ugh. Are you Raviel Ivansia?”

“Oh? Contrary to your appearance, you speak so poetically.”

“I’m just recalling what my daddy told me.”

“Is Gong-Ja spreading stories about me in your world too?”

“Daddy created five legends. The fourth one is about you, Raviel Ivansia. Silver Lily. The moon robbed of its heart by the mirror. Any Earth Spirit would know you, impossible not to.”

“Hmm.”

Raviel lifted the corner of her mouth. She seemed a bit more pleased. Holding a thin straw, she slowly stirred her cola.

“I heard you're a Constellation.”

“Ugor.”

“I was once a Constellation too. Not by choice, but I didn’t entirely dislike the fact that the world revolved around me. You possess a caliber far beyond ordinary humans. Do you have no doubts in considering Gong-Ja as your daddy?”

“Ugor, that's a foolish question. Even when Earth Spirits were immature beasts, daddy already tried to fulfill his parental duty. Bonds aren't formed by matching status, but by casting it aside.”

“Don’t you care about your own dignity?”

“Ugor. Dignity stems from qualification. Daddy has it. Conversely, I wonder who else, besides my daddy, holds the qualification to be revered by our Earth Spirits.”

“Hmm.”

Raviel nodded once.

To me and my beloved, that's definitely a sign she’s in a good mood.

But why does this Uburka act so mature in front of Raviel and like a child around me? Is he discriminating against his daddy? It's heartbreaking. So heartbreaking. This is why raising a son is all for nothing.

“How was your first encounter with Gong-Ja...”

“Ugor, during the war against the Slime Empire...”

Soon, the two of them began a warm conversation. Leaving me out.

Feeling isolated by both my wife and child, a wave of sadness hit me.

Is this the sorrow of a 'goose daddy'...

‘Huh?’

As I had nowhere else to look, I gazed out the window at the scenery, when suddenly a passerby caught my eye.

Something about that pedestrian felt strangely familiar.

".....?"

At first, I was drawn by the pedestrian's attire.

Shinseo Middle and High School's uniform.

Specifically, the middle school section.

Among those who bullied Kim Yul, there were middle schoolers too, both boys and girls. Maybe that's why my eyes lingered for a moment.

‘But they never appeared in the video.’

What could this sense of déjà vu mean?

When I enhanced my vision with Aura, I started noticing awkward aspects about the pedestrian.

Firstly, the hair.

'Blonde.'

Not dyed, but naturally blonde.

The long golden locks swayed with every step the pedestrian took.

I thought they might be a foreigner, but considering they wore the uniform of Shinseo Middle and High, that seemed unlikely.

'A dirty uniform... and a briefcase?'

The pedestrian wasn't carrying a student bag.

Instead, they held an old, worn briefcase, something more fitting for an office worker, in both hands. The leather was peeling off the corners of the bag, which looked almost ready for the trash.

The last point that caught my eye was:

'The stride is consistent.'

There was no variation in the steps.

This fact accounted for half of the unexplainable sense of déjà vu.

'The stride length and speed are maintained exactly the same.'

Such control over one's movement is difficult without significant training. Yet, the pedestrian showed no signs of Aura or even regular physical training. In fact, they seemed physically weaker than their peers.

As the pedestrian slowly passed in front of the fast-food restaurant's window,

Our eyes met for a moment.

Time seemed to slow down.

No, it wasn't that my time had slowed down.

The pedestrian had a completely expressionless face. As if born with that expression, it suited them perfectly. And that expressionless face had a perfect symmetry.

Their eyes.

Endlessly transparent.

It was midsummer, yet the pedestrian's eyes did not mix with the sweltering heat on the streets or the irritated sighs of others. There was an unmistakable purity, refusing any impurity.

Whoosh-

A car horn sounded from somewhere.

At the crosswalk, the traffic light flickered.

Even the changing lights at the intersection from red to yellow seemed irrelevant to the pedestrian's eyes. They walked in a different timeline.

The same rhythm. Exactly the same stride. An absolute uniformity that seemed to skim the world.

The act of [walking] should ordinarily prove one's belonging to this world.

But not for this pedestrian. With their gait alone, they could reject the world several times over. With each step, once. With two steps, twice. Three steps. Four steps...

Endlessly.

"Gong-Ja?"

Unknowingly, I had stood up from my seat.

"What's the matter?"

"I'm sorry."

Raviel and Uburka stopped their conversation and looked at me.

"Please wait here for me. Just for a moment. I need to go somewhere."

I apologized to them but kept my eyes on the pedestrian's retreating figure.

"I'll leave a trail of Aura, so if anything happens, feel free to follow. Uburka should be able to easily catch up."

"Daddy?"

"Son, please guard Raviel."

After saying this, I hurriedly rushed out of the fast-food restaurant.

'Where did they go?'

The pedestrian was crossing the street. The traffic light had just turned green not long ago, yet it was already blinking, urging people to hurry.

Beep beep beep-

It was a rare sight to see people crossing at this time of day in midsummer. Only one person, the pedestrian, was crossing the crosswalk. Despite the light still being green, drivers ignored the signal. Cars passed both in front of and behind the pedestrian.

'When? Where have I seen them before?'

I followed.

'Did they attend Shinseo High?'

The pedestrian walked into an alley.

'No. I would never forget a student with such a gait. If I had seen them even once, I would have definitely remembered.'

The trees cast blue shadows on the ground.

'It's definitely the first time I've seen that face. But why...'

The summer sun blazed white.

The stark boundary between shade and non-shade was evident. As the pedestrian entered the shade, they seemed to drift away like a mirage, escaping the season.

Buzzzzz-

Cicadas cried out.

'Who are they?'

Thud.

In the middle of the shade, the pedestrian stopped.

I, too, had to stop in my tracks.

"....."

The pedestrian slowly turned around.

I felt an invisible force pulling me.

Even the brief moment of the pedestrian turning seemed to slow down time. My breathing halted, my thoughts accelerated.

In the slowed-down time, fragments of memory floated by.

「I want to know how the tower is established.」

Before entering the 35th floor, the Paladin asked.

「Live the life of the most miserable person in that world.」

The Princess answered.

「 There is a master who made the Tower. 」

「 That master lives the life of the most miserable person in each world. 」

「 The worlds where towers are erected are those where the master has already lived and passed through. 」

As the pedestrian turned halfway around, I felt a tickle in my nose.

A familiar scent wafted through the air.

It was a smell I knew.

「 I'm going to school early today. 」

Kim Yul.

「 I need to feed the rabbits at the animal pens. 」

The smell of old, stored animal feed in a corner of the warehouse.

「 Anyway, the animal club is no more. Now, middle school class leaders take turns managing the animal pen... Middle schoolers won't be diligent in such tasks, right? It's usually the security guard and me. 」

「 A certain middle school student. 」

「 We almost always feed them. 」

Our world has a Tower established.

If the Princess's words are true, it means the Tower Master once [lived] in our world too.

Living the life of someone deemed even more unfortunate than Kim Yul.

「 Kim Gong-Ja. 」

For some reason.

A single sentence hurled at me by the class leader crossed my mind.

「 You went around calling him the second most bullied in Shinseo Middle and High, you named it yourself, laughing. 」

The pedestrian looked at me.

I was standing under the summer sky. The pedestrian was on the shaded ground.

There was a distance.

A gap.

Only the noisy chorus of cicadas bridged the gap between us.

"---Who are you?"

An emotionless resonance.

As the pedestrian opened their lips, I finally realized the identity of the déjà vu.

It was a voice I had only heard in the Tower.

"If possible."

"....."

"Please tell me why you are following me."

The Tower Master.

The Master of All Lives looked at me.

Chapter 207: Easter Egg (3)

---

As soon as I said, "I want to talk with you," the Tower Master gazed intently at my face.

After about a minute,

The Tower Master nodded and led the way.

"Okay. Follow me."

I walked following the Tower Master's direction.

"This way."

A decayed alley.

Old tiled houses lined the alleyway.

It was not the neat atmosphere of a traditional Hanok* village.

*Traditional Korean houses.

The tiles were worn and overgrown with weeds. The once demolished stone walls had never been repaired, enduring the weight of time in their collapsed state.

'Why do these Hanoks look like this?'

I was about to voice my sense of incongruity when,

"These houses are relics from the Japanese colonial era."

Clump.

The Tower Master walked ahead, speaking softly.

"During the war, this city was overrun almost instantly. That's why it retains more remnants of the past than other places."

"A war?"

"The Korean War."

A summer stench wafted up from the sewers.

"These are houses that missed their time to die."

"....."

A row of tiled houses, long in lineage but devoid of their owners, seemed to watch us.

Rather than being antique, they resembled faces covered in dark mold.

We walked along the protruding stone wall path, opened a peeling lacquered gate, and passed a courtyard where not even weeds grew.

"Please wait here for a moment."

I sat on the large, wooden-floor veranda and waited.

There was no air conditioning or even a fan, only the shade of the eaves to cool my head.

Meeeh, meeehm, meeeh... Eh...

Under the direct sunlight, cicadas cried out.

Shortly after, the Tower Master returned with a tray.

"I have nothing to serve you as a guest."

"No, I'm sorry for suddenly coming like this."

I respectfully received the cup with both hands.

The stainless-steel cup, something you'd find in a school cafeteria, was filled with water.

"You must be meeting me for the first time."

The Tower Master sat formally and bowed her head slightly.

"I'm a third-year student of Shinseo Middle School, Class A, Jaa Soo-Jeong."

"Ah."

I realized I hadn't introduced myself.

"I'm known as Kim Gong-ja."

"Yes, Mr. Kim Gong-ja. What would you like to talk about?"

"....."

How should I put it?

Curious about why you, who seem like the Tower's owner, are here?

Would you tell me how you ended up creating the Tower?

But.

"There's something..."

The question that slipped out was entirely different.

"You mentioned your name is Jaa Soo-Jeong..."

"Yes."

"May I ask what it means?"

"It's written with the Chinese characters for 'Amethyst'."

The Tower Master took out a notebook from her briefcase.

Jaa Soo-Jeong.

A sharply sharpened pencil laid black strokes on the white paper.

'That's the Tower Master's name.'

Perhaps a name that only exists in this world.

Yet, I witnessed the Tower Master's name for the first time in our Tower.

'Jaa Soo-Jeong.'

I repeated the pronunciation in my mouth.

Never forget it.

"Are there any other family members living here with you?"

"Yes. Until last year, I lived with my uncle, but now I live alone."

"May I ask what happened?"

"A burglar broke in and killed my uncle. Three men who were with him at the time were also murdered. It's still an ongoing investigation, so it's difficult to say much."

There was no trace of emotion in the Tower Master's words.

No. She had been expressionless all along.

From the first meeting till now.

"Do you know about [the Tower]?"

"Which Tower are you referring to?"

"The Tower of Babel. It suddenly appeared in our world, and just by thinking about wanting to enter, you can go through some procedures and enter. Once inside, a paradise unfolds... Uh."

I felt a bit embarrassed mid-sentence.

This sounds like some cult.

I cleared my throat.

"Anyway, you don't know?"

The Tower Master quietly shook her head.

"Yes. I don't know."

"[Pillar]? Have you heard of [Hunter]?"

"I presume, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, the words you just mentioned carry a different meaning than usual. I only understand the words 'pillar' and 'hunter' in their general sense."

".....I see."

Somehow.

The more the conversation progressed, the deeper the sense of incongruity became.

'The Tower Master has no memory of being one.'

The girl in front of me really doesn't know the Tower.

'The atmosphere is completely different even though the voice is the same.'

A god who lost their memory.

Whatever the hidden story or situation might be, the child sitting in front of me lacks the power of the Tower Master and even the memory.

She is simply living the life assigned to her.

"....."

Asking her about the Tower now would be fruitless.

I redirected my curiosity.

"You've been answering all the questions I've asked so far, is that okay? You even mentioned a burglar broke in. What if I was a criminal with bad intentions?"

"It's okay."

The Tower Master slowly opened her lips.

"If Mr. Kim Gong-Ja were a criminal, you would have made contact at a different place, not at the crossroads."

"Excuse me?"

"I cross two underpasses on my way home from school. One of them is deserted. The lights are broken, and it's dark with several recessed areas. A criminal planning an attack would have ambushed me in the underpass or waited in ambush."

The Tower Master continued, still sitting formally.

"When I saw your face, there was no sign of an impromptu crime. Your gaze was always on my face. Especially our eye contact. If you were worried I might run, you would have watched my lower body; if you anticipated resistance, my hands; if you targeted me personally, my body. But Mr. Kim Gong-ja, you only observed my face. That's typical of someone trying to recognize a known person."

"Uh....."

"Even just now, what Mr. Kim Gong-ja focused on was my name. A sign that you are curious about my personal information. When I left to fetch water, you didn't thoroughly inspect the inside of the house. A criminal would naturally check if there's a third party inside, the structure of the house, but you didn't."

The Tower Master held the stainless-steel cup with both hands.

A sip of water moistened the Tower Master's lips.

"Your actions do not fit those of a criminal, Mr. Kim Gong-ja. Therefore, I judge that you are not a criminal with ill intent towards me."

"....."

"Thus, to answer your question, yes. I am okay with answering."

Meeeeeeeh-

Cicada sounds echoed in the large wooden veranda.

I listened dully to the stretching sounds of summer.

‘...Ah!’

I snapped back to reality.

“You’re very articulate. And smart.”

“Yes.”

The Tower Master matter-of-factly affirmed.

“I am smart.”

"....."

I realized.

Even if she had lost her memory, the girl in front of me was no ordinary individual.

“Um, would it be okay if I used the restroom for a moment...?”

“Go around to the back of the house, you’ll find it there. Be careful on your way back.”

On my return from the squat toilet, I belatedly understood why the Tower Master said, "Be careful on your way back," instead of "Be careful going there."

It was then.

"Huh?"

I sensed a faint presence from a warehouse in the corner of the backyard.

The presence didn't seem to move.

It just crouched quietly beyond the warehouse.

"....."

What is this?

Despite the hot summer, a chill ran down my spine.

As I looked at the old warehouse door, the presence stayed silent, almost as if confronting my gaze head-on.

‘What the hell is it?’

I approached to investigate.

With every step, the presence felt stronger.

A sensation like cold fingers brushing my nape intensified.

‘Hey, what are you?’

I tried releasing Aura, but there was no response.

The presence did not lessen but rather seemed to draw closer.

One step.

Another step.

‘Damn?’

I swallowed nervously.

The moment I tentatively grasped the warehouse door handle,

"Don't go in."

Something grabbed the hem of my clothes from behind.

"Don't enter."

Turning around, I saw the Tower Master looking up at me expressionlessly.

When did she come here?

"Huh...?"

"If Mr. Kim Gong-Ja goes in, the [children] will get scared."

Children.

“Um, what children do you mean...?”

“Please wait here for a moment.”

The Tower Master opened the warehouse door.

As the door opened, the presence inflated dramatically.

What was merely a brushing sensation became as tangible as scratching with nails.

"....."

"Sorry. A guest has come."

Inside the warehouse were piles of curtains.

As the Tower Master pulled aside the curtain, there was just a full-length mirror.

As soon as the mirror was revealed, the presence vanished as if washed away.

“Stay calm.”

The Tower Master took a towel nearby and wiped the surface of the mirror.

I was left standing behind, merely watching her.

"That, that mirror. Isn't it strange or something?"

"Yes. It is a strange child."

"It seems like it could harm people..."

"This child no longer harms people."

The Tower Master put away the cloth and covered the mirror again with the curtain.

The presence was still felt but not as ferocious as before.

It felt more like crouching quietly.

"Isn't there a risk it might harm someone in the future?"

"That's the same for humans."

"....."

Meow.

A cat's meow sounded from my feet.

Out of nowhere, a [puppy doll] had climbed onto my foot.

"....."

Meoow.

Undoubtedly, unmistakably, a cat's meow came from the puppy doll, which should have neither a mouth nor vocal cords.

“What’s this?”

“That’s Meow.”

A name that shouldn’t be given to a puppy doll.

“Never pat its head thinking it’s cute.”

“What happens if I do?”

“It will keep meowing in your head every six seconds until it finds a new owner.”

“...Seriously?”

“Yes.”

“Crazy.”

“It's quiet now because it's placed in the puppy doll. It's pondering whether it's a cat or a dog, so it's put off looking for a new owner. Before relying on others, it's a child who first ponders its own identity. Quite diligent.”

“This still seems quite dangerous?”

“It's okay. Once it establishes its identity, I plan to move it to a squirrel doll.”

“Excuse me...?”

“Then it will ponder for about a year whether it's really a squirrel or not. Just keep changing its body every 10 to 13 months, and it's safe. Now, Meow, don't bother the guest. Come here.”

The Tower Master grabbed the puppy doll by the nape.

Meowww.

The identity-confused doll was placed on a shelf.

“My word.”

I looked around the warehouse in astonishment.

On the shelves were countless indescribable objects.

On the wall hung a frame that changed to Raviel's image as I looked at it.

“What’s that?”

“It shows the person you love the most.”

The Tower Master was nonchalant.

“Don’t look at it for too long. The more you look, the more your memory of the loved one fades. Conversely, the photo becomes more vivid. Once all memories of the loved one are gone, it then shows the second person you love.”

I quickly looked away.

“Why do you keep these things?”

“They'd cause trouble for people if they were elsewhere.”

“Aren't you scared? These are like ghosts.”

“That's a strange question.”

The Tower Master tilted her head.

“If they are ghosts, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, you have one following you too.”

I blinked.

“...Excuse me?”

“There.”

The Tower Master pointed behind me.

“There’s a muscular ghost following you, Mr. Kim Gong-ja.”

"....."

Where she pointed, the Guardian Spirit hovered.

-Huh?

The Guardian Spirit was startled.

-What? Can she see me right now?

Only I could see and hear it.

But the Tower Master responded as if it were natural.

“Yes.”

She was the first person besides me to see the Guardian Spirit.

Chapter 208: Cheat (1)

---

"I investigated as my consort suggested."

Raviel placed a stack of newspapers with a thud.

"Did you find anything?"

"Yes. She's quite a famous student."

The newspapers were marked with a lime-green highlighter. Where it was highlighted, the words [Miss Jaa], [J], and [Jaa Soo-Jeong] were written. The minor's real name was exposed.

Such is the media of this era.

"She's more known by her nickname than her real name. Commonly referred to as [The Ghost-Seeing Detective]. Ask anyone on the street, and one in two people knows her."

"Even without appearing on public broadcasts, that's quite something..."

"The younger they are, the more likely they know her. Especially high school and middle school students; there's hardly anyone who doesn't know her. Even if they don't know the details of her activities, they've at least heard the term [Ghost-Seeing Detective]."

The interest wasn't entirely positive.

"Most respond with [Ah, that fraud?]. It's unfortunate. The person you claim to be the Tower Master doesn't seem to have a good reputation."

".....A fraudster."

Two days ago. The day I met the Tower Master.

Uburka and Raviel had tracked me down using my Aura. I introduced them to Jaa Soo-Jeong, claiming she was the Tower Master. Both were surprised but agreed to stay here for a while.

When I asked if it was okay to stay for a bit, [Jaa Soo-Jeong, a third-year student at Shinseo Middle School, Class A] nodded expressionlessly.

"Yes. It's okay. There are many empty rooms. Feel free to stay as you like."

However, there was a condition.

"Please get my permission before entering the warehouse. And try not to wander around the house after 1 a.m. It's the children's playtime."

I took the advice seriously.

No matter how brave I am, I'm not keen on playing with ghosts.

Especially when Aura doesn't work at all, it's already a mystery.

"12 administrative actions. 8 ongoing civil lawsuits."

Raviel furrowed her brows.

"Considering her young age, she's been through too much trouble. No wonder she's treated as a fraudster... Seeing ghosts is indeed astonishing. But Gong-ja, are you sure this girl is the Tower Master?"

"Yes. I'm certain."

Chop, chop, chop, chop.

In the kitchen, a knife danced rhythmically.

The Tower Master.

The student named Jaa Soo-Jeong in this world, with her back turned, was chopping a raw chicken. Preparing dinner, with Uburka assisting her.

"When I was conquering the stage here, there were several strange points."

"Strange points?"

"Yes. Originally, this world is a manifestation of the trauma of the Constellation Killer."

I had faced Constellation Killer early on the 50th floor.

Although I succeeded in killing one of Constellation Killer's puppets, I ultimately lost.

The trauma of Constellation Killer that I glimpsed as I died is the very identity of this place [City of Ascension - Side Story].

"When the trauma was being manifested, I heard the Tower's voice."

I wrote on the notebook.

+

Warning.

Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.

Extracting the necessary data from your memories.

+

The important part is the last sentence.

"The landscape depicted in this world was Constellation Killer's trauma, but the 'paint' used to draw it came from me. Hence, the characters' appearances all changed to people I know."

The class president became Black Dragon Witch.

The student council president became Raviel.

My mother and father became Master and Guardian Spirit, respectively.

But there was one - the only one who didn't change from [my memories].

"Kim Yul's face didn't change."

"Hmm."

"I had no idea what Constellation Killer looked like in a previous life. Since I didn't know, I couldn't remember. Yet, in the world of trauma, only Kim Yul retained his original appearance from the start."

Raviel stroked her chin thoughtfully.

".....Indeed, that's strange. If your memories were extracted, [Kim Yul's face should have changed to someone else's]."

"Exactly. The conclusion is clear. Kim Yul was extracted from [another data source], not my memories. Borrowed from someone else's memory. I'm convinced that [someone else] is the Tower Master."

"On what basis?"

"There is something."

I picked up the pencil again.

"The Tower said something strange when I cleared this world."

I recalled the voices I had heard.

+

Clear conditions met.

Considering the peculiarities of this stage, a judgment is requested.

Judgment complete.

The Master of All Lives acknowledges 'Stage Clear'.

+

"Until now, the Tower assigned the decision of whether a stage was cleared or not to the responsible Constellations. The Constellation in charge of floors 21 to 30 was [Holed-Up Head Librarian], Hamusutra. But for some reason, this world was directly judged by [The Master of All Lives]."

"In other words, this stage was specially managed by [The Master of All Lives]."

There's more evidence.

"A suspicious message was delivered immediately after the stage clearance was recognized."

+

Today, the 29th floor has been cleared.

The Master of All Lives announces on behalf of the tower.

You've worked hard, everyone.

May fortune be with you.

+

There was a longer message in between, but I can't remember that.

But this is enough.

[The Master of All Lives] exceptionally conveyed congratulations.

"There's no doubt. The Tower Master managed this stage."

I spoke with certainty.

"Kim Yul's appearance was also manifested by the Tower Master. According to [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages], the Tower Master once lived in this world. Lived the life of the most unfortunate person. And coincidentally, this girl Jaa Soo-Jeong knows Kim Yul."

".....She managed the school animal pen with him."

"Yes."

So, using the Tower Master's memory, Kim Yul could be recreated.

This resolves the data gap.

"It makes sense. But if that girl is the Tower Master, why has she lost her powers and memory?"

"....."

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong's back in the kitchen.

Sizzle, sizzle.

The old pot boiled with chicken.

"There are several possibilities I can think of....."

"But?"

"From what I've seen, the Tower Master, no matter what happens, does not interfere much with the affairs of the Tower. Unless it's a truly dire situation, she does not reveal herself. [She stays as an ordinary human unless in a critical situation] - she might have imposed such a limitation on herself."

I fiddled with the pencil.

Raviel leaned over my shoulder, looking at the notebook.

+

Regarding Trauma.

+

"For example, trauma. I can see the trauma of the person who killed me. This is guaranteed by my skill [Returner's Winding Clock]. However, the question arises: what determines the trauma?"

Scribble, scribble.

Two possibilities were written on the page.

+

Regarding Trauma.

1. Trauma remembered by the subject.

2. Trauma that, even if not remembered by the subject, had a significant impact on their life.

+

"Initially, I thought it was the first option. But..."

“The existence of this world's stage negates option one.”

“Yes. Because Constellation Killer did not remember the trauma of his time as Kim Yul.”

The answer was the second option.

Events that impacted life, whether remembered or not.

That's the nature of the trauma my skill reveals.

“The Tower tends to mend any inconsistencies that arise. The contradiction that arose when Constellation Killer's trauma was being reenacted was this.”

+

1. The trauma of Constellation Killer's past must be reenacted.

2. However, Constellation Killer lost all past memories due to his skill.

3. The conflict between [Kim Gong-Ja's skill] that manifests trauma and [Constellation Killer's skill] that erases the past.

4. Contradiction occurs.

+

“The Tower recognized this as a crisis situation. So, the Tower Master, living as an ordinary middle school student, Jaa Soo-Jeong, temporarily awoke to resolve the issue. The Tower Master thought of a way to resolve the inconsistency, but...”

+

5. In a hurry, data is extracted from Kim Gong-ja's memories instead of Constellation Killer's.

+

“She hesitated at the last piece of the puzzle. The Tower Master probably thought: Is it really right to replace even Kim Yul, the original subject of the trauma, with someone else's face?”

"....."

“This is [Kim Yul's Trauma]. It's one thing to overlay surrounding characters with different images... but if even Kim Yul is changed to someone else, it's no longer [Kim Yul's Trauma]. It becomes a lie.”

The Tower Master could not allow herself to change Kim Yul's face.

That's the kind of person she is.

Finally.

+

6. Kim Yul's appearance alone is restored using her own memories.

7. After the stage is cleared, she reclaims her power and memory, continuing to live as the ordinary [Jaa Soo-Jeong].

+

“This is my conjecture about the true nature of this world.”

“Indeed. There are still many unanswered questions, but... impressive.”

Raviel patted my forehead.

“Busy as you are with climbing the Tower, you take time to reflect on the past and seek the truth. Such effort is your most shining talent. No other Hunter pays as much attention to the Tower as you do.”

“It's basic for me.”

“No, it's a deduction only possible for you. If it weren't for you, no one would have gathered information about the Tower Master, and without your skill, you couldn't have drawn her out. Be proudly boastful.”

Raviel praised me.

Hehe.

“Gong-Ja, what do you plan to do next? Even if that girl was the Tower Master, she now lacks both power and memory. Her ability to see ghosts is remarkable, but that’s it.”

Hmm.

“If my deduction is correct... there’s one way to bring back [The Master of All Lives].”

“Oh?”

“When a contradiction arises due to a skill, the Tower cannot resolve it internally. The judgment of the Tower Master is needed. So, if we cause another contradiction, the Tower Master will appear.”

“That makes sense. What exact contradiction do you intend to create?”

“I will be killed by Jaa Soo-Jeong’s hand.”

"....."

Raviel closed her lips.

I spoke emphatically.

"Then, a problem arises in the reenactment of the trauma. Trauma highlights an event that greatly influenced the subject's life. Whether remembered or not. So..."

+

Jaa Soo-Jeong's (Tower Master's) Trauma.

1. The trauma of the middle school student Jaa Soo-Jeong, living in this world.

2. Trauma from before Jaa Soo-Jeong lived her life as the Tower Master.

+

“A conflict arises. The Tower won’t be able to decide [which trauma] to show.”

"....."

“Following Constellation Killer's example, it’s correct to show [The Tower Master's Trauma]. That's the source. I’ll be incredibly close to the truth of the Tower, to the identity of the creator and ruler of the Tower, before even breaking the 50th floor.”

"....."

“This might be the first and last chance.”

Tap. Tap.

Raviel tapped the table.

“...

Can you be certain it's the last chance? Maybe after reaching the 50th, 60th, 70th floors, you'll learn the Tower Master's secrets."

"I can assert."

I glanced sideways.

The Guardian Spirit, with arms crossed, listened to our conversation.

-Hmm.

The Guardian Spirit frowned slightly.

-I reached up to the 99th floor, but never encountered someone like the Tower Master. I only learned about [Pillars] after meeting Kim Zombie here.

This was a testimony from an experienced individual.

-If we compare it to a game, reaching the 100th floor is like seeing the ending. There will be rewards fitting for an ending.

But the [game developer] has nothing to do with the ending, right? Whether it's the developer's identity or personal life, it's irrelevant. I couldn't reach the 100th floor, so I can't say for sure... but probably the 100th floor and the Tower Master are unrelated.

I nodded.

“Yes. According to my Guardian Spirit, there's absolutely no information about the Tower Master up to at least the 99th floor.”

This has no connection with the progression of the Tower.

In a sense, an Easter egg.

Information about the creator of the Tower, the developer of the stages.

“I want to know the identity of the Tower Master.”

"....."

“Why did that person create the Tower? How? Why choose to live the life of the most unfortunate person in each world? If there’s a chance to know, I want to seize it.”

“And you think this is the last chance.”

“Yes. I think so.”

The secrets of creation.

The life of the creator.

That’s worth risking a life for.

“Raviel.”

I looked earnestly into Raviel’s eyes.

“Please allow me to be killed by that girl.”

Chapter 209: Cheat (2)

---

“...My lover always forces difficult choices upon me.”

Raviel started to sigh but stopped herself.

A breath cut short midway.

During the remaining time, Raviel stroked my earlobe. I knew she refrained from sighing because she thought, [I don't want to sigh in front of the face of the one I love].

“I understand that it's a matter worth its value. If I were in your position, I would have acted the same way. Although I understand it with my head... my heart does not easily permit it.”

It's only natural.

What Raviel said applies to me as well.

If I were in Raviel's shoes, I would never easily allow it.

“Have you prepared a logic to persuade that child?”

Raviel glanced at Jaa Soo-Jeong's back.

“I've only observed her with a sidelong glance for about a day, but she's a person of strong resolve. No, it's more than that – it's as if her resolve itself has taken human form.

Jaa Soo-Jeong sees Raviel and Uburka [as they are].

To others, Raviel's silver hair appears black, and Uburka's green skin looks like flesh color. It's a confusion of perception.

But to Jaa Soo-Jeong, this change in perception does not apply.

“She didn't even blink when she saw me and Uburka the day before yesterday. That's the kind of person she is. I don't think she will easily agree just because you wish for death."

That's where my opinion differs.

But for now, I sought Raviel's consent.

"So, does Raviel grant permission for my actions?"

"Fine."

Raviel stated her condition.

"If you die in front of my eyes."

"....."

"If you perish right before me, I will permit it."

I nodded my head.

“I will do as you ask.”

---

“Everyone, please eat.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong walked in carrying a tray. Uburka also held a bowl in each hand. The menu was chilled chicken noodle soup. The noodles were rolled up in the bowl, with ice floating on top.

“I will enjoy this meal.”

I slurped up a mouthful along with the soup.

The cool dongchimi broth filled my mouth.

“...This is incredibly delicious?”

I couldn't help but marvel.

“Wow, it's really tasty. You seem to be a great cook.”

“The weather is hot, so I made chilled chicken noodles.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong said.

"The gemstone Raviel gave is so valuable, we won't have to worry about a poor dining table for a while."

"It's gratifying to see my gift valued."

Two days ago, Raviel handed over an emerald gemstone as a thanks for letting her stay. Even to someone like me who knew nothing about gemstones, it looked extremely expensive.

Initially, Jaa Soo-Jeong refused it, saying it was [too much], but after Raviel said, [It's for me to decide if it's too much. Are you treating me, a guest and the homeowner, like a beggar?], she eventually gave in.

Typical of the Ivansia Ducal Family. The wealthiest family in the Empire.

And that family is mine.

Uh-huh-huh.

“...Daddy. Your face is exceedingly unpleasing. Could you stop grinning while eating? It’s seriously embarrassing as a son.”

“Right. By the way, how did you dispose of the gemstone?”

I changed the subject.

“It wouldn’t have been easy to exchange a gemstone for money with a student status.”

“I have a classmate named Imiho. She’s the third daughter involved in second-tier finance and construction, and also a local magnate’s daughter. So, I asked her to handle it.”

“Huh?”

Wait.

Local magnate + second-tier finance + construction.... Oh,

oh.

‘Isn’t that a gangster!?’

She asked a classmate from a gangster family to dispose of the gemstone?

‘Really?’

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong, who was eating noodles. She was expressionless. I couldn’t guess what kind of life lay beyond that expressionlessness, but it certainly wasn’t ordinary.

Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head.

“Is there a problem?”

“Ah, no, it’s not that. I was just thinking your friend circle is quite interesting.... Moreover, is it alright to tell all this to an outsider like me?”

“Yes.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong answered succinctly.

“Because Kim Gong-Ja asked.”

Hmm.

“...I want to clarify. It's not because I am someone special that you answered, but simply because I asked, right?”

“Yes. That's right.”

I shut my mouth.

Ever since we met the other day.

‘This person has no barriers.’

She seems to accept any question or request.

At least until now, she has never refused anything I said. Not even once.

When I wanted to talk, when I asked if it was okay to let Uburka and Raviel stay, Jaa Soo-Jeong accepted without any hesitation, always replying with a [Yes].

“Um, Jaa Soo-Jeong.”

After dinner.

I decided to test my thoughts.

“I’m sorry to ask, but could I make a request?”

“Yes. If I can help.”

“Please come up and sit on the table.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong’s head tilted slightly.

Her blonde hair slid to the side.

“The table is not for sitting on, Kim Gong-Ja.”

“Yes. I understand. Please.”

"....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong slowly climbed onto the table and sat down cross-legged.

"Hmm."

“Ugh?”

Both Raviel, who was watching us, narrowed her eyes, and Uburka widened his.

Feeling a strong premonition that my judgment was correct, I made another request.

“Could you please place your hand on my head?”

“Yes.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong placed her hand on my forehead.

I continued to ask.

“I’m hungry. I’d like some chicken skewers for a snack. Could you make them for me?”

“...Kim Gong-Ja.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong admonished me softly.

“Using me conveniently like this may have a negative impact on you in the future. Also, late-night snacks are bad for your health. In my judgment, Kim Gong-Ja is not hungry, but rather, you are making these requests to understand my behavior.”

“Yes. That’s correct. So, please.”

"....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong nodded and brought a basket.

She was actually going to leave the house to make chicken skewers.

"Wait a moment."

Raviel grabbed Jaa Soo-Jeong's shoulder. Seeing the situation develop to this point, even the supreme Raviel could not refrain from intervening.

"Jaa Soo-Jeong, just to be sure, if a stranger on the street asks you for a little help or to follow them, would you go?"

"Yes."

Jaa Soo-Jeong readily affirmed.

"If I can help."

“This is an extreme example, but what if that request was to be confined in a subsidiary facility for a year?”

“Yes. If I can be of help.”

Raviel pursed her lips.

After a moment, she muttered, “Indeed.”

“This is... dangerous.”

Raviel and I exchanged glances.

I nodded to share an understanding with her.

“Yes, it is dangerous, Raviel.”

“...The mind is sharp enough to discern others' true intentions. To grasp others' purposes. But just understanding isn't enough, if someone earnestly requests, you never refuse. No, at this level, it's more like you can't refuse.”

Raviel frowned.

“I am certain now after the conversation we just had. As Gong-ja said, this child is indeed a Tower Master. At least, she’s not a human who was born and raised through normal means.”

“Yes. This personality isn’t [formed] but rather [programmed].”

Like an AI reacting according to conditions.

Simply an existence responding to people's wishes.

“Jaa Soo-Jeong.”

I knelt on one knee in front of the small blonde girl.

Finally, our eye levels matched.

Jaa Soo-Jeong, still holding the basket, looked at me intently.

“I come from another world. Raviel and Uburka too, are travelers from their respective worlds.”

“I see.”

Even upon hearing such an unconventional statement, Jaa Soo-Jeong's face did not change.

She just lightly nodded as if she had already guessed it.

“Open, Skill Card.”

I pulled out a golden card.

+

[Returner's Winding Clock]

Rank: EX

Effect: Activated automatically on death. You will return 24 hours back in time from the moment of your death. Your memories and stats are preserved while returning.

*However, there is a greater penalty the higher your rank.

*Skill copied from Yoo Soo-Ha

+

I showed my trump card as evidence.

“In our world, there are things called skills. It’s possible to move through space using skills, and even to turn back time.”

"....."

“As you can see, I possess a skill that allows me to not die even if I am killed. By presenting this skill, I would like to make a request to you, Jaa Soo-Jeong. Please kill me just once.”

“Why?”

“I believe you are a god overseeing our worlds.”

I looked straight into Jaa Soo-Jeong’s eyes.

“Our god implants a terminal in each world to represent them. The person who has lived the most unfortunate life becomes the candidate for this terminal.”

“I am that terminal?”

“Yes.”

Then, I started my story.

About how I came into the Tower. The story of the director and Kim Yul. My experiences in the Tower, meeting my master, meeting Raviel. I offered my life as evidence to the girl before me.

"....."

For over an hour and a half, the story went on, but Jaa Soo-Jeong watched me silently throughout.

I closed my mouth and waited for her response.

“...According to Kim Gong-Ja’s story, it’s indeed possible that I am the Tower Master’s terminal. It makes sense to lure the administrator by exploiting contradictions and face the truth of that administrator.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong extended her hand.

“You’re a hard-working person, Kim Gong-Ja.”

Her slender fingers gently brushed over my forehead.

“Recently, Kim Yul suddenly disappeared.”

“Not only Kim Yul but several people disappeared. The ones who bullied Kim Yul. No one but me noticed their disappearance. I thought it was a rare event, but according to Kim Gong-Ja, it makes sense.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong stroked my head.

“If I meet the Tower Master, I would be glad to convey your words.”

“What would you like me to say?”

“I am happy.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong quietly said.

A shiver ran down my spine for a moment.

“I love this city and the children living in it. I love the crying cicadas in summer and the sound of the radio leaking from the old windows next door.”

And I realized what I had misunderstood.

The child before me was not something akin to AI.

It wasn't that she lacked emotions and thus accepted every question and request.

Simply.

‘She sees us all as [children].’

Seeing them as children she needs to take care of.

Even the unidentified monsters sleeping in the warehouse.

And even me, who is having this conversation now.

Though she may admonish and point out faults, she cannot refuse the last request.

In essence, this child is a mother.

“So please tell her not to worry about me.”

“...Yes.”

I nodded.

“I will definitely convey your message.”

“Give me the knife.”

I handed over the dagger I had at my waist.

Jaa Soo-Jeong received the knife and swung it a few times.

Seemingly getting the hang of it, she pointed the tip of the knife at me.

"....."

Raviel silently watched over me.

"Kim Gong-Ja. I am not strong, so I might not be able to end your life in one strike."

"I am prepared. It's not the first time I've experienced this...."

"If it becomes painful, I'm sorry. I apologize in advance."

Thwack!

Before I could even finish speaking, cold steel pierced through my neck.

‘Huh?’

My vision shattered like a broken window, splintering into several pieces.

While the agony spread through the cracks, a corner of my mind felt absurd.

‘No matter what, for a student to immediately go for the neck without any hesitation, it's absurd...’

My body swayed.

If I wasn't mistaken, Jaa Soo-Jeong had just swung the dagger once more.

'It's absurd....'

Within the torn vision, Jaa Soo-Jeong's face remained expressionless.

Her lips moved.

"May fortune be with you."

Consciousness snapped, just like that.

Along with the usual announcement of my death.

[You have died.]

[Your current Rank is B-Rank.]

.....

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

[Extracting data from the original owner's memory.]

.....

[Failed.]

[Data for trauma re-enactment is rejected.]

[Requesting data from Zuraqua... Failure. Rejected.]

.....

[Trauma cannot be re-enacted.]

[Requesting approval from Zuraqua.]

[Failure.]

[Approval from Zuraqua is denied.]

[The matter is not within Zuraqua's agenda.]

.....

[Unable to cope.]

['The Master of All Lives' manifests.]

At that moment.

“----Goodness.”

Someone.

No, something grabbed my chin.

Firmly.

“How annoying this is.”

It was a voice like red silk soaked in peach juice for days, then wrung out forcefully, spattering sweet juice in all directions.

“Even though I, the lesser one, enjoy sowing chances in spring to harvest in autumn, this was truly an unforeseen situation.”

It was a voice like a hundred snakes flicking their thin tongues, a hundred ends of tongues drilling into ears.

“How dare you peek into the past of the lesser one.”

I opened my eyes.

In the darkness, a girl was smirking.

This being looked exactly like Jaa Soo-Jeong, who was stroking my head in the old house just a moment ago, with one exception.

“The first time I conceded to logic, the second time I pretended not to understand flattery. The third time I admired the audacity and obliged. Foolishly.”

The pupils.

“Now that we’ve reached the fourth time today, it is also my oversight.”

[The Master of All Lives] had purple eyes.

"Even so, shortcuts do not straighten out, and cheats are not acknowledged as standard. King of Death. You have done something truly amusing."

Purple is perhaps the darkest color to illuminate something.

However, the purple of the Tower Master shone transparently even in darkness.

It was a brightness that illuminated not a person's face, but their heart.

“How should I punish this adorable mischievous one?”

“I don’t recommend keeping silent like a mute. If the lesser one realizes how much I can torment you, you will understand that keeping silent is the most foolish thing to do. Please, speak your mind.”

I opened my mouth.

“It’s my first time meeting you formally.”

And I smiled.

“Tower Master.”

For the first time, I saw the face of the being who created this Tower.

Chapter 210: Cheat (3)

---

“My name is Kim Gong-Ja.”

I spoke, suppressing the pounding of my heart.

“And, I am the one who received the alias King of Death from you.”

“Let me say this again. I'm pleased to meet you formally, Tower Master.”

The purple eyes pierced through me as they stared.

“Hmm.”

The Tower Master held my chin. Our faces were close enough for our breaths to mingle. The breaths she exhaled were so faint they were almost inaudible.

“Since you have introduced yourself, it would be rude not to introduce myself in return.”

The Tower Master clicked her tongue lightly.

“Fine. As you said, I am the Tower Master. I hold the alias of The Master of All Lives, my first name is Jaa Soo-Jeong, and my second name is Kaleidoscope. I have many other nicknames, but there’s no need to tell you all of them.”

“Still, I would appreciate it if you did.”

“You really are shameless.”

“I went to such lengths to meet you, to learn about you. Isn’t that commendable?”

The Tower Master chuckled.

“As I heard, you are eloquent and charming. I’m well aware that Hamusutra fell for your smooth talk. But if you plan to sweet-talk me, give up. That's my specialty."

"...You specialize in seducing people, Tower Master?"

"Yes. Be thankful I don't have a hobby of messing with married men, King of Death. Married women, maybe."

Thud.

The Tower Master released my chin.

[The Master of All Lives withdraws the Dragon Pressure.]

Only then did I regain the contours of my body. Until now, in this darkness, I could only feel my face, mouth, and heart. But after the Tower Master let go of my chin, I felt my arms and legs more distinctly.

My mind cleared.

Hmm.

It's okay.

My heart is still pounding, but it's not uncontrollable.

“Tower Master. You know why I summoned you. I intend to peek into your past, based on my skill.”

"....."

“You may be an omnipotent being in this tower. But at the same time, you are an operator who tries your best to be fair and strict. I have justly used my skill, so you have no choice but to comply with my request.”

“Damn it.”

The Tower Master narrowed her eyebrows.

Looking back now, she was really different from Jaa Soo-Jeong in the [Side Story].

The Jaa Soo-Jeong living in the side story had no expressions. Her speech was monotonous. But the Tower Master frowning in front of me now, despite having the same beautiful appearance, frowned, clicked her tongue, and sighed.

She was a living person.

“King of Death.”

“Yes.”

“I sincerely advise against experiencing my past, especially cherry-picking just the traumas. It’s dangerous. It would be slightly safer to dive into an exploding volcano with dynamite strapped around your waist.”

The Tower Master shook her head.

“Please give up if you don’t want to be shattered to pieces.”

“I want to know about you.”

“Do you know who is the saddest being in the myth of Icarus? Is it the Minotaur, who was trapped in an eternal labyrinth the moment it was born? Is it Icarus, who just wanted to fly a bit more? Is it Daedalus, who made wings for his son? No. It's the sun, which had no choice but to burn those approaching it and drop them into the blue sea. Please don't make me sad."

"....."

"Your access authority is B-rank."

The Tower Master snapped her fingers.

Then, purple letters were engraved in the darkness.

+

Hell Realm.

Hungry Ghost Realm.

Animal Realm.

Asura Realm.

Human Realm.

Heaven Realm.

+

“The depth of all lives you will experience is the Animal Realm. As you must know from experiencing the trauma of Constellation Killer, starting from the Animal Realm, traumas are not just [seen] but [lived]. If your rank was below C, I might have considered it, but...”

The Tower Master looked straight at me.

“No.”

"....."

“Give up if you don’t want to die without leaving even bone broth behind.”

Surprisingly, the Tower Master was quite vulgar.

“...You seem to know a lot about my skill. What comes after the Animal Realm, I didn’t even know.”

“Of course.”

The Tower Master retorted.

“That’s originally my ability.”

“What?”

I hadn't imagined such a statement.

The Tower Master sighed and brushed her blonde hair with her right hand.

“Every skill has an original. It’s much easier to develop something by referring to something already existing, rather than creating something out of nothing. The [Trauma Viewing Penalty] you have is originally one of the abilities of some Dragon Emperor... Anyway, one of my ancestral abilities. I call it 'All Lives'."

Whoa.

"Perhaps the alias [The Master of All Lives] is...?"

"That's right. It was derived from there."

Good heavens.

Does that mean I share a similar ability with the Tower Master?

"It's an unexpected honor. No, how did such a coincidence happen..."

"Honor? Because of this fucking ability, my life went to hell."

Correction.

The Tower Master was far more vulgar than I expected.

“And it’s not even a coincidence. It’s attached to the penalty of [Returner’s Winding Clock]. You already heard who created the skill?”

“Yes, [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] created it...”

“That girl is my daughter.”

My mouth dropped open.

“Wh-what?”

“She’s my daughter.”

The Tower Master sighed and extended her left hand.

“Here.”

“What... what is this?”

“Smell it.”

It was a seriously awkward request.

“Uh. Um. Tower Master. I, uh, already belong to someone else...”

“Are you insane? Do you want to die? Didn’t I just say I’m not interested in men? I’m asking you to just press your nose against my hand and smell. I’ll flip your nostrils upside down and transplant your nose hairs with your head hairs.”

"....."

Hearing an insult I’d never heard before, I obediently pressed my nose to her hand and sniffed.

"Ugh."

At that moment, a dizzying fragrance surged into my skull.

My vision spun.

I reflexively lifted my head and created some distance.

“...Peach scent?”

“Yes. That’s my body scent.”

“Crazy.”

“I think it’s crazy too.”

The Tower Master made a face as if chewing on something.

“Now, remember the pillow that my daughter always carries around.”

I recalled [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] in my head.

True to the Tower Master's words, the Princess always hugged a pillow.

And the pattern drawn on the pillow was.

“Peach...”

“That girl. She’s severely a mama's girl. No matter her age, she still can't sleep without my scent beside her. She doesn't just have trouble sleeping, she refuses to sleep. That's the real problem.”

My mind went numb.

“I was hoping to hear various secrets when meeting the Tower Master, but...”

“You never imagined you'd learn such a secret, right? I know. I understand. Originally, there are no secrets in the world, and once you forcibly uncover them, all that awaits you is infinite responsibility. Damn it.”

The Tower Master's favorite phrase was ‘damn it.’

“I’m the same. Don’t try to know my secrets. Don’t dig them up. If you manage to handle what you discover and dig up, good for you, but all you’ll find at the bottom of my depths are rotting screams.”

“...But if I still wish to see it, what will you do?”

“I can offer you a different compensation.”

The Tower Master looked at me.

Her face was expressionless as she watched me.

At this moment, she looked exactly like Jaa Soo-Jeong in the [Side Story].

“Name any skill you want. I’ll be lenient. Speak of any power you desire. I’ll consider it. In exchange, tear up [Returner’s Winding Clock]. So that the trauma penalty does not occur.”

"....."

“If you’re worried about losing your ability to return, don’t be. I’ll delete only the trauma penalty and gift you a skill, the same, no, even better than that.”

“Really.”

I nodded.

“You can’t forcibly stop me, can you?”

The Tower Master sighed.

“...Yes.”

“All you can do is persuade me. You’ve appeared now to persuade me. Stopping the penalty activation according to the skill would be [abuse of authority]. You have the power to stop me, even change the world so this situation never happens, but you don’t.”

Because you are a person bound by your own rules.

“No matter how much you want to stop me, if I insist on proceeding, you have no choice but to let it happen. Am I correct?”

“King of Death.”

“I have no intention of tearing up [Returner’s Winding Clock].”

“Please, I beg you. You're going to get torn apart.”

“If I back down here, even if I climb to the 99th floor and ascend to the 100th, I will forever remain ignorant of you. I don’t want that. I want to live even a single day of life with you.”

"....."

Suddenly, the Tower Master’s eyes softened.

“I see.”

The Tower Master lamented.

“I had braced myself that this day might come. The one who wields the sword must know they will eventually be torn by the sword. I knew that someday, someone who speaks like me, reasons like me, believes like me, would appear, even if it took an eternity.”

The Tower Master reached out her hands and held my head.

“Please be strong.”

Then she pressed her forehead against mine.

[The Master of All Lives blesses you.]

The purple eyes reflected in mine.

“I am always beside you all.”

The moment her voice whispered.

[Your current rank is B-rank.]

[Warning.]

[Re-enacting the trauma of your killer.]

The stopped clock hands began to move.

[The level of penalty is High.]

[Animal Realm.]

Eyes.

In the midst of a world dyed in purple, my eyes were captured.

Within the eyes caught, again the purple eyes.

In the purple eyes, again my eyes...

My consciousness fell into a labyrinth of mirrors.

.

.

.

.

.

.

That year, the rumors were endless.

In the Baron's territory, stones rolled on their own without anyone touching them. It was a bad omen as stones moved around on their own in the territory. The river water boiled every night for no reason. Frogs jumped out of the waterways and then smashed their heads on the ground and died.

In the capital, lightning struck twenty-six times in one day, and the fortune-teller at the North Gate blabbered, “The number thirteen is overlapped above and below to make twenty-six, it’s a bad omen.”

It was a grave sin to randomly predict the fortune of the country. The capital guards dragged out the fortune-teller and beheaded him. That day, even though the rainy season had not yet arrived, the river flooded severely, blocking all roads to the capital from all directions.

“The kingdom is an irrecoverable cripple.”

The nobles openly sighed.

Famine continued. Epidemics were successive. Time was like a rotten spine, pus accumulating at every continuous and successive segment. The corpses of the people flowed down the overflowing river.

The time of destruction.

In the midst of a crumbling kingdom, in some December, a girl was born.

Amethyst** of the Baron House.

**Jaa Soo-Jeong's name has the hanja for 'Amethyst' and Soo-Jeong means crystal in Korean.

Born with special eyes, she was the Lady of Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong.

She blossomed by absorbing all the last nutrients of the rotting kingdom and was beautiful.

“Purple eyes.”

Some nobles praised her eyes as [hard to forget once seen]. Others criticized harshly, saying there was [almost nothing notable about her other than her unusual eye color].

Her delicately brushed hair flowed down slightly whenever she turned her head.

“Her hair is platinum, almost divine. It captivates at first glance. But that too is a luxury allowed only from afar.”

There were those who excessively praised her.

“Getting closer, the hands are captivated before the eyes, and I unwittingly reach out. In the brief moment I extend my hand, time willingly stops. She turns to look at me. Clearly. Very clearly. And then I realize. I have grasped her wrist.”

Lady Amethyst was expressionless.

“She’s mute and seems like an idiot at first glance.”

Was she expressionless since birth?

Her long eyebrows never seemed to have frowned.

“A mere attention-seeker.”

“Doesn’t know how to be nervous.”

“A natural on stage.”

The year Lady Amethyst turned seventeen.

That year, the rumors were incessant. Stones rolled on their own, the river water boiled for no reason, and dry thunder struck the capital twenty-six times. There was a drought in spring and a rebellion in autumn.

There was also a rumor about the young Lady.

“Already the talk of the social world, albeit hush-hush -.”

That year, the Lady took over the position of the family head, succeeding her dead father.

“It’s no secret that Lady Amethyst killed her own father.”

And in front of the nobles who spread such rumors, Lady Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled. As usual, her expressionless face bloomed like a bright flower, and the socialites couldn’t help but admire her. A voice almost musical flowed from her angelic lips.

“---Acting all high and mighty. Damn it.”

Lady Jaa Soo-Jeong of the Amethyst Barony.

The girl was the craziest in the two-thousand-year history of the kingdom.

Chapter 211: That God's Possession (1)

---

There was an incident that widely recognized Jaa Soo-Jeong as a lunatic.

At that time, the kingdom was plagued by serious conflict between the humans and the non-humans. A magician known as the Black Witch led a terrorist organization, slaughtering the humans. On the opposite side, a group called [Stone's Gathering] butchered the non-humans.

Retaliation and revenge. Resentment and anger.

The cycle of slaughter and butchery meant that the hatred between races had no chance to cool.

“The distinction between humans and non-humans must become stricter!”

The conservative nobles of the kingdom did not stay idle.

“Esteemed colleagues of the Noble Assembly! The current chaos in our kingdom is due to the indiscriminate mixing of humans and non-humans, morality and immorality, civilization and uncivilization. According to current marriage laws, marriage between humans and non-humans is permitted. Not only that, even same-sex marriage and incest are legalized! All relics of barbarism from hundreds of years ago. How can we hope for peace in the world when things that shouldn't be mixed are mixed? With great regret, our faction proposes the 7th [Integrated Marriage Law].”

"....."

Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong watched the Noble Assembly and smiled faintly.

“How interesting.”

That month, a family war broke out in the Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong territory.

When war between families was officially declared, a third party couldn't intervene rashly. The family that fought the Amethyst Barony was the Citrine Barony. Originally one family, they had split six generations ago.

Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong* declared war by surprise.

*Hanja of her name means 'Citrine'.

He had a reason.

The kingdom was in the midst of destruction. And slightly faster than that, Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong was also falling apart. When [Lady Jaa Soo-Jeong] murdered her father and became [Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong], loyal vassals and people from previous generations all left.

"I didn't want this."

Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong strung his bow.

In their childhood, Hwang Soo-Jeong and Jaa Soo-Jeong were as close as sisters. They were even kidnapped together by terrorists. Now recalling those distant days, Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong made a sad face.

"I'm sorry, Soo-Jeong."

“There’s no need to apologize. Sister.”

Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled brightly.

“I wanted it this way.”

The forces of Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong suffered a crushing defeat.

The reports received by Hwang Soo-Jeong were all manipulated.

Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong's house was falling apart, but Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong herself was a genius of the era. All the vassals had left, but new vassals were appointed instead. A great magician who had been holed up in a room for the past 60 years suddenly became Jaa Soo-Jeong's close confidant, a fact Hwang Soo-Jeong didn't anticipate.

The price for being an incompetent noble was high.

“I don’t care if I die.”

Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong's face was resolute.

“But please spare my vassals. Their only crime was following me.”

“That’s an interesting thing to say.”

Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong beheaded the captured enemy vassals one by one.

“Because I plan to do the exact opposite.”

When the head of the third vassal rolled, Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong's knees also gave way. The resolute face had long crumbled. She belatedly realized that although she had braced for war, she had not prepared for defeat.

“I’m sorry. No, I apologize. Please spare the vassals... They did as I ordered upon my rock-like foundation and surrendered when I was captured. I beg you... please.”

“There is one way.”

Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong whispered into the ear of her distant cousin sister.

“I’ll formally request a noble trial. Follow what I say there.”

Nobles from the capital gathered at the trial.

The verdict on the family war was delivered. The fault was clear to anyone. Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong's house had declared war first and shot the first arrow. And they were defeated.

The conservative faction raised suspicions that the reports had been manipulated.

But there was no evidence.

The only witness was a vassal of Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong, but regrettably, he couldn't attend the trial. He was one of the three vassals whose necks Jaa Soo-Jeong had just cut.

“The victory of Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong's house is recognized.”

The judge from the southeastern region spoke with a short tongue.

“From now on, all property and people of Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong’s house are to be owned by Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong.”

“All decision-making power lies with me, including the life of Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong.”

“That’s correct.”

“What do you say, sister?”

“...Yes.”

Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong, tied with ropes, bowed her head.

“I’ll generously spare the remaining vassals. In exchange, swear to entrust your life, your fate, everything to me.”

“You already possess everything I had... I will comply with whatever you demand without hesitation.”

The nobles in the audience clicked their tongues.

The declaration of war by Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong was instigated by the conservative faction.

Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong, watching the nobles with bitter faces, smiled broadly.

“Then marry me.”

"....."

Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong raised her head.

“If so, I will forgive you.”

The conservative nobles opened their mouths.

“Your Honor? I will file for marriage. Please grant permission.”

“Wait a minute.”

The judge put a hand to his forehead.

The Judicial Inquisitor’s mind raced.

All laws are proclaimed by royal command or established by a vote in the Noble Assembly. Marriage law is part of the Assembly law. And all Assembly laws are recorded in the General Protocol of the Assembly, a hundreds-volume record more like bricks than books.

The judge remembered all the records accumulated over 2,000 years.

“...In the 5th marriage law, marriage between relatives was permitted, and there’s no need to go as far as the 6th law since there’s enough distance in blood relation. Same-sex marriage, which was illegal in the 3rd law, was permitted in the 5th law... Marriage registration between nobles requires the presence of other nobles.”

The judge looked around.

The nobles were still gaping in the audience.

“It’s fulfilled. The public certification... I can do it.”

The judge nodded.

“Is there anyone here who objects to this marriage?”

No one spoke up.

“The family war officially ended with Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong's house legitimately winning, with no doubts raised. All acquisitions have been reported by Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong's house, and in this process, the treatment of Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong was entrusted to Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong. Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong, holding all ownership rights of Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong, married Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong.”

Only then did the nobles recover from the shock and start murmuring.

But it was too late.

“The marriage is approved.”

It was both a same-surname and same-sex marriage.

The political significance of this event was clear. It was a big ‘fuck you.’

The conservative faction realized they had been screwed over by an 18-year-old noble, who until recently was a lady and had just become a baron.

It didn’t take long for the world to know Jaa Soo-Jeong was a lunatic.

+

[Madness Syndrome]

Rank: A-

Effect: A curse bestowed by a dragon. Those who possess this skill ‘cannot go mad’ no matter what happens. Even if subjected to mental attacks and psychic magic, this person cannot be driven insane. This individual is always self-aware, knowing where they are, when it is, and who they are.

A curse invented by a dragon who fell in love with a human to protect the fragile human mind. According to legend, the dragon's lover went mad because they couldn't go mad.

*However, once acquired, this skill can never be released.

+

Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong and Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong merged households.

Baron Hwang Soo-Jeong lost her title and became Madame Hwang Soo-Jeong. Baron Jaa Soo-Jeong, by absorbing her wife's title, ascended to Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong. The house that split six generations ago became one again.

“That crazy bitch!”

The conservative faction wouldn't just stand by and watch.

Dozens of noble lords grinded their teeth.

“You really are a madwoman.”

Even the faction opposing the conservatives didn't just watch idly.

Dozens of vulgar nobles acknowledged Jaa Soo-Jeong as a breath of fresh air.

“But do you have any other talents besides being mad?”

Duke of Apathetic Leisure*.

*Muhi Shik means ‘A state of being unconscious and unaware of one's actions or state’. The hanja for her name means something along the lines of ‘leisure’ or ‘effortless sustenance’.

One of only six in the world and a great noble responsible for all the artists in the kingdom, also known as the Leisurely Duke, showed interest in Jaa Soo-Jeong.

As implied by her role in nurturing artists, she too was not quite sane.

“I’m generally good at everything.”

“There have been 133,643 people who have said that to me so far.”

Duke of Apathetic Leisure was an Ascended. In this world, humans who overcame [Trials] and received the dragon’s blessing were granted eternal life. However, the dragon’s blessing wasn’t omnipotent and couldn’t save someone from a madman’s swinging blade.

The Duke of Apathetic Leisure was always cautious when walking the streets. Thanks to that, she hadn’t been stabbed to death in the last thousand years. That level of caution was necessary to play the role of a duke in the kingdom.

“Duke, Your Excellency.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong bowed her head.

“Isn’t life unbearably boring for you?”

“Oh. That sounds plausible. There have been 517,570 people who’ve said that to me.”

“You raise artists, Your Excellency. But even if an artist can overflow rivers and tear apart glory with their skill, they can’t save you.”

“Why?”

“Because for them, art is more precious than Your Excellency.”

The Duke of Apathetic Leisure felt that this little one was worth more attention.

“What are you talking about?”

“Artists with less talent than Your Excellency will worship you. But no matter how much they revere you, their art is insignificant, so they can’t save you.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong felt her prey approaching the trap.

“Artists with more talent than Your Excellency won’t care much about you. So no matter how supreme their works are, their gaze won’t be on you, so they can’t save you either.”

“Hmm.”

“You are fated to be beyond anyone’s reach. If this is your fate, Your Excellency, you are destined only to unrequitedly love and love again. There is only one way for you to save yourself.”

“By raising you?”

“Yes. I will create a masterpiece for Your Excellency. My wedding was indeed interesting, a long-awaited rain in Your Excellency’s life. Leisurely Duke. Wouldn’t you want to have someone by your side who can turn life into an art form?”

“20,351 people.”

“I have more talent than Your Excellency.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong turned away.

In Duke of Apathetic Leisure's heart were instruments. [The Grave of Instruments], the Musical Tomb. The duke collected the instruments of his favorite musicians upon their death, storing them until another favored person was born.

Jaa Soo-Jeong approached the piano and played.

It was a piano that had been in Musical Tomb for over 1700 years.

+

[Music of the Capital's Three Delights]

Rank: A-

Effect: Innate talent for composition and performance. Those with this skill are loved by music. Distant sounds connect, and the first and last notes on the sheet are instantly comprehended.

You discover the rhythm unique to stream water, autumn leaves, and babbling children among the indiscriminate noises of nature.

You are a tyrant.

By your mere existence, people will now recall your melodies when they hear the sound of a stream. Just as the croak of a frog is defined as ‘ribbit ribbit’ and the sound of clock hands as ‘tick-tock,’ human anger, despair, joy, and everything in the universe will be dominated by your music.

Blessings to the one who will become a queen.

*However, daily, consistent practice and training are necessary.

+

The piano performance ended.

Duke of Apathetic Leisure nodded.

“750 people.”

“I am beautiful. I possess unparalleled talent. I will receive everyone's admiration and recognition through my music, my works, my life. Yet still, I will dedicate my glory to Your Excellency, and finally, Your Excellency will hold everything in the world in your grasp."

"102 people."

The Duke of Apathetic Leisure yawned.

"Even if all your words prove true."

She leaned on her throne.

"It means you were astronomically lucky to be born so well, and to harbor such favorable feelings towards me, making me the very, very fortunate protagonist of luck."

The Leisurely Duke's gaze was indifferent.

Her eyes, rotten by time over a thousand years.

"Me becoming such a rare protagonist of luck would indeed make me love the world's coincidences and fate. Is that the final destination you're leading me to?"

"Similar, but different."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong shook her head.

"You don't need to love anything, Your Excellency. Just my love alone will be enough, and eventually, someone else, another someone, another person will occupy Your Excellency's heart. That day. Finally, Your Excellency will accomplish what you've been postponing for a thousand years."

"What have I postponed for a thousand years?"

"Suicide."

"....."

"I will help Your Excellency commit suicide."

Somewhere, a droplet fell.

Duke of Apathetic Leisure was silent.

Dead instruments littered her grave.

“You dragged your father into the woods and killed him.”

“Yes.”

“I want to kill you.”

“Yes.”

“But I also want to keep you alive.”

“I know.”

Duke of Apathetic Leisure took out dice from her pocket.

“I’ll see your fate.”

Duke of Apathetic Leisure rolled the dice for major decisions. Her power was established on the fact that she unconditionally adhered to the outcome of the six-faced dice.

Years ago, after suppressing a count's rebellion, the Duke of Apathetic Leisure decided whether to massacre the prisoners with dice. An odd number came out, and twenty thousand prisoners died.

People thought she was mad, and the Duke of Apathetic Leisure thought so too.

“If an odd number comes up, I’ll kill you. If it’s even, I’ll keep you alive.”

“If a 6 comes up, please care for me. For any other number, kill me.”

“That’s for me to decide.”

The Duke of Apathetic Leisure threw the dice.

The dice rolled, turrur, on the wooden floor of Musical Tomb.

+

[The One Loved by the Dice]

Rank: SSS

Effect: Heavenly luck.

+

The Duke of Apathetic Leisure looked at the value revealed by the dice.

Jaa Soo-Jeong didn't look.

She kept her gaze fixed on the kingdom's powerhouse, the one who could protect her from the conservative faction's attacks, and shield her from any political onslaught.

“Have I now become the only person in Your Excellency’s life?”

Since that day.

Jaa Soo-Jeong was known as [Muhi Shik's Pet].

Chapter 212: That God's Possession (2)

---

A nation in ruins.

Jaa Soo-Jeong was racing through the decaying kingdom.

"Rampage as you wish."

She had gained the favor of the Duke of Apathetic Leisure, one of only six nobles in the kingdom. She was under the protection of a powerful patron. Nothing could stop her now.

The girl pointed her sword towards the era.

[Act 1.]

[Witch Hunt.]

The first boss was a non-human terrorist.

The Black Witch led the rebel group 'Red Nails'.

Originally, the Black Witch was a top-ranking wizard in the Wizard Tower, an elite among elites. Why had an elite, who was neither non-human nor human, suddenly turned into a fierce terrorist? The world didn't know.

"It's not that they don't know, they just choose not to."

The Black Witch sneered.

"When you live long enough, you see a lot. You put children in rice sacks and kicked them to death. Hundreds of thousands of non-humans were enslaved. I don't expect a change of heart from you now. It's more unrealistic to expect a miracle from humans than from gods. We just..."

The rebellion of [Red Nails] shook the entire kingdom.

"It would be great if you all suffer."

Noble ladies in the capital were kidnapped and tortured. A powerful noble who had reigned supreme in the south for 700 years was attacked and killed during his journey. Special forces directly under the royal family went missing in the southeast. Thousands of slaves in the Viscount region escaped and joined the rebels.

Without discrimination against social status, nobles or commoners, [Red Nails] tortured and slaughtered humans. Though there was a bounty on the Black Witch, no one could catch her. The powerful were terrified.

"How interesting."

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled brightly.

"Let me make it even more interesting."

Jaa Soo-Jeong used Duke of Apathetic Leisure's connections to approach a princess. The cruel princess, leader of the royal special forces, known for her brutality.

Collecting the right arms of criminals as a hobby.

"I will bring victory to you, Your Highness."

Jaa Soo-Jeong seduced the princess.

"I'm aware that Your Highness is troubled by the Red Nails."

"It's more of a toothache than a headache."

"The reason the teeth wobble is due to rotten gums, Your Highness."

Jaa Soo-Jeong whispered.

"The reason the non-humans are restless is because the kingdom hasn't been a support for them. Only a few among the non-humans are blinded by revenge and commit massacres. If we assure them of life and equality, the power of Red Nails will naturally diminish."

+

[Royal Advisor]

Rank: B+

Effect: Innate strategic genius. Wisdom in assisting a monarch.

One who possesses this skill instinctively identifies the enemy's weaknesses and devises actions to exploit them.

A true material for the throne. Rare are the strategies that this person cannot see through, from politics to warfare.

*However, it activates only with sufficient information.

+

"....."

The princess looked silently at the noble who had approached her.

"Your proposal is reasonable but difficult to implement. They've already turned their backs on the kingdom once. If we embrace them back as citizens, the humans and nobles won't stand for it. We can't risk the backlash of humans to stop a non-human rebellion. It's putting the cart before the horse."

"How dare I suggest Your Highness to embrace these lowly people?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong did not rush.

The princess had lost dozens of siblings in her youth. Although famous for her cruelty, her brutality stemmed from the harshness of her childhood. Jaa Soo-Jeong instinctively knew how to melt the unhappiness conceived in her early years.

"I'm a noble too."

Jaa Soo-Jeong decided to become a sister-like figure to the princess.

"A noble can take someone as a retainer, a private soldier, or even as a territorial citizen. Your Highness doesn't need to personally embrace the rebels."

Warm eyes. A compassionate smile. Gentle touch.

Jaa Soo-Jeong slowly corroded the cruel princess.

The poison was sweet when melting ice.

"Your Highness."

She listened quietly when life was lamented.

She stroked her hand when there was frustration.

Jaa Soo-Jeong often whispered how great the princess was and how much more dangerous the kingdom would have been without her.

".....Jaa Soo-Jeong."

When the place Jaa Soo-Jeong stroked changed from the hand to the shoulder, from the shoulder to the forehead, and from the forehead to the cheek, the princess was already calling Jaa Soo-Jeong [Jaa Soo-Jeong], not [Viscount].

"Tell me your plan."

"It's simple. Red Nails is a fragmented organization. I'll lead an elite team and crush their hideouts one by one. With each crush, I'll take the surrendered ones as my retainers or territorial citizens. I'll embrace those abandoned by the kingdom on your behalf."

"You'll step in for me, attracting attention and discontent."

"Yes."

"What can I do for you?"

"Love me."

The poison was sweet.

".....In private."

And fatal.

Under the favor of both the Duke of Apathetic Leisure and the cruel princess, Jaa Soo-Jeong absorbed the non-human rebels. She guaranteed 'absolute safety' to the surrendered terrorists. Former terrorists became soldiers, citizens, and slaves of the Amethyst House.

"That crazy bitch is at it again!"

Of course, the conservative faction couldn't tolerate such behavior.

"This person stirred trouble in my territory as a commoner. Return him to me!"

"A few years ago, my brother was killed by a runaway slave during a business trip. He lost both eyes. I heard that slave is now a retainer of the Viscount. I'll compensate you well, please hand over the prisoner."

"How dare you privately shelter national enemies. If you have loyalty to the kingdom, you should properly dispose of the captured rebels!"

Lords, merchants, and priests from all over the kingdom swarmed like bees.

Jaa Soo-Jeong just smiled.

"Putting on airs."

Jaa Soo-Jeong was strong.

"Regardless of their past, they are now my retainers, my slaves. By the law of the kingdom, I hold ownership over them. If you still want to take them away, challenge me to a duel or declare a clan war."

She won all three duels and one clan war.

She didn't give up a single non-human under her command.

+

[Guardian of the non-humans]

Rank: B

Effect: You easily gain the trust of non-human races.

Those suffering from racial discrimination are longing for your arrival. Break the chains of old slavery and liberate the kingdom's people. As long as you don't betray them first, the non-humans will follow you.

*However, humans despise you.

+

Initially skeptical, the non-humans gradually dispelled their doubts about Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong established a village in a vast forest near the capital, providing the former terrorists of [Red Nails] with shelter and jobs. With each crushing of a [Red Nails] hideout, her village prospered.

"....."

The Black Witch made her move.

"Yes, I knew you would eventually act."

Jaa Soo-Jeong lured the main force of [Red Nails] using the princess as bait. They were surrounded from all sides. The terrorists had nowhere to run, and even if they did, the future of the organization wasn't guaranteed.

The Black Witch gnashed her teeth.

"Impudent brat... Well done."

"You were quite something too. Incompetent old fool."

"You think killing me will destroy Red Nails? We are the blood that flows from wounds. As long as your kingdom exists, we will never perish."

"I'll try my best."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong swung her sword.

"I plan to create a new noble faction. It may take decades, but I will abolish slavery, gradually liberate serfs and farm servants. I already have the support of the Performance Faction and the Non-Human Faction. Simple, isn't it?"

"Ha."

The Black Witch bled black blood.

"You're just a naive child who knows nothing."

"Wow. What a baseless accusation! If I know nothing, then 99.99% of the world's population are monkeys."

"We don't seek retribution or compensation. No matter how peaceful an era you promise, the dead will not return."

Blood filled the witch's eyes.

"There are children who died from whipping and slashing. Slaves who broke their ribs and lungs from torture and drowned in their own blood. You may not know, but we remember. Mad dog of the capital! If you can't bring back the dead, everything you say is just bullshit, just like a dog's barking!"

"....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong hesitated.

Her violet eyes looked down.

Under her pressed sword, the Black Witch's heart was pierced, bleeding out.

"You don't seek compensation...?"

It was a fresh shock for someone like Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"I can abolish slavery? It will take some time, but I can also resolve the discrimination between humans and non-humans. I'm capable enough for that. Isn't that the future you desire? Are you saying it doesn't matter?"

"We never cared about the future from the start."

The Black Witch launched her final magical counterattack. As soon as magic was detected, Jaa Soo-Jeong twisted the sword's tip. Crunch! The heart was shattered again. The Black Witch coughed up blood.

"Die."

"....."

"All of you, just die."

Jaa Soo-Jeong felt truth in the witch's curse.

"Indeed."

And she realized.

"I'm utterly incapable regarding deaths that have already occurred."

For the first time since the day she killed her father, Jaa Soo-Jeong felt helpless.

"I can do something for those still alive. The Duke of Apathetic Leisure treasures me, and the princess cherishes me too. But... Yes, I can't resolve the unhappiness of those already dead. I hadn't thought of that."

"....."

"I'm still incompetent."

The Black Witch looked up at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"What should I do, leader of Red Nails?"

"Do what..."

"How can I take responsibility for those already dead? How can I comfort those who live for the dead?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong's eyes were transparent.

Endless.

In her dying moments, the leader of Red Nails realized something.

"Don't you know?"

"....."

"You don't know."

Of course, Jaa Soo-Jeong nodded.

"That's why you went around killing the wrong people."

"You..."

"Murder is the ultimate incompetence. Killing because you can't persuade, killing because you can't convert, killing because you can't control. Just like I killed my father, who imprisoned me."

Jaa Soo-Jeong's expressionless face was reflected in the witch's eyes.

"I couldn't change my father even after 12 years of trying."

Gone was the girl who sought love from the duke and gave love to the princess. Not a trace remained. Only a beast eternally moaning in agony.

"How boring."

Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head.

"Black Witch, if you don't know how to care for the dead, might there be someone else who does? Do you know such a person?"

"Such a human... couldn't possibly exist..."

"Indeed. There might not be among humans."

Jaa Soo-Jeong nodded.

"Perhaps among the dragons, someone knows."

In her final breath, the leader of Red Nails came to know.

"Thank you, Black Witch. Thanks to you, I realized my incompetence today."

The Viscount, seemingly broken in some fatal way, bowed politely.

"Sadly, I can't resolve this incompetence for a while. Most Dragon Emperors live outside the kingdom. Hmm. Yes. I must learn the Dragon Tongue first."

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled brightly.

"Just wait a little. I'll first repay the Black Witch after learning how to care for the deceased."

"Monster..."

"Farewell."

Jaa Soo-Jeong ended the witch's life.

"Awaken to a happy spring waiting for you."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong instantly became a hero.

All but one of Red Nails' leaders surrendered to her. Those tired of terrorism retreated to her forest village, while those still thirsty for blood became her soldiers. The kingdom was falling apart. Even without the conflict between humans and non-humans, battlefields soaked in blood were everywhere.

Jaa Soo-Jeong collected the kingdom's poisons.

Known as 'Duke of Apathetic Leisure's Pet,' 'The Cruel Princess' Master,' 'The Hunter of the Black Witch,' 'The Successor of Red Nails,' her titles were too illustrious to be dismissed as mere luck for her young age.

But compared to the names she would acquire, they were modest.

"Hello, Golden Dragon."

A year after the witch hunt.

"Nice to meet you. I'm Jaa Soo-Jeong, head of the Amethyst Viscount House."

She bowed gracefully.

Behind her stood numerous warriors.

The 'poisons' she collected over the past year.

[Capital's Supreme Sword] Ultimate Sword Duke, [Capital Army Leader] Viscount Shark Teeth, [Executioner] Baron Yoo Ik-Mo, [Last Leader of Red Nails] Joo Tan-Ha, [Undying Phoenix of the Inner Palace] Princess Nan Rak-Je, [Flower of Viscount Amethyst] Viscount Sim An-Chal...

Those who once dreamed, desired, hastened, welcomed, or ignored the kingdom's downfall. A formidable force that could overturn the kingdom stood behind Jaa Soo-Jeong. Their swords were stained with blood - blood of soldiers who leaped to protect the dragon.

"Though it might be rude to ask upon our first meeting."

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled brightly.

"Do you happen to know how to care for those who've already died?"

That day.

Jaa Soo-Jeong captured a dragon that lived for thousands of years.

[Act 2.]

[Dragon Emperor Hunt.]

Chapter 213: That God's Possession (3)

---

The Golden Dragon lived in a colossal tower.

Known as the Sky-Piercing Spear for its height, and the Golden Heaven Tower due to its golden pavilions. Its oldest name was the Yellow Spring Tower, for it overlooked Nirvana from the earth.

Seven thousand years had passed since the Golden Dragon built the tower. Through seven overlapping millennia, the gold remained brilliant. In the ancient past and even now, the Yellow Spring Tower stood sacred, like a lifeline from heaven.

In the southeast of the kingdom, the tower was visible from everywhere. It had been there long before the kingdom was founded. Its mere existence became a faith. People revered the mysteries of the world.

Even after seven thousand years, the pavilion in the sky remained unchanged.

“I decree a hunt.”

Yet, humans had changed.

“All nobles, hear this.”

The humans, once slaves to dragons, had now established their own nation.

“Organize a hunting party. Lords, send your soldiers. This is a royal command.”

The dragons had thought of humans as foolish and weak, their short lives making it hard to maintain continuity in their nation.

Humans might have been slow, but they were not foolish enough to forget who once enslaved them. The kingdom made it a national policy to eradicate all dragon territories from the surface.

“The military quota for each title is as follows: Dukes, a thousand. Viscounts, two hundred. Barons, fifty. Honorary Viscounts...”

Hundreds of thousands of troops gathered.

Yet, the hunts failed solely due to the Golden Dragon's powers.

Every dragon is born with a unique power. The Golden Dragon's power was [Instinct]. It unleashed human greed in its rawest form.

Brave warriors entering the Golden Dragon's domain were consumed by murderous rage. Innocent soldiers were swallowed by lust. Adventurers, once calling each other brothers, fractured over loot. The 1st, 2nd, 3rd hunting decrees all ended in the kingdom's army retreating in disarray.

It had always been so, and it was expected to be the same this time.

"....."

The Golden Dragon gazed at the girl before it.

Was her name Jaa Soo-Jeong?

She resembled a flower bud about to bloom, with a faint toxic fragrance seeping through its petals, which the dragon could sense.

“Why do you remain sane?”

“It’s simple. I already live according to my instincts.”

Said the flower-like girl, adeptly speaking in the dragon's tongue.

“I’ve taken what I wanted, done as I wished, and killed for my survival. If following one's instincts makes one a madman, then I’ve been mad for a long time. Golden Dragon Emperor, you cannot turn a madman sane again, especially one who’s already mad.”

“There’s sense in what you say.”

The Golden Dragon looked over the humans behind the girl. Dozens stood silently while Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke.

“However, that’s only your story. Why then do they too remain sane?”

“Hmm, that is strange, isn’t it? Why is that?”

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled.

“Why don’t you try to guess, Golden Dragon Emperor?”

"....."

The dragon looked at the humans again.

There was nothing wrong with its power. The humans were panting heavily, fists clenched as if they wanted to kill and ravish someone at any moment. Their faces red with desire. They were silent, yet their bodies swirled with passion.

One commonality stood out.

An emotion stronger than lust or bloodlust governed them.

The Dragon Emperor, adept at reading emotions, quickly identified it.

“Indeed.”

It was [Fear].

“They are all afraid of being hated by you.”

“Yes.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong’s smile bloomed.

“I am loved, after all.”

The Golden Dragon understood the truth and shuddered.

These humans were boiling with lust and bloodlust, yet the fear of [disappointing Jaa Soo-Jeong] and the possibility of being hated by her suppressed all other emotions.

Even the fear of death.

The dragon had to ask.

“Love?”

This?

“Yes.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong affirmed.

“People often say they love themselves. That they love themselves the most, as if it’s obvious. What kind of love is that?”

Jaa Soo-Jeong hummed, her voice weaving a melody.

“Very few truly love themselves to the point of being unbearable. It’s rare. When people say they love themselves, it means [I don’t want to lose]. Not wanting to lose this life, this moment, this existence.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong slowly extended her left hand.

“Then, fearing to lose me is also a form of love, isn’t it?”

"....."

“Ultimate Sword Duke?”

Upon her call, a duke approached and knelt, kissing her fingertips.

The Duke, an Ascendant over two thousand years old, was undoubtedly the kingdom’s strongest swordsman. Even then, it seemed perfectly natural for such a duke to kneel before her.

“Rather than losing me, they would sacrifice their own lives. To them, I have become such a being.”

“The Netherworld Tower, once deemed impregnable, was conquered by love. How typical yet intriguing. What do you think? Isn’t it amusing, Dragon Emperor?”

In that moment, the Golden Dragon realized who was the stronger one and who the weaker.

“.....I want to live.”

The Dragon Emperor trembled.

“Spare me. ....Please.”

The dragon had assumed a human form. Atop the pavilion was a garden, and in its center, a fountain. Made of gold, the Dragon Emperor pleaded at the fountain, its trembling creating ripples on the water's surface.

“Of course.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong stroked the dragon's chin.

“I will save you. Such a beautiful being you are.”

“Please.....”

“However, you haven't answered my question yet. The method to care for those already dead. Do you know it, Golden Dragon Emperor?”

“I don’t know. But, I know others who might. They are Dragon Emperors too. I will give you their names and locations. So...”

“Yes.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong’s touch was gentle.

Understanding everything.

“There have been three hunts to conquer this place. The most recent was 20 years ago, with about 100,000 casualties. Including the uncounted, nearly 200,000. The royal family and nobles will swarm like bees to strike your neck.”

"....."

“Don’t worry. I will handle it.”

Splash. The water in the fountain distorted.

The Golden Dragon's hair spread and fluttered on the water's surface.

“There’s just one condition.”

“What is it.....?”

“Love me.”

A drop of water fell somewhere.

+

[The Golden Dragon's Gaze]

Rank: EX

Effect: Those within the skill's range become engulfed in their instincts. Logic paralyzes and reason dulls. Suppressed desires, needs, and greed are liberated.

This skill reveals the ‘essence’ of its targets. It can be applied not only to living beings but also to objects. If desired, you can perceive the essence of all things. You will view the world from an omniscient perspective.

*However, you are also included in the skill's range.

+

The Golden Dragon became a pet of Jaa Soo-Jeong.

“There’s a dragon called the Earth Bone Dragon beyond the mountain range in the desert.”

For the first time in its life, loving a partner, the dragon dedicated everything to her.

The Golden Dragon used its power for Jaa Soo-Jeong. It recited knowledge and pledged its future life for her. Aware of the doom that befalls a dragon in love with a human, yet its knowledge weighed less than her lover's blinking eyelids.

“The Earth Bone Dragon?”

“Yes. It possesses the power of immortality. Everything it touches turns to sand, and every life it grasps gains eternal life. A bit unorthodox, but...”

“Hmm.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed.

“That’s interesting.”

The dragon felt happy.

+

[Earth Bone Dragon's Skull]

Rank: SSS+

Effect: Stores the memories of the living. Stored memories are kept in a 'box.' This box can only be destroyed by the owner of this skill.

As long as the box remains intact, you can repeatedly produce bodies of individuals inheriting the same memories. The bodies can roam the world, accumulating new experiences, which can then be 'updated' into the box. Of course, only if you permit it!

Even if the body of the individual is destroyed, the box remains unharmed. Bestow the privilege of immortality on those around you.

*However, memories of a destroyed body cannot be updated into the box.

+

The Earth Bone Dragon soon became Jaa Soo-Jeong's pet.

“Perhaps the materials are still a bit lacking.”

The Golden Dragon and Earth Bone Dragon nuzzled against Jaa Soo-Jeong's lap. Jaa Soo-Jeong slowly stroked the golden hair of the Golden Dragon and the black hair of the Earth Bone Dragon. Each touch on their foreheads made the dragons tremble.

“I’ve gained the [Eyes] that see everything. I’ve also acquired the [Head] that stores memories. But it’s still insufficient to encompass even those who have already died. Is there no better method?”

“At the end of the great river.....”

The Golden Dragon opened its lips.

A sweet breath flowed out.

“There’s a child called the Ice River Dragon. Where it lives, harsh cold storms rage. The flowing wind turns to snow, and the surging sea to ice.”

“Interesting. Tell me more.”

“The Ice River Dragon freezes people it fancies in a special way... into ice pillars. These pillars can't be destroyed or melted by anyone except the Ice River Dragon. Amazingly, when the Ice River Dragon melts the ice pillar, the person trapped inside comes back to life as if they had just blinked their eyes.....”

“So?”

“The Ice River Dragon has the power to stop time.”

The Golden Dragon rested its head on Jaa Soo-Jeong's lap and looked up at its half-owner.

“If it can stop, it can accelerate. If it can accelerate, it can be controlled. Isn't that right.....?”

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled sweetly.

“How adorable.”

The dragon felt even happier.

+

[Ice River Dragon's Breath]

Rank: EX

Effect: You can control the time of a chosen person. You can revert them to the past or stop them in the present. You can move them to any moment in the timeline you've observed.

*However, you cannot move them to a time you have not personally observed.

+

The Ice River Dragon became Jaa Soo-Jeong's pet.

“Ah.”

All the materials were finally gathered.

At last, Jaa Soo-Jeong exhaled in relief.

“Nice.”

The dragons were happy under her breath.

“I’m happy too.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong herself was also happy.

Perhaps.

[Act 3.]

[Kingdom Hunt.]

At this point,

There was no political power that could stop Jaa Soo-Jeong.

There were six Dukes in the kingdom, each leading six factions. The Performance Faction following the Apathetic Leisure Duke. The Pioneering Faction following the Absolute Sword Duke. The Religious Faction following the All Gods Duke. The Inner Capital Faction following the Inner Duke. The Medical Stone* Faction following the Steadfast Duke.

*Refers to chinese needle medicines.

All six Dukes were 'loved' by Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Despite the unprecedented situation of a Viscount owning dragons, the nobles couldn't openly oppose her.

If the royal family had deemed Jaa Soo-Jeong dangerous, there might have been a chance. After all, who else but the royal family could restrain a rampant noble?

The current King was known as the Sun King.

Having reigned for over 90 years, he hadn't attended a single noble council in the last 60 years. During a rebellion 60 years ago, the Sun King executed his own daughter.

In a kingdom where kinship had to be killed to exist, the Sun King found no value.

Where there was no value, he saw no reason for his existence.

The King secluded himself.

In the 60 years of his seclusion, the kingdom decayed.

“Your Majesty.”

The fragrance of petals is strongest when they wither.

“Please heed my request.”

“Do you regret killing your daughter?”

“Revolts happened because I ruled the kingdom. No matter the policy or politics, somewhere in this land, someone inevitably becomes a sacrifice. The more politics are exercised, the more sacrifices are made. It’s the same for anyone, and it was the same for me. So, wouldn’t it be better to do nothing?”

“Let the wise exercise their wisdom. Let those who desire power obtain it. Your Majesty only needs to exist here. If that’s the only royal path you can take.....”

Jaa Soo-Jeong sat at the base of the throne.

Reaching out, she gently caressed the cheek of the King, who hadn't shown any expression for the last 60 years.

“Leave everything to me.”

The aroma of peaches filled the audience chamber.

“I quelled the Red Nail's riot, which no one could suppress. I stopped the Assembly, which no one could. I crushed the rebellion led by the retreating royals in the southeast. I revived the abolished Royal Army, toppled the Golden Dragon threatening the southern kingdom, collected the Earth Bone Dragon eroding the great desert's territory, and captured the Ice River Dragon freezing the eastern waterways. The Apathetic Leisure Duke, Absolute Sword Duke, All Gods Duke, Inner Duke, and Steadfast Duke, once decaying, now have beating hearts again thanks to me. Look, I've accomplished tasks no one else could.”

“I am competent.”

“I am the most competent.”

"....."

"So, Your Majesty."

The whisper of the era's genius was sweeter than the praises of a thousand flatterers.

"Entrust it to me."

Her violet eyes half-opened.

"Afraid of misgoverning? Misgovern, and I will correct it. Afraid of making mistakes? Make them, and I will reverse them. Afraid of going mad? It's okay. Go mad."

"Just lose yourself to me."

For the first time in 60 years, the stone statue spoke.

"Why."

The once-praised Sun King of the kingdom was puzzled.

“If you are so competent, the kingdom is useless to you. If you can give everything to the kingdom, the kingdom can give nothing to you. Why do you seek my favor? I can give you nothing.”

“With all due respect, Your Majesty, you are under a misconception.”

“What is it?”

“I am in audience with Your Majesty.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong gently rose from her kneeling position.

Her gaze met the monarch's.

“What I desire is Your Majesty. Just as you have always dreamed of an infinitely competent being, I long for Your Majesty.”

"....."

"Become my Dark Monarch."

Their breaths intertwined.

"I will make you the Sage of the Era."

The statue crumbled under the peach scent, and the sun was mesmerized by the petals.

In the midst of crumbling and bewitchment, the King asked one last question.

".....I've already committed great sins. Too many have died. I don't deserve to live as a sage, so should I remain a dark monarch and atone in history? Just as the dead can't be resurrected, the spilt sins cannot be reversed. My death and a new ruler would be better for you."

"Ah."

It was the same curse once spilled by the witch.

Back then, Jaa Soo-Jeong had no answer.

“It’s okay, Your Majesty.”

Now, it was different.

“I can now care for those who have died.”

She had become a bit more competent.

“Not just for the dead, but for all beings.”

“How.....”

“Entrust everything to me.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled coquettishly.

“Just love me.”

That December.

Jaa Soo-Jeong was bestowed the title of Duke.

The seventh Duke in the kingdom's history and the youngest ever awarded.

The Kaleidoscope Duke.

In the kingdom, it was customary to abbreviate a Duke's title to two characters**. The Ultimate Sword Duke was the Absolute Sword Duke, and the Duke Min Shik was the Apathetic Leisure Duke. Similarly, the Kaleidoscope Duke was often called by the two characters created by the people, rather than the three bestowed by the King.

**They abbreviate the 3 letter Korean titles to 2 letter Korean titles.

The Swaying Duke.

A Duke who tilted the nation.

Chapter 214:

Someone's Master (1)

---

My master.

My heart. My blood.

My everything in this world.

---

Drip-

Somewhere, the sound of water dropping could be heard.

As the droplets fell, it was as if they weren't plunging to the earth but leaping into eternity. Drip. Drop. During the brief moments when the sound of water echoed, gravity seemed to evaporate, and only time flowed languidly.

"....."

I suddenly raised my head. It was only when I did that I realized I had been bowing my head all this time.

Since when had I been doing so?

What time is it now?

I'm not sure.

[Warning.]

[The target's ego is unstable.]

"Ugh."

I reflexively pressed my temples.

My head throbbed painfully.

The sensation of undigested vomit floating in my cerebrospinal fluid.

"Baron Gu Won-Ha?"

Just then, a soft voice was heard.

"Are... are you alright?"

Struggling, I opened my eyes and looked to the side.

A child with rabbit-like white hair was looking at me with worried eyes.

I should not know this person, yet why?

My lips easily pronounced her title.

"Yes. I am alright..... Your Grace, the Marquis."

Marquis Baek Seol-To.

Merely sixteen years old this year.

Due to the sudden death of the previous Marquis, the mantle of responsibility fell on her too-young shoulders. According to the stories circulating within the family, there was even talk of her being a disgrace at one point.

If it wasn't for the care of the Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong, she might have been assassinated unnoticed...

[Warning.]

[The target's ego is unstable.]

[Trauma re-enactment will continue.]

Ziiiing-.

‘Ugh!’

Once again, my head felt like it was splitting apart.

I hastily raised my magical power. Crushing and chewing the bitter taste in my mouth, I recited a poetic phrase inside.

"Stability---together with---alleviation."

One phrase to stabilize the mind. Another to alleviate pain. And a connecting word. Upon activating a three-phrase magic spell, my headache slowly subsided.

‘Phew.’

I let out a sigh of relief.

There was no time to compose a sophisticated poem, so I hastily cobbled together some words, but fortunately, it was effective. At times like this, I truly feel like one of the top twelve mages in the kingdom.

"Are you really alright? Your face is very pale."

".....There is nothing wrong with me. Thank you for your concern."

"Really? You're sure you're not feeling uncomfortable anywhere?"

Marquis Baek Seol-To checked on my condition several times. Even as I reassured her, I coldly diagnosed any signs of abnormality in my head.

‘There's a problem recalling memories.’

The headache was gone. But there was a peculiar discomfort in my memory.

‘Could it be psychic magic?’

It's an unlikely possibility.

Magic that affects the minds of others is almost non-existent in the history of the kingdom.

Moreover, this place is the Grand Council Hall of the Platinum Tower.

A place where all the nobles of the kingdom gather for heated discussions.

The guards mobilized to protect the council were dazzling just to look at. The royal knights formed a formation so tight not even an ant could get in. If someone were to attempt any foolish acts here, even if they were the Dragon Emperor or Ashin, they would lose their heads.

‘Perhaps it's just fatigue.’

I activated a light spell.

If the problem is blurry memories, then I'll just revive them.

"Information---Baek Seol-To---restoration."

For some reason, the phenomenon of losing my memory felt familiar. It wasn't unfamiliar. I had even prepared a plan in anticipation of such situations.

My meticulous preparations surfaced before my eyes.

+

[Baek Seol-To]

Status: Noble. Marquis of the Capital.

Relation: Viscount's foster sister.

Danger Level: White.

Note: Head of the Rabbit Marquis Family. Lost her parents at a young age. Educated as an heir by her grandfather, Marquis Baek Mi-To.

Unlike her famous genius grandfather, Baek Seol-To was infamous for being a fool since her young lady days. At the age of 12 in winter, she whipped a child of a freeman to death. The reason was 'hating to see a peer crying happily with their family'.

It's presumed that her grandfather's education was quite strict. She was neither loved nor praised. Currently, she maintains a composed demeanor but craves the love and praise she missed from the Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong. She perceives the Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong as both a mother and a sister.

An ally.

No need to kill.

Strengths: [Self-awareness], [Strong ethics], [Connections], [Capital]

Weaknesses: [Freeman murder], [Child murder], [Guilt], [Helplessness], [Goodness], [Temporary regression to infancy], [Extremely low self-confidence]

Caution: Many nobles are living as dependents in the Marquis's house. Assassination is difficult.

+

"....."

As I was about to feel relieved after acknowledging the information.

I blinked, feeling an odd sensation.

‘Hmm.’

Indeed, something was off.

‘Did I have such an ability?’

Most likely, the information that appeared before me were notes I had recorded myself. Traces left by my past self. Looking at them should bring a sense of déjà vu like, [Ah, I wrote that], but.....

‘This is strange.’

Instead of déjà vu, the feeling of unfamiliarity only grew stronger.

Even as I thought about it at this moment, my mouth felt uncomfortable, as if there was a fishbone stuck between my teeth.

‘What's this?’

Wondering if I was under some mental distortion, I checked with magic, but as expected, there was nothing wrong... Wait a minute. Magic? Being one of the top twelve mages in the kingdom? Me? No. I don't use such vulgar language. I should speak more politely, befitting a noble.....

[Warning.]

[The target's ego is being eroded.]

.....That's right.

Why have I been using informal language until now?

Magic is the craft of refining language into objects. One must always be careful in handling language, at any time and place.

Even if it's just mumbling to oneself, always positioning oneself lower ensures not forgetting the awe of this world. I am certain I have walked the path of magic with such a mindset.

‘I must regain my composure.’

A thousand words accumulate to form a hundred habits.

A hundred habits accumulate to solidify into ten patterns of behavior.

And these ten patterns of behavior determine one's life.

As a mage serving the Viscount at close quarters, I must not take even a single word lightly.

"What's the matter? It's noisy."

While I was gathering my thoughts, another figure approached.

Marquis Baek Seol-To recognized her and bowed first.

"Ah. Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin..."

"You have arrived."

I too bowed my head.

"It's the last break time today. Wouldn't it be better to rest a bit more in the lounge?"

"Resting in the lounge isn't really resting. Even if I just sit there, other nobles from different factions keep glancing over."

Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin let out a wry smile.

"It feels like they can hardly contain their desire to lash out at us. I'd feel better if they just openly hurled insults... I should've stayed in the council room like the Marquis."

"Ah. So, the atmosphere is a bit...?"

"Mm."

"Are members of the Banseok faction giving you a hard time?"

"Banseok faction, Naekyung faction, Religious faction, it doesn't matter the faction. They all look at us as if we're criminals. Sad to say, it's not entirely wrong."

I quietly listened to the conversation between the Marquis and the Viscount.

Both of them are senior members of our Geoulyeop faction.

Especially Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin, who holds the position of chairperson. A crucial role within the faction. Consequently, the Viscount also receives a lot of favor from me.

.....

Hmm.

Undoubtedly a favored noble, it seems.

Yet, for some reason, I don't remember her.

Hesitantly, I cast an information spell.

+

[Chun Heuk-Shin]

Status: Noble. Viscount of Near Capital.

Relationship: Viscount's lover.

Danger Level: Blue.

Note: Head of the Black God Viscount Family. The family that rebelled 20 years ago. The rebellion was suppressed by the Leisurely Duke, sent from the capital. At that time, Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin was the only survivor of the family.

Due to this event, Chun Heuk-Shin lost all her family and retainers. Swore vengeance against the Leisurely Duke and the kingdom, showing no mercy.

Disappeared on her own, joining under the wing of the Black Witch, leader of the rebellion.

Received the teachings of the 'Ritual of Darkness' from the Black Witch. The exact method is unknown, but for this ritual, more than 300 people were devoured by Chun Heuk-Shin.

Just before the ritual's completion, she was captured alive by the Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Later, she fell to being a plaything for Leisurely Duke and Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong but regained her sanity after six months and was freed. However, her eating habits have not changed, and even now, the Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong occasionally provides her with 'feed.'

An ally.

Cannot be killed.

Strengths: [Genius], [Strong mental power], [Ascendant]

Weaknesses: [Descendant of rebels], [Cannibal], [Former criminal], [Music]

Caution: Has a highly competent assassin as a retainer.

+

"....."

Still feeling that odd sensation.

I understand the information, but it's as if I'm reading someone else's notes.

‘But why did I write something like [cannot be killed]?’

Similar phrases are also in Marquis Baek Seol-To's information. Hers says [no need to kill]. This makes it seem like I'm a madman deciding whether people can be killed or not.

I have a normal sense of ethics.

At least, that's how I perceive myself.

It's difficult to understand why such phrases were written.

"Of course, on a day like today, we can't just sit around lamenting."

Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin sighed and patted my shoulder.

Suddenly, an unpleasant emotion brushed through my mind.

‘How annoying. I wish she'd limit her familiarity. This person is always eager to show we're in the same boat. A murderer, no less. It's pitiful seeing someone who only feels alive when mingling with their kind. Well, if she wants to find her kind, she should start searching in hell after falling there. She clings to me because she doesn't want to fall into hell. Such a nuisance.’

.....

Huh?

What?

What was I just thinking?

“Hm? Baron Gu Won-Ha, you look unwell. Are you feeling sick?”

“Y-yes. You've been looking unwell since earlier. You should really rest in the lounge, Baron.”

“.....No.”

I barely managed to open my mouth. Words I hadn't even thought of flowed out on their own.

“We've already been given five breaks. Resting any more would be meaningless. The remaining issues are core to our faction, so I'd prefer to stay here as much as possible.”

“Indeed.....”

Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin seemed to understand me somehow.

“Today is indeed a historic day. The kingdom is welcoming a new duke for the first time in a thousand years. I too have mixed feelings.”

Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin turned her head.

Marquis Baek Seol-To and I naturally followed her gaze.

“---Amethyst, seems happy.”

In the center of the council hall.

There sat a blond noble.

No, it's more accurate to say 'reclined' rather than 'sat'. The noble was leaning her cheek on a throne with her buttocks barely touching the floor. And on the throne, the king smiled, stroking the noble's head.

To anyone watching, it was an image of a tyrant and her consort.

Showing off affection in the middle of the sacred council, conservative nobles might lament the downfall of the country.

Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin commented.

"Many nobles fled to the lounge, unable to bear watching that scene. I jokingly asked if they didn't find the loving sight pleasant, and they all turned serious. Such stuffy people."

Are you having similar thoughts to mine right now?

Thinking alike with a murderer... I should get my brain washed.

As I pondered how to cleanse my skull, I looked at the blond noble, the most precious person to me.

"Information---Amethyst---restoration."

Then words appeared before my eyes.

Compared to others, an exceedingly concise sentence.

Yet, the most accurate words were engraved in the air.

+

[Amethyst]

My master.

My heart.

My blood.

My everything in this world.

+

"....."

Eh?

‘My master isn't that person.’

At that moment, my mind cleared.

‘My heart's master is Raviel. What's all this?’

No, my mind became clear.

The fog in my mind vanished in an instant.

‘Who's Baek Seol-To? Who's Chun Heuk-Shin? Where is this place? What's with these honorifics? Mage? Gu Won-Ha? Baron? What's this, like some lord saying hello?’

I opened my eyes wide as if waking from a nightmare.

‘I'm Kim Gong-Ja. Kim Gong-Ja. The King of the City of Ascension. The Moon of the Ivansia Ducal Family, the Vice-Lord of the Demonic Cult, the Companion of the Earth Spirit Tribe!’

Finally, the voice of the Tower was heard.

[The target's ego is being restored.]

[The target's ego has remained intact.]

[Trauma re-enactment will continue!]

Chapter 215:

Someone's Master

(2)

---

"Ugh."

I clutched my forehead. Applying pressure with my fingers, I pressed against my temples. This eased the headache and my consciousness gradually sharpened.

‘That's right. I am currently within a [Trauma].’

This place is another world. No, rather, it's a play reassembled to mimic some world.

The actors are unaware that they are actors, and the props do not know they are just props, but everyone here is essentially a part-time worker hired for this play.

‘This is the [Trauma of Jaa Soo-Jeong].’

I had been observing Jaa Soo-Jeong's life for some time.

How talented she was born. How she broke through political offensives in unbelievable ways. How she befriended someone, how she gained power, and even how she eventually snatched the authority of the dragons....

‘The tower was built by the power of dragons.’

Now, I can say this with certainty.

‘It's not built by a single power. Powers handling [Essence], [Memory], [Time]. Maybe even more than that. Dragons of different kinds. A comprehensive system formed by overlapping numerous dragons' powers.’

Thump.

A heart, not mine, beat in rhythm with me.

‘I am the first person to unravel the structure of the tower!’

Responding to my excitement, even within this Trauma, the tower's voice gladly acknowledged my discovery.

[Congratulations. You are the first to discover the structure of the tower!]

[If you accurately describe the powers (skills) sustaining the tower's structure, an additional bonus will be awarded.]

[Can you specify the four fundamental skills that make up the tower?]

I wiped the sweat from my forehead.

‘Jaa Soo-Jeong captured three dragons.’

Recalling the scenes I witnessed, I murmured in my mind.

‘One of them is the Earth Bone Dragon. A Dragon Emperor with the power to [store memories]. When someone approaches the Earth Bone Dragon, their memory is stored in a box.’

I thought about the power of the Earth Bone Dragon.

‘And the [size] of this box is not fixed.’

+

[Earth Bone Dragon's Skull]

Rank: SSS+

Effect: Stores the memories of the living. Stored memories are kept in a 'box.' This box can only be destroyed by the owner of this skill.

As long as the box remains intact, you can repeatedly produce bodies of individuals inheriting the same memories. The bodies can roam the world, accumulating new experiences, which can then be 'updated' into the box. Of course, only if you permit it!

Even if the body of the individual is destroyed, the box remains unharmed. Bestow the privilege of immortality on those around you.

*However, memories of a destroyed body cannot be updated into the box.

+

I thought.

‘People living outside can enter the tower at any time.’

In contrast, those who enter the tower leave everything behind, entering with nothing but their physical bodies.

Like me. Like Marcus Callenbury. Like the Director.

Like all other people.

‘The only thing you can bring into the tower is [yourself].’

Meaning.

‘What if the tower is one giant box?’

I snapped my fingers.

‘And we are the contents inside it?’

At the moment of entering the tower, [my memories] are stored in [the giant box called the tower]. And, leaving their memories in the tower’s care, they wander around the world inside the tower.

‘This way, the tower completely seizes all the information of everyone who enters.’

The more I thought, the more certain I became.

‘This explains why I could regress 4000 days!’

Every time I go back a day, the tower I belong to is restored to a [data restoration point] of that day. Repeating this 4000 times, the tower regressed to a data restoration point 4000 days in the past.

However, during this process, due to the skill, only my data was 'updated' in the tower.

-Implement data restoration to a point 4000 days in the past.

-(Due to the skill) Maintain continuity for the character Kim Gong-Ja.

That's why I was able to regress without losing my memories.

'Okay. Then the tower is one giant memory box. Our memories are not in our brains, but in the tower. This place is a grand library that stores memories! No, a grand library of souls. This is one of my deductions about the tower's identity. How about that!'

The tower's voice promptly responded.

[Correct.]

[The tower acknowledges your breakthrough of the first gate.]

[The box of the Earth Bone Dragon forms the periphery of the tower.]

Okay.

‘Moving between worlds must follow a similar principle.’

I moved between the world of [Tales of Sormewin Academy] and [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon].

That movement, strictly speaking, is closer to 'transmission'.

‘The challenging part is, how did [Tales of Sormewin Academy] and [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon], like us, get incorporated into the tower?’

I furrowed my brow in deep thought.

Yet, I couldn't imagine it.

‘Really, how can a world be moved into the tower? Unless it's recreated.’

I frowned.

‘Recreated?’

My heart throbbed.

‘That’s right. Is there a need to physically shove the entire world into the tower? Isn’t it enough to implement a world exactly like [The Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] within the tower? After all, my memories are also recorded in the tower. Same goes for the world; just record its time in the tower.’

That could be possible.

It was far easier to imagine than physically shoving a world into the tower.

‘But...’

There are still two unresolved issues.

First, the box of the Earth Bone Dragon [stores memories of the living]. That's how the skill is described. Whether a world is alive or dead is another matter, but it's a bit much to say a world itself is a [living being]. It's unlikely that a world would decide on its own to enter the tower.

Second, not to mention--- the personality of the tower's owner.

"....."

The Tower Master turned her head to look at me, her eyes glowing with youthful mischief,

Violet pupils.

A color too mundane to reflect anything. When facing her, one must look beyond the color of her eyes, stripping away the faint white hue, barely reaching her gem-like pupils.

Her eyes felt like a snake opening its maw to swallow mine whole. Impossible. The distance between our seats and the throne was quite far. Yet, despite that, it felt as if Jaa Soo-Jeong was looking at me from just in front of my nose.

“There’s an interesting smell coming from over here.”

From a distance, Jaa Soo-Jeong pursed her lips. She opens them. Pronounces. But her words seem to approach right in front of my nose and mess with my ears.

‘Aura sound.’

I gulped down my saliva. How did she figure out that I set my consciousness time to 0.1x? Jaa Soo-Jeong precisely matched her aura to my speed. The original owner of this body must have been an archmage genius. But Jaa Soo-Jeong was a monster.

“What interesting thing are you planning to show me, my second advisor? My advisor from behind the scenes? Advisor Gu Won-Ha is so interesting that he comforts my boring life with his mere presence, one of the few nectar-like existences for me. Is there something particularly entertaining?”

“.....I was contemplating the structure of the tower, Viscount.”

[The target's ego is antagonized.]

[Continuing the trauma re-enactment!]

I tried to speak in the manner of a noble, but my lips and tongue moved on their own. I became a genteel noble, aligning my hands neatly in front of me.

“The structure of the tower?”

From a distance, still flaunting affection with His Majesty, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head.

“Are you talking about the structure of the Platinum Tower? Ah, well. It's certainly an interesting structure. It was a building used by the dark lord even before the kingdom was founded, and because of that, it was designed to allow dragons to pass through easily, with its tall and wide structure....”

“It's not this tower.”

“Hmm? Then what? The Tower of Petition? Ah, the Netherworld Tower that I recently conquered?”

“I was thinking about the structure of the [tower] you will establish, Viscount.”

"....."

At that moment, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong stood up from below the throne.

“Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong?”

The King, seated on the throne, seemed slightly flustered as he looked up at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

“I apologize, Your Majesty. I have something to discuss with my faction ally...”

“Hmm. Understood. Take your time.”

“Your grace is immense. For every second I am not with Your Majesty, I will extend it to ten seconds in my heart, so when I return, my heart will already be intensely yearning for Your Majesty.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong turned around.

Step.

Her attire was slit on both sides, with a long skirt trailing behind her, leaving a trace of fabric wherever she passed. It was a dress worn with the sole purpose of symbolizing [the king's concubine], not just a noble or a future duke. With the power and connections she had, she could demand such attire even in this sacred council chamber.

“Now, Advisor Gu Won-Ha.”

The noble with the strongest power in this council chamber filled with all the nobles.

She was my master, and I was her vassal.

While other nobles called me by the kingdom's official title of [Baron], only Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong called me [Advisor], a position within the family.

“If my ears did not sprout skewers, I am sure I just absurdly heard the word [tower]. Ah. Marquis Baek Seol-To and Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin, could you please step aside for a moment?”

“Ah, yes. Viscount...”

“Understood, Master.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong bent down and kissed Marquis Baek Seol-To on the forehead. Her face reddened with happiness as she laughed and quickly left the seat.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong extended her left hand to Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin. She knelt down as if it was natural, kissing and licking her fingers, then left the seat with an indifferent expression of satisfaction.

"....."

“She’s adorable, isn’t she?”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong covered her mouth with her sleeve and chuckled softly.

“So, about the tower. Advisor. As far as I remember, I have never discussed the concept of the tower with you. I haven’t spoken to anyone about it. So, I am a little confused right now. Don’t tell me, do you have the ability to foresee?”

“.....No, Viscount. I do not have the power of foresight.”

“That’s expected. There’s only one person in the kingdom who can see the future, the God’s Eye Prophet, who is practicing celibacy in the desert. That guy, even though he is a man, why is he so obsessed with protecting his virginity? [If I lose my virginity, the world will end], he said with such a serious face last time. Does it make sense, Advisor? You’re just trying to get rid of me with lies, right?”

“.....”

I listened attentively to the Viscount's words, my hands neatly aligned.

The Viscount naturally talks a lot, splitting a conversation into two, a hundred, a thousand branches once she starts. The best thing to do in such cases is just to wait for her to come back to the point herself... which the owner of this body knew.

“Ah. Anyway, about the tower.”

Just like now.

“If it’s not foresight, then mind reading? That would be harder than foresight. You know, Advisor, my mind is currently protected by at least four layers of barriers. The place where I am conceptualizing the tower is within the first layer, my innermost part. Even Jai would not know it.”

Jai is the real name of the Boundary Duke.

Only one person in this kingdom could casually call the Boundary Duke by his real name, the Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong standing before me. She’s also the only one who didn’t lose her head for saying his name.

The Boundary Duke has the ability to read people's minds, so it was natural for her to suspect [how could you know the plans in my innermost heart, which even the Boundary Duke couldn’t read?].

“Viscount.”

“Yes, my Advisor. My Advisor, though always the second, hoping to someday hit the predecessor from behind and become the sole advisor.”

“What about reversing our thoughts completely?”

“Oh? The complete opposite?”

“I didn’t foresee the tower [in advance], Viscount. The tower is already completed, and according to the logic of that tower, we are [belatedly] experiencing this situation now.”

"....."

Her violet pupils widened significantly.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong looked around left and right, then tapped her lips with her left index and middle finger.

“Wow.”

It took just that long for Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong to organize her thoughts.

“That’s awesome.”

"....."

“Let's verify, Advisor. Are you from the future? In other words, did you come from a future where I have already built the tower and am successfully managing it?”

“That's correct.”

“But that's impossible. Even if the tower is built, you would never know about the [tower]. In this world, the only people who know about the tower's existence are the Golden Dragon, Earth Bone Dragon, Ice River Dragon, Viscount Sim An-Chal, and lastly, the God's Eye Prophet. No one else could possibly know. ....Hmm?”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong stroked her chin.

“Indeed.”

And she smiled slightly.

“You are not Advisor Gu Won-Ha, are you?”

"....."

"You must be someone else possessing Advisor Gu Won-Ha's body. Hehe. Hmm. Indeed, such things do happen. Interesting."

".....Yes. I am not this person. I am Kim Gong-Ja."

"Not from this world, right? I could bet an arm and a leg on that."

"Yes. Correct. I am... a hunter from a tower named City of Ascension."

"Hunter? Ah, so they decided to go with that name. City of Ascension. Does it have a name in the outside world too?"

"Well. Um. I've heard some constellation call it the Pinnacle World, but...."

"....."

Hearing the term Pinnacle World, her purple eyes narrowed strangely.

“It seems it’s not entirely a coincidence.”

“Huh?”

“It’s nothing. Ah, I said it’s nothing, but I’m just trying to flip your insides out of sheer curiosity. This makes your curiosity seize both ventricles of your heart, causing it to flutter, right? The heart is healthiest when it flutters. I’ve just gifted you health, so you should be thankful to me.”

"....."

I understood.

This person talks a lot.

Not just a lot, but really scratches at one's nature.

“So, how did a human from inside the tower come to such a past? It’s so fascinating, almost unbelievable for me.”

“I didn’t come from the future, Viscount.”

“Meow?”

New information. The tower owner sometimes mimics a cat's meow.

Such a useless piece of information.

“This isn’t the world of the Viscount. Nor is it my world.”

“Then what is it?”

“This place is just a reenacted dream. Recreated memories. Viscount. Right now, I am in your trauma.”

"....."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong blinked.

“How?”

“I have a skill. Whenever someone kills me, I can glimpse into the trauma of the person who killed me. That's the kind of skill it is.”

“That sounds interesting. If someone had proposed creating such a skill, I would have readily welcomed it with open arms. But, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja. Saying this place is my trauma means [I killed Mr. Kim Gong-Ja], doesn't it?”

Slowly.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's head tilted to the left.

“That's almost impossible. Unless Mr. Kim Gong-Ja is a world germ... an evil deity among otherworldly evil deities, I have no intention of killing anyone from another world. Rather, if other people kill me, I die.”

“The Pinnacle World.”

I mentioned the world where the Director lived, where Kim Yul lived, where I lived, and where a middle schooler named Jaa Soo-Jeong lived.

“There, someone just like the Viscount existed.”

"....."

“I asked that person to kill me. Not for any other reason, Viscount. But to meet you.”

Silence.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong stared at me intently. Complete expressionlessness was there. She let out a “Hmmm,” let her breath flutter, and finally nodded, “Indeed.”

“That’s interesting.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong reached out and gently touched my cheek.

“Quite. Very interesting.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled brightly.

“How you managed to reach here, threading through a string of nearly impossible coincidences and errors, turning them into a possibility. No. Rather, how you summoned me to this place, you probably can’t quite grasp the reality of it. But, I commend you, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja. You have achieved a miracle.”

"....."

“Yes. So today is my [trauma]. Well, it’s plausible enough.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's breath came closer to my face.

“So?”

"....."

“Hero who has broken through the miracle, what do you wish to do here?”

“I... want to know what kind of person you are.”

I swallowed.

“The person who built the tower... I want to know what kind of person you are, who decided to build the tower. That’s why I came here.”

“Haha.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's eyes half-closed.

“How adorable.”

Then she slowly released my cheek.

“Alright. Feel free to observe what kind of person I am until you’re satisfied. The person you’re possessing is Baron Gu Won-Ha, my advisor. Since it’s the role of Advisor Gu Won-Ha to follow me anywhere and everywhere, there’ll be no suspicion for you to continue being with me.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong turned to look at me.

“Now, follow me, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja.”

And she extended her hand.

“I’ll introduce you to my world.”

Chapter 216:

Someone's Master

(3)

---

This place is where the trauma is reenacted.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong, walking in front of me, is, so to speak, no different from a character appearing in a dream. I've been through quite a few nightmares, but Jaa Soo-Jeong is the first to be [aware] that she's a character within a trauma.

“Do you feel strange or anything?”

“Huh?”

“Well, why. You don't really exist, right? This is the trauma created by my skill...”

“Not particularly? If there's any strangeness I'm feeling right now, it's that you, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, are using the face of Advisor Gu Won-Ha and speaking with her voice, but in your own manner of speaking. It's really weird."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong chuckled.

"Are you a man or a woman, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja? Considering the naming conventions of the Pinnacle World, I'd guess you're a man."

"Yes, I am a man."

"Figured as much. Then, I'll gift you a mirror."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong pulled out a small hand mirror from her pocket and reflected my face in it.

The mirror showed the face of the person I was possessing, namely Baron Gu Won-Ha.

"How is it?"

"....."

“Pretty, right? I know. Of course, it is. After all, she is my advisor.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed teasingly.

However, the face of Baron Gu Won-Ha was no mere joke.

‘Beautiful.’

Her jet-black hair fell short to her shoulders. Even when light shone on it, her hair didn’t gleam or glisten with oil. It was just black. As if refusing to allow any light to slip through, Baron Gu Won-Ha’s bob cut glistened in a stark black color.

“Wow... um, ugh.”

In stark contrast to her black hair, her skin was pale white. People often say someone has a blank face, but her entire body seemed like a white sheet waxed over. She was a person made of only two colors: black and white.

“Fascinating...”

“How does it feel, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, to have turned from a man to a woman? Is your heart racing? I was hoping you’d show me that cliché scene here, where you touch your chest with both hands and exclaim, ‘I’ve really become a girl!’ in surprise.”

“Why did I have to possess this body...?”

I cast a spell of information on myself.

Soon, a description of Baron Gu Won-Ha followed.

+

[Gu Won-Ha]

Status: Noble. Honorary Viscount.

Relationship: Advisor to the Viscount.

Danger: Black

Note: Head of the Gu Won family. During her ladyship, her uncle, the former family head, was implicated in the Black-White Plant War and deposed. Her father was associated with heretical sects and was purged along with them. All senior members of the family died. Gu Won-Ha reluctantly took over as head of the family.

It was a time of rampant rebellion and purges.

During this period, Marquis Si Bang-Pae, a close friend, approached her. They asked her to take care of a baby born to the leader of the rebels. Baron Gu Won-Ha accepted the rebel leader's daughter and secretly raised her as her own.

The daughter, along with Marquis Si Bang-Pae, secretly organized an army. When this army was exposed, the kingdom ordered its annihilation. This led to Marquis Si Bang-Pae's execution.

Baron Gu Won-Ha was stripped of her baronial title and demoted to a commoner. Despite being a fourth-tier magic user, she was expelled from the Magic Tower.

Having nothing, she wandered the streets and was kidnapped by the terrorist organization [Red Nails]. For over nine years, she was confined and abused in their hideout.

Then.

She met the Viscount.

Strengths: [Clear Judgment], [Execution Ability], [Second Ascension Being]

Weaknesses: [Rebel Successor], [Origin in Rebellion], [Party to Rebellion], [Family of Rebel Leader], [Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong], [Daughter]

+

She really had a tumultuous life.

“So, originally from a noble family, but three of them got entangled in rebellions...?”

“Ah, you're looking at the information notebook created by the advisor. Yes, that's correct. Uncle, father, herself. All three were conspicuously entangled in rebellions. What's funnier is, do you know what?”

“What is it...?”

“There’s a daughter listed as belonging to the advisor, right? Originally the daughter of a rebel leader, but reluctantly taken in due to Marquis Si Bang-Pae’s request. That girl eventually grows up to lead a real rebellion.”

“Shit?”

“The situation’s fucked up, right? I’ve never heard of such a family. I thought the entire family had a rebellion fetish.”

“With my father being a rebel, my daughter a rebel, and even myself implicated in a rebellion, how am I still maintaining my noble status?”

“Surprise?”

“That makes no sense!”

“Oh wow. There are two types of people who think the impossible is possible. One is a complete idiot. The other is a person in power. I’m a person in power, so I restored the noble status to Advisor Gu Won-Ha.”

"....."

"Understand?*"

*Jaa Soo-Jeong said this in english.

"Viscount, you know English..."

"Yes. I can roughly converse in German, English, French, Korean, and Japanese. It's trendy in the outside world to cross into other worlds, right? Conversely, here, it's trendy to host people from other worlds. I learned a bit of language from a teacher from another world."

"Oh. Then, are there English or French people living in this world?"

"No."

Click.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong closed the hand mirror.

At the same time, the flickering letters before my eyes vanished.

“They all died. Except for one person.”

"....."

“At the moment of excitement thinking, ‘I’m going to have a fun adventure in another world!’ people realize that no matter where you go, the world is still the world, and death is still death. Knowing the knowledge of the other world, outsiders have to be quickly confined or killed, right? We have a lot to protect.”

"....."

“Anyway, let's end the grim talk here. Snap.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong put away the mirror, and this time, pulled out a cup. Where did that come from? I wondered what kind of physical space was hidden in her pocket.

“Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, please spread your arms for a moment. Make sure your body is visible.”

“Like this?”

“Yes. Now, this isn’t an ordinary cup, it’s made of rock. That’s why this trick is possible.”

For some reason, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong pushed the cup towards my body.

Thump.

The cup entered my body.

“Huh?”

“Hm.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong stirred the cup inside my body. After a moment, when she pulled her hand out, the cup was full of water.

“!?!?!?”

“How about that? Pretty amazing, right?”

“What, what, what is this!”

“For your information, it tastes incredibly good. This water. It's so refreshing it could slap the face of even top-grade pure water.”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong drank the water taken from my body. I was utterly baffled by the incomprehensible phenomenon before me.

“Phew... Refreshing. This is why I can't go around without my advisor.”

“Baron Gu Won-Ha is an Ascendant. An Ascendant. In this world, there's a law called Ascension, where those who overcome trials become [people who can do a bit more]. Most importantly, they receive the grace of [not dying even if they die once].”

“Not dying even after dying once...? What does that mean?”

“Just as it sounds. When an Ascendant dies once, they just become tiny. If they die again in that state, that's when they truly die. No more miracles occur, and they die just like any ordinary person."

"....."

"But amazingly, in the kingdom, there are a few who have ascended beyond Ascension. Beyond heaven. Those who have stepped onto the second heaven!"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong dramatically gestured and grabbed my hand.

"That is you! Baron Gu Won-Ha! In this vast world, one of the very few, extremely rare, second-tier ascendant mages is you, Baron Gu Won-Ha!"

"...I understand I'm extraordinary. But why does water come out when you put a cup into my body?"

"Second-tier ascendants start to depart from humanity. You can think of them as becoming somewhat divine. For instance, my first advisor had a core of [fire], so she could just burn down a city like a phoenix if she wished. On the other hand, my second advisor, Baron Gu Won-Ha, her core is [water], and very pure and cool water at that."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong softly stroked my cheek with her index finger.

“How ironic that the two pillars supporting me happen to be fire and water. I must have been born under a lucky star?”

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong applied the water droplet on her fingertip to her lips.

Her already pink lips shone even more with the droplet sliding down.

"....."

“My exclusive lip balm. My exclusive washbasin. My exclusive restroom. To ensure I always maintain a fresh scent as if I just stepped out of water, Baron Gu Won-Ha is at my service. Unfortunately, we can't use the bathtub today. Because of you, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja.”

That's right.

I fully understood.

‘Baron Gu Won-Ha is Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong’s protector, advisor, and one of the incredibly rare second-tier ascendant archmages in this world. Despite being a person from a heinous family that instigated rebellion over four generations.’

Baron Gu Won-Ha loves Jaa Soo-Jeong.

‘The water constituting my body is only used to please and comfort the Viscount.’

In other words, the master of Gu Won-Ha is Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Whether it's good or bad for Gu Won-Ha, there were countless others who also served Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

As soon as we entered the lounge, numerous nobles and their servants crowded around.

“Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong!”

“About the matter we discussed last time, for casting your affirmative vote...”

“The situation in Baron Sinnoa’s domain is still dire, how will the royal family address this...”

“I have secured the meat as instructed, in cooperation with the Royal Palace. It was easy to obtain since you said even rotten meat would do. Viscount, where should this be...”

Bustling.

It was as if every matter in this world needed to be consulted with Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong, judging by the crowd’s chatter.

Jaa Soo-Jeong responded to each with a bitter smile.

“Yes, here’s my signature.”

“For Baron Sinnoa’s domain, we won’t just send a new lord. The kingdom is showing deep interest in the void areas around the domain. The Minister’s office will provide support, so don’t worry too much and just wait.”

“Good job. Transport the meat to the Royal Palace as it is. Not to the Inner City, but store it somewhere close where it can be brought to the Assembly Hall at any time. I’ve already spoken to the Palace Head Maid. The maids and attendants there will help you.”

Those who had made requests all expressed their gratitude or apologies before rushing off somewhere else.

The other dozens of nobles in the lounge had been silent the whole time. Many looked at Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong with dissatisfaction.

“Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong is busy saving the kingdom even today. Amazing. Anyone would think she’s at least a Duke, not just a Viscount. How caring she is towards her people...”

“Count Ah Ru-Ho.”

Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin had already returned to the lounge. Centered around her, dozens of nobles, part of [Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong’s Faction], were seated, sipping tea.

“No matter what anyone says, the noble who has achieved the most remarkable feats this year is Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong. She deserves corresponding rewards and treatment.”

“Normally, the one who kills the most is the boss in war. Don’t the nobles even know that?”

“Ha. The leader is vulgar, so the subordinates are the same. How dare a mere honorary Viscount interrupt a Count's conversation?”

“Want to challenge me to a duel? Go ahead.”

I checked the information whenever people from Jaa Soo-Jeong's faction spoke.

“Just today, I've been soaking my feet in water for 13 hours in that meeting room. 13 hours. It's tough for you, me, and all of us, so why bother our Party Leader, who's the most exhausted? Want a beating?”

+

[Dae Ha-Ran]

Status: Noble. Honorary Viscount.

Relation: Student of the Viscount.

Danger Level: White

Note: Former Platinum General of the royal army. Led the vanguard 60 years ago during a major rebellion and quelled the rebels. There were 60,000 casualties combined from both armies. Including civilians, it was 210,000. However, when it was revealed that the rebellion itself was a ploy by the royal family, the royal army was disbanded, and Dae Ha-Ran became jobless.

Dae Ha-Ran argued that it made no sense for the kingdom to be without a royal army, claiming that leaving national security to the private armies of nobles only awaited destruction. She planned to conduct extreme violent protests to highlight the need for a royal army... but was preemptively stopped by Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong took Dae Ha-Ran as her youngest student, but is having a hard time because Dae Ha-Ran just doesn't get it.

Ally.

Can be killed.

Strengths: [Survival], [Martial Arts], [Combat], [War]

Weaknesses: [Mass Murderer], [Pillager], [Impatient], [Dumb in Everything But War]

Caution: Currently a guest at the Marquis Baek Seol-To's house.

+

And then.

I slowly started to notice.

“Wait, hold on. Aren't you all getting too heated?”

A nobleman with a gentle demeanor played a string instrument.

“Today is the day when His Majesty the King personally attends the Assembly for the first time in 60 years. If news spreads that nobles fought a duel in the lounge on such a day, wouldn't it embarrass His Majesty? Even if we don't care about that, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong will be sad.”

+

[Hae Myeong-Seom]

Status: Noble. Baron of the Royal City.

Relation: Colleague of the Viscount.

Danger Level: Blue

Note: Former head of Hae Myeong-Seom Sect. The sect was a small elite group primarily deployed for special operations like assassination of important figures, destruction of bases, arson in harvest-ready farms, and soil contamination with poison. It was one of the six major mercenary groups known as the Six Heavens Gate in the past.

Joined Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong when she promptly recruited the Six Heavens Gate and was ennobled as a Baron.

Ally.

Can be killed.

Strengths: [Survival], [Agility], [Definitely Protects the Assembly], [Ascendant]

Weaknesses: [Arsonist], [Poisoner], [Wanderlust]

Caution: Started to see Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong as someone special.

+

With so much information gathered, it had to become apparent.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's lovers' 'common feature.'

In the lounge, each person who spoke had different appearances, personalities, and lives, but there was an indelible red line strongly drawn across them all.

“Hmm. Since I’m a newcomer who just received my title today, if a duel is really necessary, send me instead. The rumor will end with foolish newcomers being disrespectful.”

Baron Gu Se-Ju. Slave of the Viscount.

Directly tortured and killed hundreds as the right hand of a rebel leader.

“Is a duel really necessary? I think Count Ah Ru-Ho is angry because they feel they can’t do anything and are being one-sidedly pushed by their teacher. If we just give them a one-sided victory in return, that will solve the problem. I’ve heard Count Ah Ru-Ho is skilled in royal techniques, so why not have a match with the teacher?”

Former Viscount Se Ah-Gwi. Student of the Viscount.

Like Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin, was kidnapped by [Red Nails]. Learned ‘Ritual of Darkness’ during that time, and even after returning to the royal city, continued the ritual.

Together with her subordinate nobles, ate thousands of humans.

"....."

Even young Marquis Baek Seol-To has a history of beating a commoner child to death with a whip.

"Mr. Kim Gong-Ja?"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong, observing the tension among the factions, turned to look at me. Despite having just handled numerous petitions on the spot, she showed no signs of fatigue. Instead, she was smiling broadly.

"No, I should call you Advisor Gu Won-Ha here. That's right, Advisor Gu Won-Ha. Is there something strange on my face? You're looking pale. Or perhaps..."

In other words.

Those who love Jaa Soo-Jeong are all...

"Is it as you wished, have you now come to understand?"

Murderers.

Or rather, mass murderers.

"Do you now have a bit of understanding of what kind of person I am?"

Chapter 217: Golden Rule (1)

---

"Why..."

I had to ask.

"Why did you choose only such people as your lovers?"

Tower Master Jaa Soo-Jeong.

She once built a tower and gathered all the abandoned people from every world. Children sacrificed to religious fanaticism, martial artists who died in irrational disasters, women whose lives were confined by inevitable miracles... She called these broken and abandoned lives into the tower and gave them a new world.

'The one who built the tower for the victims.'

Why, of all people, did she choose murderers as her lovers?

I expressed my doubt, looking at Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"Such people..."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled.

"Exactly whom are you referring to, advisor?"

"People who have committed grave sins. Those who beat children to death with whips, who turned people into human flesh and ate them. Those who waged wars leading to the deaths of countless civilians. Why do you love such people? Why do you still let them sit above the nobles? You are going to build a tower. You have almost omnipotent power. Yet, why don't you punish them..."

"Advisor."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong suddenly said.

"You are a very kind person."

"Yes?"

"Those climbing the tower with someone like the advisor must be very happy."

Confused by her words, I tilted my head.

However, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong did not explain. Instead, she just sat in her chair, looking forward. I too, drawn by her gaze, saw the scene before my eyes.

"It's ridiculous to appoint someone not even 20 years old as a duke!"

The lounge was hot with heated debates.

A noble of the conservative faction... Surely it was Count Ah Ru-Ho.

A noble with hair wild like a lion's mane snapped irritably.

"Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong is eighteen. Eighteen. No matter how many rebellions she has suppressed and how many dragon countries she has conquered, there are ranks and order in the kingdom."

"Indeed."

Hoo-.

A noble from Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's faction took a drag from a water pipe.

"The Count's words are right. I never understood why the rebels were not subdued over the past decades, but having heard the Count's words today, it's enlightening. While an eighteen-year-old child was fighting against the rebels, shedding blood and sweat, nobles like the Count were maintaining the order of the hierarchy. Thanks to this, the kingdom has not perished and has prospered."

Laughter erupted here and there.

Joining in the mockery, the nobles of Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's faction sneered.

"Indeed. I felt guilty for having burdened a young girl with everything, but now I see she dared to gain military merit at such a young age."

"Exactly. If our party leader hadn't stepped in, there would have been 200,000 casualties in subduing the Golden Dragon. Or, if the Red Nails weren't subdued, millions of citizens would still be groaning in pain. But what's the use? Even if she saved the lives of hundreds of thousands of soldiers and millions of citizens, she's still just an eighteen-year-old child. A dukedom is absurd."

"Right. The Count's deep concern for the kingdom's order is truly admirable!"

The nobles launched a fierce attack.

All of them were Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's lovers.

[Child Murderer] Marquis Baek Seol-To glanced around cautiously, [Cannibal] Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin backed up her colleagues, and [Mass Murderer] Dae Ha-Ran laughed openly. Their reactions varied, but they were all gathered there for Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"Ha..."

Count Ah Ru-Ho's face contorted with anger.

Was it the humiliation of losing the argument?

The Count muttered in a flash.

"The dogs of a courtesan... their barking skills are indeed first-rate."

With that one sentence, the atmosphere turned silent.

The nobles who had been mocking the Count with ease all suddenly turned cold. Their faces lost all traces of laughter. Anger simmered beneath their neutral expressions.

"How about it, Kim Gong-Ja?"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong whispered to me.

Her voice was so soft that only I could hear it.

"Isn't it interesting?"

"....."

"All those people defending me, as you said, are all murderers. Mass murderers. Criminals. But, look. Look at their faces right now."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong leaned towards me, lifting her hips.

"They are in pain."

Her lips whispered, drawing closer to me.

"Just because I was insulted as a courtesan. It's not exactly a false accusation.

I have captivated numerous nobles and royals with music, dance, sweet whispers... An entire life spent enchanting people with various arts. So, a courtesan. Even though, Count Ah Ru-Ho was being careful with their words. In the streets, I am openly called a prostitute."

Gently.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong tugged on my sleeve.

"Look. Kim Gong-Ja."

Pulled by a small force, I had to bend down. As my shoulder reached her face's level, Jaa Soo-Jeong whispered in my ear.

"The one who whipped a child to death, the noble who feasted on humans, the general who massacred civilians, they are just hurt because I was called a courtesan."

"....."

"It's too funny."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong whispered, hooking her arm through mine.

A snake seemed to be slithering up my arm.

"There are hundreds of legal codes in the kingdom. According to the stated laws, we can calculate the sins of those [criminals], measure their faults, and determine their responsibility. It's tedious but an easy task. If I wish, I can execute the criminals right now. What do you think, Kim Gong-Ja? Should we kill them all?"

"That would be..."

"Yes."

The snake smiled with her eyes.

Beneath her long eyelids, the snake's pupils sparkled purple.

"[Is that a bit too harsh], you think?"

"....."

"In my opinion, Kim Gong-Ja, you are that kind of person. Kind-hearted. The point at which you feel that killing those who have committed wrongs is [too harsh], you are already a completely different species from me."

"What do you mean?"

"Just killing them off isn't too extreme."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong grasped my cheek.

And she forcibly turned my gaze.

Where our eyes landed, there was a noble with snow-white hair like a rabbit, Marquis Baek Seol-To, looking flustered, surveying people from both factions.

"Marquis Baek Seol-To was a minor when she killed another minor. The marquis' family paid a settlement to the victim's family. One side, a prominent noble family in the capital, and the other, a normal family of free citizens. It's called a settlement, but in reality, it was more like an ultimatum, right?"

That must have been the case.

"The criminal was a minor at the time of the crime. Moreover, being a noble and having reached a settlement with the victim's family, the sentence Marquis Baek Seol-To would receive would be... what? At most, a revocation of her title? Ta-da. That's the punishment guaranteed by the law."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke playfully.

"Conversely, the victim's family was ruined."

"....."

"Unlike a noble family, a commoner's family is shockingly easy to destroy. That family... they lived with a granddaughter, a grandfather, and a grandmother. The granddaughter was their only descendant. And she was killed by Marquis Baek Seol-To."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong whispered in my ear.

"Do you see, Kim Gong-Ja? That family was ruined. Destroyed. Shattered. What use is receiving a fortune in settlement money? Can you assemble a broken child's body with gold? According to the great and dignified laws of the kingdom, aah, under the majestic judgment of the righteous judge, even if you miraculously succeed in revoking Marquis Baek Seol-To's title, does that resolve the family's resentment?"

"....."

"The criminal who wrecked my life and destroyed my family. Even if that criminal is killed, the resentment won't be resolved. Think about it. The granddaughter died? One winter day, on a snowy white field, beaten by the whip of a noble, her back flesh torn apart, her spine shattered, dead. Can all that be settled with just one death?"

"Then... what should be done?"

I understood the viscount's words.

It echoed the dilemma I faced while gathering the Constellation Killer.

Those who had already committed crimes. The people they had victimized.

What could be done to compensate for the shattered lives?

Even a righteous person like the Black Dragon Witch had blood on their hands. I share a friendship with such a Black Dragon Witch. Whether that is right or wrong, and if not, what should be done, I had not yet found an answer.

"Pain."

The owner of the tower answered.

"Only pain is the only solution."

She stroked the side of my head.

"The pain of losing a granddaughter. The pain of the last six years after the granddaughter disappeared. The pain of the remaining life, never seeing the granddaughter again. Inflicting [exactly the same pain] on the criminal. That is the law that should be enforced in this world, and the law that I want to establish in the kingdom."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke as if advising a junior she cherished.

But her pupils, her purple eyes, had the power to make even the kindest care seem like a curse imbued with malice.

That's probably why. Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong looked both like a senior caring for a junior and like a demon seducing passersby.

"I will rebuild this kingdom, the world, under the law of pain. Not just this kingdom but the entire world. Not just here but every other world as well. Everywhere my feet tread and my eyes see, the entire universe."

"....."

"The tower is a means to that end."

I was momentarily at a loss for words.

"Is such a thing... possible?"

"There are two ways to make the impossible possible. One is to go mad. To be lost in delusion, to realize the impossible in fantasy."

"And the other?"

"To become a person of power."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong giggled.

"Power is something you possess. Something you control. I have bewitched six dukes, seduced an emperor, and captivated three dragon emperors."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong raised her fingers.

"All to become the most powerful person in this world."

Thump.

Thump.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong tapped the armrest of the chair twice.

"....."

At that, the nobles of the Jaa Soo-Jeong faction immediately looked this way.

"....."

Those glaring at Count Ah Ru-Ho stopped their actions and words instantly upon hearing the two taps. They turned their heads to their master's signal.

The opposite faction did the same. Initially, they kept talking, but as the other side turned their gaze all at once, they too sensed something unusual and turned to look at Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

The nobles, servants serving drinks, musicians selecting music, and others all looked at Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

13 seconds.

That was the time it took for hundreds of people in the vast lounge to focus solely on Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong. Fierce arguments and cunning mockery came to an abrupt halt.

Silence filled the room.

"My dear noble colleagues."

With hundreds of eyes on her, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong opened her lips.

"I came out to the lounge for a break, but seeing you all so actively debating even here, I feel proud as a member of the kingdom. I'm worried whether the council should pay you overtime. You can't be doing overtime in such a place without pay."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong used my shoulder to stand up.

"Enough rest. Let's return to the main council chamber and resume our primary duties."

Simultaneously, the nobles of her faction stood up.

They left behind empty wine glasses, half-filled glasses, and untouched glasses as they gathered around Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Considering their immense power compared to commoners, it was a truly bizarre scene.

"Alright."

In the midst of this strange scene, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong grabbed my wrist.

"Kim Gong-Ja."

"Tonight, I will show you a miracle."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong was beaming brightly.

Chapter 218: Golden Rule (2)

---

We entered the main council chamber.

Thud. Every time Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong stepped forward, dozens of nobles followed suit. No one spoke while the sound of footsteps intermingled.

Like elite soldiers facing their final battle.

"....."

The moment we entered the council chamber, I felt suffocated.

The nobles from other factions who had already arrived all turned to look at us simultaneously.

Some looked with anger boiling in their eyes.

Some stared with jealousy tainting their gaze.

Others looked up, soaked in admiration and longing.

If there were a hundred emotions in the world, a hundred gazes were directed at Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"Good day, everyone. It seems the meeting will resume soon."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled leisurely.

"I've come with the members of my faction. Is it too late?"

Silence.

No one could respond.

However, it seemed like Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong never expected a reply in the first place. Smiling cheerfully, she found her place.

"What are you doing, advisor?"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong looked back at me as she moved.

"Yes?"

"Your place is right next to me. Hurry up and follow. You're not thinking of leaving my side cold, are you?"

Ah.

'She's considering that my memory is somewhat vague.'

I nodded quietly and followed Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong discreetly.

As I approached my assigned seat, the scenery of the council chamber began to come into focus.

It was quite different from the [council] I usually knew.

Firstly, it wasn't semi-circular but a complete circle, resembling the Colosseum. A throne was firmly placed in the center, surrounded by the seats of the noble council members.

But the most peculiar part was something else.

‘...Water?’

Yes. There was flowing water.

A canal was installed beneath the seats. If you sat down, you had to immerse your feet in the water. The canal spread like a spider web through the council, flowing down and eventually connecting to a drain at the throne.

"Amniotic fluid. Ugh."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong took off her leather boots and sat down. Looking around, other nobles were also familiarly removing their shoes.

"Amniotic fluid?"

"Yes. Amniotic fluid. There's a giant lake beneath the capital. Water is drawn from that lake and channeled throughout the city, with the first place it reaches being here, the main council chamber of the Platinum Tower."

I followed suit, taking off my shoes.

"What's the significance?"

"It has several meanings and uses. We make laws in the council, and laws create the kingdom. The kingdom is born right here. [Always remember that we are birthing the kingdom]. That's why it's called amniotic fluid."

I removed my socks and dipped my feet into the canal.

Splash, the warm water seeped between my toes.

"It's warm..."

"Yes, it's winter now. It's cool in the summer. It also serves to regulate the temperature of this vast meeting hall."

"That's amazing."

"Not just the temperature, the color of the water changes depending on the seriousness of the agenda. For example, if the council decides to subjugate a Dragon Country, the amniotic fluid turns red like blood. The canals throughout the capital also turn red. It informs the citizens that a critical situation has arisen."

"Wow."

"In short, the citizens use water that has been touched by the toes of nobles in their daily lives. For some select few nobles and citizens, this fact provides a fetishistic satisfaction. It's quite practical in many ways."

No. That's a bit...

Seeing my disgusted expression, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong chuckled.

"Kim Gong-Ja, you don't seem like Gu Won-Ha, the advisor, right now."

"Yes?"

"My advisor would never make such a face. It would be fun if your identity gets exposed, but we have a meeting to attend to. I'd appreciate it if you're careful not to let others notice."

Hmm.

"What kind of tone does Mr. Gu Won-Ha use?"

"Oh? Don't you remember?"

"Yes, it's a bit fuzzy. The amniotic fluid also feels like I'm seeing it for the first time."

"Hmm."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled with her eyes.

"Well, it's simple. Generally, speak courteously. Mostly expressionless. With a tone of indifference to worldly affairs, while using slightly formal language."

I furrowed my brow.

"...Do I speak like this?"

"Good. A bit lacking, though."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong rested her chin on her hand and looked at me.

"Just a bit more expressionless would be perfect. My advisor really doesn't attach any value to the world."

"Not valuing the world..."

"Yes. Whether it's people, the populace, or the kingdom, nothing is of value. Only my daughter and I hold weight in the advisor's heart. Everything else is just meaningless noise."

"....."

Suddenly, I recalled the information magic marked by the original owner of this body.

She had written this about Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong:

+

My master.

My heart.

My blood.

My everything in this world.

+

Thump.

Recalling that note made my heart strangely ache.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong watched me with an interested look.

"Your expression acting is excellent. Have you had any training in acting?"

".....Yes. I had opportunities to immerse myself in theater while climbing the tower."

"Unexpectedly versatile, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja. Right now, you really resemble advisor Gu Se-Ju."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's eye-smile deepened.

"From now on, may I continue to call you [advisor] instead of Mr. Kim Gong-Ja?"

Why?

My heart throbbed again.

"....."

Just making eye contact with Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong made my chest feel tight. Like when I had first been possessed in this trauma world, my mind was clouded with fog.

Fortunately, a voice that brought my attention back just before I was completely enveloped in fog emerged.

"The King has arrived!"

The meeting resumed.

---

As soon as the meeting started, the nobles from other factions launched an all-out attack on Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

The first to open fire was Count Ah Ru-Ho, who had been sizing up their arguments since the lounge.

"Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong has arbitrarily taken in rebels. Not just the Red Nails, but Stone Assembly, Bandol, Waek, Celestial, Heart. All the recent rebel leaders have become her subordinates. We cannot elevate such a noble to a dukedom."

Hundreds of nobles looked at Count Ah Ru-Ho. The King of the kingdom, too, silently let the count speak.

It was more like an inquisition against Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong than a meeting.

"It is only right to immediately capture the traitors hiding under Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's shadow and punish them according to their crimes. If the viscount is a loyal subject of the kingdom, she should willingly cooperate. Isn't that right, Viscount? If there's no ulterior motive, why else would you hide traitors?"

"Count. All those I've taken under me were personally captured by me."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong rebutted with a smile.

"Prisoners of war become the property of the capturing general. What's wrong with me handling my own property as I wish?"

"Even if they are traitors who have drawn swords against the kingdom?"

"A thing has no sin. A skilled warrior's sword may have absorbed the blood of tens, hundreds. But no one blames the sword. It would be the warrior's fault, if any. I've merely collected swords that have absorbed a bit too much blood."

"Are you calling living people things now!"

"Yes."

"....."

"They are my property. If you're jealous, you should have captured them yourself. Or abolish slavery. Right?"

Ah, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong blinked naturally.

"Count Ah Ru-Ho's territory relies heavily on a slave economy, doesn't it? It's unfortunate not to have reformed the economy of your land earlier."

"How dare you advise the Count's management..."

"It's the same. The prisoners I've captured are my private property. What right do you have to interfere in my family matters? Wouldn't it be better for both you and me to respect each other's boundaries?"

Count Ah Ru-Ho gritted his teeth.

".....What if a living person who is your property commits a crime?"

"Hmm??"

"Your Majesty."

Count Ah Ru-Ho looked towards the throne.

"I respectfully have something to report to Your Majesty."

"Speak."

"Creating a new dukedom is an extremely significant matter, unprecedented in the kingdom's two thousand year history.

Such a critical process requires a thorough examination of the moral character of the dukedom candidate."

The Sun King listened silently to the count's words.

He had not left the palace in the past 60 years. There is no success for those who do not work, and no authority for those who do not succeed. The Sun King had no authority.

And nobles do not respect those without authority.

"I have come across several reports casting serious doubt on Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's moral character."

"....."

"Therefore, if Your Majesty permits, I would like to summon witnesses to this assembly."

The Sun King turned to look at Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

It was a look asking for her thoughts.

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled as if to say there's nothing to worry about.

".....I grant permission."

"Your Grace is magnanimous."

Prepared witnesses began to enter the council.

The first to step into the amniotic water was a neatly dressed old man.

Count Ah Ru-Ho asked the old man.

"What is your name, witness?"

"I am called Nam Seok."

"Your status and origin?"

"A freeman. Forty-one years ago, I moved from Barom Saa Jo-Seoung's territory to the capital and settled down."

"Nam Seok. For a mere citizen to stand in this place, you must not take lightly the grace bestowed upon you."

The old man knelt and touched his forehead to the ground.

"I am unworthy of such grace."

"You must have submitted a petition to the nobles about your grievances."

"I lost my only granddaughter, my world crumbled, and I dared to defile the eyes of the noble with my humble words."

"....."

I turned my head, hearing those words.

Next to me, Marquis Baek Seol-To's face had turned deathly pale.

"Marquis."

"Yes.....?"

"A citizen here says his granddaughter was killed by your flogging six years ago. Is this true?"

"Ah. That. I, I am....."

At that moment, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong stood up.

As the viscount rose, water splashed beneath her feet.

"Your Majesty."

"Proceed."

"The Marquis Baek Seol-Toate resides under my shadow. My family being the main house and the marquise a branch, it's only proper that I should be reprimanded for the wrongdoings of my subordinates. I must object to Count Ah Ru-Ho chastising those under my authority."

".....What are your thoughts, Count?"

"Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong is too generous. I, too, would like to question the viscount rather than the marquis."

Count Ah Ru-Ho seemed triumphantly expectant of this response.

"Viscount."

"Yes, Count."

"Were you aware of the marquis' actions?"

"I was aware."

The water stirred again.

"Since when?"

"I knew even before I took Marquis Baek Seol-Tounder my wing. The marquis confessed to me directly."

"Not true. You knew of the marquis' crime yet still took her under you?"

"That's correct."

Bang!

Count Ah Ru-Ho slammed his fist on the desk.

"Why? The marquis beat a young citizen to death with a whip. How could you accept such a cruel noble?"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled.

"You might not know... but at that time, the Lady Marquis was famously wayward. Idiot Lady, Dumb Lady, Brain-dead Lady... She endured all sorts of ridicule. After meeting her, I thought I had to properly raise this child."

"Properly raise?"

"The Lady grew up almost abused in her family."

Marquis Baek Seol-To twitched, trembling.

"Marquis Baek Seol-To' grandfather, Baek Mi-To Marquis, was a genius, in a bad way. He couldn't understand anyone less intelligent than himself and didn't try to understand his less intelligent granddaughter. Criticism, verbal abuse, mistreatment. Marquis Baek Seol-To' childhood was colored by her grandfather's malicious neglect."

Count Ah Ru-Ho frowned.

"So? Because the marquis is pitiful, we should forgive her?"

"No."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong covered her mouth with her sleeve, chuckling.

"If left alone, Marquis Baek Seol-To would have forever lived as a [Brain-dead Lady], without any regrets or self-reflection, comfortably meeting her end by an assassin sent by someone."

"....."

"I thought that wasn't right."

"What do you mean..."

"I took the marquis on a journey for fifteen days."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong hummed.

It was like reminiscing about a pleasant past.

"I showed her reality, a life she'd never experienced, where not working meant not eating. Forced her to experience the harsh reality of the outside world where even working hard might not suffice. Thanks to that, Marquis Baek Seol-To realized that even if she felt unhappy, she was in a [bearable misery]."

"And I regularly held lessons with the marquis. Sometimes we visited the northern port to see the merchants' daily lives, occasionally dragging her to thief subjugation to witness people's lives being brutally lost."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's breath was fiery.

Like a priest intoxicated with something, she murmured in a low voice, colored with hot breath.

"Do you understand? Marquis Baek Seol-To is only fifteen. Yet, she's already experienced the death of a commoner, merchant, and thief. I dare say, even if she becomes one of the kingdom's top twelve nobles, she'll never consider herself a good person. Naturally. The fact that she killed a child remains unchanged."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong neatly folded her hands together.

As if praying somewhere.

"I'll raise Marquis Baek Seol-To to be the kingdom's finest noble. And also make her grow into the most miserable noble. As days pass, her misery will dye her. Guilt and self-loathing will color her face, for sure."

"....."

"Count. Imagine such a marquis. Every gesture she makes leaving traces of unhappiness, her past shadowing her every step. Can you picture it?"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong shone like a saint as she smiled brightly.

"Isn't it lovely?"

Chapter 219: Golden Rule (3)

---

The surroundings fell silent.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's remarks had unsettled many nobles.

"Lovely...?"

Count Ah Ru-Ho's expression was uneasy, similar to most of the nobility present.

However, those personally taken in by Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Only her lovers, who received her love and loved her in return, showed no change in their expressions. They were impassive. 'The necessary story is being told, and the needed words are being heard.' It seemed that's how the viscount's lovers perceived it.

"Yes."

Amidst the perplexed atmosphere, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke.

"A noble, crumbling under the misfortune they caused themselves, always stirs the soul when seen. Marquis Baek Seol-To is, to put it metaphorically, like a honey rice cake. Once you bite, sweetness fills your mouth."

".....What in the world are you talking about?"

Count Ah Ru-Ho was flabbergasted.

"Sigh."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong sighed and shrugged her shoulders, clearly belittling and looking down on Count Ah Ru-Ho.

"If you don't know, never mind. Some adventurers embark on a quest even if a treasure map falls right in front of them, while some commoners mock those adventurers. Is this where the story ends?"

"What?"

"I'm asking if you have nothing more to say, Count. [There is a poor citizen.] [Lost a granddaughter to a noble.] [That noble is under me.] That sums up the story so far. If there's nothing more to add, please step down. It's already late, and we can't afford to delay the meeting further."

"You, you..."

Count Ah Ru-Ho bellowed.

"I lost my only granddaughter!"

"That day was my mother's birthday. Did you know? My granddaughter was running to give her grandmother a birthday gift when she was struck down by Marquis Baek Seol-To!"

"....."

The old man, who knelt obediently below the throne, never received a glance from Count Ah Ru-Ho. The count, ignoring him, pulled something out of his pocket.

A hairpin. An ornament typically worn by women in their hair.

"Look! This hairpin here was the birthday gift prepared by my granddaughter. She was running to give it to her grandmother when she unfortunately bumped into Lady Baek Seol-To!"

Count Ah Ru-Ho passionately argued his case.

Whether the count truly empathized with the old man's plight, I was doubtful.

Yet, for whatever reason, a person's desperate state holds persuasive power. Gradually, the nobles shifted from dismissing Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's remarks to pitying the old man with compassionate gazes.

"My granddaughter fell in the snow, smiling innocently, apologizing [I'm sorry], [I should have watched where I was going] to Lady Baek Seol-To. Had she been forgiven for apologizing, it would have been a common accident that could happen anywhere."

Count Ah Ru-Ho now fully regained his conviction.

The pathetic back of the old man, the sympathy pouring over him, and Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's face, seemingly indifferent to everything.

All these elements gave Count Ah Ru-Ho the assurance of victory.

"But Lady Baek Seol-To grabbed the child. And then..."

"It's tedious."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong muttered.

It was a fleeting voice, like the flutter of a dragonfly's wings, heard only momentarily.

No one but me heard the viscount's murmur.

Count Ah Ru-Ho continued his vigorous speech, capturing the attention of the audience. Therefore, when I looked at Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong, I could solely focus on her monologue.

"The person who prepared the gift that day wasn't just Ari."

I tilted my head in confusion.

"Ari... who is that?"

"The granddaughter. The child who was whipped to death by Lady Baek Seol-To."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong casually replied.

"That day was also the birthday of the Lady's grandfather. Coincidentally, both girls had prepared gifts. Lady Baek Seol-To made a brooch with the family crest but couldn't give it to her grandfather."

".....Why?"

I sensed something peculiar in the viscount's eyes.

It was as if she wasn't recounting a story heard from someone else.

But rather describing a scene she had witnessed firsthand.

"The grandfather punished her for not solving a math problem correctly. The Lady couldn't bring herself to give him the brooch. How could any child give a gift to an adult scowling with displeasure?"

"....."

"When the noble girl and the common girl collided in the street, the brooch fell into the snow. Not just falling, but it happened to be stepped on by the common girl. It broke."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke with a face devoid of heat.

"It wasn't a particularly expensive-looking brooch. Hard to say it was well-made. Just a trinket that wouldn't matter much if broken. But the Lady picked up the broken brooch and thrust it at the common girl."

"And she said."

You broke it.

"The common girl was startled and bowed her head."

I'm sorry, miss.

I'm really sorry.

"But children know how to apologize, not how to accept an apology. And back then, Lady Baek Seol-To was a complete ruffian, known as the [Brain-dead Lady]. Her response was far from gracious."

You shouldn't have broken it, it was important!

"The Lady had a guard with her, essentially the sole heir of the marquisate. The guard's loyalty was deep. The Lady reached out to him."

Guard!

The whip!

"Without hesitation, the guard handed his mistress the whip. The Lady grabbed it, struggling with its thickness compared to her small hands."

A child's whip struck another child's back.

"One exerted all her strength to strike, the other convulsed under the blows."

Just smash it all! Why! Why! Like this, why!

"It hurts, miss."

"It hurts. I'm sorry, Lady, it hurts."

You're all fools.

Just a bunch of idiots.

Grandfather is, grandfather is a fool!

"No one stopped the Lady."

They say the snow was stained with blood.

Lady Baek Seol-To's guard took back the whip. The servant attending the marquis picked up unguarded relics from the battered body. Not out of sympathy for the common girl, but a sudden thought to pass them on.

"Look!"

Now, that relic was in Count Ah Ru-Ho's hand.

"Can't you see the resentment bound in this relic! Viscount!"

The hairpin had decayed over the past six years. What was likely once polished to shine for a grandmother, now lost its luster, gathering dust on its surface. Worn and old, just a common trinket found anywhere.

"Is your blood that of a cold-hearted creature!"

"....."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong only listened to Count Ah Ru-Ho's outcry, smiling strangely.

"Is your mind filled only with the wisdom of the sages and classical scriptures! Or else, how can you sit there so calmly upon seeing this relic, these traces of blood, these remnants of death!"

No, that's not it.

"Viscount, you truly lack human empathy!"

It wasn't that.

Count Ah Ru-Ho... and the people were misunderstanding something.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong [could see everything].

She knew far more than what Count Ah Ru-Ho was aware of.

Even more than the old man lying there, she had witnessed the granddaughter's death from much closer.

And it wasn't just that.

What the granddaughter thought at the moment of her death, her last words, what Lady Baek Seol-To screamed as she swung the whip.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong knew much more than the others.

'Because.'

Amid my dizzy thoughts, I barely managed to articulate my conclusion.

"Viscount. You possess... [The Eyes of the Golden Dragon]."

"Hmm?"

Then Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong turned to look at me.

"What do you mean, advisor?"

I swallowed hard.

Far away, Count Ah Ru-Ho was still shouting loudly. She cursed her for not understanding human nature, called her a bastard born without roots, criticized her for not caring about the citizens, and declared it preposterous to nominate such a person for a dukedom.

The surroundings were noisy, creating the perfect environment for our secret whispers.

"The Eyes of the Golden Dragon."

"Yes, the Eyes of the Golden Dragon. Is there a problem with it?"

"The Eyes of the Golden Dragon can see everything. From an omniscient perspective. I understand now how you can encompass the entire tower while being in one body. Viscount. You've been granted the ability to intuitively perceive the entirety of existence."

"Not a wrong statement. So what?"

".....And you also have [The Breath of the Ice River Dragon]."

My heart pounded.

"[The Breath of the Ice River Dragon] allows you to move to any desired point in time. Eyes that can see anything. Breath that can take you anywhere. You possess both. If you wish..."

"If I wish?"

"You could have witnessed the very moment the granddaughter was whipped to death, right in front of you."

I said.

"That is your omniscience."

The reason why the tower's master had such an all-seeing ability.

"With [The Eyes of the Golden Dragon] and [The Breath of the Ice River Dragon], you can observe every death and despair in this world from the closest point."

"....."

"Both powers allow you to oversee every event occurring in the tower."

At that moment:

[Correct.]

[Acknowledged as having passed the 2nd gateway.]

[The Eyes of the Golden Dragon and The Breath of the Ice River Dragon form the observational mechanism of the tower.]

A brief silence followed.

Purple irises pondered over my face.

"Correct."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong slowly opened her lips.

A smile hung on the corner of her soft lips.

"Not bad. Given the limited information you had as an advisor, you've managed to piece together and guess the project I had planned."

"You..."

"Rewards are due for a hero who guessed correctly."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong gently grasped my wrist.

"---I'll show you the death of that granddaughter."

A squishy sensation crawled up from my ankle. It was as cold as a snake's skin. Startled, I looked down to see a shadowy figure, like water's shadow, climbing up my skin from the surface.

"Follow me."

In the next moment, I was swallowed by the shadow.

---

With a slashing sound, the whip flung the snow around.

The snowflakes, heavy with blood, rose but didn't fly high. Clumped together, they plummeted back into the already crimson-stained pool.

"It's your fault!"

"Please... save... me..."

"You, you, you! It's your fault! You! It's all because of you! If it weren't for you!"

The whip struck through the air.

In the blood pool, the snowflakes melted away.

A small child convulsed.

The last bit of warmth in the child's body dripped into the snow, spreading a thin stream around.

"....."

"That's the child."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong pointed. We were submerged in the darkness of an alley. Passersby were there, but they all avoided the alley due to the intimidating presence of the Marquis Baek Seol-To's guard.

"Marquis Baek Seol-To. Now Lady Marquis Baek Seol-To. The child she whipped to death at the age of 10 is lying right there."

Instinctively, I tried to rush out.

But it was impossible.

A grip much stronger than mine held my wrist.

"No."

"Why, why not? We must go now. If we take her to a physician, maybe..."

"Maybe she could be saved. Yes. Maybe after suffering through the winter, her body recovers, and she continues a happy life. Perhaps the marquise would even generously compensate, offering a more comfortable life than before."

"Then, why are you holding my wrist right now?"

"Advisor."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled.

"Kim Gong-Ja."

The sound of whipping echoed in the winter sky.

"How many times do you think I have seen such scenes?"

The corpse of a child, virtually already dead, was being savagely whipped by a young lady. Someone's winter was dying there.

"I'm eighteen. But I've lived far more lives than that number can hold. Just like now, I've witnessed the death of a child, hundreds, thousands, millions, billions, trillions, an endless number of deaths right in front of me."

"I have seen every infanticide, robbery, victory, defeat, retreat, massacre since the kingdom's founding in the winter of 2001 years ago, until now, December 24, 2001, of the kingdom's calendar. So far, it's only the history of this kingdom. Someday, I'll watch every death in this world. No, in all worlds."

"And I won't do anything."

I felt hoarse.

"Yes...?"

"I could have stopped that child's death at any time. I could have reversed all those unjust deaths. Returning again and again, until all irrational deaths disappeared, and a single righteous world line was established."

But.

"I won't."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong grinned.

"Never."

"....."

"Never interfere."

"Why not...?"

"It's because only then, every misfortune in this world is solely [my fault]."

The child died.

Lady Baek Seol-To, in her rage, kicked the body and walked away. The falling snowflakes covered the young lady's back.

"What was the reason for that child's death, advisor? What went wrong that led to her death?"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's voice was coated with falling snow.

"Was it a mistake to encounter Marquis Baek Seol-To? Is that the mistake? What about Marquis Baek Seol-To's fault? Growing up under a degenerate grandfather? Not being born with a brain that could please him? Then, was her very birth a mistake?"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong released my wrist.

"No. All those are just coincidences. We can't blame coincidences. None of you were born wrong. There are no wrongly born lives in this world."

"....."

"The only one at fault is me alone."

She clasped her hands over her chest.

"I could have approached that granddaughter and said, 'This path is dangerous, go another way.' Then the little girl would have easily avoided her impending misfortune. I could have also become an unnamed friend to Lady Baek Seol-To, providing her with private tutoring every step of the way. Then she would have grown smarter every day and eventually gained her grandfather's recognition."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong brought her hands together as if in prayer, then looked up at me.

"I have the ability to do so."

"....."

"But I won't."

"Never. No matter what."

The scenery around us changed.

The blood-stained snowfield vanished, replaced by the flowing water of the grand hall.

Count Ah Ru-Ho was still pointing fingers at Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong, berating her. She lamented that she really lacked humanity, questioning how a human could not grieve over a child's death, not try to help...

"Advisor."

Amid the noise and bloodshed of the council, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong whispered to me.

"There are no accidental deaths in this world. Not even accidental misfortunes. Every death and misfortune is intentionally overlooked by me."

"....."

"All the misfortunes you have experienced are my fault. Because I didn't move, because I didn't care, because I ignored, countless misfortunes and innumerable despairs have occurred. At least in this kingdom. And eventually, in all worlds."

"....."

"Do you understand what I mean, my advisor?"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled like a saint.

Then, the scenery shifted again.

This time, it was Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin eating human flesh.

"Come."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong stroked the back of my hand.

"Now blame me."

My heart raced.

"Exclaim why I didn't help. It's not a meaningless outcry. I had the power to help, and I was really there at the very moment of your misfortune. Ask why I didn't save you. It's not a meaningless question. Because I could have resolved it."

She gripped my hand tightly.

"Because of my existence."

I felt breathless.

"Now, all of you possess a [sinner] to point your fingers at without a shred of falsehood or doubt, unmistakably."

A god spoke.

"I am [The God Who Never Returns]. I do not return for anyone, I only watch over your misfortunes."

The god declared quietly.

"That's why you can condemn and despise this god."

The name of the god was Jaa Soo-Jeong, the Amethyst.

Chapter 220:

Golden Rule (4)

---

I looked at the girl.

The scenery rapidly transformed: from the snow-covered streets where Marquis Baek Seol-To whipped his subjects, to the cave where Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin devoured human flesh, and then to the battlefield where Viscount Dae Ha-Ran led his troops, indiscriminately slaughtering both soldiers and civilians.

"Kill them all without exception!"

The competence of a general lies in two things: the ability to kill effectively and the lack of hesitation in doing so.

Viscount Dae Ha-Ran was a competent general.

"This place is a rebel territory. We cannot allow the leakage of our military intelligence to the enemy. Regardless of their status, age, or gender - peasants, the poor - kill them all! I will take the responsibility."

Thousands of cavalry pursued the rebels.

Surrounded by soldiers, the villagers trembled in fear. Among them were those who genuinely conspired against the kingdom. Many more were just common folk who believed if the lord said there was a war, there must be one.

"Please spare us! My lord! We are just simple villagers who know nothing!"

The competence of a politician lies in distinguishing between friend and foe, and acting in the interests of allies.

Viscount Dae Ha-Ran was an incompetent politician.

And when a person is competent in one aspect and incompetent in another, they become most cruel.

"Burn it."

The village was set ablaze.

The very palisades built for their protection now trapped the villagers inside. Kingdom soldiers, wielding long spears, pushed back the residents trying to escape through the palisade gaps.

"Oh, God!"

Old men and women choked on the black smoke within their burning hometown.

The soot filled the elderly village chief's lungs. Until his last moment, he couldn't tell whether he should have rebelled against the lord's command to join the rebellion, or if dying by the hands of the lord's men was a more dignified death.

Did he ever have a choice?

"Please save us, oh God....."

God was indeed present.

Jaa Soo-Jeong sat far away on a tree branch. As she had declared herself, she was a [God Who Does Not Return]. More precisely, [A God Who Does Not Move for Anyone Even If She Returns].

Immovable.

"Viscount."

I pleaded, gripped by the wrist by the deity.

"Please help them. This is unjust."

"I know."

"Why should General Dae Ha-Ran live and they die? Why must they alone suffer and die in agony?"

"Advisor."

I tried to activate my Aura to break free from the Viscount's grip.

But Jaa Soo-Jeong, with a gentle touch, never let go of my wrist.

Her divine grip was stronger than my powerlessness.

"There's no reason that one must live, another must die, and yet another must suffer. Such reasons don't exist, do they?"

"Then....."

"Still, it seems you people often need a reason to blame."

Ashes from the burning village drifted all the way to the forest.

Jaa Soo-Jeong lifted her index finger, gently capturing the grey ash.

"You can't accept the fact that the world just flows by chance, can you? That there's malice behind one's misfortune, manipulation behind another's luck, and thus one is deserving of sympathy while another deserves all the curses in the world? That's right."

The scenery changed once again.

"You are right."

Inside the kingdom's grand parliament.

"I'll make you right."

Witnesses requested by Count Ah Ru-Ho entered the parliament.

An old man who lost his granddaughter was just the beginning.

The Count, utilizing his power, or rather, his faction's power, had gathered the victims. Among them were descendants of refugees who had lost their homes due to General Dae Ha-Ran.

"Your misfortune is not just a happenstance, but a result of my negligence and tacit approval."

The parliament turned more chaotic.

Count Ah Ru-Ho, leading the charge, denounced Jaa Soo-Jeong. Behind him, many nobles scolded her.

"There's no direct crime committed by Jaa Soo-Jeong!"

Count Ah Ru-Ho argued.

"But she covered up for the criminals. And not out of ignorance, but knowingly. Why does she protect Marquis Baek Seol-To? Why does she favor a mere cannibal? When they have clearly committed evil, isn't she, who protected them, also an utmost villain?"

Unspoken by Count Ah Ru-Ho, but included in the list of criminals, was the Sun King himself, seated on the throne.

A monarch secluded for sixty years. Under his rule devoid of politics, landlords exploited peasants without restraint, and nobles squeezed the people without interference. Over those unattended sixty years, riots and rebellions brewed throughout the kingdom.

"....."

The Sun King sat alone on his throne, enduring the silence.

And not just the king.

Duke of Apathetic Leisure, having lived as an ascendent for a thousand years, had committed numerous slaughters. Among the six Dukes, none were innocent of murder.

Within this grand parliament of the kingdom, among the hundreds of nobles, there was not a single person who hadn't caused someone's death.

"Jaa Soo-Jeong is at fault!"

Count Ah Ru-Ho was no different.

He, a robust warrior, had personally led several battles. There's no way there weren't unjust deaths in those wars. She had ruined lives, destroyed families, and thus bore the weight of many people's misfortunes.

"Even so, she dared to call the guilty 'lovable'! How shamelessly does she flaunt her love for the criminal! Even now, rather than repenting and correcting her mistakes to uphold the kingdom's ethics, she dares to love a criminal!"

Count Ah Ru-Ho attacked Jaa Soo-Jeong. But in reality, she was stabbing himself, and all the royalty and nobles present, more than anyone else.

"Viscount is a criminal!"

Count Ah Ru-Ho showed no pain.

Licking the blood from his own wound like a dog intoxicated by the hunt, she relentlessly tore into Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"Yes."

Jaa Soo-Jeong, who knew all of this better than anyone in the world, did not retort with [Aren't you the same kind of sinner?].

Nor did she declare [We are all the same sinners].

"That's right."

She simply affirmed.

"It's my fault."

The young deity willingly accepted all the finger-pointing and cries of the victims, as if savoring a sweet beverage.

"I am the sinner."

The evil deity was reveling.

"Then, I must be punished."

Perhaps Count Ah Ru-Ho was too focused on his rhetoric.

"....."

Had she paid a bit more attention, she might have wondered why the nobles belonging to Jaa Soo-Jeong's faction did not utter a single word of objection.

".....? What?"

Despite the king's lack of authority, he is still the sovereign of the kingdom's land. He had rights guaranteed by the law. He had numerous opportunities to interrupt Count Ah Ru-Ho's speech and defend Jaa Soo-Jeong.

But the Sun King did not defend the favorite he met for the first time in 60 years.

"Why do you say that, Count? I just agreed with your opinion."

The Duke of Apathetic Leisure was a mass murderer and a duke. Furthermore, she was a powerholder who did not regret a single killing or slaughter she committed.

She enjoyed rolling dice to decide people's fates, a habit long established and intended to continue far into the future. If anything had changed for the Duke of Apathetic Leisure, it was only that she no longer rolled the dice for Jaa Soo-Jeong alone.

However, even the Duke of Apathetic Leisure did not defend his pet of a thousand years.

"By agreeing with your view, you mean..."

"Everything is my fault, my responsibility, and as I am a sinner, I should rightfully be punished."

Marquis Baek Seol-To, who killed a child at a much younger age, had since become the head of her family. The Rabbit Marquisate had monopolized the northern port of the capital for generations. Three-tenths of the great river flowing through the kingdom belonged to her. The Marquis was very wealthy.

Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin, a former cannibal, knew how to use her infamy to her advantage. She eliminated the deep-rooted rot in her territory. She purged landowners owning windmills and executed local tyrants controlling the waterways. The Viscount took control of all the mills and waterways in her territory and offered them to the peasants at a cheap price. She had a lot of rice.

Viscount Dae Ha-Ran, a general of the royal army, once plotted a rebellion within the capital. She still excelled at killing people. She knew how to divide united enemies, collapse consolidated territories, and annihilate trained soldiers. The Viscount was very skilled in warfare.

".....So, you're acknowledging my argument?"

"Completely."

Yet, none of them defended their master.

If it wasn't due to a lack of love for their lover or loyalty to their master, there must be a reason for their collective silence.

"As such a heinous criminal in the history of the kingdom, I will submit a bill."

Jaa Soo-Jeong commanded silence.

"Clerk, please distribute the bill I've prepared."

Had the Count paid more attention.

No matter how notorious Jaa Soo-Jeong was as the [Madwoman of the Capital], it was unlikely she would keep smiling amid a stream of witnesses and evidence unfavorable to her. Perhaps she would have suspected that the entire political battle in the parliament was exactly [what Jaa Soo-Jeong wanted].

"A bill.....?"

"Yes. I propose this bill as a party line."

The Count didn't suspect.

"The bill's name is the Golden Rule."

And thus, she was hunted.

"Dear fellow members of the Noble Parliament."

Papers were distributed among the nobles. Splashing! Royal clerks hurriedly moved about, distributing the document equally to all factions.

"Someone might question."

As the highest-ranking individuals in the kingdom flipped through the pages, Jaa Soo-Jeong began her speech effortlessly.

"Do we really need a new duke in this era?"

Some nobles didn't read the document. They even lowered their eyes as if terrified to see it. Among the nobles were the Duke of Apathetic Leisure, Absolute Sword Duke, Inner Duke, Steadfast Duke, and Black Dragon Duke.

This indicated that the bill had already been discussed among the Dukes.

"My answer is clear. Yes, a seventh Duke is needed."

"....."

Among them, the All Gods Duke, the leader of the Religious Faction and part of the same faction as Count Ah Ru-Ho, looked up at his party leader in a daze.

The All Gods Duke, resembling the Heretic Inquisitor, grinned broadly.

"Sorry, Count! My sister asked to keep it a secret!"

"....."

Only then did the Count realize.

How easily the witnesses and evidence related to Jaa Soo-Jeong were assembled. Who had planned this political victory. The kingdom was already in Jaa Soo-Jeong's possession.

"If there are no particular problems in the current era, yes. There's no need to establish a new ducal position."

The deity who controlled the kingdom from the shadows spoke.

"But there's been too much rebellion, reaction, and rotten stench accumulated. Isn't that right? Respected members of the Noble Parliament. There are hundreds of thousands involved in the rebellion and millions of citizens who have lost loyalty to the kingdom. Someone must take responsibility for this era."

Impatient nobles read the summary on the last page first.

"The way to take responsibility is simple."

And then, confused, returned to the first page.

"Those sacrificed by the kingdom's administration in the last 60 years. Those unjustly involved in rebellion and had their lives ruined. Their families and descendants. Soldiers sacrificed under unjust orders. People who lost their homes due to public policies. Those who were robbed, physically harmed, displaced from their hometowns, or had relatives killed due to neglect or silence from royalty and nobility. Victims of racial discrimination. Enslaved and serfs. Specific examples include two Golden Dragon subjugation decrees, an internal war, three noble rebellions, and chaos caused by Red Nails and other rebel factions. Citizens who were unwillingly sacrificed."

In other words, all unjustly sacrificed citizens of the kingdom.

"The kingdom fully acknowledges its responsibility for them and will delegate all these responsibilities to the newly established seventh Duke."

In other words, Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"The principle for undertaking responsibility is as follows."

The kingdom's nobles looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"Those whose lives were ruined by the kingdom can transfer as much pain as they've suffered to the seventh Duke."

Torture.

"The method for delegating responsibility is as follows."

Nobles in Jaa Soo-Jeong's faction bowed their heads.

"Any citizen who wishes to avenge the seventh Duke can identify the main culprit who ruined their life and demand their attendance at the execution of the Golden Rule. For example, a freeman named Nam Seok can force Marquis Baek Seol-To to attend as a witness."

Vengeance.

"And no matter how much pain the seventh Duke suffers, the witness cannot stop the citizen or interfere with the execution of the Golden Rule. The witness can only observe."

The cost of sin.

"The date and place for implementing the responsibility are as follows."

The reason why today is a particular evil deity's trauma.

"Every year on December 24th, the last day of the Noble Parliament's year. From midnight of this day, the seventh Duke will make a round trip around the capital in a clockwise direction. The starting and ending point is the Platinum Square in front of the Platinum Tower. During this trip, any citizen of the kingdom, regardless of age, gender, or status, can approach the seventh Duke and demand the execution of the Golden Rule."

Today is December 24th.

"I will judge whether the citizen has the right to execute the Golden Rule."

Jaa Soo-Jeong possesses the [Breath of the Ice River Dragon].

She can directly witness the other person's past.

She can know if the kingdom truly ruined that citizen's life.

"If they are eligible, I will judge how much pain they suffered, and therefore, how much pain they can return to me. An arm for an arm, an eye for an eye. If once is not enough, continue next year, and the year after, until it's sufficient."

Jaa Soo-Jeong possesses the [Eyes of the Golden Dragon].

She can understand the color and size of the other person's emotions.

She can know how much pain the kingdom caused the citizen.

"While executing the Golden Rule, my body will be damaged, and I probably won't be able to walk properly, so I'll designate someone to support me. The one who caused the most pain to the citizens will support me."

Jaa Soo-Jeong had asked every powerholder she met to love her.

She asked for nothing else.

Now, they must smell the blood of their beloved lover from the closest place.

"I, as the leader of the Mirror Faction and the head of the Amethyst family, rightfully request you to vote on this bill according to the rights granted to all nobles by the Founder King. If passed, the Golden Rule will be implemented tonight."

The parliament fell silent.

The sound of flowing water echoed.

Perhaps outside, the snow of December was falling.

"Dear colleagues of the Parliament."

The Swaying Duke.

The noble who would become the seventh Duke smiled brightly.

"Let's punish the sinner."

Chapter 221: The God in the Square (1)

---

When Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke of sacrificing herself for the kingdom, she was beaming with a bright smile.

Looking at her smiling face, I suddenly recalled all the memories of my trauma.

'Yes.'

Beyond the mere fact that I am Kim Gong-Ja, the Vice-lord of the Demonic Heaven and the Moon of the Ivansia family, I remembered the hallucinations I had witnessed during this trauma.

'I've almost completely seen through the life of the Tower Master.'

The moment when Jaa Soo-Jeong ascended to the nobility.

First receiving the title of Baron, swiftly plunging the capital into a whirlwind of political strife, marrying a relative of the same sex.

'In every memory, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong was smiling.'

And I saw all the moments she smiled happily.

Despite my ability being to see [trauma].

'But that's not all.'

I knew that Jaa Soo-Jeong would eventually receive the title of a duke.

Even the moments that follow, I had already [seen] once.

'Why?'

Why did I see the moments when Jaa Soo-Jeong was happy?

Why did I even see what comes next?

'Could it be...'

Realizing the possibility regarding Jaa Soo-Jeong's authority, I came to a realization.

It was a possibility close to impossible, something a normal person would hardly think of.

But as someone who had undergone 4000 days of return, I could easily reach this conclusion.

'The life of the Tower Master is entirely a trauma.'

No matter how happily she smiled.

'From birth until now, continuously, there has been no [time that isn't trauma].'

The moment I realized this, I unwittingly spoke out.

".....Until when?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong turned to look at me.

I asked her.

"How long do you plan to execute this Golden Rule?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled.

"Forever."

"Until there is not a single aggrieved citizen left on this earth?"

"Yes. Not just the citizens. As I told you before, advisor, no, Mr. Gong-Ja?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong leaned towards me and whispered in my ear.

"I will encompass all worlds, beyond just the kingdom."

"....."

"I'm sorry, but I peeked into your memories, Mr. Gong-Ja. Since you're looking into mine right now, I suppose we've made a fair trade."

I had expected this.

Jaa Soo-Jeong has the power to intuitively understand someone's past.

It's unlikely she wouldn't look into the past of an irregular like me.

"The Vice-lord of Demonic Heavens. You are leading an interesting group, Mr. Gong-Ja. Well, it must take such a relationship to become this beautiful."

Jaa Soo-Jeong looked at me as if watching a beloved junior.

"I know you want to stop me. Someone like you couldn't tolerate the sight of others suffering. But Mr. Gong-Ja, please stay true to your role."

My role.

"You should be the one siding with the powerless people more than anyone else. You should be the first to execute the Golden Rule. To voice the screams of the weak. Isn't that the burden you've taken on?"

"I am....."

"Don't try to stop me. This is a warning."

Jaa Soo-Jeong toyed with my ear.

"I have a habit of inadvertently breaking things I find adorable."

"....."

"Don't think you're the first to try stopping me. Do you know how many tears His Majesty on that throne has shed? The tears I've received from my lovers alone could end next year's drought."

That wasn't likely a lie.

Nor was the warning she sent me a bluff.

Gods always warn once before breaking a human.

She had already once tried to stop me from seeing the trauma, warning me.

"You are....."

And like that time, considering the warning, I spoke.

"Are you happy doing this?"

"Yes."

Her little fingernail gently scratched near my ear.

"Don't you feel it? I'm happy. I possess the happiness and misfortune of my lovers. Just one smile from me is enough to make them happy, and just one gesture from me suffices to make them miserable. How could this not be enjoyable?"

"Even if you're tortured continuously in the future?"

"Even if I'm tortured continuously."

"Why... Why do you accept even pain as happiness?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled.

"Pain is painful. But there is a sweeter reward right before me."

"What is it?"

"The tears of my lovers. Watching them crumble and break while observing my agony. Such a sweet scene that I want to keep watching forever."

".....But you love your lovers. To bring pain to those you love is....."

"It's wrong, but all my lovers have killed or ruined someone."

"....."

"Isn't it natural justice for such people to suffer?"

"....."

"I've told you, Mr. Gong-Ja. You're not the first, nor will you be the last to try persuading me. I've crafted myself for this moment."

"Crafted.....?"

"Yes. A hobby of indulging in misfortune. A taste for admiring the ruined. Appearance and eloquence that can captivate them. Talent. Achievements that no one can deny and skills that no one can protest. I've strived and achieved all that."

"....."

"Shall I prove it?"

At that moment, a commotion arose in the middle of the seats.

"The chaos has all passed!"

He was a noble with horns on his head and an incredibly large stature. With a voice as thunderous as his size, the noble's declaration made the surface of the waters ripple.

"The rebellion has been suppressed! All the major disturbances have ended! We just need to clean up now. There's no need to prepare such an extreme law for....."

I used Baron Gu Won-Ha's information magic to read the noble's identity.

+

[Pa San-Woo]

Status: Noble, Borderland Count.

Relation: Viscount's adversary.

Danger Level: White.

Remarks: Head of the Cow Count family. Deeply involved in a past incident involving the abduction of another family's young lady. Facilitated or condoned the kidnapping, resulting in the complete ruin of one of the estates. Resides in the northeast, famous for mining, neighboring the Bear Count's territory. Captures all runaway mine slaves coming from the neighboring territory and returns them to the Bear Count.

Neutral.

Can be killed.

+

It wasn't just Count Pa San-Woo.

"This is ridiculous. No, even if..."

A noble of similar age to Jaa Soo-Jeong muttered in dismay. Flipping through the legislative documents, they quickly turned one, two, then four pages at a time, eventually grasping the entire stack.

"The parliamentarians of the Mirror faction... What about you all? This?"

The attendants behind Jaa Soo-Jeong remained silent, prompting the noble to clench his teeth.

"How could you, a young girl not much younger than me, regardless of the reason. No, even if it wasn't a young girl, it's the same. Any logic doesn't matter. I... I just dislike this bill. I just do!"

I read that noble's information too.

+

[Seon Jo-Hae]

Status: Noble, Nearby Duke.

Relation: None.

Danger Level: White.

Remarks: Head of the Crab Marquis family. Adventurous in his youth, they roamed the seas and was cursed by an Energy Dragon. Lost his memory and sense of self. Due to the reckless actions of a lady, the Duke's family fell into decline, and since then, the Dragon Kingdom has spread its influence, eroding the foundation of the Duke's family and territory.

His mental age is below 13, despite his appearance.

Failed to notice the rebels gathering in his own territory, inadvertently contributing to a major rebellion in the eastern sea.

Neutral.

Can be killed.

+

Many other nobles spoke up after that.

Each time, I read their information and found a [common point] in all of them.

'None.'

Not a single one.

'No one is innocent.'

That was the record left by the original owner of this body.

Baron Gu Won-Ha.

'In this vast parliament. Not a single one.'

Marquis Baek Seol-To murdered a child. Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin practiced cannibalism. Viscount Dae Ha-Ran massacred civilians. Count Pa San-Woo devoured an entire estate. Marquis Seon Jo-Hae failed to prevent a rebellion. Baron Hae Myeong-Seom, Duke of Apathetic Leisure, the Sun King...

Some were ignorant. Some were incompetent. Some were simply indifferent. A hundred nobles had a hundred reasons, and a thousand excuses for each reason.

But the commonality was clear.

Among them.

Not a single one was innocent.

"Everyone."

That's why Jaa Soo-Jeong was so composed.

"For the past thousand years, especially in the last six hundred years, and even more so in the last sixty years, you've been far too negligent."

No one here saved more citizens than Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"What did you all do when tens of thousands of human slaves in the Bear Duke's territory were mining and dying? Didn't you know? Lacked the power to intervene? Weren't prepared? Maybe. But such excuses are too weak for centuries."

No one here was more capable than Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"The turmoil has all passed? The rebellion has all ended?"

"....."

"You think the turmoil is over just because you defeated the noticeable enemies? Do you think they're gone? Everyone. They haven't disappeared, they are just enduring. A person who has been whipped never forgets the pain."

Indeed.

"A person whose family died never forgets the temperature of the soil that made their grave."

That's why in some other world, someone called the Heavenly Demon prayed.

"A person who had to step aside on the road to avoid a carriage never forgets that humiliation. A mother never forgets the day her son, drafted and never returned, lay in bed. A person never forgets the pain in their mouth from the tree bark they had to peel and eat during a winter day with no food."

Thus, someone like the Heavenly Demon prayed.

"Have they disappeared? Is it all a story of the past? Are their grievances so stale that they don't need to be resolved, their resentments so tedious they're not worth listening to?"

Impossible.

"That's impossible."

That's why they offered prayers.

"Don't make me laugh."

This world is no different. No world is different.

Someone is offering prayers.

This world too.

In Baron Sin Wol-Seok's territory, an untouched rock rolled by itself. In Steadfast Duke's territory, stones moved on their own, and the people whispered of ominous signs.

And Lady Baek Seol-To beat a commoner's child to death with a whip.

The river boiled every night for no reason. Frogs leaped in every waterway, only to crash their heads and die. In the capital, lightning struck twenty-six times in a day, "The number thirteen overlapping above and below makes twenty-six, an ominous sign," said a fortune-teller at the north gate.

And Viscount Dae Ha-Ran massacred civilians.

The fortune-teller was severely punished for recklessly predicting the country's fortune. The royal guards beheaded him. That day, even though the rainy season had not yet arrived, the river overflowed greatly, blocking all roads leading to the capital.

And the Sun King did not leave the palace.

"You all, those in power, must bear the responsibility of the past times."

Famines repeated. Epidemics were continuous. Time was like a rotten spine, with pus accumulating at every joint that recurred and continued.

The corpses of citizens flowed over the flooded river.

"Someone orchestrated all these events, neglected them, and therefore, you all must choose the one who deserves the condemnation of the entire population."

In the middle of a collapsing world, on a December day, a pillar in the shape of a girl stood, trying to support it.

"You will choose me."

The waters fell silent.

How much time had passed?

Marquis Seon Jo-Hae spoke with a trembling voice.

"I dislike this."

Jaa Soo-Jeong nodded.

"Yes. That's right."

And then she said.

"What other ending did you expect?"

---

The original owner of this body must have searched

desperately.

'Even just one would be fine.'

Baron Gu Won-Ha loved Jaa Soo-Jeong.

I didn't know the reason or see the cause, but from the Baron's writings, I could feel the weight of her love.

'Even if it's just one, there must be an innocent ruler in this damned kingdom.'

So the Baron began to record.

Using her magic, she investigated the actions of each noble, documenting her findings.

I, too, who inherited her body, looked at each noble attending the parliament. I read their information.

But the records left by Gu Won-Ha remained unchanged.

'Murderer.'

Mass murderers.

'Those who started a rebellion.'

Those who suppressed civil unrest.

'Those who bought slaves.'

Those who sold slaves.

'Those who erred out of ignorance.'

Those who created wrongs due to incompetence.

The information recorded by Baron Gu Won-Ha was a revelation of crimes. Among the hundreds of feet in the waters, not one was free from the blood of citizens.

So, Baron Gu Won-Ha gave up.

She couldn't stop her master.

'Maybe that's why I regained control of this body now...'

As I thought up to that point, I moved.

"Eh?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head slightly.

Her violet eyes reflected me, standing in front of her.

"Didn't I warn you, Mr. Gong-Ja? I am-"

"Trauma."

I said.

Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head even more.

"Huh?"

"Viscount. I have seen your trauma."

"I know. You're seeing it now, aren't you?"

"Not just this moment. The moment you first received the title of Baron, the moment you married your wife... I've almost entirely seen through your life."

I grasped Jaa Soo-Jeong's wrist.

"If you were truly happy, those scenes wouldn't have appeared before my eyes."

"Maybe?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong cocked her head.

"Maybe I've only started to become a bit happier recently? Despite appearances, my life has been a display of hardships. From today, true happiness begins."

"No."

Your smile hasn't changed since that day.

"I saw that you eventually received the title of Duke."

Your smile hasn't changed since then either.

"Even today, and from here on, you will continue to experience times of trauma."

"That's a strange thing to say, King of Death."

Jaa Soo-Jeong called me by a nickname I had never revealed.

Her claim of reading my past was no lie.

"Are you saying that I'm actually unhappy and just pretending to be happy? That's a bit offensive. If I had lied like that, my lovers would've noticed, wouldn't they? I am-

"[The God Who Never Returns]."

I moved closer to Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"The reason your entire life is pain is simple. It's obvious. You're always seeing [someone else's past]. You've seen the past of Marquis Baek Seol-To, Viscount Dae Ha-Ran, and even my past, which I wasn't aware of."

In essence.

"You've never had a moment where you weren't witnessing someone's death."

"That must be painful. That's why your life is stained with hundreds of millions of traumas."

Closer.

"But, it's strange. You only acquired the powers of [Golden Dragon's Eye] and [Ice River Dragon's Breath] relatively recently. The ability to freely peek into others' pasts is a fairly new development. Yet, you've been in pain throughout your entire life."

I had seen the era of Jaa Soo-Jeong before she gathered the dragons.

Even then, she suffered from reading others' pasts.

How?

Without the dragons' powers in that era, how could she have suffered the same way as now, inheriting others' pain?

There's only one possibility.

"The God Who Never Returns? That's a ridiculous lie."

"....."

"You are [The God Who Continuously Returns]."

I looked at the young noble.

"You returned to the past with the dragons' powers. Thus, from your childhood to now, you've continuously been able to see others' traumas."

When she faced the Duke of Apathetic Leisure, Jaa Soo-Jeong instantly deciphered her life.

As if she had always known.

When she met the Sun King, she already knew his life.

As if she had long suspected.

"You've been incessantly repeating this life."

"....."

"Regressing, returning. Living the same life each time. Knowing exactly what to say, how to act. You're eternally repeating this life, continuously watching others' pain."

"....."

"That's why your entire life is a trauma."

Jaa Soo-Jeong fell silent.

I asked her.

"How many times have you repeated this life, Tower Master?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong did not smile.

"Have you counted, seen how many times?"

Expressionless.

Time in the parliament hall had seemingly stopped.

Marquis Seon Jo-Hae, with their head bowed in anger, tears streaming, the Sun King, silently sitting, everyone had frozen in time.

"Mr. Gong-Ja."

In the time broken like a stopped clock, Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke.

"Have you ever counted the sand grains in the river that flows to Nirvana?"

Ganges sands.

"My answer is predetermined."

Jaa Soo-Jeong's face, expressionless as if she was born that way, bore no emotion. Her violet eyes indifferently reflected the world, her lips neither mocking, blessing, nor scoffing.

"Forever."

In that moment, the scenery shattered.

Chapter 222: The God in the Square (2)

---

The world shattered like a mirror.

Craaack-.

Slowly, bit by bit, the scenery of the parliament hall crumbled. The amniotic fluid flowing underfoot shattered. Marquis Baek Seol-To trembling beside me shattered. The nobles shattered. Craaack! Crack...

As if shedding its skin, the world transformed through the shattered windowpane.

Through the fissures of the fracture, a different landscape peeked through, not of the parliament. The sight of Marquis Baek Seol-To wielding a whip. Viscount Dae Ha-Ran burning a village. The world split into a hundred, a thousand fragments. From each crack, screams leaked out.

"That's right, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Kaleidoscope.

This was Jaa Soo-Jeong's world.

"Your deduction is correct."

Splash.

Jaa Soo-Jeong, with amniotic fluid on her feet, walked to the center of the parliament. As she stepped, the world shattered around her, crack, crack, and through each broken scene, another place was revealed.

"This life of mine isn't the first."

"....."

I inhaled sharply.

"How many times has it been?"

“I'm not sure. Well, I could find out, but I wonder if it would be the answer you're seeking, Mr. Gong-Ja. Are you worried that I, after repeating countless lives, will eventually collapse in exhaustion?”

Indeed.

Raviel is a strong person. Even Raviel, trapped in a repeating cycle of ten days, had her heart rot away. What if someone, not just for ten days but for an entire lifetime, is perpetually repeating it?

What would gather in their heart?

What foul stench would emanate?

“I was bestowed with an innate ability from the beginning.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong had reached the center of the parliament by now.

Even the central throne was shattered like glass. The armrest of the chair broke off, and through the void, glimpses of Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin engaging in cannibalism flickered. One leg of the throne was also broken. There, too, someone unknown was dying.

“In this world, many dragons have lived and existed.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong sat down.

On the throne with broken armrests and a shattered leg.

She rested her arms on the sight of people killing each other, and her legs on the sight of people being killed.

“There are those who have made special contracts with dragons. The Dragon Emperor's guards, Dragon Knights. The titles vary by region, but they share one thing: their descendants inherit the Dragon Blood.”

“Dragon Blood?”

“Yes. It's like a minor copy version of the powers possessed by dragons.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong caressed the armrest of the glass throne.

“For example, imagine a dragon that can build a vast library, stocking it with records of everything in the world. That's the dragon's power. In contrast, the ability of Dragon Blood would merely allow one to enter that library and occasionally borrow books.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong was expressionless.

Her lips, no longer smiling, parted.

“The relationship between the Dragon Emperor and the Dragon Knights can be likened to that of a god and its followers. Hence, those who receive Dragon Blood are sometimes called apostles.”

I flinched.

“Apostles...”

“Among the apostles you know, Lady Goldencup would be one.”

The image of the lady, wielding a giant hammer and cursing the world, came to mind.

Goldencup's power. It was a body impervious to physical damage.

“My ability is [Perfect Memory].”

Jaa Soo-Jeong said.

“I remember everything I've seen, heard, and felt. Not only remember, but I can also revisit those memories as if in a lucid dream.”

“Doesn't it sound familiar, Mr. Gong-Ja?”

There was.

Very close by.

I recalled the face of a part-time worker who now greets customers with a beaming smile in some café.

The former owner of the Grand Library that once collected records of everything in existence. The Great Librarian of All Knowledge.

“Hamusutra.....”

“[The Pond Where Memories Gather].”

Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke the librarian's true name.

“I inherited Hamusutra’s powers. Long ago, an apostle who worshiped Hamusutra as a god descended into this kingdom. Although the apostle was eventually defeated and perished, they left behind a descendant before dying. If you trace my lineage, it leads to that apostle.”

Thanks to that, Jaa Soo-Jeong said.

“Things like this are possible.”

It was the moment she raised a finger.

Craaack-.

The glass window that covered the whole world shattered once again. A shard of glass fell, touching another identical shard. When the two shards collided, they suddenly shone brightly, turning into a pure white butterfly.

The two shards of glass became the wings of the butterfly. The world, shattered into millions of pieces, fell, and from them, hundreds of thousands of butterflies fluttered.

Craaack, crack...

Like flower petals carried by the wind, white butterflies bloomed all over this world.

"Come here, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Jaa Soo-Jeong beckoned.

"....."

I took a deep breath and headed towards the mirror throne.

Crackle.

Around me, white butterflies already fluttered chaotically. One passed right in front of my nose. A voice leaked from the butterfly's wings. -The count has fallen in battle, young lady.

The butterfly was made of two glass shards. Each silvery wing harbored its own scene. On the wings of this butterfly was portrayed Count Ah Ru-Ho.

The young count's lips moved slightly.

-What about my eldest brother?

-No news. He led a squad to retrieve the count's remains, but we've yet to hear back. I must disrespectfully say, it's likely...

-Ah.

-Young lady. It's unavoidable. You are a dignified member of the Tiger Count's family. Misfortune befalls everyone, but a tiger swallows the incoming misfortune, chews it up, and then spits it towards the world that dared challenge them.

-I'm ignorant of politics. I'm not ready.

-People are born into the world unprepared, and meet death unprepared. Life isn't about preparation, but endurance. Young lady, ascend to the seat of the count.

The white butterfly lightly flew away.

Into the midst of countless butterflies fluttering like dense flower petals.

"....."

On the wings of one butterfly was the image of Marquis Baek Seol-To, holding back tears. Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin, clenching his teeth, was there too.

Viscount Dae Ha-Ran muttered, suppressing his anger.

-During the rebellion, those cowardly bastards did nothing. In the parliament, they all act like great generals and decorated heroes. Damn, should I just wipe out these bastards?

Hundreds of thousands of butterflies, each emitting their own sound, fluttered away.

“As you can see.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke to me, who had reached the throne.

“All the past events I've experienced are recorded here. Originally, I could only remember my own life, but after acquiring [Golden Dragon's Eye] and [Ice River Dragon's Breath], I began to encompass others' lives as well.”

"....."

“This is a world where my memories are recorded. Only two people, including you, have ever stepped foot here. You can take pride in it, Mr. Gong-Ja.”

“Am I invited into the lady's consciousness right now?”

“Yes. That’s right.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong spread her palms.

“In your terms, you're peeking into my skill.”

A card, glittering in gold, formed there.

Among the skills possessed by the Tower Master, this was the last card.

+

[All Lives ]

Rank: EX

Effect: Originally, it was just an ability of ‘perfect memory.’ However, it has blossomed into a completely higher-dimensional skill through the overlap with various other skills. This is a glass garden where every human, object, and event you've experienced is faithfully recorded. If you wish, you can replay any of the memories stored here.

But there's more.

+

Flutter.

Something landed on the back of my hand.

It was the butterfly I had seen earlier.

-Aaaaah!

From the transparent surface of its glassy wings, a red scene flowed. A scene now somewhat familiar to me. The playback of Marquis Baek Seol-To whipping.

Only.

The face of the child groaning under the whip was different.

-Ugh, huff! Ah, aaaaah!

It was Jaa Soo-Jeong's face.

Much younger than now.

I involuntarily gasped.

“Lady, what is this...?”

“If on that day, it wasn't a commoner child but I who faced Marquis Baek Seol-To's daughter.”

Whack!

The thick whip tore into young Jaa Soo-Jeong's back, blood staining the snow.

"This is a scenario flowing under the assumption of 'what if'. I completely grasp the cause and effect of the past. 'What if someone else had been there then.' 'What if something else had happened.' I can reconstruct countless IF scenarios."

"Why would you view such IF scenarios...?"

"To know."

A scream burst forth.

"How much pain the child killed by the marquis had endured."

In the scene reflected by the glassy wings, Jaa Soo-Jeong foamed at the mouth and collapsed to the ground.

"People don't want to be easily understood. They dislike when someone hastily says 'I understand you', without truly grasping how much they've suffered, how much pain they've endured. It's understandable. To each other, they are strangers."

Whack!

The small back convulsed.

Struck by the whip, Jaa Soo-Jeong clenched and twisted the snow on the ground, as if trying to grasp onto a dying life.

"I will stand before those who have suffered in this kingdom and say, 'I know how much pain you've endured.'"

The snow gripped in her hand melted from her body heat.

It trickled down.

At the end of the melting snow, a pool of blood had formed.

The clear water slowly spread over the crimson surface.

"I know the pain they have experienced, the pain they have endured, the pain they will endure. Only when I fully understand all of it, can I finally speak to them without any lies."

I know how much you've suffered.

"Now tell me to endure the same pain."

"The Golden Rule..."

"Yes. That's right. Only through me can the kingdom's marginalized and sacrificed people finally feel understood."

"....."

"Those with grievances and hatreds that had nowhere to go, nobody to direct them at, can now vent on me. Do you see? I don't just console them with mere sympathy or with words alone."

Jaa Soo-Jeong said.

"I truly understand."

With transparent eyes.

"They can be truly understood."

"....."

"By ascending to the position of the duke, not a single person in the kingdom will be neglected anymore. Of course, misfortune will not stop. Someone will suffer. But now, through me, the kingdom will understand their pain. Accept it. Alleviate it."

I...

Once again, I looked around blankly.

-Save me! Please, general, save me!

It was hell.

-Aaaaah!

-Ugh, .....huff. Ah.....

In this glass garden, Jaa Soo-Jeong bled, screamed, and died on behalf of others. From the pillars of the garden, from the arches supporting the dome, from the countless glass windows forming the walls. Around the pillars, under the dome, beside the walls, from the fluttering wings of hundreds of thousands of butterflies. Everywhere, Jaa Soo-Jeong bled.

-My, my name is Baek Seol-To, the marquis's daughter.

It wasn't just that.

-In your position as a commoner. Consider it an honor!

In an IF scenario on one of the glass wings, Baek Seol-To visited Jaa Soo-Jeong to apologize.

In that world, Jaa Soo-Jeong didn't die.

Compared to the original commoner child, Jaa Soo-Jeong was stronger and healthier. Although her body was damaged from the whipping, it wasn't fatal.

-My name is Jaa Soo-Jeong.

-Jaa Soo-Jeong? What a strange name.

-You are, lady...

In that world, Jaa Soo-Jeong and Baek Seol-To grew closer.

Born a commoner, Jaa Soo-Jeong was intelligent and capable enough to fill the gaps in Baek Seol-To's knowledge.

Thanks to secret tutoring from Jaa Soo-Jeong, Baek Seol-To managed to complete the homework her grandfather assigned.

-I, I got praised by grandpa for the first time! What do I do!? I'm so happy. I can't stop smiling...

-Congratulations, lady.

-Yes! It's all thanks to Jaa Soo-Jeong!

Baek Seol-To grabbed Jaa Soo-Jeong's hand and jumped for joy.

There was no sign of the haughty, prejudiced noble lady, only disdainful of mixing with commoners.

A small coincidence created change.

A small change led to an encounter.

A small encounter was creating a human.

-I will live for you.

Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin, who met Jaa Soo-Jeong a bit earlier, smiled brightly.

No, she was no longer a viscount. Chun Heuk-Shin abandoned her noble status and joined the special forces with Jaa Soo-Jeong. The two became close colleagues and caught criminals of the kingdom, one by one.

-Civilian massacres should be avoided, general.

-Why?

Viscount Dae Ha-Ran, with Jaa Soo-Jeong as his advisor, pursed his lips.

-Isn't it faster to massacre?

-Faster, but not right. It will make things much more difficult later. This may be enemy territory now, but it will eventually be reclaimed as royal land. General, you must create citizens for the kingdom, not enemies...

Countless glasses.

Countless white butterflies.

In countless worlds, Jaa Soo-Jeong bled, screamed, and died. This was the left wing of the butterfly.

And on the right were slightly better possibilities. Scenes without victims, without murderers, continued. This was the right wing of the butterfly.

Her world was filled with many butterflies, and with them, many deaths and lives.

"Because I wasn't there."

Glass and butterflies. Blood and screams. Death and life.

"Because I was too late. Because I was born too late. Every tragedy in this world happened."

Under the white fluttering butterflies.

The god clasped her small hands together as if praying somewhere.

"If I had been there, you all would have met a slightly better ending. Lived a slightly happier life. It's my fault, my sin for not always being there with you. So, I will scream as much as you have suffered."

Forever.

"....."

I read the rest of the words engraved on the card.

+

[All Lives ]

Rank: EX

Effect: Originally, it was just an ability of 'perfect memory.' However, it has blossomed into a completely higher-dimensional skill through the overlap with various other skills. This is a glass garden where every human, object, and event you've experienced is faithfully recorded. If you wish, you can replay any of the memories stored here.

But there's more.

You know how past events were constructed through various causes. The more precisely you understand these causes, the more accurately you can construct IF scenarios.

You can simulate the world.

*However, this skill can only be activated when possessing [Golden Dragon's Gaze] and [Ice River Dragon's Breath].

+

There, lay a skill that could create hell.

“Mr. Gong-Ja.”

The owner of All Lives spoke.

“You asked how many times I have repeated this life.”

"....."

“It’s pointless to answer how many times. I don’t just repeat my own life. The kingdom’s citizens, everyone who lived and died in the kingdom. I eternally live their lives on their behalf.”

Therefore.

That’s why Jaa Soo-Jeong’s life was a trauma.

The reason why her entire life was chosen as a trauma unlike others.

"Always..."

I was at a loss for words.

"Are you always replaying these scenes, even while sitting in the parliament just now?"

"Yes."

"And even while smiling in front of your lovers?"

"Yes."

Jaa Soo-Jeong said.

"I'm sorry."

Thud.

A word fell from Jaa Soo-Jeong's expressionless face.

"I'm sorry."

"....."

"I'm sorry for being born late. For not living with you. For not being able to save you."

I'm sorry.

The butterflies fluttering around the glass garden all simultaneously uttered that one phrase. Happy IF scenarios faded. The silvery wings reflected reality, where Baek Seol-To whipped a young commoner, Viscount Chun Heuk-Shin devoured human flesh, and Viscount Dae Ha-Ran burned down a village.

"I'm sorry."

The young god apologized to everyone.

For all the deaths that occurred in this kingdom, all the disasters, all the catastrophes. To those killed by people. To those who killed people. To those killed by non-human entities. To non-humans.

For everything.

“I'm sorry, everyone.”

That was the only sound left in her heart.

“Lady...”

Unable to endure, I took a step forward,

“I'm sorry, Mr. Gong-Ja.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong grasped my left hand.

“Because I wasn't by your side, Mr. Gong-Ja.”

A warm something passed from her hand into mine.

Looking down, in the grip of our hands, a white butterfly had folded its wings and curled up.

“That's why you were killed by Yoo Soo-Ha.”

For a moment.

My breath stopped.

“That's why you had no choice but to kill Yoo Soo-Ha.”

Rustle.

The butterfly slowly opened its white wings.

And the world reflected in the glassy wings unfolded.

Volume 10 – Chapters 223-248

Chapter 223: If (1)

---

Looking back.

Jaa Soo-Jeong, the Viscount, had clearly warned me.

-Don't try to stop me. This is a warning.

Right before I unlocked her lock.

She already knew I held the key in my hand.

If she had been a brute, she would have made the key unusable. She wouldn't have answered my questions or given me the correct answers to my probing.

Jaa Soo-Jeong could have done that.

But she didn't.

She just calmly forewarned that the lock I would open would lead to a secret room, and the person who would get hurt in that room would be none other than me.

-I have a habit of inadvertently ruining lovely children.

I unlocked the lock.

And received the consequence as the god warned.

---

-Yoo Soo-Ha.

A familiar bar.

A dim atmosphere.

There were many expensive bars on the first floor of the tower. Fully operated bars, indistinguishable from those in the outside world, importing high-end bottles from the outside, selling them at eye-watering prices.

A rip-off.

But as in the world, there were customers who sweetly accepted being ripped off, like a shoulder massage. No matter the price, there were customers lining up.

The outside world, now unreachable.

The illusion of stopping by an ordinary bar outside, spending an ordinary day, was worth pouring in several gold coins.

-Yoo Soo-Ha.

-Ahh...?

The bar where Yoo Soo-Ha woke up was a beer house.

A so-called 'Hof'.

In the vast Babylon, the only place that replicated a Korean-style Hof. There was a large fridge, and inside it, familiar branded beer cans were stacked neatly.

Cheap silver cans pretending to be cool with blue lettering. Cans with tacky gold trim, boasting their 'gold' as a sign of luxury. And so on.

Ironically, none of the brands had Korean labels, all in English.

-Oh, what now...

For Yoo Soo-Ha, those beer cans were proof of his homeland.

The country he fled from, where people had to loudly proclaim their love for their native script. In other words, the homeland's script wasn't much loved.

Everything born in that land wasn't loved.

Citizens disliked their fellow citizens. People disliked other people. They hated the children they birthed, the parents who gave them birth. People who hated each other gathered and built schools. They hated it there too.

-Why wake me up, whyy...?

Yoo Soo-Ha learned only how to hate people in that country.

Born among people who hated each other, growing up with them, what else could he learn? Math? Language? As useless as moral science classes. Essentially, Yoo Soo-Ha learned nothing but hatred there.

Among the parents who bore them, how many could loudly claim,

"I love humans."

How many parents could sincerely say they love humans, without any falsehood?

Not just parents, but teachers too. For 12 long years, numerous teachers occupied Yoo Soo-Ha's time. He inhaled their breath into his lungs.

Yoo Soo-Ha wanted to ask,

"Do you really love humans, teacher?"

Probably not.

But the opposite question could be easily answered.

"Do you hate humans?"

Then his own parents would be the first to raise their hands. "Yes." The father of the classmate behind him would too. "Yes." And finally, among all the parents and students, the teacher at the podium would nod.

-Of course, I hate humans too.

So.

Screw you.

-Yoo Soo-Ha, you're totally drunk.

Someone patted his shoulder.

Small hands.

-This isn't a classroom, Yoo Soo-Ha. Do you see me?

-Ah, shit... Damn it... what... where is this?

-Right. This is actually a school. Yes. It's the high school classroom you attended.

-You said it wasn't a school before, didn't you?

-Which school would serve beer cans for lunch?

Thud.

Someone placed two giant beer cans on the table.

The drunken Yoo Soo-Ha twitched his shoulders. His bleary eyes focused on the two pillars in front of his nose and sniffed.

-Eh...?

-It's beer. Korean beer that you can't live without. I think it's the worst beer in the world, but just like people from an island country love their hometown food, there must be one or two who love Korean beer the most. Here. Drink up.

-Woah... where is this?

-Two possibilities.

-Tell me! My manager!

-First, you skipped night study at school and rode a scooter with friends to a bar street in Samcheong-dong. Decided to drink beer instead of soju, entered a seemingly decent Hof, and drank till you were wasted.

-Drunk! Drun-k! Drunk!

Yoo Soo-Ha shook the beer can like an ancient barbaric warrior.

The can overflowed, and Yoo Soo-Ha happily received the holy water bestowed by Dionysus on his head.

Yoo Soo-Ha didn't care, the bar owner didn't care, and the person speaking to Yoo Soo-Ha didn't care.

-The second possibility is, you're no longer a high school student, not in Samcheong-dong's cheap bar street, not even in Korea, but already an S-Rank Hunter. You stormed into this Hof for no reason to taste the hometown flavor and got wasted.

-Hmm.

-Which scenario do you prefer, Yoo Soo-Ha?

-What was the weather like outside... in the outside world?

-The current weather in Korea is simply rainy. Yesterday's rain is still falling today, and today's rain falls twice. The sticky humidity fills the neighborhood, just passing by the street will stress you out. Your stress level will drop by -1, -1, -1, from the dot damage.

-Did I bring an umbrella...?

-You didn't. Neither did I.

-Dammit. Then let's go with the second possibility! Damn it!

Yoo Soo-Ha emptied another can and turned around.

-Owner! Er, here's the payment!

-First, let's see if you can walk in a straight line.

A girl snatched Yoo Soo-Ha's wallet. Inside were numerous bills printed by the Bank of Korea. After counting the bills, the girl asked.

-How much is it, boss?

-He drank a lot. Including side dishes, it's 60,000 won.

-My goodness.

The girl looked back at Yoo Soo-Ha and glared.

-You drank that much?

-Sorry. I feel like I'm gonna burp...

-It's not burp but alcohol you'll vomit out. Then maybe you could get a discount. Ordering five side dishes and eleven beer cans by yourself. Can all that fit in your stomach?

-Ugh... Glu... Hu... Cough! Weh... Cough! Waaah!

-Disgusting.

The girl's expression soured.

-I'll clean it up. Don't worry, owner.

-No, no, it's okay. It's all part of the service. Anyway, it's 60,000 won.

The girl took out the Korean bills from the wallet and handed them over.

And from then on, the [illusion of a bar] unfolded its magic.

-Ten thousand won worth of Korean bills is one gold coin, right?

-Recently the exchange rate has risen a bit. It's not easy to get Korean money here.

The bar owner whispered.

-Chinese or Japanese money can be easily brought in, but Korean money is really only for collection purposes in Babylon...

-I'll give you two more gold coins. Please prepare a good amount of cash. That way, customers can pay in Korean money and receive change in Korean money too.

-Ah, you're Yoo Soo-Ha's manager, indeed. So smart and attentive to our business needs.

The bar owner repeatedly bowed to the small girl.

Indeed.

A bar in Babylon Tower is a space of [magic].

This place is Korea. They only accept and give out Korean money. Thus, customers can taste common beers found in Korean Hof bars, domestic beers, Belgian style beers, and bottled Chinese beers. They can also enjoy boneless chicken, seasoned chicken, and somewhat oddly flavored pizzas, all cooked by the chef.

-Recently, the military provocations in the Korean Strait are escalating day by day...

Even the bar's television broadcasts outside world news,

Korean news specifically.

It was a bizarre sight.

This Korean-style beer house had few Korean drinks on the menu. The few Korean drinks were all branded in English. The side dishes were either chicken or pizza, neither of which originated in Korea.

In this beer house, payments were made in Korean money. At least upfront. Behind the scenes, they counted the exchange value between gold and Korean money, trying to ensure the [casino chips] named Korean money didn't run out.

None of the people clinking their beer glasses and cheering in the bar were Korean. Not a single one.

Those who abandoned their country to enter the tower had their nationality revoked for one reason or another.

In a land without a country, the patrons cried out the patriotism of some country, got heated about politics, argued, and sometimes even came to blows.

-Yoo Soo-Ha.

A city of exiles.

-Are you sober now?

-Uh, well... more or less... Ah, usually I'd just use Aura to wash away the hangover. But I can't today because of our promise... Thought I was gonna die from drinking.

-Because you promised me.

Someone with the girl's voice spoke calmly.

-Today, under no circumstances, use Aura.

-Yeah, well... Hey, damn. How did I make such a promise? I don't remember.

-On the way back from the floor raid, you bet with Black Dragon Witch whether assassins would attack or not. You bet they would. I bet they wouldn't.

-Ah, ah.

Yoo Soo-Ha grimaced.

-Remember now. Damn it. Black Dragon Witch. That daughter of a bitch. That dog-like bastard. Hey, Jaa Soo-Jeong, do you know? The characters in [dog-like bastard] look like a real puppy? Look. [Dog] is the head and front legs. [like] is the body and hind legs. [ard] is the buttocks and tail. Look. Dog-Like Bastard. Wow. I'm a genius. It's really like a puppy, isn't it?

-That's right. Yoo Soo-Ha really is a son of a Yoo Soo-Ha.

-Umm...?

-I'm somewhat relieved you're regaining your senses, but that 'somewhat' makes me anxious. Don't tell me, Yoo Soo-Ha. You forgot about the interview tomorrow, right?

-Tomorrow's... intervieweeew...?

-Yes.

The girl.

A hunter with the appearance of Jaa Soo-Jeong answered briefly.

-We're interviewing for a new manager.

Snap!

Yoo Soo-Ha grabbed Jaa Soo-Jeong's small shoulder.

-I don't need a new manager!

-It hurts.

-Hey, Jaa Soo-Jeong! Is there something you're unhappy with? If you're unhappy, tell me. I'll listen to anything. Is the salary too low? Should I pour cash into your mouth until it tastes like salty water? Someone bothering you? Who is it, these damn little bastards...? Hey? I'll cut off their limbs and throw them away in the hunting grounds of Floor 2... Hey? Jaa Soo-Jeong! I'm a generous man. Just tell me!

-I...

-Yes! What, what? Anything, I'll listen!

-I lack strength to move things, it's hard.

-Oh...?

-And driving with Yoo Soo-Ha sitting behind me is a nightmare. My butt, back, and neck hurt when I drive.

-Ah...

-We need a new manager. Yoo Soo-Ha. For a star hunter like you, it's inevitable to need manpower.

-I can just carry that stuff myself.

-And drive yourself too?

-Yeah.

-You sure?

-Yeah, but it won't look cool. Sorry. Can't do it... I can do anything else, but killing my style is something I can't accept...

-If we don't hire a new manager, I'll die of overwork. Hire someone. Otherwise, I'll resign.

-Ah! Ah! What! Why are you even considering resigning, Jaa Soo-Jeong Deputy!

-When did the title of Deputy come between us?

-Just now. It's my guild, I'm the boss, I'm the king. From now on, you're Deputy Jaa Soo-Jeong.

-Haa...

Jaa Soo-Jeong sighed.

-Then, as planned, I'll enter the manager interview tomorrow.

-That's what I'm doing too, right? Huh?

-Of course. It's about hiring Yoo Soo-Ha's manager.

When we returned to the guild building, a flashy banner was already hung.

[Recruiting a manager for the world's No. 1 S-Rank Hunter, the Tyrant of Babylon Tower, Hunter Yoo Soo-Ha.]

Chapter 224: If (2)

---

[Recruiting a manager for the world's No. 1 S-Rank Hunter, the Tyrant of Babylon Tower, Hunter Yoo Soo-Ha.]

Looking at the banner, Yoo Soo-Ha frowned.

-Jaa Soo-Jeong.

-Yes.

-Deputy Jaa Soo-Jeong.

-Speak.

-Doesn't this kind of miss the mark of the event's purpose?

-Is there a problem?

Jaa Soo-Jeong's expression remained calm.

-I prepared it splendidly, considering Yoo Soo-Ha's status as a figure of the century's attention. Reporters will come at the appointed time tomorrow, and there are even planned articles about who will be selected as Yoo Soo-Ha's close associate. For the next two weeks, Yoo Soo-Ha's face will decorate the main portal sites. Congratulations. It's well done.

-Where does such a damn competent manager come from, ah, damn, Jaa Soo-Jeong. This uncle loves you fiercely! You know that, right!?

-It's hot. I can't breathe. It's dirty. Don't come any closer. If you do, don't breathe.

-Hey! Why am I dirty!?

-Since when has someone who flaunted a triple axel overflow been expected to emit a fragrant scent?

-Damn. Should have showered first...

-So, you don't like the banner?

-No, it's not that I don't like it... Just a moment.

Yoo Soo-Ha went into the guild's storage and returned with a paint can.

-Here we go.

With the handiwork of someone who's painted walls in his youth, Yoo Soo-Ha brushed the banner. As the strokes continued, the banner lost its original content and was completely smeared with new words.

-Good. Done. Looks amazing.

-.....

[Recruiting a servant for the world's No. 1 S-Rank Hunter, the Tyrant of Babylon Tower, Hunter Yoo Soo-Ha's manager.]

Jaa Soo-Jeong was momentarily at a loss for words.

-Yoo Soo-Ha.

-Hmm.

-Guild Master Yoo Soo-Ha.

-What.

-The content of the banner has completely changed.

-I told you, you're the deputy. Since there's a deputy, there should be subordinates.

Yoo Soo-Ha spoke as if stating the world's most natural truth.

-How can some newbie, uh, expect to be treated the same as a manager who has been taking care of me for a long time? Huh? Social life isn't that easy. Deputy Jaa Soo-Jeong.

-Indeed...

-Our guild always respects seniority. I'm forever the damn powerful guild leader, His Majesty. Jaa Soo-Jeong, since you're the second to join, you have the right to boss around the underlings. Whatever the position, manager or whatever, call it whatever you want. Just pick a decent servant. Someone who can do some heavy lifting. And driving. Huh? Anyway, select a proper servant.

-Understood.

-Okay. Then I'll go... Oh... Uweeek!!

That day, right where Yoo Soo-Ha vomited for the fourth time, the interview took place.

Of course, since Jaa Soo-Jeong had meticulously cleaned up with a mop, the guild's 100 gold coins per tile floor shone brightly. Sparkling.

-What motivated you to apply for this job?

Jaa Soo-Jeong sat in the interviewer's seat, looking at the applicants.

The faces of the applicants sparkled just like the freshly cleaned tiles.

-I-I am a hunter from the same East Asian region as the Flame Emperor! East Asia can do it! Given the same conditions in the tower, East Asia has an advantage! I'm here to prove that...

-You're talking nonsense.

-What?

Jaa Soo-Jeong shook her head.

-Our guild leader dislikes his homeland. He also dislikes the countries surrounding his homeland. He dislikes the earth that hosts these countries and the universe where the earth exists.

-.What?

-And he'll probably dislike you too. Next.

Disqualified.

-What motivated you to apply?

-I have always deeply admired the Flame Emperor.

-What about him do you find humanly attractive?

-First of all, I'm mesmerized by his Apollo statue-like refined beauty.

-The Apollo statue comparison is so overused that even hearing it makes my eardrums cringe, but fine. This isn't a poetry sensitivity test. Continue.

-Most of all, his beautiful heart that cares and looks after others...

-That's bullshit.

Disqualified.

-Honestly, I applied because I want to sleep with the Flame Emperor just once.

-Is that so?

-Yes, it is.

-.....

-.....

-Please sign here.

-What's this document? Is it the acceptance document?

-No, it's a confidentiality agreement. A document created by top-tier hunters with their skills. If you divulge anything you hear here, about thirteen holes will spontaneously appear in your body, resulting in your life [Oh, there's an exit here? I gotta leave!] fleeing from you.

-.....

-Are you going to sign?

-I'll sign.

-You really signed.

-Yes, I really did.

-Then I'll tell you.

-I'm listening.

-Yoo Soo-Ha is impotent.

-.....

-.....

-.....

-.....

-What?

-Impotent. Erectile dysfunction. Should I explain it using not just nouns but verbs and adjectives too? Would that help you understand?

-No, I mean. I. That's... uh...

-Remember the thirteen holes.

-By the way, the thirteen holes don't include eye sockets, nostrils, ear holes, belly button, pee hole, or anus. It's the other holes that make up the thirteen. Aren't you curious about how evolutionarily grand your body can be in terms of holes?

-I won't divulge anything even if it kills me.

-Next.

Disqualified.

-I am...

And then...

-I mean, that's... uh...

A scruffy man sat in the interview seat.

-Um, just once... even if it's just once, I want to breathe the same air as the highest person in this world.

Jaa Soo-Jeong looked at the man.

-Why do you think that?

-Compared to where I live now... there's something different... I don't know exactly, but there must be something. No, there will be. There has to be.

-.....

-I, I have no talent and only strange skills... I can't ascend to that [height], but I can assist someone who is ascending. No.

The man stood up from his chair, bowing deeply.

-I must, want to assist! Please let me be there! I'll do any menial task! My salary? Just enough not to starve or freeze to death is sufficient! Please, I beg you!

The girl looked down at the man.

Jaa Soo-Jeong looked at Kim Gong-Ja.

-What do you think about the Flame Emperor's personality?

Kim Gong-Ja blinked.

-Uh...

-Please be honest. Really honest. I need to accurately understand the applicant's mindset. If you lie here, you might get accepted now, but you'll be kicked out in a day or two anyway. Let's save each other some time.

-...A bit.

-A bit?

-He has a bad personality.

-Hmm.

Jaa Soo-Jeong rested her chin on her hands for the first time since the interview began.

-In what way?

-Firstly, he dislikes being called the Flame Emperor, right? But that's not genuine, it's just for show... because people praise him as amazing and great, chanting 'Flame Emperor! Flame Emperor!', but he coolly dismisses it with a comment like [Whoever coined that nickname is fucking stupid]...

-And if he dismisses it?

- 'I don't like my alias.' With just that, he reduces everyone who praises him to mere underlings. And the fans love it, finding it too cool... It's a perfect cycle... No, a vicious cycle, isn't it?

-Hmm.

Jaa Soo-Jeong interlocked her fingers and placed her chin on them.

This was also a new posture since the start of the interview.

-Interesting.

-Yes?

-I understand your thoughts. Kim Gong-Ja. But can you still work for Yoo Soo-Ha?

-Oh, yes. I...

-Yoo Soo-Ha might be far worse than you think.

-.....

-Once you join our guild and act together, you'll inevitably see Yoo Soo-Ha's true colors. Depending on the situation, outcome, or reaction, you might be silenced through death.

-.....

-I ask again. Can you still work for Yoo Soo-Ha?

Kim Gong-Ja thought for a long time.

After a long thought, he spoke.

-I came to work under Yoo Soo-Ha, but not for him.

-Oh?

-If Yoo Soo-Ha turns out to be much worse than I thought... I'm not sure. Maybe I'll try to stop him. At least once, I'll give him a chance to regain my trust. I have a strong tendency for that...

-Hmm.

-So, sorry, but I can't give a positive answer to your question.

-Even more interesting.

Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head.

-Why should I choose you as a manager?

-Because...

The man looked up at the girl.

Kim Gong-Ja gazed at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

-You're probably the same as me.

-.....

-You don't work for the Flame Emperor, but under him. Since becoming a manager, you've never once whitewashed Yoo Soo-Ha's character. No public relations, no hiring part-timers. So...

-I'm listening.

-You're looking for a comrade, not a minion for the Flame Emperor.

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled.

-Passed.

And then.

-What? Rank F? Jaa Soo-Jeong. Didn't I specifically ask you to bring a strong servant last night? Why did you bring this trash? Trash belongs in the recycling bin over there. Go throw it away.

-Just so you know, recycling day is Wednesday. Today is Monday.

-How am I supposed to know that!?

-Just watch him for two days, Yoo Soo-Ha. Harass him for two days, then decide.

-No, decision my ass. He doesn't look much younger than me...

Yoo Soo-Ha looked at Kim Gong-Ja with displeasure.

-If he's still F-rank at that age, his life's estimate is clear. Trash, just trash. Sometimes working part-time, strolling through the second-floor hunting ground, picking up items for daily food. Holed up in a room, tinkering with the internet. Wow, damn, I'm getting goosebumps just talking about it. Hey, Jaa Soo-Jeong. Really? You want me to keep an eye on this guy for two days? Managing my eye health is also a part of a manager's job... Argh, damn, what the hell!?

-It's orange juice.

-Why are you shooting orange juice into my eyes!?

-Oranges are good for the eyes, Yoo Soo-Ha.

-You lunatic would crack open my skull to shove in ginseng if it's good for the body! Hey, I've been pampering you lately, and you're getting way too overconfident, aren't you? Want to die? You think I can't kill you?

-Yes.

-Damn!

And then.

-But this guy is kinda fun to harass.

-Huff, huff, huff, ah, ah, huff...

-He crawled all the way to the 31st floor even though I told him not to follow me. Why is he like that? It's amusing to watch. Hey? Did you pick this trash on purpose to amuse me?

-Yes.

-As expected, I chose a great manager. Jaa Soo-Jeong, no,

Vice President Jaa Soo-Jeong. Our Jaa Soo-Jeong should even try being vice president! I'll make a nameplate for you out of Arimentalrium. Vice President Jaa Soo-Jeong. President Jaa Soo-Jeong. How fitting does it sound? Both have a nice ring. This means Jaa Soo-Jeong is destined to be president.

-Huff, huff, huff, huff, huff!!

-Kim Gong-Ja is dying over there.

-Let him die. That's his luck.

-You're right. Kim Gong-Ja, good luck.

-Good luck, part-timer.

-Damn...

And then.

Time passes.

Chapter 225: If (3)

---

And then.

Time passes.

-Everyone! Believe in the sacred Tower!

Jingling, jingling.

A man in short sleeves roamed the square, ringing a handbell.

-Why is the [Tower] called the Babel Tower? Do you know the reason? It's simple. Here, we humans can communicate freely. It's a miracle bestowed by God!

-God once destroyed the Tower of Babel. But after thousands of years, he mercifully granted humans another opportunity to ascend to heaven! Let's be thankful for God's mercy!

That day, Kim Gong-Ja was in the guild.

Yoo Soo-Ha's guild, named [Yoo Soo-Ha], which audaciously bore just his three-lettered name, had only four registered members. Yoo Soo-Ha. Jaa Soo-Jeong. Kim Gong-Ja. And a pet slime.

Despite having only four members, the guild's office location was impressive.

In the heart of Babylon, the City of Ascension on the first floor of the Tower, the guild occupied a three-story building at the central square intersection.

It was an extravagant expenditure.

But one man's folly is another's joy. Kim Gong-Ja, having ordered a White Mocha Frappuccino Venti Quad Java Chip with half chocolate drizzle through a delivery app, sat elegantly on the guild terrace, overlooking the square.

-What's that nonsense?

-Just a cult.

Jaa Soo-Jeong, also on the terrace, responded briefly.

She sipped carrot juice through a straw while working on her laptop.

-Don't pay attention to them, Kim Gong-Ja. They lure in curious prey, wondering what that nonsense is, to trap them.

-Really?

-They use seemingly nonsensical parts as bait. People think, [I'm smart enough to debunk all this crap!] but then they get trapped, brainwashed, and one day, they find themselves preaching God's words in the square.

-Do these people really employ such sophisticated strategies? Seriously?

-Religions grow from guilt, and cults thrive on human arrogance, Kim Gong-Ja.

-Whoa!

Then, Yoo Soo-Ha approached and looked down from the terrace.

-These types of fanatics are still in Babylon. I saw them often outside. Myeong-dong, was it? Hey, part-timer, have you been to Myeong-dong?

-No.

-It's a bit like hell. Anyway, it's fascinating. Cults like these get smacked down by the Temple of All Gods* the moment they're seen. How do they have the nerve to preach openly in the square?

*Temple of the Omnipotent God has been changed to Temple of All Gods as it's the more accurate translation when keeping in consideration the hanja. It will be fixed in all previous chapters as well. Apologies for the inconvenience!

As expected.

Before Yoo Soo-Ha could finish speaking, a whistle sounded from across the square. Tweet! Tweet! Members of the Temple of All Gods Guild, clad in white uniforms, came running.

-What are you doing here! This is against the rules!

-Oh, you're the ones who should be questioned. The Tower is a miracle that has descended most sacredly in the new millennium. Brothers and sisters, you stand amidst a miracle! Yet why don't you appreciate it?

-This guy is unbelievable...

-Repent, everyone. Reflect on your arrogance and prejudice. The Tower isn't just a hunting ground or a playground! You are brothers clad in God's miracle! Be humble! God grants you a second chance!

-Do something. Take him away!

The Temple members dragged the preacher away.

Even while being taken, the preacher remained devout, shouting with a face full of conviction, "Repent! There's still time for repentance. Everyone! Repent!"

-Hmm.

After the commotion subsided.

-That's suspicious.

Jaa Soo-Jeong muttered.

-Yes?

-Too intellectual.

Responding to Kim Gong-Ja's question, Jaa Soo-Jeong rapidly typed on her laptop.

-Normal cult preachers are full of antagonism. They believe the world has clear enemies, from whom all sins originate, and attacking them is their duty. But the preacher just now was different.

-In what way?

-There was no antagonism at all.

Tap-tap.

Jaa Soo-Jeong looked down at her emotionless laptop.

-He only showed genuine concern and tried to persuade others. This is a stance only a fairly large religious organization could take. They don't need to designate enemies, simply believing in [their righteousness] deeply in their bones...

Jaa Soo-Jeong pressed a key on the keyboard.

-Indeed. This person just entered the Tower today.

The laptop screen displayed a few photos of a man.

It was the same man who had just been ringing the handbell in the square.

-Damn?

Surprised, Yoo Soo-Ha from behind asked.

-Jaa Soo-Jeong, no, Deputy Jaa Soo-Jeong, what are you doing?

-I just dug up information on the person who was taken away by the Temple just now.

-I see that. But where did you hack into? You didn't touch the Vigilante Corps' server, did you? I mean, I'm not scared or anything, but those guys are a hassle if you mess with them.

-Don't worry.

Jaa Soo-Jeong closed the laptop and brought another from a desk drawer.

-Regardless of what you think about hacking, I didn't hack into any server, let alone anything related to the Vigilante Corps.

-Then how did you get the personal info?

-I simply accessed the Tower Entry Management Office's data with a legal ID.

Jaa Soo-Jeong opened the second laptop and connected somewhere.

-People who come from the outside world have their basic personal information stored in the Tower Entry Management Office until they're officially registered as residents. It's stored for a minimum of one hour to a maximum of one week. Once registration is complete, the data is destroyed and transferred to a subsidiary of the Vigilante Corps.

-.....

Kim Gong-Ja looked uncertain, as the conversation seemed like a story from a world he knew nothing about.

-Is that data easy to access?

-Relatively, as long as you have an ID from the management office.

-Where did you get that ID...?

-Office staff are humans, Kim Gong-Ja. There are surprisingly many ways to persuade humans.

Kim Gong-Ja glimpsed the guild's darkness.

-Of course, due to the lax security, there's not much valuable information. At most, it includes basic details like which country they came from and whether they graduated from school.

But, Jaa Soo-Jeong added.

-Sometimes, among those basic details, there are SNS IDs.

The laptop displayed a blue screen.

Jaa Soo-Jeong nodded once.

-Found it.

She showed the screen to her colleagues.

The SNS profile displayed the familiar man's photo.

+

Following: 26.

Followers: 5,313,046.

+

Kim Gong-Ja's eyes widened in surprise.

-Whoa. Five million...? Isn't that a lot?

-That's quite a lot. He's the vice-president of the Clean Tower Association. Let me do a quick search.

Jaa Soo-Jeong's eyes became serious.

-It's an organization that became active seven years ago. One of the recently trending internet religions.

-Internet religion...?

-Specifically, religions that don't establish branches in any country, but essentially use SNS or video site accounts as their 'branches.' They only preach online. For instance, when the leader uploads a particular video, the followers bring as many viewers and subscribers as possible. They call this 'preaching.'

Jaa Soo-Jeong found the organization's official video account.

-Look, a volunteer video.

-.....

-Usually, only a few individuals like the leader or vice-leader are active on-site. Like this...

Jaa Soo-Jeong played the video.

There, a neatly dressed gentleman was presenting a disaster site in some country, like a live broadcast.

Numerous videos were uploaded.

[Disaster Relief at Earthquake Sites], [How Your Donations Are Being Used], [Top 10 Preaching Cases], [Conversation with a Tibetan Monk!], [Checking If the Himalayas Are Really Melting], [Is the Tower a Proof of Divinity?], and so on.

-This is...

-They mix in many volunteer activity videos, so they can't be banned from the account. They don't make radical claims in the videos. The leader or vice-leader uploads them, and they spread it on SNS, radicalizing their claims among themselves.

-.....

-Kim Gong-Ja, you asked if cult groups employ sophisticated strategies? Yes, they do. Not all, but some like these do.

Kim Gong-Ja felt an ominous premonition.

Yoo Soo-Ha also frowned, feeling the same.

-So? What's the story with this follower star leader with over 5 million followers, abandoning the glory and honor of the outside world to crawl into the Tower?

-He's actually the vice-leader.

Jaa Soo-Jeong corrected.

-And his purpose for entering the Tower is right here.

Click.

Jaa Soo-Jeong pressed the enter key.

-From now on, I dedicate myself to the Tower. Brothers and sisters.

A video started on the laptop screen.

The man speaking in the video was the vice-leader.

-As you all know, tomorrow marks the day of the ancient fall of the Tower of Babel. Like thousands of years ago, God will decide tomorrow whether to destroy the Tower of Babel again. To beg for God's mercy, to prove that there's still hope in humans, I will personally enter the Tower and awaken the residents of this corrupt Tower.

The vice-leader spoke devoutly.

-I may be arrested. I might even die. But, if I succeed in preaching, I will prevent the collapse of the Tower. And if I die failing, God will know that there was at least one believer who sacrificed for humanity. I live for humanity and die for humanity. This is how we serve God.

The vice-leader formed a triangle with his hands.

It seemed to be their sacred sign.

-We have witnessed the Tower's atrocities. We waited for them to repent and purify themselves. But now, with the second collapse of the Tower of Babel imminent, we can no longer just watch. Once my sacrifice is confirmed, you too must immediately perform the entry ritual.

Kim Gong-Ja opened his mouth.

-Do not fear death. What we must fear is not the death of each individual, but the tragedy of humanity betraying God's love again. Stop the tragedy with your blood and bodies. Purify the Tower by eliminating as many corrupt ones as possible! I will go first. I will die first. Everyone! I...

The video was abruptly cut off.

Yoo Soo-Ha had stopped the video.

-These guys are totally insane.

On the TV in the guild office, a Korean baseball game was being broadcasted.

Ah, out! Out! The caster shouted.

Next to the TV lay Yoo Soo-Ha's baseball cap.

-This is a declaration of war.

Kim Gong-Ja muttered.

-This could lead to big trouble.

-Yoo Soo-Ha, we must go to the Temple of All Gods and inform them right now.

-Hmm.

Yoo Soo-Ha reacted nonchalantly.

-Forget it. This isn't the first time something like this has happened. It's been countless times madmen crawled into the Tower.

-.....

-Go if you want, but I'm not joining.

Kim Gong-Ja and Jaa Soo-Jeong did just that.

They ran out of the guild. Fortunately, the Temple of All Gods knew how to splurge. The temple was located on expensive land, and Jaa Soo-Jeong, known as

"Yoo Soo-Ha's Secretary," easily met the temple leader.

-Good day, Secretary! And the newly hired part-timer too!
How are you both?

-Long time no see, Temple Leader. Sorry to say this right away, but there's something urgent to discuss.

-Oh?

The Heretic Inquisitor, busy with some task, had dirty hands.

Specifically, red liquid stained his left hand.

-What's this urgent matter?

-Did you just take away a religious person preaching in the square?

-Yes. We arrested him according to the regulations.

-Is that religious person still intact?

-Ah. He was fine.

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed heartily.

-Until 40 seconds ago!

-.....

-I hurriedly finished my work as you requested an urgent meeting. Ah, no need to worry! Everything was conducted properly!

-Did you kill him?

-Yes!

The Heretic Inquisitor was cheerful.

There were no excuses or justifications. Not even a hint of necessity or reluctance.

Just a straightforwardness stemming from having done what needed to be done.

-You...

It was unclear who spoke those words.

But before the sentence was finished, something buzzed.

Woo-woong.

-Hmm? Part-timer, seems like you have a call!

Kim Gong-Ja hunched over. Indeed, his smartphone in his pocket was vibrating.

He had followed the video account and SNS account that Jaa Soo-Jeong had just searched. The notification was from there.

Feeling an ominous premonition, Kim Gong-Ja took out his smartphone.

-...A new video has just been uploaded.

Jaa Soo-Jeong also took out her phone.

While the Heretic Inquisitor looked puzzled, the new video played.

-Brothers and sisters.

A man with an unfamiliar face appeared in this video.

Was he another believer, not the vice-leader?

A young man spoke gravely.

-Just now, our vice-leader was taken away by the heretics. As expected, there's no hope in them. The vice-leader didn't resist or throw a single punch. He only preached out of concern for them.

Though the young man's face was unfamiliar,

the background visible in the video was very familiar.

Kim Gong-Ja narrowed his eyes.

-This is... Babylon Square, right?

-Yes. This is bad. Very bad.

Jaa Soo-Jeong muttered.

In the video, the young man continued to speak.

-I will now begin the promised purification. Brothers and sisters! I love you.

The young man reached into his shirt.

-I love you. I love humans, humanity, and God. Please love us too. Don't betray God's love. I love you!

Then the video cut off.

There was no need to wonder why.

A tremendous roar came from beyond the temple wall.

-.....

It was in the direction of the square.

Silence ensued for a moment.

-Aha. I understand.

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly.

-I seem to have made a fucking mistake!

Immediately after, sirens blared.

Chapter 226: If (4)

---

Kuwaahhh!

The next explosion sounded even closer. The entire building shook.

Priests of the Temple of All Gods Guild quickly activated their auras to form protective shields. Inside the barrier, the Heretic Inquisitor, Kim Gong-Ja, and Jaa Soo-Jeong struggled to stand.

-American products are indeed superior!

Even amidst a terrorist attack, the Heretic Inquisitor was cheerful.

-Glad we equipped the building to withstand destruction!

-Thank you, Heretic Inquisitor.

Jaa Soo-Jeong dusted the dirt off her face.

She was as composed as usual.

-But this is not the end. The organization behind this terror is about 5 million strong. The explosions can escalate.

-Five million followers, you say! How many of them are actually believers, and of those, how many will actually act? Ahaha. Faith is abstract, but death is real.

-But let me remind you again, even if one in a thousand, no, one in ten thousand acts, that's 500 people. 500 explosions.

-Yes.

The man responsible for the Tower's religion adjusted his hat.

-And 500 is a number we can [handle].

-.....

-It would have been better if we could've anticipated and neutralized the terror beforehand. But it's too late now. So, I will take responsibility for my mistake and handle the aftermath!

Jaa Soo-Jeong hesitated for a moment.

A rare occurrence for her.

-By aftermath, you mean...

-Of course, kill all suspects. Reducing 5 million to 2.5 million is difficult, but bringing down 500 to 250, then 125, and further below 50 isn't that hard.

-.....

-I'll request a martial law from the Black Dragon Guild Master! It's been seven years, huh? Quite a long peace!

Kim Gong-Ja was at a loss for words.

Once again, Kuwoong, the wall trembled.

Another bomb.

-How can...

Kim Gong-Ja spoke instinctively.

-How can you speak so casually about this?

-Hmm?

The Heretic Inquisitor turned to Kim Gong-Ja.

Innocent eyes, befitting the term, but Kim Gong-Ja clenched his teeth. Even the eyes of a reptile could be innocent. The Heretic Inquisitor, retaining the naivety of an animal, smiled broadly.

-Why shouldn't I speak this way?

-.....

-This way of thinking and speaking leads to quick and clear conclusions. Why shouldn't we discuss in this manner? Is it because it upsets you, part-timer?

-It's not about that...

-Yes, it is. Someone has to do it eventually. If it has to be done, it's faster to do it without unnecessary euphemisms. Caring about public sentiment is a politician's virtue, but we left [that] to the Black Dragon Guild Master long ago!

Kim Gong-Ja clenched his teeth harder.

A gentle touch caught his agitated shoulder.

It was Jaa Soo-Jeong.

-Kim Gong-Ja.

-.....

-Don't try to change it. There's no time now. Rather, you should use him.

-Use...

-Incredibly, the man in front of you is [persuadable by words].

Hearing that, Kim Gong-Ja struggled to think.

'I need to minimize the victims of the bomb terror. But also minimize innocent people being sacrificed on mere suspicion. How? How to persuade the Heretic Inquisitor, how to use this person...'

Use him.

-.....

At that moment, Kim Gong-Ja realized something.

-It's the Temple of All Gods.

The Heretic Inquisitor stopped in his tracks.

-What?

-The Temple of All Gods.

Kim Gong-Ja spoke urgently.

-The vice-leader you captured. He's dead. But he must've died inside the Temple, and by your hand, right!

Just moments ago, the vice-leader's blood was on the Heretic Inquisitor's left hand.

The Heretic Inquisitor tilted his head.

-Yes, that's right, but?

-Then how did [the young man who played the video in the square] immediately know about the vice-leader's death! He couldn't have clairvoyance, nor could he have peeked inside the Temple's torture chamber,

Kim Gong-Ja saw the Heretic Inquisitor's eyes waver.

-A traitor inside the Temple informed him! To his own comrades!

The Heretic Inquisitor was about to make the sign of the cross. Whether he intended to deploy a protective barrier or kill his own close associates, the Temple executives, remained unclear.

It became unclear.

Explosions and roars.

The world turned upside down.

Kim Gong-Ja found himself fallen, something warm covering his back. Apart from feeling something warm on his back, he could barely sense anything.

It felt like cicadas were droning somewhere.

Beyond the shattered hearing, someone muttered.

-What a sharp-eyed bastard among the Flame Emperor's lot.

Kim Gong-Ja couldn't identify who it was.

But it wasn't the Heretic Inquisitor, nor Jaa Soo-Jeong. Then it must've been one of the Temple priests.

The owner of the voice walked away, making footsteps.

-What a pity. Could have used him for a while longer.

To whom was he speaking?

-You just had to act and move like a puppet, Temple Leader.

-.....

-But a marionette without strings is useless. Time for disposal. Fortunately, today's a big day, so the time loss is minimal...

And Kim Gong-Ja forever lost his chance to see the traitor's face.

A flash burst, and screams followed.

The man enjoying the success of his betrayal no longer made a sound. The fact that if he could betray his superior, his superior wouldn't trust him completely, let alone the fact his superior never truly trusted anyone, was overlooked by the betrayer till the end.

-Ahaha...

A small hand tapped Kim Gong-Ja's cheek.

-Are you alright? Are you alive?

-Ugh... Fuck...

-Starting with a curse, you really are the Flame Emperor's subordinate. What's your name?

-Kim Gong-Ja...

-If you can swear and state your name, you're pretty much living half a life. Can you open your eyes, Kim Gong-Ja?

Kim Gong-Ja opened his eyes.

In his blood-tainted vision, the Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

The redness in his view wasn't just because he was bleeding. Kim Gong-Ja slowly realized this.

-Good. I'm glad. There's one more person besides me who's aware of the current situation.

The Heretic Inquisitor was also drenched in blood.

His voice was heavily laced with the scent of blood.

-Temple Leader...

-Yes.

-Manager Jaa Soo-Jeong...?

Kim Gong-Ja struggled to speak. Jaa Soo-Jeong? Just now, the Heretic Inquisitor said it was fortunate that [one more person besides me] was left. Kim Gong-Ja desperately hoped for an error in that count.

-This is not the time to worry about others.

The Heretic Inquisitor coughed up blood, Kelok.

The blood was too vivid.

Not just blood, but also several pieces of flesh were mixed in.

-We need to treat.....

Kim Gong-Ja barely managed to speak.

The Heretic Inquisitor raised a hand to stop him.

-No need. It's not the right time. I cannot come back to life.

-But if we don't try.....

-Even without trying, I know. It's more efficient to do what can be done now.....

Once again, the Heretic Inquisitor coughed up blood.

The blood splattered on Kim Gong-Ja's cheek.

-Ugh.

Unconsciously, Kim Gong-Ja got up, supporting himself on the ground. He remembered a time when he was very young, going to an amusement park with the director, feeling like he was inside a squirrel cage, struggling to keep his balance in a world spinning with dark red.

As he got up, something that had been covering his back slid down and fell to the floor, but he desperately tried not to pay attention to it.

Kim Gong-Ja fixed his gaze on the Heretic Inquisitor.

He was sitting right in front of Kim Gong-Ja. However, whether his posture could still be called 'sitting' was something Kim Gong-Ja couldn't tell.

From the waist down, torn apart, the Heretic Inquisitor spoke.

-As you pointed out, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, it seems this terrorist attack was more deeply planned than expected. A real oversight.

-Don't speak... Your body right now.

-On the contrary. Since I'm in this state, I have to speak. That way...

Blood and coughs.

-Ah, how proud. Even the internal systems of the U.S. explode like this, the extent of the damage... Considering this place has become like this, I wonder how it is in other areas, uh.

-Temple of All Gods, please, just be quiet for a bit, I'll call someone—

-Instead of calling, take these.

The Heretic Inquisitor pulled out something from his pocket.

There were two items.

A small doll and a hand mirror adorned with a pitch-black Black Dragon.

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled as he handed them over to the unexpectedly receiving Gong-Ja.

-The first is called The Idol. It means my proxy. The Temple of All Gods is now yours for the time being.

Kim Gong-Ja froze.

-Why, to me?

-Just as I said before. Right now, you're the only one who can move here.

Kim Gong-Ja clenched his teeth.

He didn't look around or look back.

The Heretic Inquisitor continued speaking.

-But honestly, I'm not sure if that mark will have any meaning... whether the system I set up will continue to operate after my death. But still, it's better than nothing, so for now... More importantly, this second item. A mirror.

-A mirror.....

-It's called the Black Dragon Mirror. To communicate with the guild masters of other guilds... it's an emergency tool given to us by the Black Dragon Witch. Tell them you're my proxy...

The Heretic Inquisitor stopped talking.

Kim Gong-Ja waited for the rest of the sentence.

It took him a while to realize that it wouldn't come.

-.....

Kim Gong-Ja spoke.

-Temple Master?

There was no answer.

And there would never be.

-Temple Master.

Life is mercilessly persistent, yet it can disappear without warning.

Kim Gong-Ja looked down at the two relics left in his hand. Staring blankly in the ruined room.

It wasn't for long.

Determination set on his face.

-I must move...

But how?

And where to?

That was something an E-Rank Hunter like him couldn't know. Fortunately, the people who died at this moment weren't just the Heretic Inquisitor. There were others still alive, moving desperately. As a result of their movements, a voice came through.

-Damn it...

The voice was coming from the mirror in his hand.

-Hey. Is there anyone alive there? If so, respond.

Kim Gong-Ja recognized the owner of the voice.

Probably every resident of the Tower would know.

-Black Dragon Guild Master?

-Huh? What? Who are you?

Kim Gong-Ja took a deep breath.

And briefly explained the situation.

There was a moment of silence from the other side of the mirror, then the voice continued.

-I see. Well. It wasn't a child meant to live long.

-.....Do you believe me?

-Yeah. I have a skill I got from Paladin before. I can roughly...
Ah, damn it.

The Black Dragon Witch let out a long sigh.

Not just a thin sigh, but a thick, bloody sigh.

-Are you hurt?

-A bit. It's been a long time since I got stabbed by an assassin...

The second-ranked Hunter.

The most powerful figure in the Tower, in both name and reality.

Even in the reality of such a person being assassinated, Kim Gong-Ja kept his composure. Perhaps his reason was paralyzed by the continuous catastrophes.

Either way, only the voices of the Black Dragon Witch and Gong-Ja flowed through the Black Dragon Mirror. Even as time passed while Gong-Ja explained the whole situation, no one else joined the communication. The Black Dragon Witch quietly voiced what that implied.

-It's a big problem. Maybe the second biggest since the Tower was built.

-.....

-I've made a lot of enemies over the years...

Coughing.

-The guy who stabbed me was a director and deputy director in the American Foreign Service. I thought he was just a nobody kicked out of power, living a normal life, but fuck... these damn CIA bastards... now they even use cult freaks to screw us over...?

-Black Dragon Witch, where are you? I'll come to you.

Coughing and laughter followed.

-What are you going to do if you come? Unless it's your secretary or your master.

Kim Gong-Ja knew this better than anyone.

-Still, I can't just stand by.

-You're young...

There was a touch of sorrow in the Black Dragon Witch's voice.

A brief sigh.

That sorrow was soon replaced by cold calculation.

-But you lack power. Therefore, you're not needed.

Before Kim Gong-Ja could respond, the Black Dragon Witch continued.

-In a situation like this, guild masters usually meet and decide on a leader. But considering the current situation...

-Black Dragon Witch...

-I'll take command.

The Black Dragon Witch breathed heavily.

-From this moment on.

The ruler of the city spoke.

Her voice didn't just come through the Black Dragon Mirror.

It started to flow from the destroyed Babylon Square, from the streets, from the slums, from the streetlights installed everywhere, from the speakers attached under the streetlights.

-I declare martial law. I am the Guild Master of the Black Dragon Guild, the Black Dragon Witch. Once again, I declare martial law effective from this time.

There were sounds of spitting blood between the Black Dragon Witch's words.

-Currently, unknown enemies have carried out several explosions inside the Tower. All guild masters are out of contact. Casualties could be in the thousands, maybe tens of thousands.

The sound of coughing.

-Anyway. The Tower was nobody's from the beginning. There were those who killed humans saying the Tower was God's, those who killed enemies saying the Tower was the United States', and even those who trampled humans saying the Tower belonged to thugs.

The fact that the commander was bleeding to death echoed through the speakers and resounded even in the shattered

Babylon Square.

-But now, after more than a decade, we can say it firmly. This Tower is ours. Our territory. We are the humans of the Tower. The sky of the Tower is our airspace, the streams of the Tower are our territorial waters. The land of the Tower is our territory. And we call those who defile our sky, water, and land enemies.

The Black Dragon Witch swallowed once.

Maybe she swallowed blood.

With a scent of blood, from beyond the speakers, the Black Dragon Witch's declaration burst out.

-It's war.

The echo exploded simultaneously in every alley of the speaker-installed city.

-This is war.

The echo fell even on the back of a mother tightly holding her child under the speaker.

-In this situation where the Tower's security is seriously compromised, we, the Black Dragon, declare martial law and announce that we will achieve the fastest victory in this war. And I promise. I will show merciless revenge to those who dared to shake the Tower.

Chapter 227: If (5)

---

As soon as martial law was declared, hunters flooded the streets of Babylon.

-Kill them all!

The hunters were dressed in black uniforms. The Black Dragon Guild. Among them were not the scouting or raid teams, but the conflict resolution and extermination teams.

These were hunters in the Tower, but they were certainly not trained [to climb the Tower].

-Anyone who cannot present a resident card will be killed, no questions asked! The same goes for those who received their resident card less than a week ago!

-The Guild Master has been attacked!

-This is war!

-All dissidents will be annihilated!

Bang! Bang!

Gunshots rang out across the square.

In the Tower of Babel, the manufacture and storage of firearms were strictly controlled. Making a gun illegally was a crime punishable by death.

However, the major guilds were an exception, always ready for war with their firearms.

-These damn Black Dragons! What the hell are they doing!

The Vigilante Corps was also among them. They drew their guns and aimed at the Black Dragon's suppression team.

-Move aside! We must carry out the Guild Master's orders!

-Shooting people indiscriminately, is that right!

-It's a necessary measure to protect the Tower! Even your Vice-Captain of the Vigilante Corps has been attacked and killed!

-Even so, the Vice-Captain wouldn't have wanted this!

-Our Guild Master wants this! Move!

The Vigilante Corps didn't move aside. The Black Dragon Guild didn't try to persuade them further.

The two guilds clashed. Other large guilds, having lost their owners, joined in. In a situation where it was impossible to distinguish friend from foe, they tore at each other like starving dogs.

-.....

Emerging from the half-destroyed Temple of the All Gods, Kim Gong-Ja faced such a hellish scene.

Kim Gong-Ja wiped his face.

-Ugh....

People had died.

People were dying.

More people were dying.

-Dammit...

There was no hesitation in the actions of people aiming at each other. Every time a gun spat fire, people were hurt. Died. Lives vanished so easily.

Kim Gong-Ja couldn't understand.

'They are all guilds supporting the Tower.'

He had heard rumors that the major guilds didn't get along. He didn't know what had happened in the past, and occasionally heard through gossip that old feelings had built up between the guild masters.

But to this extent...

'Just waiting for a trigger, ready to kill each other.'

The top hunters, each a legend, so-called heroes.

Why hadn't these heroes resolved their feelings over the years?

Was there really not a single person who could mediate between them?

Kim Gong-Ja couldn't understand, but he knew that imagining such a [hypothetical mediator] now was utterly useless.

He felt like he was going to explode.

The dam blocking the center of his heart broke down.

At that moment, the body of Jaa Soo-Jeong, which he had been carrying, slipped down his back.

-Eh.

Unintentionally, Kim Gong-Ja saw the body.

---Deputy.

Jaa Soo-Jeong's body was torn apart.

The left leg, left arm, left chest, even the left side of the face. Jaa Soo-Jeong had died a death that did not allow any trace of humanity, her lips tightly closed. Only her lifeless purple eyes, like jewels, stared up at the sky.

-.....

Silence.

Lowering his head, this time, he saw the body of the Heretic Inquisitor.

Looking at the last moments of a man who tried to do something until the end, Kim Gong-Ja clenched his teeth.

-No. Right, first things first.

Do what needs to be done.

-Right.

Do what can be done.

-What can I do?

He reviewed everything he had.

The Idol. It seemed like something that could oversee the Temple of the All Gods as a proxy, but the Temple was in ruins. Even if he met the priests outside, it was uncertain if they would obey this Idol.

The Black Dragon Mirror. It seemed like a means to communicate directly with the Guild Master of the Black Dragon and other major guilds. But since the Black Dragon Witch's declaration of war, it had been silent.

Meanwhile he was just an E-Rank Hunter. Powerless.

-Power...

He knew of someone who had that power.

Kim Gong-Ja turned his head.

The first floor of the Tower of Babel, Babylon. In the central square, where land was as precious as gold, there stood a three-story building.

How much magic had been applied to it, it was relatively intact even after the explosions in the square.

The always seemingly unshakable face of that man also came to mind.

-The Yoo Soo-Ha Guild...

Kim Gong-Ja ran towards it.

---

-No, damn it. What's this crap?

Yoo Soo-Ha spoke.

Annoyed at being disturbed from his nap, Yoo Soo-Ha was irritable.

-.....

Kim Gong-Ja felt his heart flutter again. The death of Jaa Soo-Jeong. The death of the Heretic Inquisitor. And countless other deaths. He had offered to help and wanted to, but the Black Dragon Witch bluntly refused.

[You're young.]

[But you lack power.]

[Therefore, you're not needed.]

If he had been Yoo Soo-Ha instead.

If he had power comparable to the Flame Emperor.

-.....

Kim Gong-Ja clenched his teeth.

He had no time for self-pity.

He forced out his voice.

-It's an emergency... President Yoo Soo-Ha.

-I know about the martial law. But I also know that I have the ability to fuck with it. Gong-Ja, why did you come here looking like a mess instead of taking care of your guild? Where is Jaa Soo-Jeong? Deputy Jaa Soo-Jeong?

-Here...

Kim Gong-Ja laid down the body of Jaa Soo-Jeong. And also the Heretic Inquisitor's.

Yoo Soo-Ha fell silent.

-When?

Yoo Soo-Ha's eyes were calm.

Kim Gong-Ja found it hard to gauge what that calmness meant.

-Right after we entered the Temple of the All Gods... There was a traitor inside. A bomb went off, and the Heretic Inquisitor died, and Jaa Soo-Jeong big sis also...

-Why are you unharmed?

-Thump!

Kim Gong-Ja was on his knees. Yoo Soo-Ha had kicked him in the shin.

-Ugh.

Enduring the pain, he looked up to see Yoo Soo-Ha still looking down at his subordinate with a calm face.

-A guy, huh.

-.....

-Big sis? Since when did you two get so close to call her big sis? Hey, Kim Gong-Ja. Jaa Soo-Jeong is much younger than you. She looks older because of her speech and demeanor, but she's a newbie compared to you. What are you...

-.....

-Never mind. So what? Did Jaa Soo-Jeong leave you any last words? Like, please do your best to resolve this situation. Or something about saving people...

-Manager Jaa Soo-Jeong would have wanted that too.

-Of course, she would. That's why she still looked after trash like you.

Kim Gong-Ja couldn't bring himself to look up at Yoo Soo-Ha.

He had lost Jaa Soo-Jeong because he lacked strength.

On the other hand, Jaa Soo-Jeong had strength. The power to save a person's life if she ignored her own. Whether it was her innate reflexes or just that she had spotted the perpetrator before Kim Gong-Ja, the outcome was simple.

Kim Gong-Ja couldn't do it, but Jaa Soo-Jeong could.

-.....

Feeling bitter, resentful, pathetic, and sorrowful, Kim Gong-Ja couldn't look at Yoo Soo-Ha.

His gaze drifted into the void.

Because of that, he saw something else.

-Anyway, brat. I know what kind of person you are. You'll fit in just fine. So, I'm going to—

A flash.

Incredibly fast.

-Dodge it!!

Kim Gong-Ja interrupted Yoo Soo-Ha.

At the exact same moment, a blue spear flew out of thin air.

Whooooosh-

The spear, wrapped in blue aura, was immensely powerful. The Flame Emperor quickly raised his aura to protect himself, but he must have missed the timing by a fraction. The walls of fire he created were torn apart by the blue flame spear.

-Ah.

Kim Gong-Ja saw that moment.

And then.

-Ugh!

He stamped his feet, straightened his knees, leaned back, and reached out his hand to hit the blue flame spear.

The spear was swirling with a storm of blue aura. The storm, like a blender, shredded the human flesh that approached it.

-Aaaaaah!!

After a scream, Kim Gong-Ja, who had lost his arm, knelt down. Pieces of pale flesh fell to the ground.

The slowly settling pieces were probably his bones.

-Damn it! Did you dodge it!

A hunter landed from the sky with a thud.

Yoo Soo-Ha glanced at Kim Gong-Ja, who was kneeling, then turned his gaze to the hunter.

-Who are you?

-I am the Saintess!

Yoo Soo-Ha looked at the bleeding Kim Gong-Ja, then back at the hunter who declared herself as the Saintess.

-What bullshit. Just shredded a guy in half and now you're a saintess? What a joke.

-It's a title given by the Tower.

-The Tower really has a shitty naming sense. So? Why is the Saintess here causing trouble?

The Saintess took a deep breath.

As if she had waited a long time for this moment, she shouted.

-Yoo Soo-Ha! You murdered my only grandfather!

The Saintess boasted brilliant golden hair. Yoo Soo-Ha had rarely seen such blonde hair. There were some, but none who would call him [grandfather].

-My apologies, but I've made many orphans and widows. I don't recall who your grandfather is.

-Marcus Callenbury!

The hunter claiming to be the Saintess's eyes blazed.

Yoo Soo-Ha raised an eyebrow at the name.

-The Sword Saint?

-Yes! My grandfather's name!

-Wow. That old name brings back memories. You're his granddaughter? Ah, right. He was already of that age, so it makes sense to have a granddaughter like you.

-You devil...

-Yeah, I'm a bit like that. Speaking of devils.

Yoo Soo-Ha glanced again at his subordinate's corpse, and the corpse becoming one.

-Is this burning hell outside your doing?

The Saintess clenched her fist.

She wanted to tell him. The power and influence accumulated by the Callenbury family's wealth. How she manipulated and moved the fools enchanted by the mysterious phenomenon of the Tower.

She wanted to tell him. How she easily predicted and used the Temple of the All Gods's master, who hated the outside world but wanted connections with the major countries, and how she infiltrated and crumbled the Black Dragon Guild.

But she didn't.

With the burning Tower behind her, the Saintess simply said.

-My grandfather died in the Tower, at your hands.

- "....."

-So, I will kill the Tower, and I will kill you.

Yoo Soo-Ha smirked.

-Then it's his fault. I was killed by him without knowing anything. He acted like he could see the number of murders in my eyes and whatnot. Ugh. In reality, the murderer wasn't me but him.

-Bullshit!

-Bullshit is what you've been spewing. You can't fool blood. A murderer's daughter is a murderer's granddaughter.

-You are the murderer. The Flame Emperor. No, there's no point in talking to you. Die!

The Saintess, her golden hair flying, charged.

-Ha.

Yoo Soo-Ha looked at a white dot that had flown onto his palm. Whether it was dust from a collapsing building or a bone fragment from Kim Gong-Ja being sliced, he didn't know.

But.

-I feel filthy.

He felt filthy.

Yoo Soo-Ha always felt filthy when things he didn't know about happened.

-I don't really need to drag this out here. You should die.

Blue aura exploded, and red aura enveloped it.

A moment later, a scream echoed between the blue and red smoke.

-Aaaaaah!

-Yeah. Now I remember. The eyes are similar, the eyes.

Yoo Soo-Ha opened and closed his eyes.

-The way you look at people immediately as garbage murderers is similar. Ah, is being judgmental hereditary? Did your grandpa teach you to decapitate people first because they're murderers, as some sort of family lesson?

-I, I... ah, ugh...!

-Anyway, this world teaches you to hate people, to talk shit about people, and even how to kill people. What's amazing is, after teaching all that, they expect the kids to love and cherish each other, to have kids and raise them well.

Even in the midst of stinging screams mixed with smoke, Yoo Soo-Ha kept talking.

-I just can't understand. Looking at your eyes makes it even harder to understand.

Yoo Soo-Ha.

He saw a hunter who had become a charred lump, completely burnt.

He bent down, matched his gaze, and looked down.

-How can a person like another person? Right?

The last remaining part also burned up.

A hunter who declared revenge for her grandfather and harbored a grudge for years, died just like that.

Yoo Soo-Ha slowly straightened up.

-Ah, so stiff.

He stretched his neck a few times, then looked around.

-What a mess.

The mansion outside was burning. The ruins that met his eyes seemed enough to build a massive historic site. The world, filled with ash and smoke, was relentless with screams and gunshots.

-What a total mess. You think so too, right, part-timer?

Yoo Soo-Ha looked down at Kim Gong-Ja.

Kim Gong-Ja, having lost an arm and bled too much, couldn't even look up at Yoo Soo-Ha in his dazed state. Yoo Soo-Ha didn't demand his gaze.

-I don't know.

Yoo Soo-Ha muttered.

-You and Jaa Soo-Jeong. I don't understand how you can like people.

Yoo Soo-Ha looked up at the sky for a moment.

-Well, that's why you're working under me.

-President, I...

-Ah, stop. Don't say anymore.

Yoo Soo-Ha stopped Kim Gong-Ja's feeble mumbling with a wave of his hand.

With annoyance.

More than anything, with familiarity.

-Don't worry about anything. I'll take care of it all.

Even in his dazed state, Kim Gong-Ja mumbled blankly.

-How...?

-There's always a way.

The Flame Emperor.

Yoo Soo-Ha shaped a gun with his hand.

And wrapped his hand with red aura, forming a spherical shape like a bullet.

-You wouldn't understand if I told you.

-Yes...?

-My skill is a bit fucked up.

Bang!

A ball of fire pierced Yoo Soo-Ha's brain.

As he saw Yoo Soo-Ha take his own life, Kim Gong-Ja watched in horror.

He probably never understood the meaning of that death until the end.

[You have died.]

But.

'I' knew.

[You will return 24 hours back to the past.]

The world shattered.

.

•

•

•

•

•

Thus.

'I' opened my eyes.

Chapter 228:

Hatred (1)

---

'I' was.

Slowly looking around.

-Home run! Home run!

-It's a home run! Ah, the ball is soaring over the fence!

In the Yoo Soo-Ha Guild.

On the second-floor terrace of a building occupying the prime spot in Babylon, the sound of a Korean baseball game being broadcasted flowed calmly. The voices of the commentators, like the cries of cicadas in summer, seemed more like a distant backdrop than part of a conversation between people.

"Ah."

Yoo Soo-Ha was sitting on a sofa.

Fiddling with his head where he had pierced it himself just moments ago.

"Baseball is damn boring."

"....."

"Guys, I'm going to have a drink. I feel like drinking alone, so don't follow me. I'm staying out tonight, so don't call me. Even if you do, I'll ignore it."

"Don't drink too much, Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha."

Tap, tap.

On the opposite side, Jaa Soo-Jeong was tapping on her laptop keyboard.

The early summer wind from Babylon Square fluttered her hair.

"If you don't want me to roam all over Babylon looking for you again."

"Okay."

Yoo Soo-Ha didn't glance at us.

He simply waved his right hand while turning his back.

Soon, Yoo Soo-Ha's figure disappeared down the stairs.

"....."

I clenched my teeth.

"Manager Jaa Soo-Jeong."

"Yes, Mr. Kim Gong-Ja."

"Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong."

"Yes, Advisor."

"Tower Master."

"Yes, King of Death."

Three titles were exchanged, and three understandings passed.

"Is this the possibility you're showing me?"

"That's right."

Beyond the terrace, the square was bustling with people.

11 years into the future of my world.

Or, 11 years into the past from my current time.

A world established under the assumption of [What if Jaa Soo-Jeong had been there].

".....In a world like this."

I glared at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"Compared to the world I created, this one is much more peaceful!"

"....."

"What is this! It's a complete mess! The Black Dragon Witch, Anastasia, is still lonely! The Heretic Inquisitor... Bambolina hasn't changed! They're broken, living without even realizing they're broken!"

But...

"[I] put the guild masters back in their place!"

In my world.

The Sword Saint let go of his arrogance and prejudice.

The Black Dragon Witch began to see the Paladin as a friend again.

The Paladin put aside the distrust caused by past purges.

The Heretic Inquisitor acknowledged his shortcomings and bowed his head to me.

They started to communicate and recognize each other.

"In this world, nothing has changed! The guild masters are still holed up in their thrones, the Tower is still a mess. It's just being swayed by the outside world. This is....."

"But..."

Jaa Soo-Jeong raised her head.

Her purple eyes met mine in a straight line.

"Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha was killed by you."

The wind blew.

"You couldn't change him, could you? Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha."

Ding.

The wind chime at the terrace window rang.

"That's because,"

"Is it because Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha was an incorrigible villain?"

The background noise of the baseball game fluttered in the wind.

"Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha was the worst of villains, a psychopath among psychopaths, so you had no choice but to kill him. Since it was unavoidable, it's not your fault or incompetence."

"....."

"But, look, Mr. Gong-Ja."

The early summer wind swept the chime, and the background faded.

"In this world, Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha is moving for someone else."

The Flame Emperor.

After Jaa Soo-Jeong and I died, he undertook a [Return].

He reversed 24 hours at the cost of his own day.

And just now, he disappeared somewhere under the excuse of [going for a drink].

"The terrorist who caused the bombing. The traitor infiltrating the Temple of the All Gods. The assassin who stabbed the Black Dragon Witch in the back. Above all, the Saintess who attacked him. Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha is moving now to eliminate them."

Jaa Soo-Jeong looked at the square distantly with an expressionless face.

"Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha is worse than you, less active than you, bears less responsibility than you, has less will to change the world than you, and has less impact on the world than you. Even though he's a much worse person than you."

The square.

In the midst of the bustling crowd.

The black hair of a hunter fluttered.

"Yet, he became someone who moves for someone else."

"He could have become that person. Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha."

Ah.

"When you killed Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha. When you 'hunted' Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha according to your own words. That Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha wasn't the same person as the Flame Emperor who killed you. He was just a young E-rank hunter Yoo Soo-Ha, the past of the Flame Emperor, who might have become like the Flame Emperor of this world."

I closed my eyes tightly.

".....I."

A grinding sound came out.

"I also gave him a chance."

In my attempt not to kill him,

"I performed a play. I didn't just kill him abruptly; I gave him a chance. To see if he could feel compassion for a wounded person, to see if he wouldn't harm a vulnerable person despite demanding a price for help."

"As if toying with humans like a god, you put them through such a [difficult] test."

The Tower Master spoke calmly.

I...

"Difficult? If he had just quietly treated me, if he had just not tried to kill me....."

"Is that really such a [special] thing?"

The Tower Master looked at me.

"Is [killing and robbing a wounded person in a situation with no witnesses] really something that only a [specially evil person beyond redemption] could do?"

"If you're human....."

"Can anyone pass that test?"

Silence.

"Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha's death went unnoticed, a mere [disappearance of a low-rank hunter], a [common occurrence]. Don't you see what this implies, Mr. Gong-Ja? Especially since you were a low-rank hunter yourself?"

"....."

"How many people would have passed your test?"

The scent of early summer was intoxicating.

The air was sticky, and the wind was humid. The air itself seemed not yet breathed by people, but exhaled after someone else had already breathed it. The oxygen entering my lungs was the remnants of summer that had been chewed over once.

"Yes."

Among them was a breath tinged with purple.

"Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha didn't help you. He didn't save you when you collapsed in the hunting ground; instead, he tried to harm you. He tried to kill you."

"But what about Preta?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong murmured.

"What about the Demon King of the Autumn Rain? Preta also tried to kill you. She actually did. Dozens, hundreds of times, you were slain by Preta's sword. The continent was once destroyed by the blood shed by the Demon King of Autumn Rain. Yet, Mr. Gong-Ja, you granted the Demon King another life."

I gave life to Preta.

"Lady Goldencup? Constellation Killer? Heretic Inquisitor? What about the Black Dragon Witch? What about the Sword Saint? Among them, was there even one person who wasn't a [murderer], even one who killed fewer people than the young Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha?"

" ....."

"The King of Death changed all those people."

But...

"Except Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha."

He was the only one.

"Because, King of Death. You will forever remain ignorant."

That son of a bitch.

"You could never peek into Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha's trauma."

Was there no need to kill me?

"And you never tried to."

Why.

You could have explained.

You could have told me your situation.

"You didn't want to know."

I admired you so much.

Yet why did you...

"Mr. Gong-Ja."

Treat me like that.....

"You felt betrayed by Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha."

I closed my eyes to the darkness.

Jaa Soo-Jeong's voice quietly crossed over.

"And so you hate Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha."

Silence fell.

The broadcast of the Korean baseball game stopped.

The wind ceased.

The wind chime at the window stood still.

Time passed.

The sunset smeared among the crowd in the square.

The sunset had no nationality, nor did the people receiving it.

"No."

I murmured.

"It wasn't like that."

I shook my head. Several times.

"He would have become a monster. He would have been a monster anyway."

My voice leaked out as if I was feverish.

"No matter where he was born or how he was raised, whatever he experienced, that guy would have become a monster. I had no choice but to kill him. I had to. It was necessary. Not for me. Not because of how I feel. Not because I couldn't accept it. For the Tower. For the world. Because his existence couldn't be allowed. So, I..."

I...

"I thought of him as..."

I admired you.

"Weak."

"That's because you were weak at the time."

My heart pounded.

"If I had been there, it would have been different."

My heart pounded loudly.

"Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, you couldn't forgive Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha. You couldn't accept him. Even though Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha had his own past and circumstances, you didn't have the capacity or the leeway to understand. Simply put, you were too weak at the time."

The Tower Master spoke.

"Were you resentful because you were weak?"

"Feelings of inferiority and betrayal towards Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha. Anger over your own murder. A sense of helplessness that nothing can be changed. The anxiety that, no matter how much you cherish and admire someone, they never consider you. The sensation of being absolutely worthless."

I don't know when I'll be abandoned.

"So I must become meaningful to someone."

Yes.

"I'm not powerless. I'm different from Yoo Soo-Ha. I have to be different. The people I save, my subordinates and allies, they can't be villains like Yoo Soo-Ha. They mustn't be."

No.

"Saving the children in the burning mansion too."

No.

"The opposite choice you made to Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha's decision to kill the Sword Saint, Mr. Gong-Ja. Choosing to save people instead of abandoning them. Accepting the Heretic Inquisitor as a subordinate and the Black Dragon Witch as a friend."

I—

"Kim Yul's pain, the Head Librarian's regret, even your devotion to the Heavenly Demon and your love for Count Ivansia. All the things you've done since your return, you did them because you didn't want to be abandoned. You didn't want to be weak again. To prove that you and others are different from Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha—"

"It's not true!!"

It's not true.

That's not how it is.

I glared at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"....."

How dare.

How dare she describe it like that.

"Why is that?"

The Tower Master spread her arms.

Her robe fluttered like the wings of a butterfly.

I...

"Yoo Soo-Ha, that guy, can't be the meaning of my life."

I was weak.

I had been weak.

Convinced that I shouldn't become a psychopath, no matter how successful, that I mustn't ignore the children burning in the mansion. I reminded myself over and over, [I mustn't become like Yoo Soo-Ha].

"I have already overcome Yoo Soo-Ha."

But not anymore.

"In my life, the significance that Yoo Soo-Ha holds is now so trivial, I'd rather scoff and laugh at it!"

I met the Guardian Spirit.

Met my master.

Met Raviel.

Met the Head Librarian.

"In my life,"

Such beautiful people.

"Who becomes meaningful to me,"

The ones I chose to be by my side.

"Is for me to decide!"

"I choose who will be the reason for my life."

I become stronger only for them.

Not because of someone like Yoo Soo-Ha.

I no longer live with feelings of inferiority towards Yoo Soo-Ha, betrayal towards someone, or anxiety about others.

I won't let them be the reasons for my life anymore.

I've become stronger than yesterday.

"....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong looked at me.

"Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha is no longer your reason?"

"Yes."

I affirmed confidently.

"I don't even think of that guy every day. Just disappear."

"But you still hate Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha."

"Damn it."

"Mr. Gong-Ja, in your life, he still holds so much significance. So much so that you can't forgive him. No, you shouldn't forgive him. You treat Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha as the most vicious psychopath in this world."

"Fine."

I gritted my teeth.

"Thank you so much for proving that Yoo Soo-Ha could have changed."

"....."

"Now I'll prove that he means nothing to me."

That damn guy.

"Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong."

I glared at her.

"You changed Yoo Soo-Ha, only you could, you showed off in front of me, right?"

"Yes."

"I'll always hate Yoo Soo-Ha, and I can't change that, so I'm weak. So I admit I'm weaker than you, and you're the one who can change all the miseries of the world?"

"Yes."

"Get lost."

I stood up.

"I won't even give hatred and contempt to someone like Yoo Soo-Ha anymore."

I looked down at Jaa Soo-Jeong, sitting against the sunset.

"He is, in my life, now meaningless."

No.

I won't let him be meaningful.

I'm sick of even hating such a guy!

"I've become stronger."

I took out a card.

The first skill I received.

My starting point.

+

[I Want to Become Just Like You]

Rank: S+

Effect: Automatically activated when killed by an enemy. You copy one of the skills of the enemy that killed you and make it yours. You may not copy from an opponent you've already copied from. The copied skill is selected randomly.

*However, you will die!

+

"I'll change Yoo Soo-Ha."

I glared at the Master of All Lives.

"I changed the Demon King of Autumn Rain, the Sword Saint, the Black Dragon Witch, the Heretic Inquisitor, all of them. Yoo Soo-Ha... such a lowlife scumbag, do you think I can't change him? Me?"

"Yes."

"I don't need your IF world."

My voice was hot as if I had swallowed fire.

"I changed Preta, Elder Calenbury, Anastasia, Bambolina, Raviel. I will make them the happiest. I don't need your hypothetical existence. The reality they are in with me is their best scenario."

"....."

"You can't make the master as happy as I can."

I don't need your salvation.

"You can't make Raviel as happy as I can."

We don't need to patch our weaknesses with you.

We're not weak anymore.

We don't need gold.

"And you."

I declared.

"You won't be able to change Yoo Soo-Ha the shithead as much as I can."

"....."

"Yoo Soo-Ha, who's pathetically drinking cheap soju around in this world, I wouldn't take him even if you gave him to me. The scumbag you changed, compared to the scumbag I will change, will be far superior and happier. Because I'm more capable. Stronger."

"Ah."

Hearing my declaration of war.

Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed. Laughed again for a long time.

Then asked.

"Can you prove it? Anyone can build a heaven with words."

"I've never been a guy who only talks."

"Right. That's true. Then, is this a challenge to me, Mr. Gong-Ja?"

"It's a duel."

"I always welcome a duel."

The god with an eighteen-year-old face hummed joyfully.

"Only warriors engage in a duel. Only warriors carry the weight of their own lives. I love all humans, praise all blood as beautiful, and find joy in frustrating all challengers. Because I am strong."

"I am strong too."

"I am the strongest of all beings in the universe."

The expressionless girl was rejoicing.

“I melted the heart of the Sun King, who was isolated for sixty years. I comforted the heart of the Duke of Apathetic Leisure, decaying for a thousand years. I thawed the frozen time of the Dragon Emperor, stagnant for seven thousand years. And all these were just the prologue.”

The Tower Master tilted her head.

“I built the Tower. Thus, I became the savior of all the unfortunate, miserable, weak, wicked, mass murderers, assassins, cannibals, and all the weak and evil. My heart is infinite, my life eternal, capable of soothing the wounds of all the torn children of the world. Mr. Kim Gong-Ja, you yourself began breathing only by stepping into my Tower, so how dare you challenge me?”

“Then.”

I spoke.

“Make Raviel happier than I can.”

Just as your life proves your strength.

My life also proves my strength.

“Make my master laugh more brightly than I can.”

The people with me are my proof.

“Go ahead.”

“Ahaha.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed.

“Alright.”

Laughter spread in the sunset.

“Very well, then.”

Her purple eyes half-opened.

A fragrance of purple mingled in the early summer air.

“So? How?”

The scent of a rotten poisonous flower wafted.

“What's your plan?”

The fragrance approached me.

“How exactly will you change Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha more than I can? Hm? Do you have a method? A way?”

The royal courtesan whispered in my ear.

Her voice, which enchanted countless nobles and emperors, dragons, was sweet.

“You've already killed Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha.”

"....."

"Ah, will you return to a time before you killed Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha? You've done it over 4000 times already. A few hundred days might not be impossible. But then, all the relationships you've built with the Black Dragon Witch, Sword Saint, Heavenly Demon, Constellation Killer, and many others in the meantime would all disappear, right?"

"....."

"To change Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha, you'd give up other relationships. Really, how [meaningless Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha must be to you]. Isn't it? How much more significant could those past hundreds of days be?"

That damn.

My head heated up.

Heat surged from my heart.

I didn't suppress the heat but let it out.

“Compensation.”

“Huh?”

Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head.

“Compensation?”

“Give me compensation.”

I didn't take out the card for nothing.

“You still owe me.”

I flipped the card over.

The skill description was written there.

Automatically activated when killed by an enemy.

You copy one of the skills of the enemy that killed you and make it yours.

+

“Your rule.”

Your Tower.

“A rightfully earned method.”

The dagger I left in the Tower.

“Based on this, I demand compensation from you.”

“Hehe.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong smirked.

“You’ll steal a skill from me and become stronger than me?”

“Yes.”

“Thinking of stealing [All Lives]? Too bad. That skill only makes sense when several skills are combined. If you had [The Golden Dragon’s Gaze] and [Ice River Dragon’s Breath], maybe you could perform miracles like me... How will you manage?”

Jaa Soo-Jeong hummed.

“Mr. Gong-Ja, you can only take one skill, right?”

Her delight was intensifying.

“Even if you take one of my skills, will you really become stronger than me, let alone change Mr. Yoo Soo-Ha? To become a munchkin like me, you need a lot, quite a lot of preparations. Mr. Gong-Ja.”

“Scared?”

I can't let the god have all the fun alone.

“Ah?”

“If you can't give it, just say so. You're scared, right? Admit defeat if you're scared. I had to endure your life because of the skill's penalty, but you won't give compensation? What a way to run the Tower.”

“Cute provocation. Really.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed deeply.

“And I can't help but fall for it.”

Her fingers played in the air.

“Alright. King of Death. Take whatever you want.”

The Tower's voice echoed.

[The condition for your skill has been fulfilled.]

[Randomly copying a skill from the 'Master of All Lives'!]

Clap!

Jaa Soo-Jeong snapped her fingers.

“Go ahead and take a piece of the life I've walked, and prove your words, King of Death. Advisor. Mr. Kim Gong-Ja.”

Swoosh.

Golden cards lined up in the air.

[Creating skill cards!]

Night had fallen on the terrace as the sunset faded.

The dark night sky.

Jaa Soo-Jeong's golden treasures twinkled like the North Star.

[Madness Syndrome]

[Music of the Capital's Three Delights]

[The One Loved by the Dice]

[Royal Advisor]

[Guardian of the non-humans]

[The Golden Dragon's Gaze]

[Earth Bone Dragon's Skull]

[Ice River Dragon's Breath]

[All Lives]

Each star shining individually.

Together, they form the constellation of the Tower Master.

"....."

I reached out to the stars in the night sky.

And then.

I grasped a beam of golden light in my hand.

Chapter 229:

Hatred (2)

---

[Please select a skill card.]

But I had to stop my arm.

The moment I reached out to snatch a card, fingers much smaller than mine entwined with mine and caught them.

"You shouldn't do that, Mr. Gong-Ja."

"Yes?"

"That wouldn't be fun."

Jaa Soo-Jeong exhaled her breath.

“After provoking me to this extent, you wouldn’t show an uncool side in the end, would you?”

I felt a tingling in my back for a moment.

Her fingers, entwined with mine, felt like breath taking form
- warm, cool, and mist-like, eroding my hand.

“What are you talking about?”

“Hehe.”

Conversely, Jaa Soo-Jeong’s breath sounded like fingers. Every time she whispered in my ear, her breath-like fingers gently nibbled at my ears.

“Mr. Gong-Ja, you brandished the first card you obtained and demanded compensation from me... But look? It’s clearly written on that card.”

Tap. Tap.

Jaa Soo-Jeong tapped the card in my hand with her slender nails. The golden card trembled as if infected by static electricity from the Tower Master's touch.

+

[I Want to Become Just Like You]

Rank: S+

Effect: Automatically activated when killed by an enemy. You copy one of the skills of the enemy that killed you and make it yours. You may not copy from an opponent you've already copied from. The copied skill is selected randomly.

*However, you will die!

+

“Look, Mr. Gong-Ja.”

Breath turned into fingers touched my eardrum.

“It’s clearly written here... no, not there. Here. The very last part. Clearly, [The copied skill is selected randomly].”

Jaa Soo-Jeong giggled.

She seemed like a girl playing a naughty prank.

“Mr. Gong-Ja, you said to give up a skill according to [the rule set by the Tower].”

Perhaps, that was the highest purity Jaa Soo-Jeong, as a human, could show.

“Will you follow the rules too?”

Thud.

The sound of flicking fingers resonated.

Instantly, the golden cards scattered wildly, like fireflies blending into fireworks startled by the sound.

“Randomly.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong whispered against my arm.

“It’s fine to snatch a piece of my flesh, but please, according to the fair and just rules of the Tower, decide [randomly] which part to choose.”

Looking up, I saw the night sky. Nine golden fireflies whirled ceaselessly. As the constellation broke, each card turned into a shooting star, trailing long comet tails as they sliced through the night sky.

“You’ve had good times so far, haven’t you? Meeting Mr. Sword Emperor. You chose whichever skill you wanted while he informed you from behind. Mr. Gong-Ja, you just casually pointed like picking ice cream.”

"....."

“But every lucky-god game has its end.”

I saw her purple eyes.

The purple eyes saw me too.

Perhaps there is no mirror as clear as her eyes. I could only see the surface of her purple eyes; beyond that, endlessly reflected inner eyes. Mirrors reflecting mirrors, mirrors forming on mirrors, purple mirrors...

“Now, leave it to Mr. Gong-Ja's luck.”

Before I knew it, my gaze was fixed.

Once I properly looked into Jaa Soo-Jeong's eyes, turning my head elsewhere seemed impossible. It felt like I was caught in a cunning trap. My eyes reflected in the purple eyes, and those reflected eyes mirrored in mine...

‘Ah.’

I struggled to regain my senses.

‘Focus.’

If I remained passive, I feared I would become a statue staring at Jaa Soo-Jeong's eyes, forgetting even how to speak, for hours, tens of hours, hundreds of hours.

I took a breath.

"I understand."

And slowly nodded.

"I will choose what I want in that situation, as you said."

"Ahaha."

"But let's set a rule."

"What is it?"

"[I will never look at the back of the card.] You can turn it over and show me, but otherwise, I will not look at the back of the card myself."

“Yes, well. It's a commendable thing to say.”

“But.”

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Strengthening my eyes with aura, I focused solely on her.

“Don't treat it as if I've chosen the card the moment I grab it.”

“Hmm? What do you mean?”

“Allow me time to look, touch, and handle the cards. Ah. I'll never see the back with my own eyes anyway. If I ever turn a card over and see the description, you can just cancel the skill.”

“Hmm...”

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled coquettishly.

“I'm curious. What are you planning to do? Alright, Mr. Gong-Ja. I can wait as long as it takes for your choice. If you want, I can even use [Ice River Dragon's Breath] to freeze time in this world.”

“That kind of consideration isn't necessary.”

“Alright. Go ahead and try!”

I first collected the nine golden cards. Like the golden ball in a famous fantasy novel, the cards whirled around, but, hey, kids. To me, who has honed aura, you are just fireflies.

“Whew.”

I took a deep breath.

My hand carefully, very carefully, picked one card after another from the stack.

And then.

"....."

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong sitting opposite me.

We exchanged glances up close, with only a stack of cards between us.

".....?"

No, this isn't the skill I want.

I immediately decided and put down the first card.

"Huh?"

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed.

"Are you trying to guess the cards by looking at my face?"

There was a mix of mockery and ridicule in her voice.

“Are you playing poker, Mr. Gong-Ja? I'm not someone whose expression can be read. All you can gain from reading my face is admiration for perfect beauty, astonishment at noble dignity, and infinite ecstasy for my existence.”

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

“Viscount.”

“Yes.”

“Hasn't anyone ever told you to stop spouting bullshit?”

“Mostly my vassals. Really, isn't it too much? No lord takes care of and loves their vassals like I do.”

While Jaa Soo-Jeong blathered on, I continued to carefully, calmly discard one card after another.

"....."

This card isn't it either. Next.

Nor this one. Next.

Next, next, next...

".....?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong sensed something odd when the nine cards were reduced to three.

“Mr. Gong-Ja...”

Perhaps she suspected that I wasn't just reading her expressions to guess the cards, but that I had a clear method to meticulously differentiate them. Such doubts belatedly arose in the Tower Master's mind.

“What are you doing? How are you figuring out the cards?”

“Who knows?”

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

“Maybe it’s some skill luck again.”

“Mr. Gong-Ja doesn’t have a piercing skill. Even if you did, it’s impossible to see through skill cards. They are created with a really special material. How exactly are you doing this...”

As Jaa Soo-Jeong narrowed her brows, I discarded another card.

Only two cards remained.

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"....."

“There’s interesting cards left.”

I was still only looking at the front of the cards. The fronts were colored in gold, with an indiscernible pattern engraved, a topic of heated debates among Hunters. What exactly does it depict?

The pattern is as follows: A dice-like polyhedron floats in the center, with two serpentine snakes winding around it. Finally, leaves and flowers of an unknown plant exquisitely decorate the edges.

Hunters endlessly debated:

「 Why is such a pattern engraved on skill cards? 」

「 The polyhedron represents the Holy Grail. The two snakes symbolize Satan. Thus, the Tower is telling us that demons surround the Holy Grail! 」

「 What about these leaves and flowers? 」

「 Does it mean the demons are interested in environmental activism? 」

「 Nonsense begets nonsense. A fair exchange. 」

Yet, no Hunter had a definitive answer.

It was generally speculated that perhaps there would be a hint on the 100th floor, even after 11 years.

"Huh."

A chuckle escaped me.

Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head in confusion.

“What’s funny?”

“Oh, nothing. Just reminded of our Tower folks doing pointless stuff. This pattern here on the card. Hunters made up absurd theories about it.”

But...

“This is just your family crest, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong blinked.

“Yes. And?”

“Pffft.”

Here’s the thing.

In the kingdom, [magic] and [mages] are symbolized by [snakes], because they believe snakes have inherited dragon blood, and magic was developed by dragons. Since it's a miracle originating from dragons, symbolizing it with [snakes] is logical.

Therefore, if a family's founder was a mage, or if the founder killed a mage, the family crest will definitely include snakes.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's distant ancestor famously killed an archmage, whose corpse ended up in the noble family's crest.

The mage lived in a vast forest called Crystal Forest, hence the leaves and flowers around the snake. [The mage died in this forest].

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's ancestor completely absorbed the territory ruled by the archmage, leading to the family name being derived from the forest's name, Crystal. The mysterious polyhedron in the center of the crest is the crystal itself.

In essence.

[The family's ancestor killed a mage living in the forest, earning the noble title of Crystal for his valor].

That's the meaning of the pattern engraved on the front of the card.

That's it. The end.

“Viscount, you're really crazy. Why put your family crest on the card front?”

“I don't see why you're calling me crazy. Naturally, I made the Tower, and I'm a noble of the kingdom. Isn't it normal to sign one's own work?”

“The outside world went nuts over this, with hundreds of thousands of priests claiming it was the will of God, a prophecy...”

“Well, I am a god, so isn't my will the will of God?”

Everyone I meet seems to be crazy.

Anyway.

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

“Hmm, not this card either. Disqualified.”

"....."

I discarded one of the last two cards.

Jaa Soo-Jeong's brows narrowed.

“Do you know what that card was?”

“Yes. An incredibly powerful skill.”

“Tell me.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong demanded proof from me.

I willingly played along with her request.

“[The One Loved by the Dice].”

"....."

“The rank is an impressive SSS. Its effect is simple.”

The description of this skill is a single line. No, just one word.

+

[The One Loved by the Dice]

Rank: SSS

Effect: Heavenly luck.

+

Heavenly Luck.

“In short, a skill that [improves luck]. Golden Dragon's Gaze or whatever is meh, this is the real cheat skill. Improved luck? Game over. No matter how difficult the quest or how complex the stage, with good luck, what's there to worry about?”

That's why it was among the last two cards I kept.

“I pondered a lot.”

“...How?”

“Whether to choose this card or that one, I really struggled. If Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong... Ah, never mind. Let's drop it. If you hadn't provoked me, I would have definitely gone all-in with [The One Loved by the Dice].”

There's an old saying in the Tower:

Skill Luck Triumphs, all other Luck Fails.

The Hunter's status depends on what skill they possess. From that perspective, [The One Loved by the Dice] is the strongest skill.

“But I won’t choose this skill.”

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

“I’ll pick something else.”

From the beginning to the end.

Throughout the process of sorting and choosing the cards, I only looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"....."

More precisely.

I looked into her purple eyes.

“...Aha.”

Belatedly.

“Indeed, indeed.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed, realizing my trick.

“Mr. Gong-Ja.”

“Yes.”

“You’ve been looking into my eyes.”

That's right.

“Yes.”

It was a simple method.

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

“I only saw what was reflected in your purple eyes.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong closed her lips.

She smiled joyfully.

Silently smiling, she just looked at me, motionless.

“Can you still see it clearly?”

I nodded.

“Yes.”

Your eyes are too transparent.

Despite purple being the least suitable color for reflection.

Jaa Soo-Jeong's eyes were like endlessly reflecting mirrors.

“Will you read it for me?”

“Take a closer look.”

We were already close enough.

I picked up the last remaining card and looked into her eyes.

My sight, enhanced by Aura, was trapped in her eyes—like a mirror maze.

“Read it out,” Jaa Soo-Jeong whispered.

"....."

Bridging the gap between sight and hearing, steadying my breath against the disjointed sensations, I read out my chosen golden card.

“Earth Bone Dragon's Skull.”

“Yes.”

“Rank. SSS+.”

“Correct. I measured it myself.”

“Effect. Stores the memories of the living. Stored memories are kept in a 'box.' This box can only be destroyed by the owner of this skill....”

“Go on,” Jaa Soo-Jeong's voice came closer.

Perhaps it was just an illusion.

With my sight unnaturally enhanced, all I could see were the purple letters, roundly reflected in the mirror.

“As long as the box remains intact, you can repeatedly produce bodies of individuals inheriting the same memories.”

“In short, as long as the original memory is kept in the box, the body carrying the memory can be recreated endlessly, hundreds, thousands, even tens of thousands of times. However, you cannot do it simultaneously. Only one body per memory. A new body can be created only after the destruction of the previous one.”

"....."

“What are you doing, Mr. Gong-Ja? Please continue.”

“...The bodies can roam the world, accumulating new experiences, which can then be 'updated' into the box. Of course, only if you permit it.”

“Think of that famous game with the Italian airshipmen.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong chuckled.

Her laughter sounded closer than before.

“Even if you die in the game, you come back, right? You don’t truly die. Life is just a [coin]. The box containing the memories, the Earth Bone Dragon’s Box, is like a [save point]. Even if you die and lose a life, you just return to the save point. Of course, the life lost isn’t saved... You need to return alive to save again at the save point.”

"....."

“Because of this.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke.

“Many people died.”

The story contained within that skill.

“How many people wish for a save point in life? Probably as many as those who wish for regression. Earth Bone Dragon. Those who learned of its existence, crossed deserts, swam across oceans, journeyed through monster-infested jungles, risking everything to meet it.”

A story that can’t be just described as a [skill].

“Many died along the way.”

"....."

"178 made it to the Earth Bone Dragon's nest."

And these 178 people acquired their own [save points].

Without fearing death, without worrying about eternal end, they successfully turned their lives into [coins].

“A worst-case military group was formed.”

An army of 178 rampaged through the world.

“They carried flags on their backs to signify where they originally belonged, hence they were called the Banner Soldiers.”

Soldiers fluttering a flag of a bygone era.

“A thousand years ago, the greatest archer hailed as the Rock Banner Shooter. The 17th head of the Spiral Gate, the strongest assassin group of the force. A Great Thief who set the royal road ablaze and escaped leisurely. 600 years ago, a River Pirate who occupied half of the kingdom's rivers, commanding dozens of warships. 1300 years ago, a promising mage expected to become the kingdom's greatest.”

Throughout the long history of the kingdom.

Each significant figure of their era.

Like my master who dominated the last era of the martial world.

“They formed an [Undying Army].”

That was 178 warriors.

“Seeing an army approaching from beyond the desert, fluttering dozens of flags, struck terror into all humans, children cried, and soldiers lost morale and fled,” they say.

"....."

“Thus, the Banner Soldiers were a natural disaster made of humans.”

I spoke, still trapped in the mirror-maze with my lips.

“What eventually happened to them?”

Jaa Soo-Jeong chuckled softly.

“They became my private soldiers.”

“Why the nobles of the kingdom, who see me as nothing but a mutt, don’t declare war on me is quite clear. They’d get crushed.”

And then.

[Selection complete.]

The card in my hand dissolved brightly.

[Copying skill.]

Simultaneously, the maze of mirrors dissolved.

The purple mirror had lost its card to reflect.

The mirror became an eye again, and what I was looking at was Jaa Soo-Jeong's eye. Realizing it, I was face-to-face with Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"King of Death."

Up close.

"What you've acquired is immensely powerful. It has encompassed countless deaths and left numerous scars. Mr. Gong-Ja, what do you plan to do with that card?"

A breath's distance away.

The perfect distance for a viper to strike a human's neck.

“How will you defeat me with it, when even the Dragon Emperor and his army, already defeated and reduced to your spoils, couldn’t?”

I too smiled.

“Better get ready to wail and whine, Tower Master.”

There’s no doubt.

I’ve drawn the mightiest card.

Chapter 230:

Hatred (3)

---

The sun had set in the world.

I emerged onto the streets of the sunset with Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Babylon, a city founded by stateless refugees, was a melange of different scents.

The smell of Indian spices wafted through the air. The scent of Chinese incense followed.

Every passerby had a different skin color and a unique body odor.

“Where are you heading?”

Jaa Soo-Jeong inquired.

“I can send you back to your original world anytime now. You’ve collected your reward. Is there still something you need to do in this world?”

“Just follow me.”

“Hmm.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled faintly as she walked beside me.

“Lead the way.”

The street fragrances gradually faded.

Do you know the smell of Harlem?

Poverty always exudes the same scent. The smell of stagnant water, of humidity. Water that couldn't find its way out, pooling in the shadows, not rotting under the sun.

Plastic drink bottles with their heads buried in muddy water.

Measuring the depth of this impoverished pond.

"....."

We walked.

As the muddy water under our feet increased.

As the street fragrances lost their nationalities, subsumed into mere water scent.

As the world's twilight grew darker.

"...Ah."

I turned into a familiar alley.

Jaa Soo-Jeong noticed it too and flicked her lips.

"Mr. Gong-Ja. This place is----."

“Shh.”

I murmured.

“I can hear it.”

Jaa Soo-Jeong closed her mouth.

Then, faint noises started coming from afar.

“Hey, Flame Emperor.”

A familiar voice.

“Why suddenly to me...!”

“There's no use in seeking help.”

A familiar sneer.

“Nobody's around here anyway.”

The top-ranked Hunter, the Flame Emperor.

As if the sunset had been swallowed entirely by his throat, Yoo Soo-Ha's voice was particularly red.

“Never thought the witch had hidden such a beauty. Wow. Would've been a big problem if I hadn't known.”

“Witch? What are you talking about...?”

“Haha. Your acting skills are remarkable too.”

Deep inside the dark alley.

Yoo Soo-Ha had cornered the Saintess, tilting his head cockily.

“I'm different from your old grandpa.”

As he said that, the Saintess's expression hardened.

“Yeah?”

“Your grandpa, the Sword Saint or whatever. He entered the tower seeking revenge, didn't he? For you.”

"....."

“You thought I wouldn't know?”

To be precise, he didn't know.

But Yoo Soo-Ha had [Returner's Winding Clock].

A skill that starts a new day by dying once a day.

Thanks to that, Yoo Soo-Ha knew about [the future where the Saintess attacks him].

“How do you... How could you know that?”

Of course, the Saintess didn't know about Yoo Soo-Ha's skill.

Just like she didn't in my world. Exactly the same.

“Because I'm a damn smart bastard. There's nothing I don't know.”

"Ugh...!"

The Saintess moved her hand.

Probably the brief white flash from her right hand was her Aura.

“Oh, dear. Our granddaughter is quite fierce.”

But the white Aura was cut off before it could fully manifest.

The Flame Emperor had grabbed the Saintess's neck.

“Krggh!?”

“You’ve got the hang of killing a few people. What would your grandpa say seeing his granddaughter’s face like this? Huh? He would’ve probably lamented, unable to forgive a murderer, ready to... Ah, you don’t have idioms like that in your world, do you?”

The Saintess struggled, choking.

Her feet, lifted off the ground, desperately sought support in vain.

“I really fucking love people like you.”

Back then.

“No matter how many times you die, it doesn’t leave a scratch on my heart.”

In the same place, with the same people present.

“Hanging out with goody-two-shoes pisses me off. Wow, fuck, are there really non-trash humans in this world?”

Back then, I couldn't do anything.

“Seems impossible. Just a peel away and everyone's trash. But peeling off is troublesome, right? Even peeling an orange leaves fiber under your nails.”

“Ugh, hrk! Ugh...!”

“All the better when I meet someone like you. Ah, it's not tiring. Just like my brain's been rinsed with cleaner. I live because of you, really. All thanks to you.”

I could only watch.

Panicked, struggling hard just to keep my breathing silent.

“Thanks.”

But now it is different.

“Farewell, Saintess Isabelle.”

Just as the Flame Emperor’s grip was about to ignite,

My Aura surged towards the back of his hand.

“...!?”

Thud!

The Flame Emperor reflexively released the Saintess's neck and staggered back. His nimble steps sliced through the air where my Aura had passed.

“Huk...!”

The Saintess collapsed, gasping for air as her windpipe was freed.

“What...”

The Flame Emperor turned towards us with a shocked face.

That was it.

One breath.

“Salvation Sword.”

Without giving him a chance to breathe, I lunged forward immediately.

Responding to my call, a skill that had become one with me answered.

[The Torn Goddess's Salvation responds.]

It was a technique previously possessed by the Constellation Killer.

Just as nine golden skills made up the Tower Lord, two skills constituted the Constellation Killer.

One was [Puppeteer's Parade].

Thanks to this, the Constellation Killer had returned with a new body even after his original one was destroyed.

The other was [The Torn Goddess's Salvation].

Thanks to this, the Constellation Killer discarded yesterday's memories for today's victory.

When I was killed by the Constellation Killer, I could choose one of these two skills.

And I chose.

“Part-timer!? You, what are you----”

“The coffee from our office’s cafe is terribly tasteless. Please change the delivery service, Guild Master.”

I rushed into the Flame Emperor's embrace.

Compressing my voice with Aura, I shot it as telepathy.

His already shocked face grew even more astonished.

“I don’t want to remember the taste of today's coffee.”

I declared.

“Let's discard it.”

Then I swung my fist.

[The Torn Goddess's Salvation activates.]

A single strike.

Enhancement.

".....!"

My Aura, as red as the Flame Emperor's, struck his abdomen. Kuhk! A grunt escaped Yoo Soo-Ha's lips. Unable to counter the impact, he flew like a stick towards the alley wall.

The wall shattered into pieces.

"Huk, ugh... Ah?"

That was it.

Two breaths.

"You, you're from Yoo Soo-Ha's guild...?"

The Saintess, regaining some strength, looked up at me. She had a red burn on her neck where the Flame Emperor had grabbed her, showing she was not completely unharmed. Confusion was evident in her eyes.

I used to think of the Saintess as a pure victim.

"I'm sorry, but please rest for a while."

Now, I just see her as another person like me.

I pressed my hand against the Saintess's forehead, reversing the flow of Aura.

"Ah....."

She let out a groan and collapsed, unconscious. What once seemed an unimaginable show of force was now so easily done.

That was it.

Three breaths.

"Damn, fuck!"

The Flame Emperor rose from the ruined wall.

Rubble slid off his long ponytail.

“What the hell are you doing! Hey! You! Are you really just a part-timer!?”

“Yes, I am.”

“Fuck, were you also raised by the witch... No, no, that can't be. When the terror attack happened....”

The Flame Emperor couldn't keep up with the situation.

It's understandable. To him, I was still just a frail E-rank Hunter guild member.

“Curious, President?”

The Saintess didn't know that the Flame Emperor had regressed a day.

Similarly.

The Flame Emperor had no idea who I really was.

“If you want to know, try defeating me.”

“Ha....”

“I need to know that I'm stronger than you.”

“I don't know what blessing you've received, but.”

The Flame Emperor's eyes ignited.

“You're about to get a severe beating.”

My hand glowed with blood-red Aura.

“I'll beat you just enough not to kill you.”

Then, I charged.

Summoning all the life I had.

“The top rank of this tower....!”

“My Demonic Heavenly God Art echoes its testament in the snowy plains.”

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

I lunged a fist at the Flame Emperor. He tried to block it, his face saying, "You got me once, won't happen again." Yes, fundamentally, I was a swordsman, not a boxer. Unlike the Flame Emperor, I wasn't in my best form right now.

But my master once traversed snowy mountains without even a single sword.

So without a sword, I, too, could pierce through a mere flame.

+

[Demonic Heavenly God Art]

Rank: A+

Effect: The Demonic Cult. They hate and curse the principles of heaven. They not only hate and curse but formed a sect and ultimately established a doctrine. Demonic Heavenly God Art is a martial art containing the essence of this doctrine.

Those who comprehend the Demonic Heavenly God Art can tear apart the heavens and crush mountains! However, one must deeply understand the hatred and curses contained in the techniques of the art.

The more you hate and curse the world, the more colorless the heavens will become. The one who attains the ultimate state of Demonic Heavenly God Art, that person will be the true Heavenly Demon, capable of overturning the heavens.

*However, using the art makes it difficult to maintain one's self.

+

One strike.

A fragment of my life penetrated the flame.

“---Eh, what?”

“Today.”

My fist met Yoo Soo-Ha's jaw, and his head turned. Slowly. In the time dilated by Aura, the Flame Emperor couldn't strike back, and I was a step ahead, swinging my arm.

“I discard the memory of stepping into the mud puddle as I entered this alley.”

I unleashed the Aura.

+

[The Torn Goddess's Salvation]

Rank: A+

Effect: There was a goddess who dedicated herself to a hero. Although torn apart by the hero, the goddess still wanted to stand by his side. She descended from heaven and sealed herself into a skill card.

The goddess converts memories into power. By offering memories to the goddess, you can enhance your abilities and strength. The more important the memory you offer, the more amplified the enhancement effect.

*However, the enhancement effect does not last long.

+

A storm howled.

My fist, once again, squarely struck Yoo Soo-Ha's abdomen.

"-----"

His breath twisted.

A groan slipped from his open mouth.

Along with the groan, a few drops of gastric acid fell, and then, Yoo Soo-Ha staggered and knelt.

"Ugh, .....fuck...!"

"Guild Master."

I quietly looked down at the Flame Emperor.

"I get you're pissed about us 'dying.' But you did kill her grandfather, right?"

“You, ugh, fuck, what...”

“Then you should start by apologizing for killing her grandfather.”

That was it.

It took five breaths.

“Explain why you had to kill, that the Sword Saint tried to kill you first. Even then, apologize to the Saintess.”

That was it.

It took many days.

“You should do that.”

“Why did you try to kill without a second thought?”

Do you know the smell of an alley?

In poverty, there was always the smell of water.

No matter how strong the sun, where the shadows fall, the light does not shine. The puddles in the shadows, unable to evaporate in time, swell again with the nightfall and rain.

Decaying in stagnation.

“Why.”

It took many suns for my rotten mud to return.

“Why do you kill people you don’t know?”

“You’re strong, Guild Master. The strongest in this tower. Unlike others, you could afford to throw your life away. Yet you kill people without a second thought.”

I looked down at the man who once burned my heart.

So strong that once, to defeat him, I had no choice but to flee to the past, to the days 4,000 days away.

That's right. I fled.

I didn't know how to persuade him, lacked the power to convince him, didn't know how to attract him, and lacked the courage to face him, so I ran and killed Yoo Soo-Ha before he became the Flame Emperor.

I killed Yoo Soo-Ha, not the Flame Emperor.

“Stop living like that.”

"....."

“You fucking bastard.”

Now I'm stronger than him.

Uncomparably stronger.

I could do so much more.

Watching the Saintess die while holding my breath, running to flee, fearing death, fearing being abandoned, worrying about being meaningless to others – none of that was necessary anymore.

I lived diligently.

"....."

The Flame Emperor vomited again.

He wiped his mouth with his hand and muttered, "fuck."

"Stop spouting bullshit, you fucking bastard...."

"...."

"Why can't you be a bit nicer? Why are you ranting at me, fuck. Look around. Where the hell did you grow up to talk such bullshit..."

The Flame Emperor's eyes were bloodshot.

"Jaa Soo-Jeong and you too. Oh, really. You're not humans, you're like stray dogs. Someone picks you up and raises you, and you wag your tails like happy little puppies. Fuck. How can you..."

The words he vomited were also blood.

"How can you like people so much?"

The concentration of his blood intensified.

"How can you---like people so much?"

The Flame Emperor glared at me.

"Fools. Go die. Jaa Soo-Jeong, you too, just go and die. Just, die. Die already. Get lost. Fuck, bastard, really, what....."

Yes.

Then, that is your lament.

I---the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult, the Moon of the Ivansia Ducal Family, the Lord of the Ghouls, quietly nodded.

"There aren't only bastards like you in this world."

"....."

"And I will make sure you aren't a bastard either. I can do that, and I will."

I pressed my hand on the Flame Emperor's forehead.

"I am stronger than you."

And I reversed the flow of Aura.

The Flame Emperor, leaving his last curse, slipped down smoothly.

"Shit....."

Thud.

The unconscious Flame Emperor collapsed to the ground.

Silence descended in the alley.

Small footsteps approached from behind me. Turning around, I saw Jaa Soo-Jeong looking up at me.

Her purple eyes quietly inquired.

「What will you do now?」

I nodded.

“Ghoul Reincarnation.”

My shadow spread through the alleyway shadowed by the night sky. The shadow wriggled like slime, and from that writhing, a person's form emerged.

+

[Ghoul Reincarnation]

Rank: SSS

Effect: You summon those you've personally killed. The deceased do not inherit their abilities from life. However, if you wish, they can inherit their memories and appearances from when they were alive. If you do not wish it, they will only be summoned as monsters.

*However, you can only summon once a week.

+

“Whoa. What the hell?”

The figure that rose from the shadows looked exactly like the man who had just fallen.

“Where the hell is this? What kind of shitty place did you summon me to?”

Yoo Soo-Ha, dressed in his Planetarium Café part-timer outfit, scowled.

In this world, I was a part-timer, but in my world, he had become one.

Feeling the strange fate, I asked him.

“Yoo Soo-Ha.”

“Huh? Wait, fuck! Who's the guy lying there?”

“Never mind that. Yoo Soo-Ha.”

“What?”

“Do you feel like a dog, being dead and summoned by me?”

Yoo Soo-Ha looked at me as if I were a complete idiot.

“Are you on drugs?”

“Just answer honestly.”

“Alright. I feel like a dog. Wouldn't you feel like a puppy in my place? Some bastard picks me up in a hunting ground, smacks me from behind, even after killing me keeps summoning me whenever bored, orders me to dance, teaches me to swear, fuck. Saying it out loud pisses me off again. Just die. You crazy fuck.”

“Right.....”

I sighed.

“I guess I'm a bastard to someone too.....”

“What?”

“It’s just... the Viscount was absolutely right.....”

Enough.

Time to accept it.

“I’m sorry.”

Yoo Soo-Ha flinched.

“Huh?”

“I’m sorry for killing you, you fucker.”

"....."

Yoo Soo-Ha shut his mouth.

It would be great if he was moved by my apology, even admirable, but of course, Yoo Soo-Ha never does anything to make others happy, let alone admirable things. He's a bastard, after all. He just looked at me as if I were an idiot.

“You’re sorry for killing me?”

“Yes.”

“Fuck, I thought my ears were busted, turns out it's your fucking head that's busted. Got shot, did you? Ah, but you don't die from that, right? Then get shot more. Wow. I've never heard such a 'sorry for killing you' apology in all my life. Fuck, in the history of mankind, I must be the first to hear this bullshit, you bastard. When are you going to die, you fucker?”

Ah, such a dog-like man...

Does he get pimples on his lips if he doesn't swear when he opens his mouth? Even when someone is apologizing...

"....."

I turned to look at Jaa Soo-Jeong.

Jaa Soo-Jeong was smiling broadly at me.

“...Are you enjoying this?”

“It's fucking fascinating, Mr. Gong-Ja. It's not just my personal opinion, even the entire population would agree it's super fun. Mr. Gong-Ja. It's like bees buzzing ‘Oh my, who stole the honey I stored away? Ah, here it is?’ It's that level of fun, Mr. Gong-Ja. But don't mind me, please continue your conversation with Yoo Soo-Ha, Mr. Gong-Ja. By the way, do they sell popcorn in the Harlem district? My mouth is urgently requesting some right now, Mr. Gong-Ja.”

Ah, such a dog-like woman...

Why are there only crazies around me?

In this crazy world where gods, devils, and humans all hold hands together, I embraced my head for a while, then spoke again after a long pause.

“Hey...”

“What?”

“I can’t make up for the apology now, but... no, I can. I'm sorry to you. And I'll make it up to you. I'll keep making it up. Will that be enough?”

“This fucker, can't talk like a normal person. Speak so humans can understand, you bastard.”

“Be glad I'm such a strong person...”

I...

I took out the most recent piece I had acquired in my life.

“Really, be glad I'm strong.”

The piece I had stolen from the Tower Master.

+

[Earth Bone Dragon's Skull]

Rank: SSS+

Effect: Stores the memories of the living. Stored memories are kept in a 'box.' This box can only be destroyed by the owner of this skill.

As long as the box remains intact, you can repeatedly produce bodies of individuals inheriting the same memories. The bodies can roam the world, accumulating new experiences, which can then be 'updated' into the box. Of course, only if you permit it!

Even if the body of the individual is destroyed, the box remains unharmed. Bestow the privilege of immortality on those around you.

*However, memories of a destroyed body cannot be updated into the box.

+

“Jaa Soo-Jeong.”

“Yes, Mr. Gong-Ja.”

“I...”

I said.

“I'll resurrect this bastard.”

Earth Bone Dragon's Skull.

A skill that stores [memories] and gives [bodies], I declared holding the strongest card I had drawn.

“I'll return the body to this son of a bitch.”

To resurrect one human being.

Chapter 231: My Legion (1)

---

Silence descended upon the dark alley.

"Wanting to revive someone."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong slowly looked around.

"How interesting."

A crystal-clear purple mirror reflected the alley within.

"But this place doesn't suit [revival] at all. You know? Mr. Gong-Ja."

Calling my name, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong stepped into a muddy puddle. Squelch. A plastic bottle got caught under Jaa Soo-Jeong's foot.

Jaa Soo-Jeong lifted the dirty waste with her white, long fingers.

"Think about this beverage bottle. It must've been imported from the outside world. Though it's just a trivial drink, someone wanted it badly enough to pay in platinum. Treasuring it, drinking sparingly... Oh dear. It's completely drained now."

The Tower Master hummed in delight.

"Such a cherished drink. It would've been a waste to simply throw it away. Maybe it was used as a water bottle for a while? Or perhaps as a pencil case. But, such affections have their limits."

Thud.

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong threw the plastic bottle back into the muddy puddle.

"And so, the garbage was discarded where it belongs."

The already dirt-covered plastic bottle slowly slid into a puddle and then stopped.

"Here."

Suddenly, Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong stood among us.

Naturally, both I and Flame Emperor, feeling an instinctual warning not to provoke her, quietly observed Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"A place where everything discarded is discarded once more."

Once again, silence fell.

In the dark alley.

Those discarded by the vast outside world gathered in the Tower, built Babylon, and those discarded by Babylon crept into secluded alleys to establish Harlem. And now, even in Harlem, there are cursed houses and cursed objects, bringing a foreboding silence around us, the three people present.

"In such a place, you say you want to revive someone, Mr.

Gong-Ja?"

I nodded.

"That's correct."

"Alright."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled faintly.

"Could you explain how you plan to achieve this revival?"

Yes.

I looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong---not only at her but at all the discarded and forsaken things here, proving my qualifications.

"As you know, I have a skill that can summon those who have already died."

Flash.

A golden card radiated light in my hand.

+

[Ghoul Reincarnation]

Rank: SSS

Effect: You summon those you've personally killed. The deceased do not inherit their abilities from life. However, if you wish, they can inherit their memories and appearances from when they were alive. If you do not wish it, they will only be summoned as monsters.

*However, you can only summon once a week.

+

"And."

I drew another card.

"I also have a skill that can grant a complete body to a person if I have their [memory]."

+

[Earth Bone Dragon's Skull]

Rank: SSS+

Effect: Stores the memories of the living. Stored memories are kept in a 'box.' This box can only be destroyed by the owner of this skill.

As long as the box remains intact, you can repeatedly produce bodies of individuals inheriting the same memories. The bodies can roam the world, accumulating new experiences, which can then be 'updated' into the box. Of course, only if you permit it!

Even if the body of the individual is destroyed, the box remains unharmed. Bestow the privilege of immortality on those around you.

*However, memories of a destroyed body cannot be updated into the box.

+

I showed the two cards.

"Viscount Amethyst."

"Yes, Mr. Gong-Ja."

"If I activate both skills together, I can revive Yoo Soo-Ha."

Beside me, Yoo Soo-Ha, who had been quietly overwhelmed by the scenery, twitched, tensing his shoulders.

"Please, bring him back."

"Hmm."

Jaa Soo-Jeong's eyes narrowed.

"Really interesting, very clever, and personally, I would naturally want to fulfill such a request, but..."

Jaa Soo-Jeong ran her finger over the cards.

"Look closely at the skill descriptions. Start with Ghoul Reincarnation."

+

You summon those you've personally killed.

The deceased do not inherit their abilities from life.

+

"Look," said Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"Ghoul Reincarnation clearly mentions [the dead]. Summoning through this skill doesn't mean the person is [revived]. For example, Yoo Soo-Ha standing there..."

Yoo Soo-Ha shuddered again.

"is not alive. He's a summoned entity. It's like having a doll identical to the body before death and overlaying it with memories from before death. On the other hand....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled.

"Look at the next card."

+

Stores the memories of the living.

Stored memories are kept in a 'box.'

As long as the box remains intact, you can repeatedly produce bodies of individuals inheriting the same memories.

+

"It's explicitly stated that it stores memories of [the living]," she said, flicking her fingers on the card, tap, tap.

"Not memories of the already dead. Not memories of a summoned entity created through necromancy or summoning spells. Only memories of the already living can be stored in the box."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head with a smile.

"What a pity."

"....."

"If Yoo Soo-Ha were still alive, you could have stored his memories in the box without any problem. Skills are very strict, and no matter how regrettable, they don't allow exceptions. Sorry."

"No."

I shook my head.

"There's no need for you to apologize, Tower Master."

"Hm?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong looked puzzled.

"What do you mean?"

"I don't need the process of collecting memories, whether from the living or the dead."

I had already envisioned the entire picture the moment I saw the skill [Earth Bone Dragon's Skull].

"Because [Ghoul Reincarnation] already stores all the necessary memories."

"....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong fell silent.

The silence in the alley deepened.

I continued to speak to those purple eyes.

"[Ghoul Reincarnation] is a box of memories in itself. It contains Yoo Soo-Ha's memories. It contains the Constellation Killer's memories. It contains Goldencup's memories. It contains Preta's memories. It contains the memories of believers who harbored Demonic Heaven in their hearts."

Below my feet.

From that very shadow which had once molded Yoo Soo-Ha, more ghouls were successively summoned.

The shadow grew, covering the plastic bottle garbage at Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's feet, engulfing the muddy puddle, spreading over the already ruined alley, and finally, everything that was discarded twice in this world.

Preta, the followers of Demonic Cult, Goldencup, Constellation Killer.

One by one, slowly, those gathered in my shadow raised their heads.

Turning my back to them, I faced Jaa Soo-Jeong.

"My [Ghoul Reincarnation] is already a [box] containing numerous memories."

I appealed to the deity of this tower.

"Since I already possess their memory boxes, there's no need for me to seek out a living person to acquire memories. Tower Master, that process is unnecessary for me."

Therefore.

"What I need is only their physical bodies."

"....."

"Bodies bound to my summoning spell, appearing instantly when I call. Not just dolls resembling their pre-death bodies with memories but---"

Not just puppets tied to me with chains.

"Bodies belonging to these children."

Able to go where they want.

Able to do what they desire.

Bodies indistinguishable from humans.

"I only wish to give these children their bodies."

Jaa Soo-Jeong closed her lips.

The ghouls risen from my shadow looked at Jaa Soo-Jeong. The shadow, indistinguishable from the muddy water, made it seem as though countless stars in the mud were looking up at her.

"So, King of Death. Not just Yoo Soo-Ha but---"

"Yes."

I nodded.

"I wish for all of them, here, to be revived."

---

How long did the silence last?

"Ahaha..."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed.

"Hmm. Yes."

I didn't know what she meant by [that].

But it was clear she was very pleased.

Satisfied with the application of the skill I created, judging by her expression.

"Everyone deserves a second chance at life."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong lightly kicked the muddy puddle with the tip of her foot.

Mud splashed up.

Just before the muddy water could stain Jaa Soo-Jeong's socks and calf, the black droplets froze in mid-air.

"That's exactly why I built the tower."

Time stood still.

Jaa Soo-Jeong playfully kicked the muddy water again. Her skirt fluttered. In that slow-motion as if a circus tent was spinning---Jaa Soo-Jeong, beaming, clapped her hands.

"Mr. Gong-Ja, you are trying to build your own tower within the one I built."

Clap!

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong just clapped her hands.

But in the frozen world, her clap resounded like a bell in the night sky.

If there were beings that lived regardless of whether time stopped or not, they surely heard Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's clap.

"Alright, everyone."

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled brightly.

"To this [junior] who dares challenge me."

I had never seen her smile so radiantly before.

Like a performer on stage, like a conductor facing an orchestra, Jaa Soo-Jeong stood in the midst of the Harlem ruins, arms wide open. "As your [senior], let me show you my experience."

Jaa Soo-Jeong shouted excitedly.

"Everyone! Please come here!"

At that moment, the night tore apart.

There was no other way to describe it.

As if a colossal god had sliced the night sky with a sword, a long wound opened up. Split in two. It was as if there was an invisible zipper in the night sky, and someone had just zipped it open.

The full moon split.

The Milky Way parted.

Moonlight tore, starlight split, and finally, the entire sky opened.

Inside the gaping maw, only pitch-black darkness breathed.

[The Apostle of the Master of All Lives manifests.]

And then.

From the rift of darkness, countless white butterflies poured out.

[The Apostle of the Master of All Lives manifests.]

First, one.

[The Apostle of the Master of All Lives manifests.]

Then, five.

[The Apostle of the Master of All Lives manifests.]

Soon, dozens.

[The Apostle of the Master of All Lives manifests.]

[The Apostle of the Master of All Lives manifests.]

[The Apostle of the Master of All Lives manifests.]

Hundreds, thousands, tens of thousands.

Countless white butterflies cascaded from the night sky.

We dumbly looked up at the stars made of white butterflies.

"....."

Every one of those numerous butterflies was an Apostle, comparable to Lady Goldencup. No, perhaps comparing them to Goldencup was an insult.

They were not ordinary constellations; they were Apostles serving the unique and only master of this tower, the Tower Master.

"My Lord, who is this person...?"

Perhaps astonished by the sheer number of Apostles in the night sky.

Preta, summoned by me, trembled yet moved closer to protect me.

Not only Preta.

"Vice-lord, what kind of madman have you made an enemy of this time?"

"It seems like we're outnumbered quite a bit. Not that I get scared by numbers, but you know, it's just a bit...yeah."

"The world..."

The followers of Demonic Cult surrounded me, layer upon layer.

Ready to protect me with their bodies if necessary.

"Ahaha."

Watching me and the ghouls, Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed pleasantly.

"King of Death."

"If the King of Death had been born in the same world as me. If you had been born just a little earlier than me, perhaps our positions would be reversed right now."

Jaa Soo-Jeong smirked and raised her index finger.

And gently pressed her finger to her lips.

"But I was a bit quicker."

In the night sky, butterflies formed a Milky Way.

Countless stars appeared.

Every point of light resembling stars was one of Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong's Apostles. From ancient to modern times, in any era, in any place, those lives saved by Jaa Soo-Jeong shone brilliantly in the sky like stars.

"To catch up to me as a latecomer, you'll need to put in quite a bit, a lot of effort."

"...I'm glad. I'm confident in putting in the effort, if nothing else."

"I'll look forward to it."

Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled.

"As a sign of expectation, let me give you one more small gift."

Viscount Jaa Soo-Jeong raised her hand.

Dozens of butterflies fluttered towards Jaa Soo-Jeong. And the moment the butterflies touched her hand, a small light burst forth. The light quickly grew and soon became the size of a child.

"God!"

A child clung tightly to Jaa Soo-Jeong's waist.

"It's real! It's God!"

"God, please call us more often!"

"It feels like almost 30 years since you last called us!"

The children noisily clamored around Jaa Soo-Jeong, like fans meeting an admired older sister. The children chattered non-stop, and Jaa Soo-Jeong smiled, gently patting each of their heads.

"Ah?"

Suddenly.

Our eyes met one of the children's.

"Kind sir?"

"....."

My heart fluttered.

"It's the kind sir!"

"What kind sir? Half the people in this world are kind sir to us."

"The kind sir who played with us!"

The faces I had only seen sculpted as dolls.

"Where? How?"

"In the mansion we were trapped in!"

"When was that?"

"The kind sir came and played with us!"

"That wasn't us, right?"

"It was the memories we entrusted to God, right?"

"Right! God said she would use our memories to decorate the tower!"

"Oh, I remember... 600 years ago?"

"That was really fun!"

I slowly opened my mouth.

"You..."

The children of the hellfire mansion.

Addressing the children, chattering with real faces, not dolls.

"You didn't die?"

"No."

The one who answered was Jaa Soo-Jeong.

She gently stroked the forehead of a child.

"They did die."

"....."

"These children are like Yoo Soo-Ha in this world. In one of the worlds where [If I had been there], a world based on such a hypothesis, they barely escaped the mansion with my help, survived, and became my Apostles."

In other words.

"Just as you have decided to revive people with [Ghoul Reincarnation] and [Earth Bone Dragon's Skull], I am sheltering these children with [Master of All Lives]."

"Like what I'm trying to do for Yoo Soo-Ha...."

"Yes. I try to give a second life to everyone who has perished in all creations. Originally, I was going to gather Yoo Soo-Ha through this world as well, but..."

Jaa Soo-Jeong laughed softly.

"I'll leave it to you."

"....."

"Preta too. The warriors of Demonic Heaven. Goldencup. Constellation Killer. These numerous stars might seem insignificant compared to all the stars in the night sky, but, King of Death. I'll entrust that handful to you. Perhaps one day, those droplets will gather and form a river."

Under the countless Milky Ways in the night sky.

The Master of All Lives clasped her hands together.

"To someone who walks a similar yet different path from me."

As if praying somewhere.

"May fortune be with you."

And then.

[Trauma re-enactment complete.]

[The target's ego has remained intact.]

[Penalty Finalized.]

There was light.

Chapter 232: My Legion (2)

---

What's the most luxurious sight one can see upon opening their eyes?

Some might say the time-worn sky, others might mention an [unfamiliar ceiling], but at least for me, I have a definitive answer to this question.

"Gong-Ja."

It was Raviel.

"Are you conscious?"

Raviel lifted her delicate fingers to my forehead. Her small fingers. The first and middle joints of her fingers rhythmically brushed against my forehead, leaving a tactile sensation.

"Raviel....."

"Hmm."

"I-It was too hard for me....."

I felt like I was about to burst into tears.

The place where I stood up now was a side story in the World of the Tower. Specifically, an external story. This was the place where Kim Yul and Jaa Soo-Jeong went to the same middle and high school. We had decided to stay at Jaa Soo-Jeong's house for a while.

"I just, I tried to dream... about Gods. Tower Masters. This person, just insane, someone whose entire life is a trauma....."

Uburka and Jaa Soo-Jeong (of this world) were looking here, but I couldn't stop clinging to Raviel. At this moment, my heart needed the gentle fragrance of Silver Lily.

"Oh, entire life as a trauma? How is that possible?"

"That person always relives scenes of other people dying in their mind. Even empathizing with them. [If I had been on that battlefield, I too would have been trampled to death by the cavalry]. Like that....."

"Isn't that just a delusion?"

"It would be great if it were a delusion..... This crazy woman, she really made it possible. Not only did she obtain a skill to move through time, she remembers everything that happens to her, understanding all the causality of the world, and then using it....."

"Hmm. Hmm."

Raviel patted my back.

She wore a bitter smile.

"My consort seems to have seen something terrible. It's rare for you to be like this. It's okay. We were all safe, without any incidents. You can lean on me a bit more."

"Raviel.....!"

"No, maybe it's a good idea to take a long vacation. [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] said it, didn't she? This city is completely isolated in time from the outside world. A week, a month, rest as long as you want, my Gong-Ja. I too would be happy to spend time comforting you."

Eventually, tears flowed.

How could my wife be so strong?

"I've never seen my father cry like this. Ugor....."

"Is that so?"

"Ugo. I was wondering why it looked unfamiliar, but seeing it twice, it's hard to call him a father. In that sense, he's been holding up well. I'll go to bed first....."

"Ah. I'll lay out the bedding for you, Mr. Uburka."

"Thank you, landlord....."

Uburka went out to the living room with a heavy thud, and Jaa Soo-Jeong (of this world) followed with precise steps, their different masses revealed in their footsteps.

Now, only Raviel and I remained in the main hall.

"Raviel....."

"Speak, Gong-Ja."

As the room became quieter with fewer people, Raviel hugged me more comfortably. Gently. After kissing my forehead, Raviel spread her legs and patted them.

"If our Gong-Ja is crying like this, it must have been terrible indeed. But with just the words I heard, I can't form a clear impression in my mind. Explain a bit more."

"...Yes."

Snugly.

I laid my head on Raviel's lap. Worried that my head might be heavy, I pumped aura into my neck to reduce the weight on Raviel. Of course, I do the same even at the hairdresser's to not burden the designers!

"Pfft."

Raviel giggled above me.

"Gong-Ja."

"Yes."

"Your consideration is cute. But it's not appreciated. How heavy could your skinny head be? I want to take on the full weight you carry. Honey, relax your neck."

"Haah....."

"Hmm. Good job, well done. Relaxing your neck is the key to solving everything."

Summer.

Shadows fell in the sky, and shadows descended on the main hall. The breeze, cooled twice by clouds and roofs, was not bad. Pleasant. I pressed my head firmly against Raviel's lap, as if trying to hide from the world.

"Good."

Raviel smiled silently.

"My lover returned safely from a long journey. That's a very good thing. I just realized this. Ever since the day I met you, good things keep increasing in my life."

"....."

"What made you so sad?"

"Jaa Soo-Jeong... The Tower Master, plans to comfort everyone abandoned in this world."

The cooled summer evening air flowed.

"If there's a child about to burn to death, she shows them a different world. [If the Tower Master had been with the child]. After creating such a world, she lives happily with the child. Tens of millions, hundreds of millions, thousands of millions....."

"That sounds very godlike. What's the problem?"

"...It's that there are people who only seek revenge."

Summer wind blew.

"People for whom the world is nothing but hell. The pain I received is all from hell, unresolvable, with no hope of change. So, the only solution is....."

"[I will inflict greater pain on those who made me this way]."

"...Yes."

I leaned more into Raviel.

"The Tower Master watches them suffer in hell from start to finish, through her skills. And does not help when she can, does not prevent when she can, just keeps watching."

"....."

Raviel's hand paused for a moment.

But it was only for a brief instant.

"Indeed."

Raviel stroked the back of my head slowly, as if she understood everything.

"You're saying that the cause of everyone's unhappiness is none other than the Tower Master, right?"

"Yes."

"Then the victims' resentment will naturally focus on the Tower Master. Even if the Tower Master is a god, or rather, because she is a god, they would want to drag her down, tear her apart, trample on her, and vent their anger. How.....?"

"Yes."

I did not nod.

Instead, I just entrusted the weight of my head to Raviel, staring blankly, expressionlessly, opening my mouth.

"That's what they want."

"....."

"They wish for that. People who think they were sacrificed by the kingdom want everyone to come to them, to return the pain and suffering they received in life, precisely the same, to the Tower Master herself."

"That's....."

"Even more so. The Tower Master comprehends the entire life of the person who returns pain to her. She knows what is a lie and what is not. It's not ordinary sympathy, but really understanding, embracing the other person's pain."

"....."

Crickets chirped in the grass.

"In her mind, there's always someone being stabbed, burning, trampled to death. Always. All day long, such memories play in a corner of her mind. She becomes those people, actually getting stabbed, burned, trampled. It's a scream, Raviel. From the Tower Master's heart, only the sound of screaming....."

"Yes. That is our god."

Raviel sighed deeply.

"[If you desire happiness, then happiness. If you desire pain, then pain.] The simpler the proposition, the heavier the burden it places on humans. And the Tower Master intends to bear all those who perish."

"...Yes."

"Such a dreadful thing."

Raviel brushed the hair beside my face.

Her red eyes looked closely into mine.

"Ultimately, the solution is also simple, my Gong-Ja."

"...Right."

"Those who find happiness not externally but within themselves do not need the Tower Master. Those who overcome pain not from the outside but from within themselves also do not need the Tower Master."

"That's true."

"Everyone must bear their own misfortunes. That obvious fact is so rare in this world. How many live an obvious life in this world? To call what's obvious obvious, to do what obviously needs to be done, to make things that should obviously happen..."

It's difficult.

Raviel murmured, looking up at the evening sky.

Perhaps, she was recalling a moment in her life that had been [difficult].

"Did you say the Tower Master's catchphrase was [You've done nothing wrong], Gong-Ja?"

"Yes. She said, [No one is born wrong]."

"It's a sad story."

Raviel expertly opened a can of soda and sipped.

After quenching her thirst, she spoke slowly.

"In other words, that means."

I'm the one who's wrong.

I'm sorry.

I apologize.

"Only she was born wrong in this world."

"....."

"Gong-Ja."

"Yes."

"Is the Tower Master strong?"

I recalled the Milky Way I had looked up to in the ruins of Harlem.

Countless white butterflies fluttering. Stars made of butterflies.

"Yes. Very strong."

"Can you defeat her?"

Raviel looked straight into my eyes.

"I demand a more certain answer from my man."

"....."

"I didn't fall in love with someone I might love. Nor did I promise a lifetime with someone I might die with. I loved the one I was to love, and promised because we were to die together. Gong-Ja, if you are the moon of Ivansia, you must speak more."

"Yes, Raviel."

I nodded.

"I will win."

"Win."

Raviel's palm grasped my cheek.

"I chose you as my life partner because you win. Because you do not crumble. Because you do not forget happiness. When the Tower Master wins with the misfortunes of all under heaven as her fertilizer, Gong-Ja, you just win with happiness."

Raviel's face drew closer and closer.

"Make everyone around you happy. Make them feel happy to be with you. Train and tame them to be people who can be happy with you, who know how to be happy. Thus, fill this tower entirely with happy people."

"It will be difficult, but..."

I smiled.

"Let's take it slow. Why not."

"That's the man I fell in love with. But..."

Raviel smiled.

"First and foremost, I must make myself the happiest."

We kissed.

"But the landlord and Uburka might eavesdrop..."

"The landlord doesn't care about such things. I've already checked."

"What about Uburka? He really thinks of me as a father."

"Indeed. If a father moans shamefully or screams, it might indeed scar the pure heart of a child."

Raviel chuckled.

"Honey, you must not make any moaning sounds."

Hmm.

"Raviel.....?"

"What is it? My love."

"What are you going to do with that thin towel.....?"

"I'm trying to help you keep your moans quiet."

"That's actually for Uburka's sake, right? You just want to enjoy it, right?"

"Shh."

Raviel playfully covered my mouth. Her red eyes sparkled like rubies.

"The child is asleep. Be quiet."

What could I do in this situation?

I obediently accepted my wife's command.

I love you, Raviel.

Forever and always.

---

The next morning.

"Yaaaawn... Huh?"

As I came out to the living room, I ran into Uburka.

I yawned and waved at Uburka.

"Good morning, son."

"But why do you look like a snail who just chewed on a salt rock? Was the bed uncomfortable? Ah, you're too big to sleep anywhere but on the floor, right? Can't help that, huh."

Uburka trembled.

"Dad is....."

"Dad is an unashamed loser!"

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' despairs!]

With a mighty roar, Uburka ran out to the yard. Bang, crash, bang, bang, his footsteps were so violent I worried the old Korean house might collapse. I checked the safety of the house floor and clicked my tongue.

"What's with him? He's not a kid."

Is it because of puberty?

Raising kids is really tough.

Chapter 233: My Legion (3)

---

After waking up in the Realm of All Lives, I found myself indebted to Jaa Soo-Jeong – not the noble who received a viscount title in the kingdom, nor the god wielding power in the Realm of All Lives, but simply Jaa Soo-Jeong, the middle school student living in the [Side Story].

"Jaa Soo-Jeong, your cooking is really good."

"Yes. It's all thanks to the precisely made recipes."

Jaa Soo-Jeong, the middle school student, slowly set down the tray. Uburka helped her serve the side dishes for dinner.

Looking down at the table, Jaa Soo-Jeong asked, "Did you accomplish what you wanted, Mr. Gong-Ja?"

For a moment, I felt a stiffness set in.

"Yes?"

"What you wanted, Mr. Gong-Ja."

"....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong's voice was like the sound of a lone dandelion leaf falling to the ground. If not careful, her voice could easily be carried away by the summer breeze.

"I'm a bit worried about how you're feeling, Mr. Gong-Ja."

"...You were concerned about me?"

"Yes, I was worried. As a host. As someone welcoming a guest. But beyond that, I also feel a pure curiosity about you, Mr. Gong-Ja."

"...I'll help with setting the dishes."

We organized the dining table. We carefully arranged the bowls of soup and grilled fish on the tray, across the table.

Stew in the center, bean sprouts and cucumbers to the left.
Steamed eggs in the back.

As the soon-to-be-consumed foods were neatly placed, my arm brushed against Jaa Soo-Jeong's multiple times.

"What you wanted, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Jaa Soo-Jeong said.

"....."

"You mentioned meeting another me, not of this place, but perhaps a god or the source of me. That's what I heard from you, Mr. Gong-Ja."

"Yes."

"Did you achieve what you wanted?"

That was the first question Jaa Soo-Jeong asked me earlier.

But now, the question laid a second foundation.

"What I sought, even risking death for. The purpose. Did you achieve that?"

I remained silent for a moment.

"Yes."

And then I spoke.

"Well, the purpose was to meet the Tower Master as human to human, not just at the summit. So, in that sense, I really achieved my goal. I learned a lot about the human called the Tower Master."

"I see."

The student who smiled faintly in front of me was not the colorful noble of any kingdom. But I knew that faint smile was when she felt happiest.

"You did really well."

"You've worked hard, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Before I knew it, Jaa Soo-Jeong was holding both my hands.

'So.'

Feeling the warmth of Jaa Soo-Jeong's hands tightly holding mine,

As a conclusion, I couldn't help but feel a heaviness in my heart.

'So this is your true nature.'

A being of concern.

One who praises when well done and grieves when not.

Just a person born from taking that to the extreme.

[May fortune be with you.]

To her, everyone in the world is still a child.

When a child goes outside, she worries about dangers, worries about them wandering into dangerous roads, saying, [Be careful of cars!] [Be careful of motorcycles!] Her heart pounds with anxiety until the child returns. But when they do return, just for coming back safely, she wraps them in her arms, saying, [Well done] [You did really well].

[May fortune be with you.]

Be careful on your way.

[May fortune be with you.]

Be careful of motorcycles on your way back.

[May fortune be with you.]

Be careful not to be swallowed by misfortune while ascending.

[May fortune be with you.]

Please come back safely.

"....."

A god trying to be everyone's protector.

In front of this avatar of the god, I smiled.

"Shall I show you what I gained from meeting the Tower Master?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong nodded.

"As you wish, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Yes.

Translated, that also means [Do what you want to do].

At this point, I guess I'm somewhat skilled as a translator of divine words.

"Then, please follow me for a moment. I have something to show you..."

"Ah. Before that."

Jaa Soo-Jeong pointed at the table.

"Please have your meal first."

"....."

"Eating on time is important for your health, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Indeed.

Translated, that means [Eat before you do anything].

I laughed bitterly and obeyed the command of the god.

---

The place I headed to was the backyard of the old Korean house.

Namely, the [Warehouse Where Ghosts Sleep].

I cautiously opened the door of the warehouse, just a single step inside.

"I never thought I'd enter this ghost den again..."

I hung on the door, checking the inside of the warehouse.

Fortunately, there were no bizarre spectacles or festivals of evil spirits that would drastically reduce the viewer's sanity.

The warehouse was quiet, merely old junk peacefully gathering dust.

".....Not here?"

Just then, something clung to my ankle with a meow!

"Yikes!?"

"It's just Meow. You're too startled, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Jaa Soo-Jeong, as if familiar with it, bent down and grabbed the puppy doll clinging to my ankle. The puppy doll continued to remind us of its existential issues with "Nyaang! Nyaang!" even while being moved.

"Ahem."

I tried not to get too close to the puppy doll.

"Is this one dead? Like, a dead spirit attached to a doll?"

"No, Mr. Gong-Ja. Meow is just a being who eternally ponders [who they are]. That's all there is to it."

Holding the puppy doll, Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke softly.

"Meow believes its contemplation should never end, nor should it ever be resolved."

"Why so?"

The puppy doll then bounced energetically.

-Nyaa! Nyaoong, Meow! Meowwww!

Jaa Soo-Jeong nodded in response.

"Meow says that if it stops pondering, the world will end."

"....."

Indeed.

Well, I'm not exactly sure what part of that qualifies as 'indeed,' but anyway.

"So, you're saying this puppy doll is alive?"

"Of course. Meow is alive, will remain alive, and if it dies, it will be when the world ends."

"....."

I summoned a skill card right in front of what might be the most dangerous puppy... cat... cat-sounding puppy doll... oh, never mind, Meow.

"Skill card."

Woosh!

+

[Earth Bone Dragon's Skull]

Rank: SSS+

Effect: Stores the memories of the living. Stored memories are kept in a 'box.' This box can only be destroyed by the owner of this skill.

As long as the box remains intact, you can repeatedly produce bodies of individuals inheriting the same memories. The bodies can roam the world, accumulating new experiences, which can then be 'updated' into the box. Of course, only if you permit it!

Even if the body of the individual is destroyed, the box remains unharmed. Bestow the privilege of immortality on those around you.

*However, memories of a destroyed body cannot be updated into the box.

*Skill copied from Master of All Lives.

"Jaa Soo-Jeong."

"Yes?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong tilted her head, and at the same time, the puppy doll fluttered around, meowing longingly, probably yawning.

Why are you so cute when you're an apocalyptic-level item?

"I've gained the ability to give a [body] to this puppy doll."

"....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong hesitated.

Her expression remained impassive, but her eyes deepened slightly, attentively and quietly observing the place where my skill card was.

"A body...?"

"I can give these beings a living body."

"....."

"How about it? Jaa Soo-Jeong. Will you trust me and allow me to use the skill on these beings?"

Jaa Soo-Jeong pondered for a while.

Not a noble of the kingdom, not a concubine of the Sun King, and certainly not the Tower Master, but only born with the compassion of a god, Jaa Soo-Jeong, a third-year student in Shinseo Middle School Class A, slowly opened her mouth.

"I'm truly, very grateful for your offer."

She bowed her head.

"But I think it's something these beings should decide for themselves."

Indeed.

"Even though I'd be happy if these beings could live a little more freely with living bodies... they might think differently."

Peeling off the layers of a [Kingdom Noble], [Hero], and [Tower Master], and then confirming what remains in front of me.

Jaa Soo-Jeong's existence was truly minimal.

"If possible, I want these beings to make their own decisions."

I nodded.

"Yes. I think that's right too."

So, I asked each of the bizarre lifeforms, or rather questionable beings, gathered in the [Ghost Warehouse].

For instance, I asked a mirror. Looking into it, you'd feel like some ghost was chillingly gripping your neck.

"Uh..."

Squeeze.

Even from a distance, looking at the mirror, I felt as if long fingers were pressing on both sides of my neck. It wasn't an illusion. Squeeze, squeeze! I genuinely felt each finger.

I tried to dispel it with aura, but even that didn't work.

Before such a mirror, I presented the skill card.

"If you wish... I can give you a body..."

Squeeze?

"Of course, there are conditions. First, your memories will be stored in a box. And that box becomes my property... And when your body dies and needs to be recreated, well, that requires my permission to access the box."

Squeeze, squeeze.

"No! But, I don't have any ulterior motives! Really! I'm not the kind of person who will bring you back to life to create a Ghost Demon Corps and conquer the world or anything..."

Squeeze, squeeze, squeeze!

"Jaa Soo-Jeong! Help! This thing doesn't understand jokes!"

Save me!

Mr. Gong-Ja is dying at the hands of a ghost!

"You're quite adept at communicating, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Jaa Soo-Jeong admired me with an expressionless face.

"You're the first person I've seen who can communicate so well with a mirror other than myself. You're doing well."

"No, don't just praise me from a distance! Help me! I feel like I'm going to die!"

"Hmm."

Jaa Soo-Jeong approached the mirror and gently stroked its surface.

"Mr. Mirror. Mr. Gong-Ja is a very kind person."

As Jaa Soo-Jeong began to speak, the mysterious grip on my neck vanished abruptly.

"Just because he looks like a playboy? No, he's truly upright and strong enough not to be swayed. Upset because he looks young for his age? That can be understandable..."

"..."

What is this inanimate object that doesn't even qualify as a living being saying?

"But Mr. Mirror won't be exploited. The body of Mr. Mirror belongs to Mr. Mirror. Deciding whether to revive or destroy is entirely up to Mr. Mirror. You can trust Mr. Gong-Ja on this matter."

The mirror trembled.

"Yes? Do I have a special fondness for Mr. Gong-Ja? No, I cherish all of you. Unfortunately, I don't possess the special emotion of 'favoritism.'"

The mirror twinkled.

"Yes."

Jaa Soo-Jeong turned to me and spoke politely.

"The mirror agrees to be revived but requests a dedicated Victorian-style, monocle-wearing, black-haired young butler to be kept on standby. And preferably, he should have a strong British accent when speaking English. Also, if possible, it hopes for some interesting backstory, like being the second son of a now extinct marquis family."

Indeed.

Yes, this is truly an 'indeed' moment.

".....There are two cafe workers in our tower who can charm everyone with their looks. One with silver hair and the other with black hair. Though butler cosplay is a bit of a stretch, how about as cafe workers? I'll treat you as a mirror in the cafe."

Wait a minute.

Why am I desperately convincing a mirror that only knows how to choke people? Shouldn't I be the boss here?

There's only one reason.

'To reduce the burden of the Tower Master.'

Yes.

I will reduce the lives the Tower Master has to shoulder, one by one.

First, I'll revive the unknown lifeforms, the 'ghosts,' in Jaa Soo-Jeong's possession.

'Because that's the only way to defeat the Tower Master.'

Renewing my resolve, Jaa Soo-Jeong, the translator between humans and bizarre creatures, nodded her head.

"He says he graciously accepts Mr. Gong-Ja's proposal."

Next.

I began to gather the [Unknown Objects], one by one, into the [Earth Bone Dragon's Skull].

The box that stored the memories was small. A small, pitch-black cubic box.

The moment I saw it, I knew what to do. Following the guidance of the image in my mind, I opened my mouth and swallowed the box.

Gulp.

Then, as if it never had any form to begin with, the box melted away inside my mouth, esophagus, and stomach.

"....."

My heart darkened a little more.

"The Earth Bone Dragon's Skull."

In front of me, a bright light flickered.

[Activating skill.]

Where the light subsided,

There stood the mirror, seemingly no different from before.

"....."

"....."

Yes.

It stood.

On [legs].

"It has legs."

I noted.

"It has legs."

Jaa Soo-Jeong answered impassively.

"It seems that this was originally Mr. Mirror's body."

The four-legged mirror scurried around the warehouse, excitedly. Even if the most skilled detective in all of the worlds were brought here, they would have only one thing to say about such a sight.

[A cockroach].

A cockroach with the body of a mirror scuttled around energetically.

"No, no matter what, that's just....."

"Thank you, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Jaa Soo-Jeong spoke seriously.

"You're really a good person, Mr. Gong-Ja."

"....."

I gave a body to each of the rest.

As a result, the warehouse ended up with, among others, Meow who looked like an ordinary poodle but cried out "Nyaaa!" every time it opened its mouth, a painter drawing a portrait within a portrait, and a muscular but fortunately only 15cm tall Red Dragon, straight out of myths.

-What the hell, damn it.

Even the Guardian Spirit, who had been silent so far, couldn't help but comment.

-What a complete mess.

"Maybe it's a parade of a hundred ghosts..."

-The curry tastes like crap. Is that still curry? No matter how you name it, it's crap. You dung merchant.

"I think I know when my life started to get twisted, but I'm not sure how it got this way. Sword Emperor, it's since I met you. Ever since then, all the crazies, ghosts, and unidentified freaks started to flock around me. Do you understand?"

-Stop joking around, zombie. Hey. If you hadn't strayed and followed my advice, you'd have already hit the 100th floor of the tower. About 10,000 people would have watched your journey and cheered you on.

What nonsense.

I shook my head in disbelief.

"Ghoul Reincarnation."

I started what I had to do.

[Activating skill.]

Having alleviated the burden of lives the Tower Master's avatar bore, it was time to conclude my task.

"----Have you called for me, my lord?"

Pale blonde hair, wet with water.

Preta, once revered as Ester and feared as the Demon King, my vassal, knelt before me.

"Preta."

"Yes."

"Live."

Preta raised his head and looked up at my face.

Into my eyes.

".....I have killed many."

"I know."

"I am a sinner."

"That's true."

"Does someone like me deserve to live?"

I nodded.

"Live. Carry the weight of your life."

"....."

"If you feel you're going to collapse under that weight, I will carry it for you."

Silence followed.

Preta.

Slowly, very slowly, opened her lips.

"Okay."

His voice was soaked with emotion.

"I will live."

That was the beginning.

Chapter 234: King of Death (1)

---

I placed my hand on Preta's shoulder.

Swoosh!

A black whirlwind enveloped Preta, gradually lessening from the size of his body to that of his head, and then to the size of an eye. The diminished whirlwind eventually clumped together like a small bead.

This small bead was the [Earth Bone Dragon's Skull].

Preta's memories resided here.

Within this tiny box lay everything... the nameless doppelgänger devouring a village girl to become a saintess, then falling to become a witch, creating a paradise before vanishing without a trace. Everything was inside this tiny box.

"....."

Soul.

Perhaps the closest word to describe it.

I looked down at Preta's soul resting on my palm.

"Preta. Can you hear me?"

The bead on my palm moved ever so slightly.

"From now on, I will consume your memories. I don't understand the principle, but... instead of being stored inside me as a box, it turns into black liquid and sinks into my heart."

The sound of distant rain reached my ears. From the next neighborhood, or maybe the one beyond that. Clouds that had passed through poor alleys would soon reach this old Hanok.

"Preta."

The pitch-black bead glistened.

"Just now, Jaa Soo-Jeong made an important point."

The bead remained motionless.

"If I give someone a physical body with my skill, it should be their decision to accept it."

Inside the black bead, whirlwinds continuously swirled.

"No one in this world can choose to be born. No one can choose their parents. It's not just those considered unfortunate. Even unparalleled geniuses, legendary beauties, and great saints had no will in their birth. Unwished and unable, the 7 billion people are all unfortunate in that regard."

The bead.

"That's why this moment, where [you can decide who gives you life], is very, very special."

The swirling bead just faced up towards me.

"Preta."

"....."

"Would you become my daughter?"

Silence.

The summer rain, having passed the next neighborhood, now reached the Hanok*. The old streets, unchanged since the Japanese occupation, hoped not to be flooded every time it rained.

*For those who do not remember, Hanoks are Old Korean style houses.

The rain poured down the old, worn streets.

"....."

Rain also fell in my palm. Plop! Plop, Plop... Droplets bounced off my hand into the wider air, gathering in the crevices of the old wooden floor. Some raindrops escaped, but in my palm, the water slowly pooled, submerging half of the pitch-black bead.

"Preta."

To this small, submerged being,

I pleaded.

"Will you become my daughter?"

The bead bobbed forward as if swimming. It was the only way it could communicate, but I knew it was nodding.

"Yes."

I raised my left hand and slowly grasped the submerged bead in my right hand. Then, equally slowly, I placed Preta's soul into my mouth.

I closed my mouth.

Swallowed firmly.

"....."

The bead turned into a black liquid, flowing down my tongue. As it flowed, it split into dozens, then hundreds of streams, infiltrating my organs.

It was a shadow. The shadow that had been gnawing at my organs suddenly, as if having found its target, surged towards one place in the human body.

The heart.

Dozens, hundreds of shadows squeezed the heart. Then, the heart became tinged with shadow. Though it functioned normally, it was now shaded, each shadow representing someone's memories.

"The Earth Bone Dragon's Skull."

[Activating skill.]

Swoosh!

The shadows that had bound my heart were suddenly released. They rushed up my esophagus, into my mouth, and onto my tongue. Hundreds, thousands of black afterimages surged out of my body.

".....!"

When it emerged, it was nothing more than a bead.

It rolled across the rainy deck, plop, plop, plop. Each bounce made the bead grow exponentially.

Finally, the bead grew so large it occupied the entire deck---

"....."

At that moment, the giant bead shattered.

-Meow!

Meow yelped. Nyaa! Nyaa! Meow! Amidst its cries in the rain, the bead's shell melted into a shadow.

And she stood upon that shadow.

"....."

Ester.

Dressed in simple clothes a country girl might wear. A small basket for picking usable vegetables while surveying the farm.

The girl, who belonged in the middle of a rice field, was born from the egg of a shadow.

"Ah....."

Watching Preta look around bewilderedly, I recalled a scene I had once seen.

Ah.

I see.

Those who enter the tower come with nothing. Money, identification, even clothes, socks – they enter the tower completely bare, as if just born. They pass through a long tunnel and reach a square called Babylon.

And they receive a new name, an alias.

All this was a metaphor and mechanism for [You are reborn].

All this was a message from the Tower Master, [You are all the children of the Tower Master].

"Preta."

Just like.

"What name would you like to have?"

What I am doing now.

"....."

The Demon King of Autumn Rain took a while to answer. Not because she had nothing to say, but because, despite having a ready answer, she hesitated to voice it, unsure if such luxury, such a miracle, was permissible for someone like her.

"Es... Ester..."

She cried.

"My name is... Ester... please, call me Ester..."

I nodded.

I guessed why she chose the name of the first human she killed as her new name. She decided to live a life in place of someone else.

"Alright."

Understanding her heart, I gave her the name.

"Ester."

"Yes. Yes, my lord."

"Now I am not just your lord, but also your father."

In front of the avatar of a god who wished to be everyone's mother, I spoke to the life I had created.

"There will be many challenges ahead. Always cherish the person right in front of you. You now have the power from your [Constellation] days, so there's hardly anything you can't accomplish with a sword. But you still need so much more."

"Yes, yes... Sob. Yes....."

Calling her name as she cried, holding her breath,

"Ester."

I said.

"Learn much."

---

On a rainy day, it opened its eyes.

It had no name, no form. It was more of a shadow. On that rainy day, a shadow opened its eyes and saw the first living creature that shone upon it.

-Ribbit.

It didn't know what this creature was. There was much it didn't know. Only the sound... the sound of the rain. The croaking sound from all around enveloped it. The rainwater carried a sweet fragrance.

Just like now.

When the nameless monster became Ester, it was granted an ordinary human life. When Ester was called a saintess, a noble and holy future seemed to shine upon her. When the saintess fell to become a witch and turned into the Demon King, destroying a world, she never felt that she was truly born.

She just lived as life was given to her. Becoming a saintess was not because she was holy, but because she could replace a dead child. That's what others saw and called her an angel, a saintess... No. She just lived.

She just wanted to live.

-Ester.

Only now, at this moment,

-Learn much.

Ester was born.

"....."

Ester held a massive black sword. It was the sword that rolled out with her from the bead she was born from. The red sword that had made her undefeated and the strongest during her time as the Demon King.

Ester picked up the red sword. It was overly massive compared to her small stature. But to Ester, this sword was as good as her soul.

Drawing her soul was too easy, so Ester effortlessly lifted the great sword high.

"Pitiful life."

Ester's face darkened.

As if reciting her own prayer.

"I prove myself here with all my might."

The red sword slowly moved.

"Today, looking up to the sky, I release the croaking sound."

And then,

The swung sword emitted a roaring sound.

The red light emitted by the great sword split the world.

The falling raindrops were split in half, the clouds scattered, and the sunset hidden behind them was shattered to pieces.

"....."

Reflecting the brilliant colors of the sunset, raindrops fell down. Each drop seemed to contain gold, and the old Hanok was suddenly covered in a golden hue.

[The Demon King of Autumn Rain manifests.]

Jaa Soo-Jeong blankly watched the golden shower in the middle of the courtyard.

Raviel, who was sitting on the deck, and Uburka, also quietly looked up at this mysterious rain.

"It's beautiful....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong turned to Kim Gong-Ja and smiled.

"You, Mr. Gong-Ja, possess so many beautiful things."

"....."

Kim Gong-Ja nodded.

"Yes."

Kim Gong-Ja spoke.

"Today is the day Ester is born."

---

And this day was not just the birth of Ester.

In the old courtyard of the Hanok, numerous followers knelt down. Many had to kneel on the shoulders of their fellow disciples due to lack of space.

499 of them.

Except for one person, the Demonic Cult had not lost their spirit even after losing their old master.

"Blood Demon."

I called out to the strongest man among them.

"Yes, Vice-lord!"

"You followed the Heavenly Demon, handling all sorts of chores. If there were evildoers to deal with, you handled it, and if there were houses to be built for disciples, you built them. You not only eradicated evil but also worked for the people, so you are a secretary among secretaries, and a worker among workers."

"Thank you! Vice-lord!"

I nodded.

"Hell Ghost Demon."

"Yes, sir."

"When the Heavenly Demon set his mind on something, you contributed with strategies and tactics to achieve it. Even if your world under snow buried all strategies and tactics under the snowfield, the last will of the Heavenly Demon could be fulfilled because of your dedication."

"....."

I nodded again.

"Moon Shadow Demon."

"First among the Four Demon Lords, under the Shadow Corpse Troop, Moon Shadow Demon. I answer the call of the Vice-lord."

"You planted spies in the world to know the onset of the eternal snow earlier than anyone. You moved swiftly to guide the last elite of the Martial Alliance and summoned the last warriors of Demonic Heaven. Without you, it would have been impossible to determine the strongest in the last strand of the martial world."

"....."

I nodded once more.

"Sword Demon."

"Speak, Vice-lord!"

"You are strong. In our last battle, we won against the Martial Alliance. If we weren't strong, no matter how beautiful the battle or how worthy of being passed down in tales, what good would it have been? We needed to win first."

"Hahaha! You're right! I want to hug you for that, Vice-lord!"

"You all."

I turned to face the 499 followers.

"We could win because of you. No, our master could win because we were there."

The followers' eyes ignited with a quiet flame.

"Did our master only achieve victory over the Martial Alliance?"

"No!"

The followers responded in unison.

"Did our master only win against the Head of the Martial Alliance, Namgung Woon?"

"No!"

The followers shouted as if spitting blood.

"Then, against what did our supreme master achieve victory?"

Over the evening sky split by Ester, the people of the snow that had once perished shouted.

"The world!"

Indeed.

"Our Heavenly Demon has conquered the world!"

I nodded.

"Even if eternal snow falls and covers the earth, even if all people are buried in the snowfield and freeze to death, the master never gave up on anything, never doubted the sword. Thus, the master sliced through the snowfield."

"Demonic Heaven!"

"Glory to the common people!"

"But still, there are many worlds challenging us."

I pointed to the sky with my finger.

There was only the split sunset, but my hand was pointing to the tower beyond, and everyone present knew that.

"There are still, still so many worlds overflowing to the point of bleeding from the mouth!"

The followers' murderous intent peaked.

"Shall we inherit the teachings of Demonic Heaven?"

"Baraya!"

"If there are many worlds to conquer, is our task clear?"

"Baraya!"

"Then live!"

"Baraya!"

"Our hearts are like candles."

"We will set the world ablaze!"

And so, I melted 499 boxes in my heart.

The resurrected followers were still engulfed in murderous intent.

But it wasn't just murderous intent they exhaled.

"Demonic Heaven."

At my murmur, all 499 followers drew their swords.

"Glory to the common people!"

Their swords carried a dark inner power.

"We will conquer the tower!"

The ghouls tied to [Ghoul Reincarnation] were released.

They were reborn from my heart, returning with their power at its peak.

The strongest legion was born here.

Chapter 235: King of Death (2)

---

The Ghouls are prisoners.

Sinners who dyed the empire in blood, and sinners who failed to serve the supreme master till the end. They were shackled in chains under the name [Ghoul Reincarnation], and the cost of these chains was horrific.

+

The deceased do not inherit their abilities from life.

+

The dead can't bring back their prime from life but only reminisce. The great demon who once annihilated the empire turned into a small Preta, and the Demonic Cult that once commanded the world became nothing more than quirky ruffians.

But now, it has changed.

"Hahaha! How long has it been since I've felt the power of Demonic Heavenly God Art!"

Martial arts swirled around the swords held by the disciples.

The bodies they once lost have returned, and the martial arts they once abandoned have come back.

Their prime.

As the disciples returned to the era of Demonic Heaven's domination over the martial world, they were filled with excitement.

"Damn, who knew this day would come..."

"Let's have a martial arts contest! Let's open a competition!"

"I was already grateful for having my life saved once, but now the Vice-lord has even returned our martial arts, I am utterly overwhelmed with gratitude!"

"Long live the Vice-lord! Forever and ever!"

"Shouldn't today be declared an official feast day for the Demonic Cult?"

"I really want to start a contest right now, but this courtyard seems a bit cramped. Vice-lord! Where are we? I've been wanting to ask since I was first summoned, but you looked so stern and serious that I'm only asking now."

I smiled wryly.

It's just like a bunch of runaway peasants, deserters, slaves, and beggars not to keep quiet and turn the place into a marketplace.

"First, clear the space as your successors are waiting. While you were receiving the boxes of Earth Bone Dragon, the remaining five hundred troops were still patiently waiting in the shadows. Either enter the mansion or climb up the wall, make some space."

"Yes, Vice-lord!"

The disciples responded in unison.

Then, skillfully, they climbed up the walls, or onto the shoulders of their companions already on the walls, merged with the wall as one, or slipped under the large deck like burrowing rabbits.

In less than 30 seconds, the courtyard of the Hanok was clean.

"That's some skilled maneuvering."

Jaa Soo-Jeong admired the scene.

"....."

Uburka sat silently on the deck, just looking at the courtyard.

The murderous aura and expectations of the disciples, and above all, the level of their martial arts. He must be assessing his own skills in comparison.

Excited as a warrior, even though he kept his mouth shut, his arm muscles twitched and writhed.

"Get ready. You'll be fighting them soon."

I tapped Uburka's arm.

"And the strong ones you'll face aren't just them."

I looked around the courtyard and spoke.

"Next."

[The skill is progressing!]

The Ghouls waiting in line were summoned.

The total number of the Demonic Cult is 1000. Having already summoned 499 and given them new bodies, this time I put the memories of another 500 into black beads and placed them into my heart.

Thus, the immortal legion of the Demonic Cult was complete.

"Next."

The next summoned were somewhat less impressive compared to the Demon King of Autumn Rain or the Demonic Cult that once commanded the world.

"Goldencup."

"....."

The maid standing in the courtyard flinched, trembling slightly.

Born into a noble family, her golden hair was always neatly groomed.

Once hailed as the flower of the social world and a heroine who dominated the empire.

Silvia Evanair, the Lady of the Baron.

".....I greet the sun and moon of Ivansia."

She bowed gracefully, her grip on her skirt tight.

"Thinking about it."

I opened my lips.

"We haven't talked much, have we?"

".....You should not lower your speech to me. I am but a lowly servant of the lady. It's burdensome."

"Right. We haven't talked much, you and I."

I spoke casually. Raviel silently, just quietly lifted her right arm and placed her hand on my distant shoulder.

Then something remarkable happened.

Until now, this place was just an old Hanok in some shabby village. A mansion with an unnecessarily large courtyard.

But the moment Raviel touched my shoulder, the deck where we sat became our public seat, proving our titles, and the courtyard where Goldencup knelt turned solemn, as if it was an audience hall.

"I need to have a talk with you."

"....."

Goldencup let out a suppressed breath.

There were no grand family banners or knights in shining armor here. But the [Ivansia Ducal Family] did not exist in silk curtains or marble stairs. Where Raviel is, where Kim Gong-Ja is, that place is Ivansia.

Crickets from another world, from a foreign land, chirped.

Before their cries ended, Goldencup did her best to bow respectfully.

"Please ask your question..."

"You were a returner, right?"

"Yes."

"I understand that you used the power of a Constellation to return. And you coveted the position of Empress, which was to be assigned to Raviel. But why?"

"....."

"Why did you specifically target the position of Empress? Did you want to seize the greatest power in the empire? Why did you bet everything in your new life to steal Raviel's position?"

Silvia Evanair, no longer called the Lady of the Baron, sealed her lips.

As the lord of the Ghouls, I could command Silvia to speak, but I chose not to.

".....I'm not sure."

Even no longer being called the Lady of the Baron, Silvia Evanair, once a noble of the empire, spoke on her own.

"Not sure?"

"Yeah, well, it's a past I've lost."

Silvia quietly lifted the corners of her lips.

"The lover of the Crown Prince. The future Empress. The rise of the family. Numerous invitations at my feet and the countless riff-raff who flocked to flatter me... All in the past, right? After losing it all, I wonder why I clung to them so desperately... I'm not quite sure."

"You don't want to know?"

"Ahaha. That sounds like a grand rebuttal. As expected from the moon of the Ivansia Ducal Family. You can see through the human psyche, can't you? Eh, there's nothing worth seeing through in me. But if the lady wants to act superior, then I, Silvia Evanair, will dutifully play along."

"It's because your butler is gone."

"....."

"No, to be precise, disappeared."

The butler from [Tales of the Sormewin Academy].

When Raviel was doomed and Silvia fell, unable to endure, he prayed with everything he had. His wish reached some [Holed-Up Head Librarian].

-O God.

-Please help us.

Hamusutra willingly granted the butler's wish. He turned back time to before Goldencup became the Empress, to before Raviel faced her downfall. In the reverted timeline, Raviel was stabbed in the heart and became gilded.

As a price, the butler lost his existence.

He lost everything.

".....I, um."

Silvia clenched her teeth, her head bowed.

"I wanted to be friends with the Lady of Ivansia. Because she was beautiful... and capable, intelligent. I wondered if such a person could really exist among us."

Raviel, resting her head on my shoulder, narrowed her eyes and hummed.

"The very first encounter."

"Yes. The first meeting during my first return. I was incredibly nervous about the debutante ball with the young ones. That's when the Duchess, the Silver Lily Lady at the time, was seen from afar."

Silvia recounted.

Like someone replaying a videotape they've watched several times, Silvia precisely recited the landscape of the past.

"To my young eyes, Lady Silver Lily was like a real angel. Silver hair! And even red eyes... People who have seen the most beautiful rubies would scoff at them as garbage compared to her eyes. So I..."

I understood.

"You admired her."

Like how I once admired a certain hunter.

After a brief silence, Silvia clenched her fist.

"Yes! That's right!"

Silvia grabbed her maid headdress and threw it to the ground.

"I was consumed by admiration! Alright?! Happy now!?"

Silvia snorted and glared at the silent Raviel. The initial politeness was gone, standing like a gangster, forgetting all manners.

Jaa Soo-Jeong, our expressionless landlord, approached with a tray.

"Here's some chilled barley tea. Would you like some?"

"Yes! I don't know who you are, but thank you! Hup, gulp, gulp, gulp..., what is this!? It's freaking delicious!? Damn!"

Silvia stared at the barley tea and suddenly slumped her shoulders.

Her expression was one of life's futility.

"Well, there were others obsessed with admiration like me. We formed a social club called [Silver Bells]. It was exclusive, and only ladies recommended by members could join. The screening was strict, not just any social club anyone could enter."

"Silver Bells...?"

"[Bells for Lady Silver Lily]. Little bells, you know. You don't get it? Idiot?"

Silence lingered for a while.

Guardian Spirit and Shiny broke the silence.

-Zombie, at least when you were holed up, you didn't create anything like a bell club, right?

[Shiny gently speculates that even the hero of that era would not have had the social capacity to create such a thing.]

-Ah... Sorry, Zombie. I accidentally touched a sore spot...

I quietly listened to Goldencup's story.

"So, as the founder, I was very active."

Raviel, with her chin resting on her hand, leaned forward.

".....I'm the person in question and this is the first I'm hearing of this."

"It was an absolute secret society. Just looking, no touching. We just watched from afar, went back to our secret hideout, and gossiped about Lady Silver Lily, wrote poems, and published stories. That was the incredible purpose of the secret society [Silver Bells]."

"I seem to be in a strange position like a platypus..."

Raviel pouted her lips. Indeed, she looked like a newly born platypus.

"Well, as usual, we were going 'Kyaa, Kyaa' and then, you see, I just casually wrote down Lady Silver Lily's real name... Raviel Ivansia, and below it, my name. Ah. I should show you for it to make sense."

Silvia looked around.

Then, spotting a broom for sweeping the courtyard, she trudged over to fetch it.

"Look here."

Silvia held the broom upside down and began writing on the ground.

+

Raviel Ivansia

Silvia Evanair

+

"Just like this, I scribbled the names on paper when I was young."

-Zombie, even when you were holed up....

[Shiny again gently suggests that even the hero of that era wouldn't have been in such a turbulent period.]

-Right.

I continued to focus solely on Silvia.

Silvia twirled the broom and said.

"At first, it was just a doodle out of boredom. But suddenly, an idea struck me. What if a child was born between Lady Silver Lily and me..."

Raviel almost dropped her cup.

Silvia pointed her broom at Raviel, her expression fierce like an angry hedgehog.

"Ah, understand, will you? It was puberty, okay? Anyway, if a child was born between us, it'd be a bastard since we couldn't officially marry. We couldn't pass on the family name, but we couldn't give a completely unrelated name either. Combining [Raviel Ivansia] and [Silvia Evanair] seemed almost inevitable. Do you understand this outstand idea?"

"Miss Silvia."

Jaa Soo-Jeong politely raised a hand.

"It's not 'outstand,' it's 'outstanding' in this context."

"Thanks, but now shut up! Damn it! So, focus and watch!"

As Jaa Soo-Jeong dejectedly lowered her head, Silvia's broom briskly moved.

+

R A V I E L I V A N S I A

S I L V I A E V A N A I R

+

“Look here, everyone! This is the tricky part. When I was young I thought of combining our names to make a new one, but then I found something amazing!”

Silvia moved her broom to continue making letters on the ground.

“If we move around the letters...”

+

A A A E I I I L N R S V V

A A A E I I I L N R S V V

+

Ah.

"....."

Indeed, written like that, it was unmistakable.

I looked at the letters arrayed on the ground.

"The letters forming the name... are all the same?"

"Yes!!"

Thud!

Silvia tossed the broom and spread her arms wide.

"Lady Silver Lily and I! We had the same name!"

Her face shone with the purity of a girl, long rusted and reduced to remnants.

Chapter 236: King of Death (3)

---

The next moment.

"Hehehe."

Silvia laughed eerily.

The sparkling purity of a girl coexisted seamlessly with the moisture in her laugh, blending perfectly.

"As soon as I discovered this fact, I was shocked and hid the note. The terrifying truth that I and Lady Silver Lily had been entwined by the same destiny since birth, maybe even before. I concealed that revealing note tightly."

As if she didn't want anyone to discover it.

"Of course, right? It's a very seductive secret. While the other ladies in the social club were giggling, sharing secrets like [this is what I heard from a friend] or [oh, I eavesdropped this from my parents] just to spice up our tea time... This [Secret Note] was completely different. Yes, it had to be!"

There were still many young ladies in the Silver Bells club.

How to take this secret note without them noticing, and how to present this astonishing and mysterious coincidence to Lady Silver Lily. Young Silvia was extremely nervous.

"I was different from the other members of Silver Bells. Yes, very different. Even when those girls were utterly charmed by how beautiful Lady Silver Lily was that day, or who she danced with first... I was secretly searching for some mystical connection between Lady Silver Lily and myself. Horoscopes, fortunes, birthstones... But now they're all useless. Our names. Our names prove the inseparable bond between Lady Silver Lily and me!"

"....."

A spirited performance unfolded in the old courtyard.

The sunset, like an old man weary from a long walk, slowly crested the hilltops. As the sun aged through the day, it seemed already old.

As the aged sunset spread across the sky, the performance of a maid on the ground, no matter how fervently she voiced, only echoed as a faded sound of the past.

"Things like imperial laws don't matter. Ethics? Morality? They can shove it. I was certain. Lady Silver Lily just didn't know it yet, but if I managed to present her with this secret note, leaping over the strawberry vines in the courtyard, passing through the maze-like yard, and finally reaching the hall where Lady Silver Lily was dancing with the gentlemen... Climbing up to the hall, waiting among the fools hoping to hold hands with Lady Silver Lily until their line dwindled."

I easily imagined the scene.

"Finally, I would reveal this secret I discovered to her."

At that time, Silvia, or Goldencup, must have been disheveled.

Running from the courtyard to the hall, she wouldn't have looked anything like a noble lady, no matter how generously one viewed it. Even if they subtly tried to dismiss her with an eviction order, she would have brushed them off, insisting, 'I have something I must show Lady Silver Lily!'

And then.

"My turn finally came."

The two faced each other.

One, a flower of the social world destined to be the Crown Prince's consort.

The other, a girl trembling with admiration for the flower.

-What's going on?

-I, I, I am the daughter of the Evanair Baron family. May glory be upon the Moon of Ivansia!

-So. Why did you want to see me? Baroness.

Lady Silver Lily was exhausted.

She had been trapped in social obligations since dawn. Her mother had long disappeared. It was the Lady herself who had to play the hostess role in the Ivansia Ducal family.

Therefore, she not only planned, designed, managed, and supervised every ball but also, as the flower of the social world honored by the Emperor, had to extend her hand to the influential heirs who requested a dance.

While dancing in the hall, she had to carefully avoid stepping on her partner's feet and simultaneously keep track of whether the ball was going well, if there were any issues with the orchestra's song selection, and if enough food and drinks were being served to the guests.

In short, Raviel Ivansia, despite her young age, was already handling one of the empire's pillars, quite skillfully.

Spies spread around the ball by the Duke family reported rumors and secrets from the venue to the young mistress. It was also Lady Silver Lily's job to classify and interpret this information.

Thus, Raviel Ivansia lived in the [Empire]. The empire was her world.

"I approached Lady Silver Lily with immense nervousness!"

On the other hand.

Here was a young Baroness who didn't yet understand what the empire was and didn't need to. She had just discovered a sparkling treasure named coincidence.

The secret note was crumpled tightly, hidden from others, looking tattered. She was embarrassed to present such a crumpled piece of trash to Lady Silver Lily's delicate palm.

-But she'll understand!

Young Silvia might have believed so.

-Because it's truly amazing! She'll want to be friends!

And then.

"Lady Silver Lily unfolded the secret note and looked at it for a while. Now that I think about it, she might have imagined it as [a secret directive sent by a spy from an enemy nation]. But since it made no sense, Lady Silver Lily turned to me expressionlessly."

-What is this?

"At that moment, I locked eyes with Lady Silver Lily for the first time. Do you understand? For the first time! Well, her expression was a bit expressionless and cold, but I was sure her icy demeanor would melt away once she heard my explanation. I calmed my thumping heart and explained."

-This, this is my name...

-Your name?

-Yes! My name is Silvia Evanair, and, um, your name, Lady Raviel Ivansia... If we break down both names and arrange them... they, they're the same.

-.....

-The coincidence is amazing, isn't it? Such an incredible... coincidence...

"As I spoke more and more, the atmosphere felt wrong, like this wasn't it. I awkwardly smiled and looked up at her."

-.....

"Ah."

Silvia Evanair, dressed as a maid, sighed.

"That look made me realize. Yeah, well. It wasn't just disappointment... it wasn't just a look of boredom. It was like, in the 2 seconds Lady Silver Lily's red eyes looked down on me, I felt everything about me become worthless."

A sensation of her existence being sliced away, starting from her fingertips.

"To her, I was just trash."

Lady Silver Lily said nothing to the young lady.

Without insult or scorn, without a farewell, she simply turned her back and left for the ball.

After she left, a crumpled note lay abandoned in the place she vacated.

"....."

Silvia Evanair smiled.

"Such things often happen in childhood, right? Yes."

She bent down and grabbed the broom again.

And started to sweep away the letters she had written in the courtyard.

"I never really had any greed. My peers were all excited about how handsome the Crown Prince was, but I never had any interest in love or marriage. Then I accidentally saw Lady Silver Lily, who was just, too beautiful."

Swoosh.

The consonants and vowels on the ground were swept away into the dust.

"I just wanted to be a bit closer to her."

"But, to dare insult someone like that?"

Silvia raised her head.

A laugh completely different from the one on her lips just moments ago blossomed on her face. A Corpse Poison Flower. Emitting a fierce toxicity, Silvia laughed radiantly.

"Is the empire so important to you? Is sorting and classifying information that sacred? Organizing the family affairs, comforting the people, being engaged to the Crown Prince, are those so, so important that compared to them, I'm nothing?"

That was.

"I'll prove it to you."

A curse.

"That Crown Prince you hold in such high regard. I'll charm him. It was easy."

"A pretty face with sweet whispers, delicate gestures, and he fell for it. Those spies from your family? I asked the Crown Prince to use the imperial knights to kill some. His love for his mistress was so deep... I was moved!"

Goldencup laughed brightly.

"You despised me every time I did such things, didn't you, Moon of Ivansia? Called me [a lowly creature who never thought of the future of the empire]. Yes, that's right. I never thought about the empire. But I was curious. How such a lowly creature."

Swoosh.

The letters on the ground were completely erased.

Standing on the broom, Silvia Evanair bowed gracefully.

"Could ruin your despised face."

"For the empire, right? For the people of the empire. Loyal to the royal family, loving the family. Me, I just wanted to shatter the empire, plunge its people into despair, wreak havoc on the royal family, and bring your family to ruin. Still, I wondered if you'd still love the empire and your family."

Or,

"Would you hate me to the point of madness."

"That's what I was curious about."

Silvia smiled lightly.

"Waiting for the day when your hatred for me would become far more potent and deeper than your love for the empire and family. It's a pity. Some frail-looking farmhand came in and ruined everything."

Silvia glanced at me.

Beneath her smiling eyes, her pupils shimmered with resentment.

"....."

Raviel remained silent.

The events Silvia just spoke of happened in her first life.

As Raviel, she couldn't remember or know them. My wise wife, with her chin propped on her hand, was deep in thought.

"I know."

That's why I answered on her behalf.

"What do you know?"

"I know how you must have felt, how much pain you were in."

Silvia paused.

Resentment that had been pooled in her eyes spilled over towards me.

"How dare..."

Goldencup said.

"How dare you say that."

Goldencup grasped her sleeve. The crumpled sleeve created ripple-like wrinkles across her dress.

She exclaimed passionately.

"How would you know? Do you know my pain? My suffering? How much it hurt that day, how much agony I felt, the pain of being ignored by someone I looked up to! How would you, what do you know to spout such nonsense,"

"I do know."

I repeated.

"I really do."

I didn't say it was a mere trifle to invest an entire life in vengeance.

I didn't say it was a mere trifle to plunge your world into disaster.

Being ignored.

Being treated as if you don't exist.

Not being treated as a person is a poison strong enough to kill someone more than 4000 times.

"..."

Goldencup clenched her teeth.

Her teeth ground together in her closed mouth.

Then she opened her lips again.

"Why do you interfere then?"

"Your butler."

Silence lingered.

"I don't know much about your butler. He might have secretly loved you, maybe even my wife. But what's clear is that your life, sharpening your blade for revenge, was never happy."

"....."

"The butler wished for someone to help you. Hamusutra took that wish. I was just dispatched as Hamusutra's agent. In the end, you created this situation yourself."

"Why is that my own doing?"

"You didn't make the butler happy."

"....."

"You had someone who cared for and loved you, but you ignored them. You were just obsessed with your own revenge. At least you should have been happy yourself, but even that didn't happen."

As a result.

"The butler became an 'invisible person'."

I said.

"If Raviel was a bastard to you, you were just as much of a bastard to the butler who was helping you the closest."

".....Ah."

Silvia Evanair dropped her head.

"What is this... a story about the butler."

Amidst the silence, her words trickled out.

"Bringing up that guy... it's cowardly..."

Silence settled again.

The sunset over the western mountains had now dimmed. Streetlamps in the alley buzzed to life, but in the poor village, the lights stretched their arms as far as they could. The old hanok of the Amethyst, untouched by the crimson streetlamp light, was simply dark.

"I'm sorry."

It was Raviel's voice.

"I was sorry, Silvia Evanair."

"And I'm sorry."

Slowly, Silvia lifted her head. In the dark night, people were merely silhouettes, shadows merging together. A shadowy voice flowed from the shadowy body.

"What are you talking about...?"

"Even if it wasn't in my memory, if the same thing had happened, it would have played out the same way. I would have ignored you. I wouldn't even have remembered you. Because, at that time, the only things that mattered to me were the well-being of the empire and the glory of the family."

"....."

"I'm sorry. I was a person who didn't yet understand pain."

Raviel stood up.

As she rose, the ancient floorboards of the deck creaked.

Like a broken cassette tape turning.

"You took away my promised future. You stole the position of Crown Princess, monopolized the Crown Prince's heart. Moon of Ivansia. Flower of the social world. The future leader of the empire. All those promises were broken because of you."

"So what about it...?"

"Because of you, my heart bled for the first time."

Thud.

Raviel walked towards Silvia.

"It hurt. It was painful. I had to stab my own heart in the mirror. Only then did I realize how much I had hurt others."

"And then, I met my love."

Raviel turned to look at me.

Even in the dark veil, I clearly recognized the warmth of her breath, the rhythm of her breathing, the fragrance in her eyes. She didn't speak. Silently, she commanded me to come closer.

I approached her.

"My love was also wounded. A returner. The endless wounds of life repeated. Never did I expect to find someone to share such a burden."

"I am grateful for the curse of eternal repetition."

Indeed.

"Because of it, I could meet Gong-Ja."

I too am grateful for my returning life.

I became grateful.

"Although it was very painful."

As the master said, those days were painfully painful.

"If it weren't for that pain, I would never have recognized my lovely kindred spirit."

It allowed me to fall for Raviel at first sight.

"Because of my pain, I met someone bleeding like me. Gong-Ja. I knew it when I saw you. And Silvia. I realized it because of you."

"I thank you, Silvia Evanair."

Slowly.

Raviel knelt on the dust-covered ground, bowing her head to her maid.

"Thank you."

Ah, of course.

Of course, Raviel is... my lover.

The emotions she holds for Silvia must be as intense as the feelings I have for Yoo Soo-Ha. She must want to retaliate, to take revenge. Yet, despite all, Raviel kneeled to Silvia.

Because the present moment with me is overwhelmingly happy.

Thankful for everything in the past that led to this moment.

".....Eugh."

Silvia clenched her teeth.

"Damn it... Damn! That's why. That's why I hate you people. Why do you get to be happy? Keep being miserable! Keep hurting! Keep crying pathetically, lamenting your misfortune!

Yeah, damn it! Be miserable!"

That's why, Silvia said. That's why.

"That makes me... seem like a fool for being swayed by emotions, wasting my life...!"

Silvia covered her face with her hands.

"It's not true. It's not. My pain is deeper, more special, incomprehensible to anyone, unforgivable, and so, so—"

Her voice trickled off like a faucet running out of water.

Silence flowed.

After enough silence, when Silvia stifled her breath, trembling, Raviel slowly stood up.

"Right."

She returned to her chair and sat down.

Resting her elbows on the table, she propped her beautiful chin on her folded hands.

"Let's start thinking about how to deal with this now."

She spoke.

Chapter 237: King of Death's Family (1)

---

Silvia clenched her fist tightly.

"What do you mean by that?"

"Let's summarize the issues at hand," my lover continued calmly.

"I hurt you. I apologized, trying to soothe that wound, but it's difficult to heal such wounds with just words. In reality, you haven't completely healed either."

"Well, saying it like that makes me sound petty but... then what...?"

"There are three options available."

Raviel extended three fingers and then folded one.

"First, I endure ruin until you feel satisfied."

Hearing this, I clenched my fist.

Raviel glanced at me and then turned back to Goldencup.

"However, this is not feasible. Just like in the past, my ruin would bring too many things with it. It used to be the empire's safety, and now it includes the happiness of my lover, so I simply cannot grant such a request."

"Moreover, the fact that your butler proved by sacrificing everything that such an act won't bring you happiness."

Silvia slumped her head.

The story of the butler remains an indelible debt in her heart.

Raviel folded another finger.

"Second is to physically exclude and annihilate you."

"...!"

Silvia jerked her head up.

The Silver Tyrant gazed down at Silvia with eyes burning through the darkness.

"Under normal circumstances, it would be my immediate choice."

"...."

"Murder is the ultimate incompetence, as my partner once relayed a god's words. I fully agree. Murder is not a proof of competence, but rather a last resort when no other options are available."

But, Raviel added.

"However, I'm not an omnipotent god or a transcendent being. I'm just a person with limitations, reliant on bread and water, nothing more than a 'slightly smarter beast'. I must protect what I carry within these constraints, physically removing anything that threatens or could threaten my well-being."

There was a certain pride in her voice, acknowledging her own limitations.

"So..."

Silvia bit her lip.

"You're going to eliminate me...? Or keep me bound in this ghoul's curse forever because I'm unworthy to have a body like you...?"

"Both are possibilities, but right now, I won't choose either," Raviel stated and folded her last finger.

"Third is to accept your heart."

"...?"

"Meaning, to welcome you as my concubine."

Silence descended.

"....."

"....."

Jaa Soo-Jeong sipped barley tea with a gulp, the sound clearly audible.

Besides that, no other sound was heard, and even the believers of the Demonic Cult hiding in the shadows held their breath.

-Wow.

The first voice I heard was the Guardian Spirit's admiration.

The legend among legends who conquered up to the 99th floor of the tower looked at the courtyard with a profound expression.

-Zombie, some popcorn, please. Ah, not just any popcorn, make sure it's caramel. To me, popcorn coated in a moderate brown is the tastiest. You know, it's like biting into a cavity, making it more special. Anyway, that's how it is.

His expression was profound, but the dialogue, not so much.

Honestly, I wanted to tell him to shut up for a moment.

Eventually, after a long time, a human voice echoed in the courtyard, belonging to Silvia Evanair, Goldencup.

Silvia's lips trembled violently.

"What nonsense are you spouting!?"

Hidden in the darkness, her eyes trembled as much as her lips.

"A concubine? A, a concubine, you say? To me, Silvia Evanair, who was promised by the Crown Prince himself to be his Crown Princess, to suggest that I... become your concubine!?"

"Yes."

"Nonsense! Absolute nonononononsense! How can you even think of such absurdity...?"

"Hm. It indeed is nonsense," Raviel affirmed.

"There are two reasons why."

Raviel spread her fingers again and spoke.

"One. This is not something I can decide on my own. Status, looks, or anything can be sorted later, but first, Gong-Ja, my love, and I need to come to an agreement. The fact that this proposal came before the agreement is why it's nonsense."

Relieved, my heart, which had climbed back up my spine, sat comfortably in its place. Silvia screamed out loud.

"No, that's not it! What about considering my opinion! That should be the precondition—"

"Two."

Raviel folded her fingers.

"Did you truly love me?"

Silvia, who was shouting, fell silent.

"Was it not mere admiration for an idol?"

"A desire for something unattainable, assumed unattainable, was it not?"

A long silence followed.

"I..."

Thud.

Raviel placed her teacup down.

Jaa Soo-Jeong collected the cup on a tray and briskly disappeared towards the house.

"I love Kim Gong-Ja."

"I love everything about Kim Gong-Ja. I never thought such love was possible, and it must have been impossible for the countless people who lived and died before me, but a miracle was granted to me, and I met him."

Raviel.

She recited it calmly, as if stating a fact.

"Everything is perfect. His breath, the empty spot on the bed when he leaves at dawn... the warmth... I find happiness in every trace my love leaves behind. I understand him, and he understands me. We live in the same timeline. Therefore..."

Raviel turned to Silvia.

"I cannot recognize anything as love other than [this kind of love]."

"....."

"Did you love me that way?"

Silvia slumped her head.

It was a gesture of evasion, unable to answer, not wanting to answer, just wanting to escape from this situation.

"By now, you must know. You did not love me. That's why I can't love you."

Indeed.

That's how it is.

How much coincidence and bloodshed were necessary for me to love Raviel and for Raviel to love me? The reason we love each other so fiercely is precisely because we didn't fall in love easily.

Our love is difficult.

It's a love that only Raviel and I can have.

"...Then,"

Then, Silvia spoke.

Shadows gathered behind her drooping head and fallen bangs.

"So, what now... what are you proposing?"

Her teeth chattered as she spoke, blood from her gums tinging them red.

"You won't grant me ruin, won't erase me, won't love me... So what should I do? Just tossing an incomplete apology at me, ah, what should I do... what can I do..."

"I leave that to you," Raviel said.

Then she turned to me.

"Gong-Ja."

Hmm.

"Yes, Raviel."

"By using the skill 'Earth Bone Dragon's Skull' to give Silvia a body, will she be more free than when she was a ghoul?"

I understood the intent behind her question and nodded in affirmation.

"Yes, she will be freer."

"Is that freedom equivalent to what she enjoyed in life?"

"Yes, it is."

"Enough to pursue what she desires?"

"Enough to pursue what she desires."

Raviel nodded and then turned to Silvia.

"Pursue what you desire, Silvia Evanair."

"Do you want to ruin me? You almost succeeded once. Try again. But to do that, you must be stronger than me and my lover, and be able to completely ignore the sacrifices made by your butler for your sake."

Goldencup's breathing halted.

Raviel continued speaking.

"Do you want to die and disappear? Or do you want to kill me? Try it. But I won't just stand by and let it happen. I will resist with everything I have against any threat to me and I will win. Just as when you wanted to ruin me earlier, you will have to do better."

"Or do you want to be loved by me? Or like before, do you want to become a being that I admire and adore? That too depends on your effort. You can strive for it."

Maybe you can achieve it, Raviel muttered.

Throughout her speech, she looked straight at Goldencup.

"Whichever it may be, Silvia Evanair."

The eyes of one person met the eyes of another.

"I recognize you as my equal, an entity capable of standing opposite me, a worthy adversary."

From the very beginning.

From the very start, all that was needed in every world was just that.

"So I ask you, Silvia Evanair."

Raviel Ivansia asked quietly.

"Do you recognize me as a person?"

And then, silence ensued.

---

Silvia gazed up at Raviel, stupefied.

Beyond the darkened sky, the white moon was floating.

Raviel's face, backlit by the moonlight, was resolute.

How much time passed?

"....."

Goldencup opened her mouth.

As if there was so much steam in her heart, when she opened her mouth, no words came out.

Just hot breath, malice, rage, self-loathing, guilt, resentment, vengeance, blood clots, breath, endlessly leaking out.

"I...."

I, she said.

Silvia was truly pouring out her soul.

"It's difficult for me. You, you all..."

Biting her lip till it bled.

Gazing with pain.

"To look up to, to look down upon, to accept as a person... to do unto others what I myself desperately desire, I..."

Above all, with a dragging voice.

"...Even now. You apologized to me, but in the end, I... I can't apologize to you. I can't forgive you... I am." Silvia covered her face with her hands.

"I know... Saying this is shameless. I know I did much worse to you, really, incomparably worse. I know, but still, that... that thing."

Regardless of the presence or strength of power, the one who forgives is always stronger than the one being forgiven.

Silvia wasn't strong enough, and therefore couldn't forgive Raviel.

"So for now..."

Silvia shivered and then barely spat out her words.

"For now, I want to... I want to try that...."

Silvia vowed.

"To forgive you... you all, to accept you all as people, no matter how long it takes, how it's possible with my petty mind, I will make it happen."

"Because that's..."

Silvia swallowed her words.

She could have just swallowed them, but instead, with her head down, she said,

"That's what he would have wanted... the butler..."

Her eyes brimmed with tears as she murmured.

A sob followed, then a cry.

"For now, I want to become someone... someone not ashamed in his eyes... hard as it may be, difficult as it is, I..."

I call that the will to live.

"Good."

As one bestowed with the power to share life, I willingly answered.

"Then let's see you live. Goldencup, Silvia Evanair."

"Live to obtain what you seek. To prove what you want to prove. Live."

My hand, clutching the golden card, shone brightly.

"I will be with you in this."

I enclosed her will within the Earth Bone Dragon's Box.

[Activating skill!]

Chapter 238: King of Death's Family (2)

---

Swoosh-

Black water swirled around Goldencup. Or perhaps it was not water, but shadows.

Whether it was the first water one touches at birth, or the shadow one drags until death, it was too fitting for announcing a birth.

[The Earth Bone Dragon's Box activates.]

The water... the shadow... the water-shadow soon completely enveloped Goldencup. Swish, swish, the sound of the water-shadow swirling like a cocoon continued from within.

And then, it began to shrink.

The cocoon surrounding Goldencup shrank smaller and smaller, until it finally condensed into the size of a child's toy bell. In my palm, a bead lay, squishy like water, yet dark as pitch-black shadow.

"....."

This tiny thing represented the existence of Silvia Evanair.

I slowly, carefully, opened my mouth and— dropped the bead in, just like placing a cherry on top of a cake.

"....."

Everyone in the room watched me, tense.

To them, I was neither Ivansia's consort nor the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult. I was a demi-god with power.

As they silently observed the miracle of the demi-god, I simply chewed.

Squish.

I chewed and mulled over the bead. Naturally, the taste was different from cherries. Cherries are sweet, with a tart aftertaste. But this bead, this existence of Silvia Evanair, the more I chewed, the more I bit into it... the more it tasted of sorrowful rainwater.

-Miss Silvia.

-Remember, you're a bastard to someone too.

-Butler! What are you doing, where are you going!?

Memories fragmented.

Each time I chewed the bead, memories popped like popcorn kernels.

"Hmm."

I swallowed the finely crushed memories of Goldencup, then swallowed again. A human life was too vast or too sticky to swallow in one go.

Goldencup's existence was on the stickier side. Like overly dense red bean jelly.

I steadily, really steadily, swallowed Goldencup's existence.

[The Earth Bone Dragon's Box is complete.]

And then.

"Huuu..."

I slowly exhaled. The breath I just released had mass, weight, even color, like a poisonous smoke, it was a pitch-black breath.

In the dark mist, two eyes shone like a beast's.

[The Apostle of 'Ruin-Harvesting Cow' manifests!]

The tower called her eyes by an ancient name.

But it was too loose a sound to encompass who she was now.

“Silvia Evanair.”

"....."

The one who regained form from breath.

To call it reincarnation would be too grand, and transformation too magnificent, so let's say it was a change of life. The one who had once died now kneeled before me.

“Do you have a new name you wish for?”

“...No. I wish to live as I have been called, as I have been known. More importantly... What should I call you?”

Goldencup's face was filled with awe.

Naturally.

From her perspective, I had resurrected her.

Using memories stored in [Ghoul Reincarnation], I compressed them like a box with [Earth Dragon Bone's Skull], then transplanted it into my body. Now, I could revive Goldencup whenever I wanted.

Even for someone who has dealt with magic and gods, this was undoubtedly a miracle.

“Re-resurrection is truly a sign of divinity. It feels inappropriate to call you as I did before, just like Ivansia's lady.....”

“Family head.”

“Pardon?”

“You can call me family head in public. In private, Kim Gong-Ja, Mr. Gong-Ja, or whatever is fine. But in war or battle, call me family head.”

"....."

I slowly stood up.

Merely straightening a bent back, yet to me, it felt like a beast awaking from a long winter's sleep. If I felt this way, so must have the many watching me.

"Listen."

I spoke, letting aura flow into my voice.

"There are two meanings to 'family'. One is the family we're born into, and the other is the lineage we create. Raviel and I are a unique family. Everyone who approaches me in this world becomes part of my family... that is my ideal."

If I could love someone else as I do Raviel.

If there was even a chance to achieve that impossible feat.

"Ester."

“Yes, master... Father.”

At my call, Ester hurried over and kneeled on one knee. Seeing this, I chuckled softly and stroked her head.

“That’s it.”

“...Yes?”

“That’s not how family is formed, Ester. See, where would you find a daughter kneeling on one knee to her dad?”

“Oh...”

Ester was flustered.

“This is, well, even in parent-child relationships, if the parent is a king, the child must fulfill both the duties of a child and a subject, so it’s unavoidable...!”

“It’s alright.”

I smiled.

“We haven’t become close enough to each other yet.”

“...Father?”

“I am an inexperienced father. Ester, you’ve never been a daughter, so you wouldn’t know. So, we haven’t reached the stage of being a family yet. We don’t know what kind of father I’ll be, or what kind of daughter you’ll be.”

The night wind blew.

Years ago, such a wind had also blown at an orphanage outside the tower.

It had blown.

“There’s still so much we don’t know.”

What we will be to each other, is not yet determined.

“We’re not a family yet.”

We're only at the starting line.

“If we ignore this and think, ‘We’re family’, ‘We’re closely bonded’, one day, these thoughts themselves will shackle us. ‘Even though we’re family, I didn’t know anything about you.’ ‘Why can’t you do this much even though we’re family?’ Such despair will follow.”

The heart racing ahead is beautiful.

But the heart is more beautiful when it supports actions.

In front of all of us orphans, the director had said so.

“We're...”

I recited what the tired-faced director once told me.

“We're to understand each other, to be understood in areas we want to be understood, not to understand where we shouldn't as requested. What we want. What our habits are. What message you want to leave in this world. Why you love sunsets..."

I slowly recited the signs of love.

"Until we learn and understand these things about each other, we're not yet a 'family'."

I looked at each one - the Demon King who tried to destroy the world, the believers from the eternal winter, the noble lady who cursed people.

"We're people striving to become a family."

Director.

"Family isn't completed or ended with the word 'family'. Family is a relationship, the extreme of relationships. It's a promise to strive for each other. It's hard enough to care for each other, and striving is even harder. How can a family be easily formed?"

Right.

“It’s going to take a lot of effort.”

Though there will be many fights.

We can do it.

“Until then—instead of wearing the skin of a 'family', let’s become a 'lineage'.”

At my declaration, Ester, who was being stroked on the head, reacted.

Her ears perked up.

“Father... Lineage, did you say?”

“A lineage has its roles and duties. The housekeeper is responsible for the hygiene and welfare of the lineage, cooking when the lineage members are hungry.”

Just as the director assigned each of us a role at the orphanage.

Ultimately, people act as they have learned and strive to be better.

I looked at Ester seriously.

"The eldest daughter usually becomes the successor. While receiving education as an heir, she steps in to host balls and social gatherings when the family head is unable. Ester, as the eldest daughter of our lineage, you will take on many responsibilities in the future."

"....."

"On the other hand, warriors protect the safety of the lineage. They guard against any villain attempting to kidnap a lineage member, and when a force tries to bring down our lineage, they fight."

The night sky.

My precious believers, merged with the darkness of the night. The warriors sat on the walls, under the walls, in the courtyards, and on the main floor, looking up at me.

“I will strive to become a family to you.”

Though not a single one of us is related by blood.

“Until that day comes, first, let's become a lineage.”

We will cherish each other more than anyone else.

Because we've experienced pain, hated humans, been betrayed by the world, witnessed annihilation, and yet somehow, we've arrived here, met like this.

I spoke.

“Four Demon Lords.”

“Yes!”

From the dark corners of the mansion, facing in each cardinal direction, the elite assassins of the Demonic Cult gathered at my feet.

Among them, the eldest, Blood Demon, spoke.

“Please command, Vice-lor...”

A wrinkle formed on Blood Demon’s handsome forehead. Principled on the good side, but stubbornly old-fashioned on the other, he was a guardian warrior who maintained discipline among the believers. Tall and good-looking, but a stickler for rules.

After a short contemplation, he adjusted his address with a sigh.

“...Family Head.”

“Hmm.”

“We are merely tools to be used. You, Vice-lord... no, Family Head, have a righteous heart. Even if we are used as tools, we will never feel self-loathing or regret. Just being admired as well-honed blades is enough for us.”

“The master was like a mother to me.”

"....."

"To you, the master was more than a mother."

"....."

"Blood Demon."

I bent down and covered Blood Demon's fist salute with my hands.

"We lost someone, and that person was like a mother to all of us. Isn't that right?"

"...Yes, it is so."

"So, we are brothers."

I declared.

“People don't unite over what they have, but over what they have lost. That is the doctrine of Demonic Heaven. Hence, losing our master, we are undoubtedly a sorrowful one.”

"....."

“We will share more stories, try to understand more, learn about each other's boundaries, sometimes become bastards to each other, and through that...”

More than now.

Much more than now.

“We will become more beautiful and happier.”

"....."

“Until that day, I will take the responsibility of the head of this lineage.”

Blood Demon moistened his dry lips.

“Yes, Family Head.”

“I entrust the military affairs of the lineage to Blood Demon. Your position will be Warrior Deputy. I will soon appoint someone as Warrior Chief, so as a deputy, assist them.”

“Yes! Family Head!”

I turned my head.

“Uburka!”

“Hmm.”

Boom.

Uburka stood up from the main floor, and the courtyard vibrated lightly under his step. Until now, Uburka had controlled his aura, managing the weight of his body. Now, being called by me, Uburka unleashed his restrained aura.

“Did you call? Daddy.”

Whispers of fear flowed from here and there.

The believers of the Demonic Cult, now warriors of my lineage, realized the heights Uburka had reached.

Uburka was a monster.

A warrior who underwent metamorphosis as a child and achieved semi-immortality in his old age. The strongest warrior in Earth Spirit Tribe's history. Given time and opportunity, he might glimpse the realm once tread by our master. My lineage's warriors tensed at this realization.

Amidst the warriors' tension, I smiled.

“You are my son.”

“Ugor. Indeed.”

“Lately, it seems your brain has gone crazy, falling in love and confessing to everyone you meet...”

“Have you forgotten my constellation name, father? Do you want to be beaten by a madman?”

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' threatens you.]

Hahaha.

I laughed a bit more.

“It’s alright. Even if you’re going through adolescence, our son is still cool. Your father only experienced love once, but that one time was with the greatest person in all existence, wasn’t it? From a cost-benefit perspective, I am already the king of romance. Feel free to consult with father anytime.”

“Your case is very special and extremely unique, unlikely to be of any reference... Ugor. But, I’ll talk if there’s something.”

“That’s right. You are my eldest son.”

I nodded.

“And the strongest warrior I know.”

"....."

Uburka looked down at me.

“Even though I’ve challenged and lost to daddy several times?”

“I lost hundreds of times to Ester for a single victory. The number of defeats only serves to embellish the victory.”

“Will I ever be able to defeat daddy?”

“I believe in your talent, your effort, and your will. You are the most perfect warrior in this world.”

"....."

“Our lineage's Warrior Chief, please become that.”

I placed my palm on Uburka's large hand.

“Lead us in the front lines when we fight. Fight alongside me and lead us. You have learned Demonic Heavenly God Art. Not only learned but mastered it. You’ve reached the pinnacle of the art after me, so the warriors of the lineage will willingly obey your command.”

The warriors’ breathing quietened a bit more.

Fear lessened, replaced by anticipation.

"I have modified the Demonic Heavenly God Art, transforming it from a single person's sword to a dance and song for hundreds. Learn it. Learn it well. Teach it to the warriors. You will teach well."

"....."

“My dear son, Uburka.”

Uburka lifted his other hand and covered my palm.

Despite being a giant, my son, who still seemed young, nodded.

“I will become the chief warrior of my daddy.”

And he vowed.

“I won’t forgive those who dare to harm this place, our lineage. I will protect those dear to daddy and strive to make them dear to me too. As long as father loves me, I will also love the world.”

I smiled.

Thank you.

I was born an orphan, and you were born with albinism, but now I have loved ones around me, and just as you don’t know why you hate the sun...

In the far future, we will become something more different.

Proving something to this world.

"....."

I then thought of a Ghoul I hadn't summoned yet.

Their scent, hair, eyes. The hint of a being lost in that person's scent, the traces of wounds hidden between strands of hair, a buried past in those blue, expressionless eyes. I recalled them.

"Come forth."

I called what I had envisioned.

[Activating skill.]

The shadow surged.

From it, bubbling and boiling, a hand reached out, followed by hair, a face, a body. The pale Ghoul breathed softly.

“Hoo.”

As I imagined, the being had the scent, hair, and eyes.

Raviel's distant ancestor resembled Raviel, and it was very easy to think of someone who looked like Raviel.

“You called.”

I nodded.

And called the person's name.

"Kim Yul."

You too will become something more meaningful to me.

Chapter 239: King of Death's Family (3)

---

Kim Yul.

I faced the man resonating with that name.

‘Handsome.’

The man had long hair. As the night wind stirred, his silver hair danced weightlessly in the air. It seemed that if its tiny roots attached to the scalp were cut, the hair would immediately drift away... possibly to some nameless desert.

Yes. The silver hair seemed to yearn for a desert. The place it left, the place it could leave anytime, the place it would eventually leave. Each strand of hair subtly carried a longing for the desert.

“Kim Yul.”

“I came when called. But is this place a Demonic Realm? The power gathered here is so formidable that even I, in my prime, wouldn’t have been able to determine the outcome if I had charged in.”

His piercing blue eyes scrutinized the courtyard of the mansion. The elite of the Demonic Cult, now our lineage's warriors, the Blood Ghost Troop, met Kim Yul's gaze with a menacing aura.

“---A considerable force.”

The once-absolute powerhouse of the Tower's 50th floor, now a café part-timer, evaluated sincerely. Kim Yul was always earnest, after all.

“How considerable?”

“If they were to ascend to the 50th floor as they are, the riff-raff wouldn’t dare approach. Even the witches who spin webs in the Magic Tower would have to engage them in battle to determine the true owner of the 50th floor.”

“And.”

I tapped Uburka's arm.

“What if this kid is added to the mix?”

"....."

Kim Yul examined Uburka thoroughly, from his rugged chest muscles to his thighs that seemed like they were muscles themselves. Tapping Uburka's muscle lines, Kim Yul's eyebrows slightly raised.

“Impressive. A monster?”

Kim Yul was expressionless.

However, I could tell he was genuinely admiring. When it came to reading Kim Yul's expressionlessness, I was as authoritative as the Head Librarian.

“The epitome of a Heavenly Martial Body. There are warriors who, at best, can only slice through a person with a single sword strike, known as Human Martial Artists. There are great warriors who can expand a country's land with one swing, known as Earth Martial Artists. But Heavenly Martial Artists are different. One swing can cleave the heavens, and under that blade, how many die or how many nations fall becomes irrelevant. Astonishing. Just the power gathered in this mansion could annihilate any average constellation's floor..."

"My son."

"....."

For the first time since his summoning, Kim Yul clammed up.

A hint of confusion and turmoil mingled in his blue eyes.

To think I can disconcert someone like Kim Yul. Impressive, isn't it?

"A son?"

Kim Yul turned his head to look at Uburka's stature, mine, and finally at Raviel. The most complex equations unfolded in his mind. Surprisingly, beads of sweat seemed to form on Kim Yul's forehead.

“How? ...It’s impossible. Both physically and racially, it seems impossible. A curse of the Tower? A skill's influence? No, but the rate of growth...”

“He’s my adopted son.”

“You wish to die, King of Death.”

Before I knew it, Kim Yul’s hand was gripping my neck. It didn’t hurt since he was a Ghoul who had lost his prime strength, but the icy glare was somewhat frightening.

“Wow, you’ve become quite expressive. Your face is still expressionless, but you admired Uburka, and showed dumbfoundment towards me...”

“I am human too. Can’t help it.”

Kim Yul released my neck with a sigh.

“I’ve lost the skill that traded memories for power. All I have is this notebook, documenting half of my life that I abandoned.”

Kim Yul took out a notebook from his pocket and looked down at it. His gaze, filled with many emotions, swept over the worn leather.

“I’ve already abandoned everything I could, and it’s impossible to abandon more. From now on, it’s only about gaining. As you promised me, King of Death. I am living a life.”

“Things that I wouldn’t have noticed before, or would have been quickly discarded, are now slowly settling and accumulating in my heart. As they pile up, the surface of my heart will eventually overflow. When that time comes, maybe I too will laugh, cry, get angry, and love like others.”

Kim Yul looked at me.

“If you hadn’t brought the teacher and reunited me, I would still be nothing more than a machine devoid of anything in my heart. King of Death. It’s all thanks to you.”

I smiled.

“That’s great, Mr. Kim Yul. But don’t you regret it?”

Kim Yul tilted his head.

“Regret? What do you mean, King of Death?”

“You have someone precious now. The Director. Hamustra, who might not be very reliable but likes you. Even if the memory-losing skill returns, you can’t discard it without hesitation now, can you?”

"....."

Kim Yul pondered expressionlessly.

“That’s right.”

He nodded after a moment.

“I can’t abandon them.”

"....."

“There is someone who lived a life for my death. Someone who is fascinated by my life and loves me. To enjoy the luxury of being born and dying in this human life is to enjoy everything. I can’t let go of this fortune.”

Kim Yul looked up at the night sky.

“I see.”

Then, he slowly turned to face me.

“I am happy now. King of Death.”

"....."

“You made me happy.”

Various emotions were swirling in Kim Yul's eyes – not just bafflement, surprise, and gratitude. His eyes, as blue as the sea, were stirring with a myriad of feelings.

“Is that your wish?”

Mixed in, there was an indiscernible concern.

“Do you intend to make everyone you meet happy? In my opinion, it’s not easy to change me this way.”

“Ah, it was really hard.”

“I lost my memories. You created [Trauma World] to retrieve fragments of lost memories. I was miserable. To prove I wasn’t just miserable, you brought the director. ...The cost-effectiveness is off. It’s hard enough to apply salve to one person’s wound, King of Death. What exactly are you dreaming of?”

I chuckled and scratched my head.

“It looks good, you know.”

“What?”

“Seeing everyone smile makes me feel really good.”

"....."

There's a god who takes on our miseries in our stead.

A tricky situation.

If you're born, it's best to achieve your desires and laugh as much as you want.

It's hard, but I think it's worthwhile.

"Mr. Kim Yul."

"Speak."

"You now have things to protect."

The teacher, Hamustra, and the quite likable Planetarium Café.

“But you don’t have the power to protect them.”

"....."

“You can peacefully enjoy the smell of books and coffee in the café built in the Great Library now. Hunters can’t rampage there. I guaranteed its safety, and the Black Dragon, Temple of the All Gods, Celestial Martial Clan, Sang-Ryun, and Vigilante Corps jointly invested in it. But conversely, your happiness is completely reliant on others.”

I grabbed Kim Yul’s shoulder.

There was a time when touching him meant risking my life.

But now it was so easy that Kim Yul couldn’t escape or shake off my hand.

"....."

Kim Yul knew this too.

Thus, waves stirred in his beautiful eyes.

I looked into those waves with a smile.

“Aren’t you afraid?”

"....."

“The director is weak. She’s old. If some crazy hunter deliberately attacks, they will be brutally avenged later, but the director will still be defenseless.”

Ripples trembled on Kim Yul’s shoulder under my hand.

“Hamustra is no longer a constellation. Just a fragile kid. A child who likes reading books. He lost his power. If some madman attacks, he’ll die.”

“What...”

Kim Yul opened his lips.

“What do you want from me?”

“I can protect them if you ask.”

I said.

“I can order my warriors, who are sharp and quick, to infiltrate the library and guard it 24/7. Not just that, if a situation arises and you die, I have the ability to turn back a day.”

"....."

“You can trust me with everything.”

Even then, it's okay.

I won't blame you.

For the sins you've committed so far, I can take care of them while I'm with you.

But.

“If you don’t want that.”

If you choose something else over safety and comfort.

"I will return life to you, Mr. Kim Yul."

Slowly, Kim Yul looked into my eyes.

“Life?”

“I’ve become a bit stronger than before. The abilities, the skills you had to give up when you became a Ghoul. I can restore them all to you.”

Kim Yul hesitated.

He looked around at the warriors emanating fierce aura around the courtyard. Until recently, like Kim Yul, they were powerless. They had knowledge of combat and immense tenacity, but they couldn’t utilize internal energy or execute martial arts.

“Indeed.”

Finally, Kim Yul's gaze landed on Ester.

Silently observing Ester, what radiated from her was the prestige of a constellation that once single-handedly brought down the Aegim Empire. Seeing the Demon King who toppled the empire he founded, Kim Yul understood the true intent behind my words.

“You grow stronger with each passing day.”

“Well, the world won't let me stay weak.”

“...The definition of [strength] varies from person to person. However, if a family provider saves every minute to swing a pickaxe, tirelessly swinging their arms because every second and minute is precious, that person is undoubtedly strong. Not wasting time. Buying time. That's the measure of strength.”

Kim Yul looked at me.

“You always buy time. Despite being able to turn it back, a day or a year, making the value of time seem trivial to you, yet you live each day as if it can never be turned back.”

Kim Yul muttered expressionlessly.

“That’s why I think you’re strong.”

And then, Kim Yul said.

“I also want to be strong like you.”

"....."

“I’ll try, King of Death.”

I fell silent for a moment.

‘Everyone is trying.’

I wanted to savor that fact for a while.

Ester. The once doppelganger who wanted to be human. That's Ester's wish. So, she'll strive to become human, and strive to become family with me.

Silvia. Once a frivolous noble lady, she wanted Raviel. That's Silvia's desire. So, she'll work to have Raviel and fulfill the conditions Raviel set.

Kim Yul. The man who once became strong by discarding memories, now has things he can't discard. He doesn't want to discard them ever again. That's Kim Yul's newfound wish. So, he will work to not discard himself.

‘Nice.’

Others too.

‘Yeah. That’s good.’

Because everyone has something to hold onto.

They will surely be able to try.

‘Just a small push is all it takes.’

And.

I can be that push for them.

“I will give you a physical body, Mr. Kim Yul.”

To be a catalyst for someone, I've become strong.

[The Earth Bone Dragon's Box is activated.]

[The Earth Bone Dragon's Box is completed.]

Just like Ester and the Four Demon Lords, the believers, Silvia Evanair, Kim Yul's existence also transformed into a black bead and dyed my heart.

Feeling the presence that was sad for not being pure white, I exhaled.

My breath was as black as my heart, and when it left my lips, it settled on the ground like a dense fog.

From there, slowly, a human form took shape.

"....."

Constellation Killer.

The man who emerged from being a ghost back to a human, slowly opened and closed his right hand. Repeatedly.

And he muttered.

"The passage I read in a book today was truly good. Beautiful."

Kim Yul looked up at the night sky.

“But, there will be many more beautiful things waiting for me.”

In an instant.

Constellation Killer swung his hand, and the aura emanating from it sliced through the night air. Cutting and dividing, it even cleaved the moonlit clouds. The dark clouds silently scattered on either side of the full moon.

The white moon seeped through the parted clouds.

Kim Yul stood still, bathed in the moonlight pouring down on him.

“I can’t remember that passage anymore.”

"....."

“King of Death. What should I call you?”

I approached Kim Yul.

“Please call me Family Head.”

“Family Head.”

“Yes. Someday we will become family to each other. But I am wary of rushing to call each other family from the start. We still don’t know much about each other and are not very familiar.”

"....."

“We can certainly become closer.”

I took something out of my pocket.

A week after parting from the God.

During that time, I wandered around the city, preparing various things. Passing an old road, I found a stationery store. Passing an elementary school student playing arcade games in front of it, I entered the store and found this.

“It's not a very expensive item, but...”

Swoosh.

I untied the yellow rubber band holding Constellation Killer's hair.

The rubber band was very resilient, tightly binding Kim Yul's silver hair.

“This is a gift from me, while dreaming of the day that will eventually come.”

A moment later.

“Hmm. This is my first time tying it, so it's not going well... Ah, I think it's done now. Anyway, I guess this is okay.”

A plain hair tie was now tied in Constellation Killer's ponytail.

I took the yellow rubber band and said,

“You won’t need this anymore.”

And simply burned it with aura.

"....."

Probably a very long time ago.

Hundreds of years ago.

Leafanta Aegim must have thought as he discarded 'Kim Yul's memory'.

[Even if I erase my memory, I should not forget the fact that I was abandoned by the world].

Students of Shinseo High School used the yellow rubber band to bully Kim Yul. Tying hair with a rubber band hurts. A simple yet effective bullying tactic.

Everyone could see Kim Yul wearing the rubber band, so everyone knew he was poor and a victim of violence.

It was a stigma.

Leafanta Aegim did not hesitate to discard Kim Yul's memories. After all, there were no good memories to hold onto. He wanted to discard them gratefully if possible.

But the evidence.

He wanted to leave the evidence that the world had abandoned him. He wanted to prove what kind of person he was, how he was born, and the life he led with such a stigma.

So he could curse the world to his heart's content.

"....."

The evidence of the past that had bound Constellation Killer for a long time was now burnt here.

With an expressionless face, or rather a dazed one, Kim Yul touched his hair tied with a hundred-won hair tie from any stationery store.

“I will take charge as the representative of our family.”

"....."

“Mr. Kim Yul, please become the Shadow of our family. Become the shadow of our family, scout the enemies, and gather their information.”

“A spy?”

“Yes.”

I pointed to the warriors hiding beneath the wall.

“There’s Hell Ghost Demon among the Four Demon Lords. She was a believer responsible for intelligence in the Demonic Cult, and the Soul Repentance Troop he leads is a spy unit that dominated the martial world. Mr. Kim Yul. Please lead them.”

“...Is this a suitable position for me?”

“You’re skilled at recording and analyzing information.”

I tapped the notebook in Kim Yul's left hand.

The old notebook trembled.

“From now on, don’t write in that notebook about people you must kill, people who killed you, or things you must discard.”

"....."

“Only write for us, for the family. Let that notebook become the Old Records of our family. Mr. Kim Yul. Please prove us with your pen and your words.”

Then.

“I will be very happy.”

Kim Yul fell silent.

Enough time for the split clouds to scatter and vanish passed.

Bathed in the faint moonlight, Kim Yul, in the courtyard of a hanok where he merely endured time having missed the chance to die, in a remote corner of his birth and death hometown, on the parched ground--- knelt on one knee.

“I understand.”

Bowing his head to me.

“I will place my life in your dream.”

And Kim Yul swore.

“My Family Head.”

Chapter 240: We were sitting on an Old City's Wooden Floor (1)

---

Dawn broke.

The color of dawn seeped slowly into Kim Yul's silver hair. As Kim Yul was kneeling before me, I had the luxury of looking down at the dawn rather than up. Yes, the dawn was beneath my feet.

[Your existence becomes better defined.]

It was around that time when the voice of the Tower reached me.

[Hunter Kim Gong-Ja is leveling up.]

As dawn gloriously painted the sky, the Tower once again affirmed my qualifications.

It was expected, in a way.

I had returned Ester's physical body, restored the bodies of the Demonic Cult elites, granted life to Silvia Evanair, and finally embraced Kim Yul's life. I became as distinct as their greed, desires, hopes, and wishes.

Heavier.

I had expanded.

[Your skill slots have expanded.]

[You are now an A-Rank hunter.]

[May fortune be with you.]

Yes, God.

To the God who wishes to be a mother to all who are born into this world.

Jaa Soo-Jeong. Even if those whom you consider your sons and daughters turn their nails against you, you would merely be sad, slowly accepting it as your own fault.

I think.

That's sad.

“I don’t need to do that!”

Gripping the hilt of my sword, I looked up at the sky.

I used to worry if the Tower would listen to someone like me. But not anymore. Every word I speak, every word I utter, will reach the Tower – and reach Jaa Soo-Jeong’s ears.

Because that's the existence I've become.

“I’ll go there and smash everything! Be it the Golden Rule, kingdoms, whatever, I'll go and obliterate them! I'll show you that you're wrong, much happier, with happy people!"

My declaration undoubtedly reached the Tower.

And thus, a response came.

[May fortune be with you.]

On this day.

I declared war on the Tower.

---

"From now on, we are one family."

I sat on the wooden-floor.

Only Raviel and I were seated on the floor, making it clear who deserved the throne.

“Our family name shall be the King of Death Family.”

Hundreds of humans knelt on one knee in the courtyard. All of them were my retainers. If there wasn't enough space in the courtyard, they would climb the walls, and if the walls were too narrow, they would even climb the old trees to submit to me.

At least a thousand.

A sufficient force to form a family.

“I am the Family Head of this family, and my spouse, Raviel Ivansia is...”

“I too am the Family Head of a great family.”

Raviel lightly tapped the wooden-floor with the side of her fan.

“The Family Head of the King of Death Family is the consort of the Ivansia family. Thus, the matriarch of the Ivansia family becoming the matriarch of the King of Death Family is logical. These retainers gathered here are all collected by the noble. It would be unseemly for me to interfere just because I'm the noble's spouse."

Raviel smiled.

"In this world's language, Ivansia translates to Silver Heart. It would be fitting to call my family Silver Heart Family. Someday, when the King of Death Family and Silver Heart Family fully merge, then— as the Death Heart Family, we will conquer the Tower."

That's right.

When that time comes, Raviel and I will lead our family as co-Family Heads.

"Silvia Evanair."

At the call of her name, one of the lacking retainers in the courtyard twitched. She was a blonde noble lady, also a powerful apostle of a constellation.

"Yes, yes! Family Head!"

“From now on, you are the steward of the King of Death Family. Take care of what our family eats, sleeps, and wears. Use the warriors from the Four Demon Lords who have free time each day as servants. I entrust the family's livelihood to you.”

Silvia Evanair broke into a sweat.

“...It all seems like chores and menial tasks?”

“You haven't forgotten what you said yourself, have you?”

Silvia's expression hardened.

“The steward is the one who serves the Family Head most closely. If you want to be like me, if you want to learn to accept others, then watch over me from my side. That's the opportunity I'm giving you.”

“I am...”

“If it's too hard, you can quit.”

I spoke sincerely.

“But proving your heart and life can only be done through your actions. Think. Decide. If you've decided, then fight. If you've fought, win. That's what your butler would want.”

“Damn it...”

Thus, our family gained a steward who always muttered, "Damn it", "Shit", "Fuck". Despite the bright blonde hair, her face was always gloomy. Curses leaked every time she opened her mouth, which would now become the daily life of "Steward Silvia Evanair."

“Ester.”

“Yes, Family Head.”

Ester stood up straight when I called.

Unlike Silvia's disgraceful behavior, Ester's expression was serene and her presence dignified. The lingering shadow of a Demon King who once commanded hundreds of thousands of monsters and devastated continents was still present in her breath.

“Please give me your orders.”

“As my eldest daughter, in times of need, you will be the successor to lead the family in my stead.”

"....."

A faint crack appeared on Ester's tranquil face.

“Times of need... That’s disrespectful. You will never die...”

“I have my ways, of course. The family won’t be in crisis just because I lose a life or two. But I can’t ignore the possibility of times of need. What if I am cursed, unable to move not just my limbs but even my teeth, sealed tightly in a vast, sturdy safe?”

"....."

“Of course, even in that state, I can use [Ghoul Reincarnation]. But what if someone turns me into a vegetative state?"

"Father..."

"I'm not invincible, Ester. As we climb the Tower, our enemies will get stronger. We must always consider the worst-case scenario, and if it really happens, I want you to lead the family."

"....."

Ester closed her eyes.

She breathed quietly, her exhaled breath carrying a slightly stronger scent of desolate ruins than before.

"Yes."

Ester reopened her eyes, now solemn.

She held the sword with both hands, touching her forehead to the crossguard.

“I, Ester, will become the successor of the King of Death Family.”

I nodded.

“Good.”

We may still be immature as parent and child.

But as [Family Head] and [Successor], we can certainly do well.

‘There’s no need to rush.’

We can start from here.

Ordinary people first become parents and children, then the head and successor of the family, but that's only for those who have enjoyed ordinary fortunes.

Scattered across this and other worlds, having met each other by chance, we have no choice but to become a family in reverse, backwards.

That's enough.

"As a successor, you will be treated as such, but ordinarily, you will serve as an advisor, aiding me."

"Advisor, you say..."

"As the name suggests, it's a position where you'll provide me counsel. Ester, you once led armies, toppling kingdoms, sanctuaries, and empires across continents. Your military acumen and strategic sense are incomparable to mine."

I'm gradually realizing this as we ascend the Tower.

'The stages where a hunter can wreak havoc alone are diminishing.'

The size of the forces appearing as enemies in each stage is growing.

I managed to clear [The Hellfire Mansion] somehow on my own.

But starting from the tragedy of [Aegim Continent], it became significantly more challenging.

Originally, that stage required top hunters to take roles such as generals, knight commanders, and prime ministers, working together to uplift a crumbling empire, didn't it?

'I just exploited a loophole in the stage.'

A solo play that shouldn't have been allowed.

I made it happen through actions akin to cheats.

'Even in the Revelations of the Great Library, [team play] was already enforced. Entering the [Race War], it even reached the point where I was leading an entire race.'

This.

What does this series of events signify?

'The Tower is ordering us to form a [force].'

I narrowed my eyes.

'The Tower never arranges stages without meaning. No, Jaa Soo-Jeong never acts without purpose. This is advice. A warning.'

If we don't build a force in advance.

The stages beyond the 50th floor will be brutally difficult.

'Currently, in our Tower, only I am aware of this warning.'

Because I alone have faced Jaa Soo-Jeong directly.

Only I know what kind of person the owner of the Tower is, what she thinks, and what she desires.

And this will definitely serve as a massive advantage in conquering the Tower in the future.

'We need to grow our force.'

Fortunately, I have people around me.

A lot of them.

Not just a large gathering, but people who can mean a little more to each other.

'My fortune.'

I am deeply grateful for this fact.

'We are strong.'

I looked around the courtyard.

[The Warriors of the Demonic Cult] bowing to me.

[The Lieutenants Four Demon Lords] leading the warriors.

[The Chief Warrior Uburka] commanding the Four Demon Lords.

[The Steward Silvia Evanair] to support and back them up.

[Kim Yul, the Shadow of the family] organizing an intelligence unit.

[Ester, the Advisor] who will give me strategic advice.

I observed each of them, exchanged glances and wills. Those who shared death with me, those who declared to live together, were here.

'We are strong, and we will become stronger.'

I spoke to Ester.

“This father is skilled at gathering and uniting people. I can proudly claim competence in that regard. Whether someone is living with a wound, I can see it, and if I can't, I will know it in death.”

"....."

“In doing so, I share people and their wounds. We become a family through sharing. If we try harder, we might become a family. However, I'm still inexperienced and lacking in how to manage this gathered [force]. Very much so.”

I smiled.

“I need your help and advice, Ester.”

"....."

“The history where you, as a Demon King, annihilated the continent has disappeared because of me. But that's not a meaningless trauma.”

Precisely.

“It can be made not to be.”

I gestured to Ester.

She approached me with cautious steps.

I took her hand, sat her next to me on the wooden-floor, and made her face the same direction as me.

“Look.”

I shared the same view with her.

“The wounds you received while living a traumatic life, those aren't just wounds; now they'll protect our family. My family. Your family. And our family.”

"....."

“No one can burn down our family.”

I spoke to the child who became my daughter today.

And then, I conveyed the words I had always wanted to tell her.

“With what you gained while destroying the world, now protect your world.”

Dawn broke.

As the crystalline blue began to color the world, the blue paint momentarily lingered on Ester's face.

"....."

Ester nodded slightly.

“Yes.”

She nodded once more.

“I will protect it.”

Ester raised her left hand.

Then, grabbing the skull mask that had always covered half her face, she ripped it off and casually threw it towards the ground of the courtyard.

The ancient bone crumbled into dust the moment it touched the ground.

“I will protect our world.”

Ester turned to look at me.

Her complete face, seen for the first time since becoming Preta.

“Family Head.”

Tears of dew that had accumulated over the long night were on her face.

Now that it was dawn, it wasn't strange for dew to form on things born like leaves in this world.

"It's my honor to be your advisor."

So it wasn't unusual for Ester to smile brightly either.

"....."

Without a word, I nodded and finally stood up from the wooden-floor.

I looked up at the sky, turning from glassy to blue, and shouted.

"It's time."

The sky was quiet.

"The holiday is over. Thanks to your unkind kindness, I've seen and experienced a lot. But once again, what I saw made me stronger instead of weaker, what I experienced forged me instead of burning me.”

The sky distorted.

“Now,”

A ray of light descended from the sky.

“Please send us to the next floor.”

Then, a voice echoed from the sky.

[The Constellation 'The Princess Who Strolls Through
Mirages' manifests.]

Chapter 241: We were sitting on an Old City's Wooden Floor (2)

---

[The Constellation 'The Princess Who Strolls Through
Mirages' manifests.]

The light descending from the sky suddenly fragmented into countless petals.

Countless petals, petals, petals...

The gleaming white petals cascaded down into the courtyard. They seemed like transparent butterflies fluttering beautifully, for these petals had only color, lacking any outline or scent.

"Eeeum! Hello!"

Amidst the dance of petals, one of the Tower's pillars energetically stretched.

"It's been a while! Everyone!"

The pillar, 'The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages', was a blonde lady.

The Princess stepped down from the sky to the ground, stepping on the petals, as if descending a staircase. We watched from the courtyard as a goddess descended to this land in a dance-like manner.

"Did everyone have a good time? Were you satisfied with the vacation I sent you on?"

Thud.

Finally, the Princess's foot crushed the last petal, firmly planting her foot on the ground. The crushed petal turned into white dust and gently disappeared somewhere.

"Ah, King of Death. Seeing you with your beloved lover and adored son, it's truly heartwarming."

The Princess looked around. Those who once bore the burden of being ghouls stood upright, alive and in flesh, surrounding us.

"Mmm."

It seemed like she realized something.

Then, she immediately turned and looked straight at me.

"Indeed. It looks like you had quite an extraordinary holiday, King of Death."

"Your vacation was highly appreciated, Princess."

"Yep. I sent you all here for a rest. But what's this? Far from a holiday, it seems you've been up to unimaginable things, King of Death. Why have these people regained their physical bodies? Why have they resurrected in their prime?"

"I did what I always do."

I opened my palm.

"Got a good skill, and put it to good use."

As the skill opened, a golden card appeared. Recognizing the identity of the golden card, the Princess furrowed her brows.

"[The Earth Bone Dragon's Skull]...? Wait, this is..."

"Yes. It's a skill possessed by your mother."

"....."

"I know you are the first daughter of the Tower Master. And I also know that the Tower Master is named Jaa Soo-Jeong."

The Princess's face hardened.

As I continued, the atmosphere around grew darker.

"Hmmm," the Princess tilted her head and looked up at me.

"That's quite a lot you've come to know, King of Death."

"Yes."

"Amazing. Incredible. Yep, I mean it sincerely. I'm genuinely praising you. Because, copying mom's skill means you died once at her hands--- then, you must have seen it?"

The Princess gently grabbed my forearm.

And leaning against my upper body like a snake, she whispered softly in my ear.

"Mom's trauma."

"....."

"How far did you see?"

Only then did I realize how much the Tower Master and the Princess resembled each other. Both had platinum blonde hair that could make actual platinum jealous. They even shared the habit of whispering secrets into one's ear.

"I fell right in the middle of a noble council attended by the Tower Master."

"Ah-ha. Hmm, ah-ha. And?"

"I came to understand how corrupt the world where the Tower Master lived was. And how Jaa Soo-Jeong, as a Viscount, saved it. That she rose above a Duke as well."

"Is that all?"

"I also learned about the Golden Rule."

The Princess clamped her mouth shut.

[‘The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages’ is shocked.]

Perhaps she didn't expect me to break through that far.

"I saw the Tower Master's will there. The Tower master intends to bear all the wounds occurring in this world."

"It's not a vain statement. Mom truly aims to create such a world."

The Princess's voice was weak.

"A world where everyone only blames a single person, where there are no 'people born wrong'. A world where only mom is the 'one born wrong'."

Her eyes seemed to look somewhere beyond this place.

"In the old days when the light of reason was extinguished, people were engulfed in all sorts of fears. To alleviate these fears, they created a scapegoat, shifting all sins and pain onto it, like the snail empire created by the Heretic Inquisitor."

It's all because of you.

"The world of primitive religions created to appease people's feelings overlaps with mom's world, which seeks to encapsulate logical conclusions about cause and effect."

It's all because of me.

"Interesting, isn't it?"

But the Princess saying this didn't seem to find it enjoyable at all.

However, she soon changed the atmosphere, altering the tone of her voice.

"Anyway, to have gone that far and still return to the present. King of Death, you're tougher than I thought. I don't usually give compliments, but this deserves one. You're incredible."

The Princess clapped her hands with an 'Oh!' sound.

[‘The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages’ praises you.]

Hmm.

"I'm always open to your compliments. But first, you should send us to the next stage. The vacation turned out to be longer than expected. Think of the comrades waiting above."

"Yeah, I've already taken care of that, so don't worry. Got it."

The Princess looked around.

"Then let's tear it up. Raviel should be sent to the world where Sormewin Academy is. Constellation Killer should be dropped off at Café Planetarium, right? Hmm, the 999 believers are a problem. You guys should train in the martial realm for a while..."

"Princess."

"There's no need for that."

I grabbed the Princess's hand.

"Everyone gathered here, excluding Raviel, will be deployed for the stage conquest."

"Hoong...?"

The Princess crossed her arms.

"What do you mean? From the 30th floor to the 40th, only top-tier warriors can enter. Your warriors are strong, but their rankings haven't been determined yet."

"No."

I still held onto the Princess's wrist.

"All of them will ascend this stage with me."

"What?"

"This stage, and the next one, and even the one after that. Until the end of the Tower is in sight, they will move with me."

Words against the rules.

Actions the Tower would not allow.

I casually stated that it was [okay].

"Hmmm."

The Princess grinned.

"How so? No, how can you? What authority do you have?"

"I have no authority. But as I said when we first met, all I have is a skill."

I showed the [Earth Bone Dragon's Skull] card.

"All of them are tied to my skill [Earth Bone Dragon's Skull]."

"Yes. And?"

"I have used [Ghoul Reincarnation] in the Apocalypse where the number of entrants was already limited."

I said emphatically.

"Meaning, adding personnel through a skill does not violate the Tower's rules."

"Ha. So?"

"It's the same this time. I possess [Earth Bone Dragon's Skull], and about a thousand of my family members are bound to it. Therefore, it's only proper to interpret that my family's force of a thousand is an extension of me."

"Still playing with the rules, our King of Death."

The Princess smiled thinly.

"But ghouls were summons, right? These are living humans. So, King of Death, do you want to treat them as your summons? Or are you suggesting there's an issue with interpretation and you want to request another pillar meeting?"

The Princess was definitely the daughter of the Tower Master. The smile that appeared around her spinning mouth reminded me of snake scales.

"Just saying, the chances of getting support in a pillar meeting again aren't high. Especially if it's revealed that you've got mom's skill."

"....."

"You saw it at the kingdom's noble council, right? There are as many who worship mom as those who oppose her. And naturally, such people are among the pillars too. King of Death, just the fact that you have mom's skill will make a tremendous number of them---"

"Princess."

I interrupted her.

I tilted my head at the Princess.

"Princess. What does [skill] mean to you?"

"Hmmm," the Princess uttered and immediately responded without hesitation.

"Preserved techniques. Tools to compete and win against others. Means to seize advantageous positions."

"No."

I shook my head.

"At first, I thought so too, but it's not the case."

"Hmm, then?"

"Skills, without exception, all embody someone's [life] who once lived in another world."

Jaa Soo-Jeong had told me this.

Skills were a reflection of someone's abilities or someone's life.

In a way, skills were self-portraits, and when we use a skill, we're not just attacking someone, but at the same time, we're proving the existence of someone who once lived in this world long ago.

"Just think about the [Puppeteer's Parade] card."

A skill once possessed by the Constellation Killer.

Though not in my possession, I vividly remember the card's description.

I manipulated Aura to create an exact replica of the card with the same words in the air.

+

[Puppeteer's Parade]

Rank: S

Effect: There once lived an old puppeteer in a world. The puppeteer feared being loved by someone. But he was not strong enough to endure eternal solitude.

"Let's create another me." The puppeteer thought. "Let the other me be loved. Let it live. With people, among people. And if it gets hurt--- let's throw it away." The puppeteer whispered. "Erase it forever."

Countless puppets lived.

Countless puppets were discarded.

This skill is a sorcery for the weak. The right to choose memories to keep and discard. You can create 13 puppets with the same appearance and abilities as you. When a puppet dies, another wakes up. Broken puppets can be repaired.

Granting you a replicated immortality. An assembled eternity.

*However, memories are not shared between puppets.

"Even [Goblin High Society] contains the same principle."

+

[Goblin High Society]

Rank: F

Effect: The Great Goblin pondered deeply. 'Our goblin culture is too lowly. Every language ending in Kerk or Keruk. How can I, the boss, shine with such a language!' Then, a stroke of genius hit him. 'That's it! From now on, I will not say Keruk, but Gorr. Gorr! A pronunciation befitting my refined sensibilities.'

*However, this causes internal conflict within the tribe.

*Skill copied from the monster Great Goblin King.

+

"If skills were merely tools and only about functionality, why would they have such detailed descriptions?"

"That's because, King of Death, in card games, flavor texts add depth to the setting. In reality, they're just for overpowering others."

"No."

I interrupted the Princess, lifting the card.

"Skills aren't just for overpowering others."

The card in my hand was [Sword Constellation].

A card I obtained in my naive early days.

"Rather, it's a system for connecting people with each other."

And it was a skill that left a profound impact on me.

"Opening Skill Card."

Words emerged from the card I held.

+

[Sword Constellation]

Rank: A+

Effect: From another world, he cleared his world's tower up to floor 99 but failed on the 100th. Unsatisfied, he was unable to give up on his earthly desires, and has become a spirit.

He cannot physically affect anything in this world, but is able to communicate with the holder of this skill.

Be awestruck by his skill and experience, and ask him for guidance!

*Only the holder of this skill is able to feel his presence.

*Skill copied from Marcus Calenbury.

+

The Guardian Spirit, with the same demeanor from his days dominating the martial realm, stood right behind me, arms crossed.

"This is the true intent of skills."

I said.

"Connecting people with people. Connecting worlds with worlds. The fact that the skill I used today was once a life-long technique mastered by an old master long ago. Through skills, we feel humanity and connect with each other."

That's...

"Isn't that what your mother, the owner of this tower, desires?"

"....."

The Princess fell silent.

Deeply silent.

Her lips quivered momentarily, but then closed again, and quivered once more.

"Really,"

Her words came sporadically, spaced out over a long time.

"I can't argue with words."

Silence fell.

"So, King of Death. Do you want to go up together?"

"Yes. Please."

"Hoo."

The Princess sighed deeply.

[‘The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages’ shakes her head in disbelief.]

Flapping her sleeves, the Princess shouted to those around.

"All of you will be transported to the 36th floor! If you have anything to pack, do it now! I won't give you much time, gather within 2 minutes! Hurry! Quickly! I'm a busy person!"

Clatter, clatter, clatter.

The warriors, who had been strictly aligned, started to move. They tried to move as carefully as possible, but the old hanok trembled as if struck by an earthquake.

"Huh."

I was astounded.

"Hey! Be careful! If it gets damaged..."

"It's okay."

The homeowner, Jaa Soo-Jeong, spoke plainly.

"They're just things I never use. If they get damaged, it means they carry the memory of your visit. That's not bad."

"....."

I took a deep breath.

Then, to the avatar of the god, to the offering doomed to live the most unfortunate life, to the incarnation existing only as a mother, to Jaa Soo-Jeong of class 3-A of Shinseo Middle School, I asked.

"Won't you come with us?"

"No."

The question was long, but the answer was short.

Jaa Soo-Jeong bowed her head.

"I'm sorry. If I leave, there will be no one to care for the rabbits at school."

"....."

"There are people who will be sad if I disappear. Not many, but they are definitely there. Now on a summer vacation, Mr. Baek, Ms. Nyeong Hyang, my senior, and Mr. Do Yeon. I think they will be very lonely if I disappear. So I'm sorry, but I can't accept your offer, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Probably.

If I asked for help here, saying [please help me].

Jaa Soo-Jeong would follow me without a moment's hesitation.

She was a god, a fragment of a god.

Intending to exist to bear everyone's wounds.

But.

"...Yes."

I am not climbing the tower to prove the omnipotence of god.

"To create a world where we don't need gods, I climb the tower."

To show that we can live happily without seeking help from gods.

"Yes."

To prove she wasn't born wrong.

"Go safely, Mr. Gong-Ja."

Jaa Soo-Jeong prayed for me.

And at that moment, a pure white light enveloped the old hanok.

[The 36th floor is opening.]

[To those ascending the tower.]

Just before being completely enveloped in light.

Worried about Jaa Soo-Jeong, who was near me, I turned around and saw an unexpected sight.

Jaa Soo-Jeong was smiling brightly. Her hands gently clasped in prayer, surrounded by a white light, making her appear not as a human praying to a god, but as a god praying for humans.

She whispered softly, her lips barely moving.

[May fortune be with you.]

And the light embraced our family.

Chapter 242: We were sitting on an Old City's Wooden Floor (3)

---

When I opened my eyes again, I realized the transfer was complete.

A white space.

No horizon, mountains, rivers, or vegetation. Just a 3D space that seemed like a blank canvas, where we stood.

A stopover between stages.

We had arrived at a [Temporary Base] to prepare for the next raid.

‘It’s been quite a while since I’ve been here.’

It was too barren to feel nostalgic.

“What is this place exactly...”

“Curious?”

Tap.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages], who had been transported with us, lightly stepped on the ground. The Princess smiled broadly and turned to face me.

“No, just a bit concerned.”

“This is one of the worlds created by mother in the cycle of life. Wow! I just said that sentence and no noise was made!”

Mid-sentence, the Princess suddenly bounced up and down excitedly, as if something incredibly joyful had happened.

“Listen! Terms like Mula-Gagamia or Gesh-ve-Nail, which are normally translated into the language of the main world due to security levels, are not translated here. It's amazing!”

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages praises your security level.]

The Princess continued to exclaim how amazing it was.

The fact that security levels do not apply to me was that exceptional.

“If it's the language of the main world, then it's the world where Jaa Soo-Jeong lived.”

“Yes!”

The Princess happily confirmed.

“The tower translates all languages except the main world's. Mr. Gong-Ja, you've been to the main world through trauma, right? Could you understand the kingdom's language?”

“Yes, I understood it from the beginning. However...”

A possibility crossed my mind.

“When I was there, I was possessed by Baron Gu Won-Ha. Since the Baron was learning the kingdom's language, it would make sense that I could hear and speak it without issues while possessing his body.”

“Hmm, I see.”

The Princess hummed thoughtfully after hearing my explanation.

Then she stepped a bit closer, looking up at my face.

It was a bit overwhelming.

“What is it?”

“To think that Baron Gu Won-Ha and King of Death...
Hmm...”

“Is there something we have in common?”

“No, not at all!”

The Princess quickly straightened up and waved her hands.

“Looking at life, there’s not even a speck of commonality. If you two were to meet, you’d become enemies in less than three seconds.”

“That bad, huh...”

“Yes, yes. It’s that incompatible in temperament and style. But...”

The Princess waved her hand in the air.

Ssshhh.

White petals flowed from nowhere, swirling around her hand.

“Let's say there's an innocent child and a separate world.”

It was mystical. In a world of blank canvas with only white petals fluttering, the space suddenly transformed into a sacred temple where life sang divinely.

“But to save this child, you have to destroy the entire world. Conversely, to keep the world intact, the child must inevitably die.”

“...An extreme version of the world of The Immortal Missionary of Happiness?”

“Yes, yes. You’ve already passed through such a world. But you made that choice because you had the ‘power’ to overturn that world.”

That's right.

If I didn't have my skills, choosing such an option would have been impossible.

“If you didn't have such power and could only choose one of the two options, what would you pick, Mr. Gong-Ja? Would you save the child or maintain the world?”

Hmm.

I crossed my arms.

“I would save the child.”

“That was quick. Why?”

“Well, if a world can only be maintained by such means, it's not a proper world to begin with. So the child should be saved.”

“Ahaha.”

The Princess chuckled softly. A laugh mixed with amusement and understanding.

“Right. Right. Such a world has little value. The person you were possessed by thought the same.”

“...Baron Gu Won-Ha?”

"Yes."

The Princess nodded.

“She loves mom very much. No, it's more like worship than love? Well, let's say it's the heart of a priest who wants to monopolize a god.”

"....."

“You better be careful, King of Death.”

The Princess grabbed my shoulder.

Turning around, I saw nearly a thousand family members looking at me.

“Right now, you've just formed a family. It must be good. Overflowing with belief. Feeling like you can do anything, always rallying together.”

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages whispers softly.]

“But they are a group united by looking at you.”

A group united by looking at me.

“Without you, without your presence, they have no reason to be one.”

“Do you understand?”

The Princess sneakily approached from behind, resting her hand on my shoulder and whispering.

“The followers of the Demonic Cult cannot accept Ester, who mercilessly slaughtered their people. The Constellation Killer, who killed constellations, cannot accept your son, Uburka. These people have lived different lives in different worlds. They are inherently not meant to mix.”

Her whisper was like the hissing of a snake.

“And that’s not the end, right?”

"....."

“There are others you have put off meeting, waiting for the right moment. In the future, there are those you intend to embrace, right?”

That's right.

“As your family grows, King of Death. Such disharmony will only increase. And the moment—”

You disappear or become even slightly endangered—.

The Princess clasped and then spread her hands.

Fwoosh.

A playful explosion sound came from her mouth, and she chuckled amusingly.

“Climbing the tower? Helping the weak? Allowing everyone to carry their own wounds, creating a world where no one is forced to sacrifice? Nice story, but, King of Death. If you die here, or, really get seriously hurt.... For those children, it becomes [a story that doesn't matter at all].”

“They will all scramble for you, disregarding the world. The scale will break, and the world will never outweigh you.”

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages issues a serious warning.]

“Don't die, King of Death.”

"....."

“Don't get hurt. Don't get kidnapped. Don't get tortured. Don't sacrifice yourself for anything. The more blood you shed, the more their hearts will be dyed red for you.”

The daughter of the god, either with a frivolous smile or a solemn voice, prophesied to me in the false temple of the white world.

“Be happy.”

"....."

“You must be happy so that other family members can be happy. As much as possible, earnestly. Not just emotionally happy, but clearly understanding why we're doing this, what incredible things will happen if we succeed. Be happy like that.”

I...

Nodded.

“Yes.”

“Hmm. Another quick answer. Are you sure about your response?”

“When others are happy, I am happy.”

I spoke with emphasis.

“As long as I fight for someone, as long as the fight continues, my happiness will not end.”

“Hmm.”

The Princess smiled.

Then she turned around and clasped my hands.

“Take good care of mom.”

As our hands met, bright light shone through the gap.

At the same time, I flinched.

A tremor came from the Princess's hand. It was a tension that did not match the Princess who had been smiling leisurely throughout. I inadvertently raised my head to look at her face.

“...Princess?”

“Please. I beg of you.”

The daughter of the god, with tears streaming down, pleaded.

“Save mom...”

.....

“There are too many unhappy lives. Lives that blame mother, lives she must be responsible for, too much suffering...”

“Princess.”

“Despite there being so many already, every second more are added than before.”

That would be the case.

I thought of the worlds I had passed through during my mission.

I wondered how many among the casualties of the Demon King's attack in the world of the Aegim Empire were the tower master. In the martial world where my master lived, I wondered how many among the nameless, starved zombies were the tower master. How many were there in the world of The Immortal Missionary of Happiness?

In the snail empire created by the Heretic Inquisitor, how many among those who were discriminated against and abused to death were the tower master?

How many in the world where I lived?

“Please.”

The daughter of the god who suffered, wept because she had such a god for a mother.

“Please, that’s the only thing I’m asking from you.”

And then.

At that moment, the voice announcing stage entry echoed in the space.

[The 36th floor has been opened.]

[To those climbing the tower.]

[May fortune be with you.]

I gently stroked the little princess's shoulder.

“Okay.”

I braced myself and nodded.

“I’ll save her.”

The distant 100th floor of the tower.

But once there, surely, something can be done.

“It’ll be tough, but wait for me.”

If the god saves the worlds of all things.

We will save that god.

Simple, clear, and utterly noble.

“We are strong.”

[You are being forcibly transferred to the 36th floor!]

As I continued to comfort the still crying princess, I looked ahead. A tide of light was sweeping from the infinite canvas.

It was already a silent explosion of light.

The wave made of light easily swallowed me, Kim Yul, and Silvia Evanair, and swept away all 1000 family members at once.

In the last moment, I smiled for the princess who would be left alone.

---

And then we were floating above a plain.

It wasn't the first time floating like ghosts, but it certainly felt novel with so many people – a thousand family members.

‘If someone saw us, they might think it's the end of the world.’

I looked around.

Soon, groups as large as ours came into view.

On both sides of the vast plain.

Two armies under different banners were fighting.

-Wooahhh! Kill them!

-Don't back down! Kill! Kill them!

One side was the army of the Ghost Tribe.

Led by the 6th Rank Hunter, Viper.

The Ghost Tribe members were larger than other tribes, with two horns growing on their heads. Wearing loose armor, they wielded swords as large as their own bodies.

The other side was the army of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

The tribe I lead.

Having not grown horns like the Ghost Tribe, they didn't look much different.

-Kwaahhh!

-Horn-heads! Let's settle this!

-Archers! Fire the arrows!

-Don't let your guard down! Use the enemy's corpses as shields against their arrows!

A brutal battlefield.

About 20,000 from both armies were engaged in a deadly battle.

'Hmm.'

I felt a momentary surge of emotion.

'Among them, how many lives are unfairly lost, how many...'

The scene was overwhelming, but I steadied my heart.

Not getting swept up by emotions, not turning away, but facing everything head-on, I stood firm.

As a result.

I saw [it].

“Nyahaha-!!”

On the frontline of the Ghost Tribe army. A red-haired Ghost Tribe swordswoman was there.

Wielding dual swords and wearing a robe-like garment, her lively appearance attracted everyone's attention.

In fact, she was indeed attracting attention.

-Wow! It's the Sword Beauty!

-I always believed in you, damn it...!

The Ghost Tribe cheered.

Comparing their rugged faces to hers, well... she seemed out of place.

Hmm.

But the problem is....

“Daddy.”

Uburka poked my shoulder.

“Yeah.”

“About that... is that by any chance...”

"Hmm..."

I averted my gaze. I had just decided to face everything head-on, but in this situation, I wanted to look away.

However, Kim Yul mercilessly muttered beside me.

“That's a [Possessed Body].”

“Don’t say it...”

“I’m currently a ‘player’, akin to a ghost. Is it because of that? I can see the image of a middle-aged man possessed in the body of that woman rampaging on the battlefield—”

“Ugh! Don’t talk about it!”

That's right!

Behind the Ghost Tribe swordswoman, the figure of Viper was visible!

In other words, it was Viper!

“Sir.”

Silvia tugged at my sleeve.

“Why....”

“That’s... not the only one...”

“Not the only one?”

“There, over there. No, don’t look away. Look there. Yes, right there.”

Silvia forcibly turned my head to look in that direction.

It was also one of the frontlines of the Ghost Tribe army.

“Well, can't be helped. I'll have to step in.”

A slim Ghost Tribe boy, unlike other bulky Ghost Tribe members, also holding dual swords, stepped forward.

"....."

And behind him, of course, was the afterimage of Viper.

In other words, it was also Viper.

“Ahaha! It seems we must step in after all!”

Another Ghost Tribe member, a small girl with twin tails and a strange speech pattern, also holding dual swords, stepped forward.

Of course, she too was Viper.

“Well, it’s our duty, isn’t it?”

A sharp-faced Ghost Tribe youth, who could cut a cake cleanly with just his facial outline, muttered dully while holding a scythe.

Naturally, he was Viper.

"Hmm."

Seven Ghost Tribe members appeared from all directions, each with their own appearance.

“This battlefield is for us, the 'Seven Ghost Heroes'.”

In other words, seven Vipers spoke simultaneously.

I...

+

[Multiple Possession Reincarnation]

Rank: SSS

Effect: You possess the individuals you choose. If the possessed individual dies, you return to your original spirit.

Cost: Priceless (obtained through special means)

*However, you can only possess them within 1 minute of their death.

+

I couldn't help but shout.

“What are you doing over there—!?”

Chapter 243: Era of the Heroes (1)

---

The battlefield was in chaos, swarmed with soldiers.

Whether they were the seven heroes of the Ghost Tribe or Viper's seven avatars, the addition of Viper's reinforcements quickly began to overwhelm the Earth Spirit Tribe's forces.

If left unchecked, the Earth Spirit Tribe would face annihilation. Viper, funny old man or not, is powerful! And there were seven of him leading the army.

"Damn it!"

I used aerial stepping techniques to quickly cross the battlefield. I heard Ester and Uburka calling me from behind.

“Family Head!”

“Daddy, Family Head!”

“You two wait here. No, Warrior Uburka! Keep communicating via telepathy with me and head to that mountaintop!”

In an instant, the distance between me and the battlefield closed. Uburka sent his voice infused with aura to me, precise and refined enough for only me to hear.

『The mountaintop? Why suddenly?』

『There's something you need to do there. I'll tell you when and what to do later, for now, just go to the mountaintop and wait!』

『Ugh. Daddy, no, Family Head, is having one of his strange ideas again...!』

Tat, tat!

I stepped through the air and surged into the heart of the battlefield.

If others could see me, there would be astonishment and admiration everywhere. But right now, I am no different from a ghost. Only [players] can recognize me.

And on this battlefield, apart from our family members, Viper was the only player.

“Nyahaha-!”

At the frontline, a warrior laughed cheerfully while swinging dual swords.

“So the Earth Spirit Tribe is the strongest in the world? All talk! Can't even catch one of me! Bring it on! I am one of the Ghost Tribe's seven heroes, the Sword Beauty! Come and die more!”

With red hair fluttering, the warrior crossed swords. Swish! The Earth Spirit Tribe warrior's head was easily sliced off by the crossing blades. The life I nurtured and cared for, my children, was taken.

“This...!”

I burst with rage and blocked the path of the red-haired warrior.

“What in the world are you doing!”

“Huh?”

The warrior, who had been smirking and strutting around the battlefield, widened their eyes.

Behind them, like the guardian spirit attached to me, was Viper’s fluid form, arms crossed.

“Oh. What's this? The King of Death? You’re finally here?”

Viper recognized me immediately.

Not particularly happy to see me. Of course, it had been a long time for me, but for Viper, it had been just a few days since our last encounter.

“Finally here? Now’s not the time for such relaxed talk! Why are you in the middle of the battlefield, swinging your sword!?"

"Hey, hey. Calm down. War can happen between tribes. I'm a god of the Ghost Tribe, so I can fight on their side. What's so serious about that?"

"That's..."

I was about to explode with indignation. However, the battle didn't pause for our conversation.

-Woahhhhh!

Seizing the opportunity of my sudden stop, a warrior from the Earth Spirit Tribe roared and lunged with a spear towards the Sword Beauty (Viper).

"Huh."

Of course, Viper wasn't someone to fall for such a trick. Lifting one of the dual swords, Viper threw it at the Earth Spirit Tribe member. Thwack! The blade precisely lodged in the warrior's forehead. The Earth Spirit Tribe member collapsed to the ground, bleeding.

And my eyes turned.

"Celestial Martial Guild Leader!!"

"Ah, really. It's annoying. Hey! It's not like I want to be in this war!? If you're late, stay quiet like a latecomer!"

"Shut up and pull back your troops!"

"Ah why! This war was bound to happen! One side has to win overwhelmingly for less damage! And hey, the Ghost Tribe, Earth Spirit Tribe, whatever, are all mixed up now, how do you expect to retreat! Retreating now will only cause more deaths, idiot!"

Tch.

The Sword Beauty spat and strode away. Pulling the sword from the corpse's forehead, the Sword Beauty once again took a dual sword stance.

“Let's see how it ends!”

Damn it.

Though infuriating, Viper's words had a point. To pull back the armies now, I had to create a situation to allow it.

So, I decided to do just that.

『Chief Warrior!』

I turned back and shot a telepathic message.

Across the battlefield, a mountain ridge loomed over the plains, and from its highest peak, Uburka caught my telepathy.

『Do you hear me!』

『Ugor. Your words always reach me, like they could even in hell.』

『Chief Warrior, you're the only one among us with a [physical body] in this world!』

Uburka laughed heartily, being originally from this world.

『That's true, Ugor.』

『We need to stop the battle. You have to do it.』

『Starting or stopping a war, both are my specialties. But how?』

『Pull out the mountaintop!』

There was a brief silence.

Enhancing my vision with aura, I looked up and saw Uburka on the distant mountaintop, wearing a look of disbelief.

『Pull out the mountaintop? Are you sane?』

『Why. You can do it, can't you!』

『Well, I could, but...』

『Pull out the mountaintop and slam it down in the middle of the battlefield! Aim for a part without soldiers! If such an absurd sight unfolds, the soldiers will be shocked and stop moving for a while!』

『Ugor.』

Uburka laughed.

『Is this the first order you give as Family Head to your son evolving to a Chief Warrior?』

『That's right!』

『Great.』

Uburka stood up.

『I was worried becoming a Family Head might make things dull, but that was needless. Daddy was always psycho, and whether Daddy is called Family Head or a god, a psycho remains a psycho!』

Rumble...

A thunderous sound echoed from afar. Uburka's figure grew immensely, the aura contracting and amplifying, releasing a ferocious sound. However, ordinary soldiers didn't understand the source of this noise.

“Looks like it's going to rain on this damn day!”

“Stop that Sword Beauty or whatever! Woah! If we don't, we'll lose!”

The Earth Spirit Tribe soldiers rallied their ranks, shouting their battle cry.

Despite the seven Vipers disrupting the frontlines, the Earth Spirit Tribe didn't retreat easily. They were warriors. The children I, Kim Gong-Ja, raised with sweat and tears.

‘I’m proud of you, guys.’

I looked up at the mountaintop.

『 Chief Warrior! 』

『 Ugor. I’m ready, Family Head. 』

『 Do it! 』

At that moment, a tremendous noise, incomparable to before, shook the world.

The battlefield trembled slightly. The tall Ghost Tribe members and the large Earth Spirit Tribe warriors momentarily lost balance, looking confused.

A high-ranking Ghost Tribe commander shouted.

“Is, is it an earthquake!?”

“Stay in formation with your comrades! Don’t run! It’s just a small quake---.”

Sorry, but it wasn't an earthquake.

This was not a natural disaster, but a man-made one.

Boom...!!

The sound of something breaking echoed. Then, a few keen-eared soldiers momentarily turned their heads away from the battlefield, looking up at the mountain range bordering the plains.

『Ugor.』

There stood a giant straight out of legend.

A few soldiers pointed at the mountaintop, mouths agape in shock. What was happening? Why such a reaction? Questions spread among the soldiers, and as they followed their gaze, heads turned upwards.

『It's been a while since I've used aura like this.』

Giant Transformation.

A technique where a giant form is created with aura and controlled directly. Before meeting me and receiving my teachings, Uburka had dominated the Earth Spirit Tribe using such techniques.

Now, a spectacle once only known in legends unfolded in the midst of this battlefield.

“What the hell is that? What is that!?”

“Is that a fairy tribe's illusion? Did the fairy tribe send reinforcements to the Earth Spirit Tribe...”

“Crazy. Hey, are we all seeing this right now? Huh?”

The soldiers trembled, unable to grasp the reality before them. Just moments ago, they were proud warriors fighting the enemy.

But now, faced with a sight beyond their comprehension, they quickly forgot their duties. They stepped back, uncharacteristically for soldiers, trembling in fear like warriors faced with a myth.

For in the presence of myth, every human is but a mortal.

No longer needing telepathy, Uburka opened his mouth wide and shouted gloriously.

“Behold, my Family Head.”

The mythical giant, Uburka, grinned.

“I am your Chief Warrior! The sharpest sword of all you possess, the greatest flag among those you raise! My name is Uburka! The Chief Warrior of the King of Death Family! The first among your vassals to execute your command!”

Uburka, having [pulled out] the mountaintop and carried it on his back,

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' roars!]

He jumped from the peak and, just like that---- right there---- in the middle of the battlefield, slammed the mountaintop upside down into the ground.

Kabooooom!!

A thunderous roar erupted. To call it merely a roar would be a gross understatement. The world shook.

Uburka, with the mountaintop on his back, slammed it into the ground. He jumped from an impossible height, crossing the absurd distance, planting the impossible into the earth. Indeed, Uburka was an unbelievable warrior.

Thump! Boom... Rumble! Boom!

The mountaintop, born to split the sky, now tore the earth asunder. The battlefield split open. The mountaintop cracked upon impact, creating another loud burst.

Crack!

Dust and dirt enveloped the battlefield. Screams erupted from every direction. Ghost Tribe, Earth Spirit Tribe, regardless of tribe, soldiers were floored by the feat before them, dropping their shields and spears, trembling on the ground like caterpillars.

“Ugor.”

In the midst of the dust, Uburka sat cross-legged atop the inverted mountaintop, laughing heartily.

His level of Giant Transformation had decreased compared to before. But in this moment, when all humans were shrouded in dust clouds, only Uburka rose above the sea of dust, a clear answer to the question, 'Who is the madman in this area?'

“I am.”

Uburka spoke. The dust-covered mountaintop looked like an ancient, ruined temple pillar. Sitting atop this temple pillar, Uburka surveyed the ground below—soldiers trembling in fear.

“The 212th Chairman of the Fire River Council.”

Gasps of astonishment trickled in from here and there. Relishing in their shock, Uburka sniffed a couple of times and finally laughed, revealing his molars.

“And the Chief Warrior of the King of Death Family. I am Uburka.”

No one dared to question what this meant.

The privilege of questioning was reserved only for the strong, and there, no one existed who could dare to question Uburka.

“My Family Head desires a halt to the battle, and commanded me to stop it.”

Uburka surveyed the battlefield.

“If anyone has objections, come forward. I’ll deal with you.”

Silence then fell over the battlefield.

Occasionally, the unsplit ground would crack further, the mountaintop would split more, making creaking noises.

No living being dared to utter a sound.

".....Uh."

Only Viper, letting dual swords dangle, made a sound. The Sword Beauty, Viper's face, looked stunned, mouth agape.

But not at Uburka, at me.

"King of Death, what kind of crazy bastard have you picked up...?"

---

The legendary great warrior, brought to life in several Blood Fire Dramas, a hero of myths popular among all ages and genders.

Young Earth Spirit Tribe members looked up at him, shouting.

“Woah, it’s Uburka!”

“Uburka! The greatest lunatic among our ancestors has appeared!”

Uburka snorted. Seemingly pleased by his distant descendants' ecstatic reactions.

He opened his mouth wide, inhaling the winter air in one breath, then exhaled.

Wooooooooah!

The Lion's Roar.

From the torn jaw of the mountaintop, Uburka bared his chest, literally roaring out loud. The roar split the mountainside, sliced the sky, and finally swept over the battlefield.

“Hic, what’s this...!”

“My, my ears...”

Amplified by aura, the Lion's Roar relentlessly swept across the battlefield, beyond it, engulfing the entire plains. Deers hiding in the brush, startled, dashed away. Birds sleeping in the forest flapped their wings, flying towards the distant sky.

"....."

"....."

Eventually, the vast prairie was submerged in silence.

No sound of insects, no birds, not even the footfalls of wild animals. Everything that could flee had fled.

Only the soldiers, who missed their chance to escape, remained trembling.

“Ah well... I guess I'll have to step in.”

The slim Ghost Tribe boy (Viper), adjusting his gloves, stepped forward.

“Wow! One of the 7 Heroes, the [Dark Swordsman]!”

“Believed in you, damn it...!”

The Ghost Tribe soldiers cheered.

Uburka sent a bewildered telepathy.

『Family Head, some lunatic is charging at me.』

『Take care of it. But don't kill.』

『Ugor. Even without your word, I was already feeling uneasy about getting involved in kids' fights.』

The Dark Swordsman (Viper) was swift and agile. Unfortunately, he couldn't charge at Uburka.

He was at the foot of the mountain, and Uburka on the mountaintop. Distance was the issue. Nonetheless, the Dark Swordsman (Viper) started climbing, yelling, “Hey, hey, wait!”

The problem was, the moment he set foot on the mountain path, Uburka flicked a pebble, breaking his leg.

Thud.

The Dark Swordsman (Viper) collapsed, unconscious.

“The Dark Swordsman...”

“How can this be...! The undefeated among the 7 Heroes...”

It was a living lesson for all.

First, whether he’s the real Uburka from history or not, he’s ridiculously strong.

Second, waging war against such a monster would be a bad idea unless someone's completely lost their mind.

The other 7 Heroes, or rather the other 7 Vipers, seemed to understand this.

Sword Beauty (Viper) frowned.

“Retreat, retreat! Let’s retreat and regroup, think of a way out. This is the will of all 7 Heroes.”

“Yes, yes...”

The Ghost Tribe soldiers’ morale plummeted. They obediently nodded as the Sword Beauty (Viper) instructed.

As the other 7 Heroes (Viper) carried the Dark Swordsman (Viper) away, the Ghost Tribe efficiently retreated from the plains.

“One rock throw from your son halted the war.”

Silvia spoke in a tone that was either astonished or sarcastic.

Before I could respond, Kim Yul corrected the Golden Cup's words.

“It was a rock throw from our family's Chief Warrior.”

Chapter 244: Era of the Heroes (2)

---

As both armies retreated, the plains opened up, and moonlight generously poured onto the open field. Only the peak planted in the center of the plains blocked the moonlight.

In the deep of the night, where even the stars seemed to hold their breath, we walked under the shadow cast by the mountain peak.

"Is Viper over there?"

At my question, Kim Yul nodded.

"Yes."

"Are you sure?"

"Without a doubt."

Kim Yul affirmed, glancing down at his notebook. Dark starlight flowed over his silver hair. If one were to say that such a veteran-like demeanor shrouded his eyelids, would that be too partial to my own family member?

"I've pinpointed the location of every camp. The Ghost Tribes thought they were clever, hiding the seven heroes' quarters deep within, but they couldn't fool entities like us. Family Head, trust in me and the soul comfort troops you've assigned under my command."

"Alright."

I nodded in response.

Kim Yul serves as the family shadow, or intelligence chief, in our clan. Under him, the soul comfort troops have been deployed, who have controlled the information of the martial realm since the demonic cult days.

I'd wager that no intelligence agency in the world could outdo our clan.

"Let's go."

We entered the Ghost Tribes' camp, avoiding the moonlight.

The camp's paths were as complex as a maze, winding here and there. Tents lined the roadsides, and between them, the Ghost Tribes, exhausted from battle, emitted sleepy snores.

Finally, we discovered a somewhat luxurious camp.

-Nyahahaha!

-Cheers! Pour more drinks here too!

Those voices were unmistakably from today's battlefield.

Red curtains fluttered as voices and the sound of alcohol filled the inside of the tent.

'This is it.'

It was certain. This was the camp of the seven Ghost Tribe heroes, the enemy's stronghold.

As I inquired with my eyes, Kim Yul slowly nodded in confirmation.

'Okay.'

Then there's no need to hesitate.

"I'll be back."

I stepped into Viper's camp.

---

The camp of the seven Ghost Tribe heroes was luxurious.

Red silk embroidered the tents, and the floor was covered with red-dyed wool, resembling a red carpet. Plush pillows were plentiful, and each of the seven Ghost Tribe heroes picked their favorite, either hugging them tightly or laying their heads on them.

They were having a drinking party.

"Pour it!"

"Drink up!"

"Ah... you guys really love drinking too much. Excessive drinking is harmful to health---a well-known fact, right?"

"Haha. Since you can't drink because of your injury, you're making such pitiful comments. How unsightly, Dark Swordsman."

"Ah, I already showed an unsightly side once. What does it matter? I won't complain."

As they passed the cups back and forth, the seven Ghost Tribe heroes chattered away.

"....."

But.

They were all Viper.

"What the heck are you doing now.....?"

I couldn't help but mutter to myself, and the seven Ghost Tribe heroes, or rather, seven Vipers, burst into laughter like the seven dwarfs fired by Snow White.

"What, what's this!?"

"An enemy!"

"Everyone---form the Seven Star Formation!"

"Hey, wait a minute... as always, you guys are too hot-headed."

Amid the confused, vigilant, immediately responsive, and coolly mediating Vipers starting their 'mass possession service', I felt like I was losing my mind....

"Ah, would you all quiet down!"

"Hm."

Finally, after my rebuke, all the Vipers coughed in unison.

Then, the Sword Beauty with red hair spoke as their representative.

"What's this, King of Death... What brings you here in the middle of the night?"

"What else? I came to ask why this war started."

"The reason for the war?"

"Yes. Didn't you say you'd answer after the battle? I've ended the fight. Now, please tell me."

The seven Vipers looked at each other.

One of them, scratching the back of his head, answered.

"Sigh. It's a hegemony war."

"A hegemony war?"

"Yes. Your Earth Spirit Tribe and my Ghost Tribe. At a glance, their characteristics overlap, right?"

I thought about it.

Both are races with abundant muscles and love fighting.

"Until now, it was all about the renaissance of art, discovery of new continents, and such, but how long can two lions share the same plains? That's why the king of the Ghost Tribes sent a letter to the chairman of the Earth Spirit Tribe, challenging them to a duel to decide the superior!"

I was incredulous.

"Two lions? Didn't you get completely thrashed during the holy land war?"

"Ha! Don't you know about the best-of-three series?"

"I don't get it... I don't want to. Anyway, this is why the war started?"

"Indeed, it's true we're killing each other for no good reason, but what can we do? It was a mutually agreed fight."

As she spoke, the Sword Beauty sharpened her sword against a whetstone. Each stroke fluttered her clothes, emitting a deep rose scent.

But, she was Viper.

"That's right. What can we do about a mutually agreed upon 'duel war'? It's like a collective version of a life-and-death duel, isn't it?"

A slender woman picked up on the Sword Beauty's words, shrugging her shoulders. Her sharp gaze sent tremors through the night air.

But, she was Viper.

"In essence, what we have here is a war over the pride of two races! We have no right to intervene and criticize what they see as honorable!"

A girl with twin braids spoke while crunching on an apple. Despite her small stature, her hearty eating made for a huge gap, making her extremely cute.

But, she was Viper... Let's stop here.

"...Alright. I get the situation. But why possess seven people at once? It's driving me crazy."

"Hmm. Simple reason."

This time, a sharp-looking young man answered.

Since entering the tent, the young man had just leaned against a pillar, looking perfect even in the shadow.

"Possessing multiple people is much more powerful than just one. It's easier to seize power too. We, the seven heroes, are essentially the leaders of the Ghost Tribe. This way, we can steer the entire tribe as we desire."

His calm words were followed by nods from the other heroes.

"In short, it's a measure to lead this war advantageously."

"A rightful decision for a god leading a tribe, perhaps?"

"Ah, that's why we're the seven heroes."

Though the scene was remarkable, I didn't pry further.

I sighed and spoke.

"So, do you plan to keep participating in the war? All seven of you?"

"Yes. Is there a problem with that?"

I bit my lower lip in contemplation and then spoke.

"Problem aside, I have a proposal."

"A proposal? What kind?"

"Surrender in this war."

At my words, the playful smirks on the faces of the Vipers vanished, replaced by an intense murderous aura.

---

When the seven Vipers acted out their characters separately, it was unavoidably comical. The more strictly they adhered to their characters, the more ridiculous it became.

However, now, abandoning all character and expressionless, the seven diverse individuals acting with a single will was no longer comical, but rather eerie.

"Surrender? Why?"

I addressed the group of Vipers.

"I understand why the two races are fighting. I also understand that we have no right to stop it."

"Uh-huh. And then?"

"And following that logic, what you meant by 'one side overwhelmingly winning to minimize damage' is now clear to me."

If a fight is inevitable and unstoppable, as Viper said, one side achieving a decisive victory would indeed reduce casualties.

"And continuing with the same logic, one side completely surrendering would be the path with the least casualties. That's why I'm suggesting this."

"Oho. You know how to talk nonsense, don't you?"

All seven Vipers simultaneously spat in disdain.

"How about this, King of Death? Your tribe surrenders instead. Oh, what's this? The conclusion is opposite but the result is the same? Wouldn't that be acceptable?"

"Celestial Martial Guild Master. I'm being serious."

"I'm also being serious, you brat. Do I look like I'm joking?"

The piercing gaze of seven pairs of eyes was like a sharp sword thrust at me.

I firmly stated,

"I only wish to minimize the damage."

"Uh-huh. Then you surrender, King of Death. Understand?"

"That's not possible."

I sighed and candidly revealed my thoughts.

"The Earth Spirit Tribe that I lead... they have a peculiar political system. It's easy yet difficult to unite them under one cause. And in this case, it's extremely difficult."

The fervor in the Vipers' attitude receded slightly.

I continued.

"To make my children surrender, I first need to possess the strongest among them. That individual must consent to my possession. Then, I have to propose the idea of surrender to the entire tribe, and knock down anyone who opposes it."

In such a scenario of 'absolute surrender,' almost all the Earth Spirit warriors participating in the war would express opposition.

The probability of someone strong enough to take down all those opposing me consenting to my possession is next to zero.

"But Celestial Martial Guild Master. It's easier for you to unite the Ghost Tribe under one decision, isn't it?"

I looked at each of the seven Vipers in turn.

"You just said this: 'The entire Ghost Tribe moves at their will.' It's faster for you to persuade the Ghost Tribe than for me to persuade the Earth Spirit Tribe. That's why I'm asking you."

"....."

"I'm begging you, Celestial Martial Guild Master. Please, just this once. I will ensure the price paid is satisfactory. You wouldn't want your tribe to suffer more casualties either. So..."

"Our children,"

Viper interrupted me abruptly.

"have lost too much."

The murderous intent in their seven pairs of eyes had subsided.

But their will burned just as intensely.

"The Heretic Inquisitor, those damn snails, defeated us. Our kids, not even ten years old, had their horns broken and were whipped into slavery."

Before my return, there was such a tale in the tower.

"What next? The holy land coalition army, gathered to wash away their humiliation, with the Ghost Tribes at the forefront. But then, suddenly, your tribe appeared and, as you said, completely thrashed us."

The one who saved the most people in the tower is the Master Alchemist.

The one who killed the most is the Head of the Temple of the All Gods.

"The Ghost Tribes were resolute. Even as other tribes celebrated the renaissance of art, we quietly gathered strength in secret."

The most feared in the tower is the Black Dragon Witch, and the most Ghost Tribe is the Paladin.

"But that backfired. In the end, we were left behind in the discovery of the new continent."

However, the most respected by their peers in the guild is the Celestial Martial Guild Master.

Such tales existed.

"Our children have lost too much. They have only known defeat."

And that was still the case.

"Now, you're asking those children to surrender again?"

"....."

"I can't do it. That's truly impossible."

I understood Viper's words. My proposal was indeed harsh.

But I clenched my fist.

"In the end, you will lose again."

"Because of that big guy, Uburka, you brought in?"

"Because the situation demands an overwhelming victory to reduce casualties. It's better for both your and our children if Uburka is tossing mountains around rather than your seven heroes rampaging through our lines."

I looked directly at Viper as I spoke.

But the seven Vipers scoffed in unison.

"King of Death, you underestimate me too much."

"Even the Ghost Tribe heroes you possessed couldn't get near. Seven of you charging at once won't change that."

"That's true. But what makes you think I haven't prepared anything?"

The seven Vipers looked at me with a crooked smile.

I frowned.

"And what is this 'preparation' you speak of?"

"Ah. Trying to get spoilers... Just know that I have an ace up my sleeve that can turn that white muscle pig into first-grade pork."

"...Bluffing won't change reality, Celestial Martial Guild Master."

"Scared? Then face your end."

Indeed.

Being on the receiving end of these words made me empathize with those who heard them from me.

It's infuriating.

"So, you can't surrender."

"Ah. Just like you can't surrender, we 'can't' surrender either."

"We'll meet on the battlefield then."

"It seems so."

Both I and the seven Vipers simultaneously declared.

"Tomorrow."

"Tomorrow."

Negotiations had broken down.

Chapter 245: Era of the Heroes (3)

---

That night, I was lost in thought.

"What should I do?"

Questions I would normally murmur to myself or monologue in my mind, now slipped out through my lips.

As a hunter, I had many things to ponder alone. Only the Guardian Spirit was my conversation partner and Advisor. That was the hunter's karma, and I never thought of it as loneliness.

"Complete intervention might be necessary, my family head."

But now, things were different.

Ester, looking over the plains, answered my question.

I was no longer a lone hunter, but the head of a family. Talking to myself and soliloquies were no longer necessary. Under the cold moonlight, we sat in a circle on the barren ground, discussing.

"Complete intervention?"

The Hell Ghost Demon inquired.

Ester responded to the question.

"The Celestial Martial Guild Master is using [Multiple Possession] to control several heroes at once. From the perspective of the people of this world, this is akin to arbitrarily using the power of a [God] to favor the Ghost Tribe warriors. It's unfair. And against unfairness, we must respond with unfairness."

"Hmm."

Sitting in the center, I, the Family Head, pondered, with Ester, my advisor and successor, to my right.

Uburka, the Chief Warrior, huddled his massive form to my left. Silvia Evanair stood erect, and Kim Yul, the family's strategist, sat opposite me, quietly scrutinizing his notebook.

The core leadership, surrounded by the Four Demon Lords, and beyond them, a thousand followers of the Demonic Cult encircled us. A thousand family members held their breath, eavesdropping on our 'family meeting.'

Under the midnight moon, breathing its light, our House of Death lay submerged in contemplation.

"Well, what. Just having Uburka, the Chief Warrior, intervene alone would utterly demolish the Ghost Tribe army."

Silvia Evanair remarked nonchalantly.

"Family Head, couldn't you purchase a few [Character Possession] items? Just two, and entrust them to Ester, the advisor, and Kim Yul, the family strategist. The Advisor can shoot out beams, and if the strategist slightly forgets the taste of the coffee he drank last night, the Ghost Tribe warriors will be wiped out in one hit."

"...Do you have a problem with me? Why the attitude?"

“A problem? That’s absurd. I, Silvia Evanair, am filled only with loyalty towards you, as vast as the cockroaches scuttling in a summer storage. My loyalty is as boundless.”

That’s some disturbingly loyal sentiment.

“Regardless of the tone, the steward’s point is invalid.”

Kim Yul spoke softly.

Silvia's eyebrows twitched.

"Why is it invalid?"

"Because our victory is not the issue. A crushing victory is simple, and even our family head knows this. That's why he asked [what to do] instead of [how to win]."

Kim Yul flipped through his notebook under the moon, resembling a newly born star.

His gaze, like that of a twinkling star, turned towards me.

"But even that question from our family head is somewhat misplaced. Before discussing means, our family head should define his goals more clearly."

I stroked my chin.

"The goal, you mean."

"Exactly. As our family head declared to the Celestial Martial Guild Master, does he 'wish to minimize the casualties of this war'? If so, then apart from complete intervention, no other answer suffices. Yet if he hesitates, it indicates another goal is weighing on our family head's mind, balancing between the two."

Kim Yul's voice echoed, light and unburdened, like a star.

"Our family head views the Earth Spirit Tribe as his children. Not as his own blood, but as a parent considers what's best for their child's education, our family head too looks after the Earth Spirit Tribe with a parental heart."

"....."

"And from that perspective, our family head has so far refrained from intervening in the Earth Spirit Tribe's affairs. Only when absolutely necessary, when non-intervention meant the tribe's annihilation, did he actively step in. But this war, even if started by the Ghost Tribe warriors, seems to be something the Earth Spirit Tribe [desired]."

Kim Yul raised his head to look at Silvia, then turned to me.

"This war is not about resources, but a collective duel of warriors. Our family head is pondering whether it's right to intervene here or not."

I sighed deeply.

Raviel's ancestor had precisely pinpointed a corner of my heart.

"Indeed."

The Sword Demon shrugged his shoulders.

"He's right. If we interfere in a serious fight, it would be absolutely infuriating. Wouldn't it be the same for them?"

“...Disregarding the impertinent words of the Chief Warrior for a moment.”

Ester leaned on her chin.

"Apart from a warrior's pride, the question of whether our heavy intervention is the right education also arises. 'Whenever there's trouble, a god intervenes'. Is it good to instill such an impression in the Earth Spirit Tribe?"

Hmm.

I turned to look at Uburka.

"What do you think, Chief Warrior?"

“Ugor.”

Uburka answered without changing his expression.

"My thoughts are as our family head decides."

Is that so.

I nodded.

"We are strong. Both the Ghost Tribe warriors and the Earth Spirit Tribe. We could end this war without killing a single person."

I removed my hand from my chin.

"But when I think about it, I'm not the Tower Master."

If this war was based on mutual agreement.

And if that agreement had reached its conclusion.

"It's only right to ask the children living in this era for their opinion."

The discussion halted as my retainers awaited my command in silence.

"Chief Warrior."

"Ugor."

"You are the only one among us granted a physical body in this world. Being a legendary figure, you can approach the Earth Spirit Tribe and strike up a conversation. Go. Ask them. Ask the current chairman of the Fire River Council—whether they want our help or not, and report back."

"Ugor."

Uburka grinned, clenching his fist.

"I've been waiting for those words. Wait for me, my family head. I'll ask the kids of this era and return."

Kwoong.

As Uburka rose, the ground around him shook. Naturally, not just Kim Yul, but Ester and Silvia too, were not the kind to falter at such tremors.

"Hahaha!"

Uburka, seemingly pleased, laughed heartily and thudded across the plains.

His destination was the Earth Spirit Tribe's densely packed camp.

Boooom! Boooom!

It seemed an alarm was raised at the distant camp, signaled by the sound of horns. Understandable, given a fortress-sized warrior had suddenly invaded; the Earth Spirit Tribe would naturally be terrified.

Soon enough, sounds of chaos emanated from inside the Earth Spirit Tribe's camp.

"Is this alright?"

Ester looked worriedly towards the distant camp.

"Why?"

"Uburka, the Chief Warrior... While I haven't known him for long, he seems rather hot-tempered. I wonder if he's suitable for diplomatic envoy work in a situation like this."

"He may seem like a brute who only knows fighting, but your brother is deeper than he appears."

Startled.

Upon hearing [Your brother], Ester hesitated momentarily.

Struggling with the unfamiliar, or rather, difficult-to-get-used-to phrase, Ester stuttered.

"My brother...?"

"You are my eldest daughter and Uburka is my second son. Naturally, you're a sister and he's a brother. Officially, we address each other as Chief Warrior, Advisor, but in private, you should get used to it quickly."

"That's absurd, Father!"

Finally, breaking the formal address, Ester called me father.

Of course, it was whispered into my ear, ensuring no one else could hear.

"How could I treat such a gigantic child as my brother! Siblings, at that. I've never experienced such a relationship! It's unimaginable!"

"It's alright."

I gently patted Ester's shoulder.

"After this stage, more people will join our family."

Among them would be my two starting points.

The starting point inside the tower, Yoo Soo-Ha.

The starting point outside the tower, the Director.

Thinking of the one outside the tower, I spoke.

"Director is an extraordinary person. A lifetime spent turning [children who aren't family into family]. Whenever you face a difficult problem, or are unsure about something, consulting with the Director will help solve it."

"Are you anxious?"

"Yes... I am."

Ester lowered her head.

"Destroying a continent and burning humanity to hell was hard, but not anxiety-inducing. I've never felt such... I'm anxious about truly being a family to others. What even is a family...."

Again, I reassured her.

“It's okay.”

I comforted Ester by holding her shoulder.

“We will certainly become precious to each other.”

“But, Father. What if I, as the eldest sister, make some mistake...”

“When that time comes, we'll discuss it together, just like now. We'll call all the retainers, sit together, and think thoroughly about the problem and its solution.”

"....."

“Can you trust this inexperienced father?”

Ester lowered her head even more.

Then, in a voice as soft as a whispering worm, she murmured.

“...Yes. I trust you, Father.”

Under the cool moonlight.

We, who had just become father and daughter, sat leaning against each other.

---

Ester's worry was half right and half wrong.

Uburka returned and shared his story with us, roughly like this:

When Uburka appeared at the Earth Spirit Tribe's camp, chaos naturally ensued. From their perspective, a general from the legends, thought dead, had suddenly appeared [Alive? Really?].

The Earth Spirit Tribe's army was in an uproar.

Amidst the pandemonium, only one person, the current chairman of the Fire River Council, met Uburka with dignity and proper attire.

-Who are you?

“I am Uburka, the 212th chairman of the Fire River Council.”

-I am Kerhsombok, the 627th chairman of the Fire River Council.

“You don't look very strong...”

-Who among this land could stand against you, if not a mere infant?

Uburka chuckled.

“I'll help if asked. I am neither a god nor a spirit. Just someone who became a bit stronger than others in pursuit of the ultimate martial path. I am still of the Earth Spirit Tribe, a former chairman of the River Council. If you seek reinforcements, I should naturally extend my hand.”

The Earth Spirit Tribe murmured among themselves.

-Uburka! That damned ancestor is going to help us?

-Tearing mountains to thrust them into the battlefield, such strength aiding us!

-Ugh! Let's accept it! Teach those horned bastards a lesson!

-With that damned ancestor's help, conquering the continent, seizing every port and waterway, creating a unified Earth Spirit nation will be easy!

Gradually heated up, the Earth Spirit Tribe discussed, and then, the current chairman, Kerhsombok, spoke.

-Stop.

The Earth Spirit Tribe flinched. The chatter quieted, and the excitement faded.

Chairman Kerhsombok, with his icy glare, surveyed the surroundings.

-So what if we defeat the Ghost Tribe warriors. They would not be crushed before the Earth Spirit Tribe, but merely under the foot of the great spirit, Uburka.

-.....

-Let's conquer the continent with Uburka at our lead. Looking at it, would that be the Earth Spirit Tribe's nation? Or Uburka's nation?

-.....

-The White Lion always worried and helped us. Yet, he always asked to be called a [friend], thinking the most beautiful feeling between him and us was [friendship].

Chairman Kerhsombok was a middle-aged man with admirable muscles.

The muscles built in his youth supported his body, and his aging head upheld his wisdom. Standing between youth and old age, he spoke like a nameless priest of a forgotten temple.

-The White Lion wanted us all to feel friendship. If difficult, we help; if too difficult, many help. When someone wins, we praise them. We openly express envy and jealousy, delighting the victor. The loser devotes their life to one day reaching the champion's spot. We find such a loser's life beautiful and feel endless friendship towards them.

-.....

The crowd grew silent.

Thousands of Earth Spirit Tribe warriors listened to the priest's speech in hushed breaths. The speech resonated in their hearts.

Their millennia-old [White Lion Faith] pulsed in their hearts, never severed.

-Earth Spirit Tribe warriors.

Chairman Kerhsombok gazed at the warriors arrayed far below.

-Are we weak?

Thump! Thump! Thump!

The warriors stomped their left foot on the ground, a stark answer of [No].

-Do we need the help of ancestor Uburka to defeat those horned weaklings?

Thump! Thump! Thump!

-Are we so feeble that now, right now, is the moment to summon the White Lion again, begging him to lead and comfort us?

Thump! Thump! Thump!

-Yes! No!

Chairman Kerhsombok spread his arms.

-We don't need our ancestor's help! Nor the help of a god! Uburka! White Lion! We trust your friendship, so we, as your friends, will respond. Wait and see! Observe how magnificently the Earth Spirit Tribe warriors will defeat the Ghost Tribe warriors, without any danger or worry!

Wooooooah!

The Earth Spirit Tribe warriors went wild, waving their weapons.

-We are warriors raised by the White Lion!

-If the White Lion feels friendship towards us, what is there to fear!

-We are one! One people! Children of one being!

-We can't worry him! Let not a wrinkle form on our White Lion's Ghost Tribe brow!

The morale soared.

Facing the unstoppable warriors, Uburka couldn't help but smile bitterly.

“Is this it? Education too good to be a problem...”

After inciting the warriors' spirit, Chairman Kerhsombok returned and said.

-We don't need our ancestor's help. With respect, we don't need the White Lion either. We are strong. We want to show our ancestor and the White Lion our strength.

That was the message of the Earth Spirit Tribe living in this era.

---

"As expected of our family head. You've raised the tribe well."

Ester smiled happily. The others reacted similarly. Uburka, feeling good, fetched a barrel of liquor to drink, and Kim Yul nodded expressionlessly.

Only Silvia seemed displeased, snorting.

"What's wrong with you, Steward?"

"Everyone's so proud, must be nice. Weak ones like me, I wonder if I can find a place to lie down. No, no, this is just a weak person's complaint. You, the mighty King of Death and powerful retainers, please enjoy to your heart's content."

"....."

I decided to overlook her grumbling, something she'd always done. Probably just being cranky because the world is too beautiful.

I lightly flicked her forehead.

"Ouch! What's that for, my family head!?"

"If you want to be someone the Butler wouldn't be ashamed of, then look wider. Over there."

I pointed towards the plains, where dawn was breaking.

Both the Ghost Tribe and Earth Spirit armies seemed ready, beginning their advance. Thud, thousands of footsteps echoed in unison, and again from the opposite side. The two melodies converged, filling the plains' dawn with a bizarre cacophony.

-Nyahahaha! Today's the day we feast on the pigs!

The Ghost Tribe army's front naturally included the 7 Ghost Tribe heroes. They exuded a sinister aura, leading the Ghost Tribe warriors.

Viper, the player who handled the Ghost Tribe warriors from the beginning to the end of the stage, decided to actively dive into this war.

Meanwhile.

"Is this really okay?"

Ester asked with a serious face.

"If we subtly help according to the situation, it might not be noticeable. Family head, if we help without either side knowing..."

“No.”

I raised my hand to interrupt Ester’s suggestion.

“This is the time to trust and wait for those children.”

“This is like a [coming-of-age ceremony]. The vast tribe of the Earth Spirit Tribe is attempting to overcome this rite of passage. It’s free to watch from afar and cheer, to fret and pray for their fortune.”

I said.

“We mustn’t interfere.”

"....."

“Let’s trust in our children’s strength, and wait.”

“Yes.”

After that, Ester offered no further objections.

We sat on a mountain peak bent by Uburka, silently waiting for the impending war.

And then.

Boooooooooom-

A horn sounded from somewhere. Then another. Horns followed horns, merging together, soaking the plains' dawn in a strange agony.

Boooooooooom... Boooooooooom... Boooooooooom...

As the horn sounds faded.

-Attack!

Someone shouted.

-Attack! All forces, full attack!

-Crush those horned bastards so they never dare again!

-All forces, chargeeeeeee!

With that roar, the Earth Spirit Tribe charged forth. The Ghost Tribe warriors, not to be outdone, screamed ferociously and rushed with their weapons drawn.

‘I believe.’

With an unwavering heart, I watched the Earth Spirit Tribe's military might.

‘You are strong enough to carve your own path, my children.’

It was the beginning of the war.

Chapter 246: The Celestial Martial Guild Master (1)

---

This war was, without a doubt, unlike any war seen before.

-Nyahahaha! Attack! Tear apart everything that approaches and feed them to the horses!

-Woohoo! Follow General Sword Beauty!

Before the touch of dawn could caress, the Ghost Tribe raced across the frostbitten ground.

The Ghost Tribe didn't need cavalry. Their sheer size was an act of violence. Charging blindly with their horns leading the way was as good as a cavalry charge.

-Charge! Charge!

-Slice off all the fat from those arrogant pigs!

The Ghost Tribe, covering the horizon with dust as they sprinted.

Each one of them became a steel horse, racing across the battlefield adorned with mountain peaks thrown by Uburka.

On the other hand.

-.....

The Earth Spirit Tribe was silent.

Like moles hidden in the ground, they didn't make a sound.

-.....

-.....

-.....

Even as thousands of Ghost Tribe members charged towards them, the Earth Spirit Tribe remained utterly calm. Occasionally, a young warrior would tremble with nerves, but nobody chastised his inexperience.

-Is everyone ready?

Said the chairman of the Fire River Council of this era.

The glimpse of teeth from within his beard was as sharp as the look in his eyes.

-We are.

-We are fully prepared, Chairman.

Even as they conversed, thousands of Ghost Tribe members were fiercely charging towards them.

-Today is the day the continental hegemony changes!

-Earth Spirit Tribe! You ignorant fools who waste your lives dancing! Now is the time for us, the Ghost Tribe, who breathe the sky and feel the rhythm of the earth, to rise to power!

-Long live the Ghost Tribe!

A full 9,000.

A race that invested all their ability scores into their physical form, the Ghost Tribe, charged with a wild ferocity. Their momentum was like a raging storm bringing snowstorms and tidal waves.

-Did their guardian just throw a mountain at us!

At the forefront, the 7 Heroes of the Ghost Tribe were like a single blade, charging fiercely.

-Then we shall pierce through the mountain!

Dual swords, scythes, spears, and a staff too large to be a staff were imbued with aura and launched.

An explosion.

Boom.....!

A mountain in the middle of the battlefield split in two. A road of steel was created. The Ghost Tribe became a long train, led by the 7 Heroes.

The massive train formed by 9,000 troops struck the vanguard of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

---

The Earth Spirit Tribe's formation was as sturdy as a turtle shell. However, the breakthrough power of the Ghost Tribe was even greater.

Boom.....!

The collision of two human masses created an unimaginable roar. What followed was more akin to the collapse of the terrain rather than the breakdown of a formation.

"Ah."

"Uh."

"Ugh."

Our family members watching the battlefield each expressed their distress in their unique ways at that moment.

"Those... were the Ghost Tribe and the Celestial Martial Guild Master, right? Their breakthrough power exceeded expectations."

Ester, once a leader of the Demon King's army and now my advisor, said,

"The mountain peak thrown by Chief Warrior Uburka had become a component of the battlefield, with the Earth Spirit Tribe forming their lines on either side. But to smash straight through the mountain and charge through the center... it was a complete blind spot for the Earth Spirit Tribe."

Indeed. Like an animal pierced through the heart, the Earth Spirit Tribe's formation was writhing.

But.

"It's okay."

For thousands of years, I taught the Earth Spirit children about fire. I taught them how to write, how to burn, and even how to play with it.

Blood Fire.

Even in the damp caves of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, the Earth Spirit Tribe never lost their fire. They blessed the living with fire and mourned the dead with it.

And then I taught them to dance.

Dance is fire expressed through the body. I easily transformed the love of fire in the hearts of the Earth Spirit Tribe into a love for dance.

Dance was fire, and every dancing Earth Spirit was a flame.

-Tap.

Thus.

-Thump.

The Earth Spirit Tribe's formation collapsed and crumbled, but that was not the end.

It was the beginning, and to describe it, it was more akin to blossoming rather than destruction.

-Tap.

-Thump.

-Tap.

-Thump!

The Earth Spirit Tribe did not resist the Ghost Tribe's charge. They retreated when pushed and split when struck.

However, during this process, they shook their hips and stomped the ground. Tap, tap, tap. The warriors lined up beside them also rolled their feet and stomped the ground. Tap, tap, tap! Like flames spreading and burning when fanned, thump, the sound of their feet quickly spread to the unit next to them, the unit above, even to the distant unit, instantly covering the entire camp.

Tap, tap, tap, thump, tap, tap, tap, thump!

The battlefield was soon filled with the stomping of thousands of troops. The Earth Spirit Tribe slammed their aura-wrapped feet down. Consequently, the sound was not blocked by the mountain peaks, nor did it bounce off the tall maple trees, but flowed like a single flame to the very bottom of the world.

-What, what's this!

The Ghost Tribe was perplexed.

-Dammit! What are they up to!

-Why won't they collapse!?

Like tough leather sacks, the Earth Spirit Tribe absorbed the entire long charge of the Ghost Tribe and converted the shock into vibrations---digesting it.

I couldn't help but marvel.

'Ah.'

And I was captivated by a peculiar joy.

'I have completed it... the Demonic Formation Art.'

An idea that came to me like a miracle one day.

Instead of a single person performing the Demonic Heavenly God Art, what if multiple people, hundreds, thousands, performed it together—what new possibilities could open up? That premonition led me to create my first skill.

+

[Demonic Formation Art]

Rank: Undetermined

Effect: Based on Demonic Heavenly God Art, this formation materializes shared mental images of the casters. The more casters join the formation, the more skilled they are in Demonic Heavenly God Art, and the clearer the shared mental image, the more powerful the formation becomes.

This formation's effectiveness has not been proven yet!

You are the first to conceive this skill. Now, you must demonstrate the potential of Demonic Formation Art. As sufficient data accumulates, the rank and description of this skill will be revised.

*The current skill rank is not yet determined.

+

The Demonic Heavenly God Art was a supreme martial art capable of dominating the martial world.

Then, what if that Demonic Heavenly God Art was modified and performed as a group technique... if it could be performed, what terrifying power could it wield?

'I taught Uburka the Demonic Heavenly God Art for that purpose.'

I sank into my thoughts.

Those thoughts settled in my heart as joy.

'Uburka spread the Demonic Heavenly God Art to the warriors of that time. It became the only orthodox sword technique in the Earth Spirit Tribe society. And I... I propagated the [Theatre of Dancing with Aura] to the children.'

For an Earth Spirit Tribe warrior, aura meant the Demonic Heavenly God Art. The plays performed on stage were all about the harmonization of the Demonic Heavenly God Art. As the number of actors increased—3, 6, 18—countless Demonic Heavenly God Arts adorned the stage.

'Naturally.'

The audience was mesmerized by the splendid Blood Fire

Drama.

Their hearts pounded.

On stage, they were quiet spectators, but outside, they were as mighty warriors as any of their kin. The Earth Spirit warriors realized that the Blood Fire Drama, when it spread from the stage to the world, became even more beautiful.

'I provided the opportunity, but it was always meant for the children to enjoy and discover on their own.'

The Earth Spirit warriors applied the Blood Fire Drama to the military.

They synchronized their rhythm and melody. That alone amplified their aura. But what was more important was that all the warriors had to imagine [the same picture] in their minds.

The [White Lion Story] told by Uburka like a legend filled that picture. The White Lion—our god, our friend, our watcher. The scenes it witnessed while roaming the world—burning mansions, dying snowfields, broken hearts in mirrors—were ingrained in the Earth Spirit Tribe's minds from their youth.

-Woo.

So, they sang.

-Woo.

-Woo.

-Ugh.

The sound of their footsteps had not stopped yet. The auraladen steps filled the plains, and above them, the sharp cries of the Earth Spirit Tribe echoed. The Earth Spirit Tribe raised their heads and howled like wolves. Thus, the lowest rumbling steps blocked the ground, and the highest cries blocked the sky.

Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, ugh!

Tap, tap, tap, thump, tap, tap, tap, thump!

The sky of the battlefield was blocked, and the ground was sealed.

The sun, which had been pouring dawn from the sky, bounced off the rough curtain of aura and could no longer cast its cool light. The plains where the Ghost Tribe charged into became engulfed in pure darkness.

A surging shadow engulfed the Ghost Tribe.

---

-Nyaaaa!?

Sword Beauty, at the very front, was the first to realize the ominous signs.

-What is this! It's not magic... it's aura!?

-Are these bastards, thousands of them, casting a barrier simultaneously?

-What a wasteful use of aura... If they think we'd be startled by this, they're mistaken!

The 7 Heroes encouraged their troops.

-Don't panic! It's just a bit dark!

-There's no impact! They're just trying to scare us with a show!

-We've killed 20% with this charge! Just continue the attack!
We have the advantage!

-If they resist being torn apart, tear them up from the inside!

The Ghost Tribe warriors tried to respond to the heroes' voices. However, the growing footsteps, the expanding shadows, enveloped them.

-It's like...

A Ghost Tribe warrior muttered, feeling an ominous aura.

-It feels like we're not on a plain, but inside a cave...

The momentum of the charge eventually halted. The cries, rather than being shouts of attack and slaughter, became more like involuntary screams against a sinister sensation.

Thud.

And then, a warrior suddenly realized the sensation of stepping on the ground had completely changed.

-...Wood?

Until recently, the Ghost Tribe was stepping on bare ground. It was rough, scattered with pebbles, and if careless, one could trip on the rugged terrain.

But the sensation of the ground in this dark space was entirely different.

-It feels like wood.

-I can't see well.

-No, it's wood. Wooden flooring. And it's very old, like from a mansion.

-So these pig bastards used aura to create a wooden texture and surrounded the area?

-Why the hell would they do something like this...?

The Ghost Tribe warriors murmured.

Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, ugh!

Tap, tap, tap, thump, tap, tap, tap, thump!

Meanwhile, the song and dance around them were growing stronger.

In the light of day, the song was merely a morale booster in war, nothing more, nothing less. But the battlefield had darkened. The diluted sunlight in the dusk was too weak to dispel the darkness.

Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, ugh!

Tap, tap, tap, thump, tap, tap, tap, thump!

In the dark, the voices of the Earth Spirit Tribe seemed like a summoning, like a ritual curse. The Ghost Tribe warriors started to sweat beyond unease.

And that wasn't all.

Especially skilled in aura, some Ghost Tribe warriors looked around and realized something was surrounding them. Formless and without malice, but swirling around their ankles like a mist.

"Smoke...?"

It was aura flowing in like smoke.

Chapter 247: The Celestial Martial Guild Master (2)

---

The aura of the Earth Spirit Tribe never emitted hostility towards the Ghost Tribe.

Like actual smoke, it simply flowed and gathered. However, as the smoke-like aura rose around their ankles, some started coughing.

-Cough! Cough!

-What the, it's getting hard to breathe...

At that moment.

The vast cave burst into flames.

Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, ugh!

Tap, tap, tap, thump, tap, tap, tap, thump!

The Earth Spirit Tribe warriors surged in unison. The Ghost Tribe warriors were engulfed within the Earth Spirit Tribe, allowing the Earth Spirit warriors to strike from both sides.

Hidden within the shadows, they danced and slaughtered the Ghost Tribe warriors.

But it wasn't just a mere swing of their swords.

Their swords blazed like flames, and their spears turned into columns of fire, burning the illusionary cave. Ghost Tribe warriors screamed as they were cut by the fire.

-Aaaagh!

-It's hot! So hot!

-It's fire!

Someone shouted.

-It's fire! A fire attack! Run!

-Head for the entrance!

-Aaaaagh!

-Where's the entrance.....

-There's still light coming in over there! There! Run, you fools!

The Ghost Tribe's formation quickly collapsed. Those who had mastered aura knew it was not real fire but aura shaped to mimic fire as closely as possible—yet they couldn't inform their subordinates.

If it's hot when touched.

If it burns when it gets hot.

Then, even if it's created by aura, what difference does it make from real flames?

Demonic Formation Art.

The First Method.

Wandering Mansion of Flames.

The tragedy of the hellfire mansion was reenacted on this battlefield today.

-Run! Run! Run!

The Ghost Tribe warriors desperately ran towards the entrance. Some, unfamiliar with the dark, tripped and rolled; some fell entangled with the fallen; others crashed into the fallen. It was not a [retreat] of warriors but a [flight] of criminals. It was chaos.

-Think you can escape?

Flames hidden in the darkness growled.

-Feel the pain of burning to death.

-Witness the moment of burning alive, unable to scream but in agony.

The Earth Spirit Tribe was already deeply immersed in the Blood Fire Drama. They were warriors, but at this moment, they were actors. They were priests reenacting the myth of the White Lion on this earth, thus burning their enemies as their destined karma.

They became the fire themselves, captivated by the flames, burning in rage towards their old enemies who had once confined them in the suffocating salt mine [caves]. The terror of the caves where they had to live, trapped for hundreds of years, long ago.

Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, woo, woo, ugh! Woo, ugh!

Tap, tap, tap, thump, tap, tap, tap, thump!

Myth colored the heavens and the earth, history tinted the battlefield. The Earth Spirit Tribe interpreted the world as the followers of the White Lion, raged as slaves oppressed under the Slime Empire's tyranny, and above all, swung their swords as warriors with aura in their hearts.

-Aaaagh!!

-Save me!

-Run! It's divine fire! Run!

-Heroes! The Seven Heroes! Please save us....

Utter chaos.

Both the Ghost and Earth Spirit Tribes fell into hallucinations. The aura, thick like smoke, amplified their hallucinatory symptoms. The Ghost Tribe couldn't even think to strike at the flames with swords or spears, while the Earth Spirit Tribe bit and tore at their enemy's limbs, believing themselves to be the flames.

And like charred wood burning to its limit, the Ghost Tribe's forces crumbled.

---

Thus, the war was truly like none ever seen before.

"....."

"....."

My spectators, too, were speechless at the sight.

The first to break the silence among us, familiar with tragedy, was Kim Yul.

"Impressive, family head."

Kim Yul emotionlessly gazed at his notebook.

"I've traveled through many worlds where the martial realm and the martial arts world exist. Each time, I encountered factions that championed formations. But their formations were, at best, about using hallucinogenic fragrances to impair people's perceptions, or trapping them in pre-constructed labyrinths. Or, they didn't go beyond the level of combined attacks, combined strikes."

Kim Yul closed his notebook with a snap and looked down at the mountain base where the Demonic Formation Art unfolded.

"But this is different. All the casters have mastered the same Demonic Heavenly God Art, and all have the same image in mind. They've painted a landscape shared in their minds using aura as a tool in this world. And they're not just creating and watching the scene; they themselves become actors, jumping in and burning. You've completed the Demonic Formation Art, family head."

Then, Silvia Evanair finally spoke.

"What, what is that...? It's almost like a divine miracle. I mean, it's like a divinity descended and created a barrier around. Ordinary humans... just humans who have learned aura, wielding the power of Constellations. How?"

Uburka nodded.

"Centuries of my daddy's longing have finally been fulfilled. Ugor."

I looked down at the burning land.

Those who survived the Wandering House of Flames and barely escaped were but a handful.

Among them, there was no sign of the Seven Heroes under Viper's control.

"The Ghost Tribe Leader has been defeated."

Ester commented. All my family members nodded, agreeing with her assessment.

Yet, there was one who disagreed.

-Huhu....

From a distance, laughter could be heard.

And from the Earth Spirit Tribe's camp, where they had gained the upper hand, an unexpected commotion erupted.

-What, what's this!?

-The corpses! The horned corpses are rising!

Just as said, the corpses of the Ghost Tribe who had fallen in the Wandering Mansion of Flames began to rise one by one.

Bursting with even more ferocity than before they fell.

"That man..."

Ester murmured in disbelief.

And I too realized what was happening.

+

[Multiple Possession Reincarnation]

Rank: SSS

Effect: You possess the individuals you choose. If the possessed individual dies, you return to your original spirit.

Cost: Priceless (obtained through special means)

*However, you can only possess them within 1 minute of their death.

+

Indeed, the resurrected Ghost Tribe warriors bore the shadow of Viper!

-Who said the Ghost Tribe's heroes were limited to only seven?

-The heroes of the Ghost Tribe are infinite!

They—the incarnations of Viper—proclaimed.

-The Ghost Tribe's Seven Heroes seem to have been defeated.

-Huhu... Those guys were the weakest among the heroes.

-Losing to the likes of the Earth Spirit Tribe is a disgrace to the Ghost Tribe!

Amidst the bewildered Earth Spirit Tribe, 12 Ghost Tribe warriors took a battle stance.

Of course, they were all Viper.

-We are the "Ghost Tribe's 12 Winged Generals"!

-And it's not just us! Behind us stand the "Ghost Tribe's 72 Demon Kings"!

-Beyond them, the "Ghost Tribe's 108 Arhats" exist!

The resurrected Ghost Tribe warriors—Viper—shouted in unison.

-We! The Ghost Tribe is immortal!

The Earth Spirit Tribe hesitated and stepped back.

-Why are the dead rising? What is this madness? Ugh!

-This is an evil sorcery! It's black magic that insults both gods and nature!

It wasn't just the Earth Spirit Tribe who were in panic.

Even the Ghost Tribe warriors who had barely escaped from the Wandering House of Flames were trembling in fear.

-What in the world is happening now!?

-I don't know... but something... something is happening!

I was dumbfounded.

‘Could this be the countermeasure to face Uburka...’

Ester clicked his tongue.

"This is blatant cheating!"

Ester continued angrily.

"The Ghost Tribe Leader is not of this world! It was already crossing the line for him to intervene directly in the war by sending down seven possessed bodies, but now possessing all the fallen warriors! This is outrageously excessive!"

As if hearing Ester's words, the leading incarnation of Viper turned around.

Viper turned his head, finding me, us, precisely on the mountain ridge, and yelled.

-Enough noise!

From below, Viper on the battlefield shouted to us standing atop the mountain.

-I don't care if it's unsightly! I don't care if you curse me for being unfair! Go on and blabber about cheating and all!

The Ghost Tribe Leader, revered by his subordinates, roared as if spitting blood.

-If it's to make these guys win—I'll sell out any principle!

His appearance was truly disgraceful, childish, and pathetic.

But above all, it was human.

"Hmm."

Moved by the Ghost Tribe Leader, Viper's sincere dedication, I adjusted my expression.

Stepping forward, I commanded.

"Chief Warrior."

"Ugor, family head."

Uburka knelt. His expression was also solemn.

"Advisor."

"Yes, family head."

Ester knelt on her left knee, waiting for the command.

Beside him sat Uburka, who had been called earlier, silently seated.

"....."

Seeing my daughter and son kneeling side by side, I nodded.

"The Ghost Tribe Leader declared he would disregard face and honor for those under his care. Then, for such a Ghost Tribe Leader, we too should give our all in response. It's only proper."

"I will entrust all my race points to the two of you. Use them as you wish to create as much military force as you desire."

I continued.

"Then, assign Uburka as the vanguard. And Advisor, command the main force to strike down the Ghost Tribe Leader and his companions."

"Shall we annihilate them?"

"The forces led by the Advisor are composed of martial arts masters, embodying the beginning and end of the Demonic Cult. They should handle even thousands of Ghost Tribe Leaders."

"That's sound reasoning."

After bowing, Ester stood up.

On her back was a massive greatsword.

[The Red Greatsword of the Demon King], a weapon worthy of being named someday.

"Then, I will act as instructed. The Earth Spirit Tribe won't refuse a 'friend's' help in such a situation."

Carrying the continent-destroying greatsword, Ester turned around.

"I will return the dead to where they belong. The Ghost Tribe Leader might criticize our actions, but there's no need to care. He should be thankful if we even curse him for his own pettiness."

Uburka looked slightly taken aback.

"Ugh... Sister? Or should I say elder sister? Contrary to appearances, you're quite tough?"

"Go, Chief Warrior. You are the vanguard alone."

"....."

"Use the time given by the family head's race points to prepare the warriors. Hold them off alone during that time. You can do it, right?"

Uburka chuckled lightly.

"That's a piece of cake."

"Then, show him."

Ester unleashed her greatsword.

Whoosh, the greatsword plunged into the ground.

With a mere motion, Ester lifted the greatsword, which seemed to require at least half a dozen men to handle, as easily as if wielding a wooden sword.

"Show precisely what the King of Death family is."

"Ugor. Ugor."

Uburka cracked his knuckles, pushing his lips forward.

"I was slightly resentful not being the eldest son and losing the succession battle to my elder sister... Ugor. Being good at warfare is a splendid trait. Being excellent at it is even more exhilarating. Let's see how my sister fares!"

Uburka raised his head and inhaled deeply three times, then turned to the sky.

He roared out loud.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' roars!]

-Grooooooooooar-

The battlefield instantly fell silent.

The confused Earth Spirit Tribe, the surviving Ghost Tribe warriors, and the thousands of incarnations of Viper, regardless of race or unit type, froze for a moment at the lion's roar echoing throughout the world.

"Now."

Facing the frozen battlefield, Ester aimed with her sword.

"Move."

Our family's first battle commenced.

Chapter 248: The Celestial Martial Guild Master (3)

---

What is a family?

To me, a family is not yet formed.

It's on the path towards becoming one.

Those who are not yet family gather, somehow form connections, desperately struggle to keep these connections from breaking, and each one of them takes on their [role].

As long as I am seen as the [Head Steward], no one will abandon me. As long as I fulfill my duties as the [Shadow], no one will abandon me. Still, still, still...

It's this desperation that drives us.

Someday, when I become someone's father, and someday, when that child becomes my child, we will desperately strive until then, which is why we are here today.

“Uburka.”

As the one who observes the efforts of all the children, I am called the family head.

“Ugor.”

After unleashing a mighty roar across the plains, Uburka, somewhat satisfied, turned to look at me. Hot breath escaped through the gaps in Uburka's fangs.

“The enemy is a top warrior from the tower, possessing cheat-like items. Therefore,”

“He's an enemy I don't even need to bother with.”

“That's right. Fight to your heart's content, in any way you wish, until you are fully satisfied.”

Uburka grinned.

“That’s the order I wanted! Family head! The daddy I love!”

Kwoong!

Uburka left the ground shaking as he surged towards the enemy, Kwoong, Kwoong. If the Ghost Tribe was born as iron horses and spears, Uburka was a tank and a battleship in himself.

Uburka alone achieved the charge that 9,000 Ghost Tribe soldiers had accomplished.

“Is there a warrior who dares to face me, Uburka?!”

Uburka bellowed. The surviving Ghost Tribe warriors gasped, dropping their spears and slipping.

“No one! Among the Ghost Tribe, there are no warriors! Ah, it makes sense! Those brats only have horns sticking out of their heads! Krahahaha!”

Laughing uproariously, Uburka looked like a giant from myths, and the Ghost Tribe was not ready to face such a myth today.

Thus, those on the path towards the Ghost Tribe confronted Uburka.

“Ghost Tribe's 12 Winged Generals! Assemble!”

Twelve heroes, incarnations of Viper, brandishing dual swords, charged at the giant. Having once died in the Burning Mansion Illusion, their bodies were severely damaged. However, they erupted with killing intent instead of blood from their wounds.

“We will stop you, giant!”

“We will kill you!”

“The Ghost Tribe has not lost yet! It's just a shitty crisis on the path to victory! Nothing has changed!”

Listening to the chatter of the 12 Winged Generals, Uburka snorted lightly. The snort, filled with Aura, was enough to fill the entire area.

“-----Weaklings-----.”

Uburka smirked, revealing his fangs.

As the giant grinned, his fangs looked so enormous that it resembled a scene of a demon smiling in myths. Even the Earth Spirit Tribe soldiers shivered.

“I am the Chief Warrior of the King of Death family!”

Uburka laughed.

“The King of Death family, the collectors of death laid before them! Where is death without despair, and where is death without resentment! Our family bears all that despair and resentment, hence we are the King of Death family! And only my family head is worthy to lead this family.”

Uburka slowly raised his axe.

“Those lesser than our despair, do not block us, just run away. Those who still stand against us despite being lesser than our resentment, be prepared. I am Uburka, the son and Chief Warrior of the King of Death family.”

Shiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiik!!

“This axe will be your despair!”

Kwaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaang!!

Uburka's mighty axe struck where the 12 Winged Generals stood. Wujijik! The axe blade that buried into the ground caused cracks and collapse.

Jjejejejeje, jjejejejejejejejejejejeje!!

Like a warrior staggered by a powerful blow, the formation of the dead instantly scattered.

Kwagaragararara...!

The place where the 12 Winged Generals stood firm like a fortress, caved in, quaked, and shattered like dry cookies. It was a monstrous feat achieved by a single swing of Uburka's axe.

The 12 Winged Generals tried to dodge but were blocked by Uburka's palm, only to be smashed into the ground. Those who attempted to flee crashed to the ground and then twitched, twitched, and finally lay still. Dead.

“Ugor.”

One shot. One kill.

Uburka had lightly crushed the formation created by Viper's cunning and schemes, as if it were children's toys.

But Viper did not give up.

“Gather!”

Viper was possessing the bodies of thousands of Ghost Tribe soldiers who had died in the Wandering Mansion of Flames.

And the benefit of a single person forming an army was that the scattered formation could be quickly reorganized.

“Charge!”

All incarnations of Viper raised their swords.

“Strike!”

Thousands of Vipers simultaneously swung their swords. Uburka snorted and lifted his huge axe to block it.

It was like a horde of locusts clashing with a single rhinoceros.

“Huhu.”

Ester laughed.

We watched Uburka's unrivaled performance from afar. Every time the Vipers hit the ground, the sound of Papak, Papak, echoed as if hailstones were carving the earth, and every time Uburka moved, Kung, Kwoong, the petals of early summer flowers shook and flowed towards the plains.

“At this rate, the Chief Warrior will monopolize all the merit.”

“Jealous?”

“No. Why would I be, when the family head himself advised me to fulfill my role as the elder sister?”

Ester made a sly expression.

Then, she snapped her fingers and called up the [Civilization Store].

+

[Divine Descent]

Rank: A

Effect: The player personally obtains a physical body and descends.

Cost: 10,000 race points

*However, the effect only lasts for 5 minutes.

+

"I think I should at least maintain my dignity as the elder sister."

"....."

Indeed. She plans to descend directly, not just obtain an incarnation.

I did say to use all the race points as needed, but she instantly picked an item with terrible cost-effectiveness, which even Yoo Soo-Ha rarely used in the old times.

Slightly impressed, I said, "You really do read my mind."

Ester laughed again.

“What use would an advisor be if they can’t read the family head’s mind?”

I also smiled.

“Alright. If my daughter and son want to compete over who is better, I have no reason to refuse. Okay. I grant permission. Go and enjoy to your heart's content.”

“Thank you, family head!”

Ester hugged my right arm tightly and then, as if embarrassed, quickly moved away using levitation.

“Huhu.”

I chuckled a bit at the childish antics of my eldest daughter and younger son.

“Funny, isn’t it?”

Silvia Evanair, who had been standing silently behind, spoke with an incredulous tone.

“Really now. Cheating mixed with more cheating, dancing together. Well, it was a bit funny when the advisor was ranting about cheating earlier. Aren’t you the original king of exploiting loopholes in the rules?”

"I can't argue with that."

"Congratulations, truly. A spectacular debut. The King of Death family is now undoubtedly the strongest guild in the tower. The King of Death will practically rule this tower. But..."

"But all that is unimportant."

"....."

"That’s what you want to say, isn’t it, Silvia Evanair?"

I wrapped my arms around Silvia. The Lady was so small that she fit entirely in one arm.

Usually, Silvia would have been loud with remarks like, [What are you doing!] or [I'll tell Lady Raviel on you!], but now, she was silent.

“...Family head.”

Held in my embrace, Silvia Evanair asked in a fearful voice.

“What do you wish for in this war...?”

“There is only one thing I can show people, always and everywhere.”

I grabbed my sword.

“That there are higher places in this world.”

“.....”

“Silvia, use Divine Descent.”

“What?”

“Use it.”

Hesitantly following my words, Silvia activated the skill.

10,000 race points were spent, and Silvia descended in a physical body.

For the next 5 minutes.

“Hold on tight.”

“Eh? Wa-Wait. Kim Gong-Ja, no, family head. I’m feeling really uneasy right now. We’re about to do something ridiculously reckless, aren’t we? Like, we’re at the peak of a mountaintop with its summit sheared off. What if some madman decides to jump? Wouldn’t that be a brilliant suicide attempt, plummeting from the sky to the ground? Tell me that’s not what you’re planning, family head, Kim Gong-Ja, please say it isn’t so, you son of a b----.”

And I.

Holding tightly onto Silvia Evanair, my Head Steward wrapped in my cloak.

Leaped off the mountaintop.

We flew.

Soaring like a bird with giant wings towards the sheer cliff that was once a mountaintop.

“Aaaaaaaaaah!!!”

Silvia, entangled in my cloak, screamed in terror. Despite her desperate squirming and resistance, it was in vain.

“You're in the sky now. Even if you run, you're just falling from the sky, right?”

“Aaaaaaaaaah!!!”

“Just do as I say. If you fall while in Divine Descent, there go 10,000 points.”

“Demon! You’re not just a family head; I have served a devil! Oh, my life! My poor Silvia! Serving Satan himself would have been better than this!”

“You’re skilled in Aura, Head Steward.”

“Yes, yes! Of course, I am, but what does Aura matter in this situation!”

“Release your Aura. Don’t overthink it. Just towards the sky, fly, feel the wind, and scatter your Aura.”

"What the....."

“Hurry. I’ll take care of the rest.”

"....."

A small head moved inside my cloak.

Though hidden by the cloak, I felt the unmistakable sensation of Silvia nodding.

"Hm."

And that was enough consent for me.

"Silvia, my Head Steward."

"Yes, family head."

"Remember the first ball you saw in your childhood?"

"How could I forget that damned place?"

"Then, recall it."

I prepared my Aura.

"While recalling, just spread your Aura in all directions."

At that moment.

“Ah.....”

A sigh of admiration escaped from beneath the thick cloak.

Goldencup’s Aura was golden.

Radiant and splendid, promising the glory of childhood. As Silvia in Divine Descent opened her Aura while soaring in the sky, it became millions of golden petals fluttering down to the plains.

Slowly.

Golden maple leaves slid down to the plains. Thump, golden ginkgo leaves rolled on the ground. Golden hydrangeas, buds, lilacs, orchids, roses, lilies, peonies – all the flowers beloved by ladies shimmered as they drifted to the ground.

Demonic Formation Art.

Special Method.

Chaotic Golden Flower Garden.

"....."

This was the yearning Silvia Evanair held in her childhood.

Stunned, Silvia Evanair gazed down at the garden her Aura had created. She had forgotten she was still leisurely flying in the sky, simply looking down at the landscape formed by her life.

"Family head, you..."

"I think it's beautiful."

I said.

"We can all fail. Make mistakes we shouldn't make. But even so, when we come back and reflect, the origin of your life was so beautiful."

"Look."

I pointed below.

A Ghost Tribe warrior who had survived the Wandering Mansion of Flames and was not possessed by Viper carefully picked a golden flower. Treating it as a precious treasure, he hurriedly turned to flee before anyone else could see him.

There were not many who did this. The meaning of this battle, the history of this war, the revived corpses, and the descended myths – all the absurdity and irrationality aside, captivated by the unexpected beauty, lives chose to abandon everything they had and simply run away.

“You are not a nobody, Silvia Evanair.”

"....."

"You are my Head Steward."

Thump.

Our long flight ended, and we landed on the ground.

It was the mountaintop that Uburka had split and turned into a battlefield, where the forces of Viper and the Ghost Tribe had passed through.

Standing on each peak of the beautifully split mountaintop, we looked around.

“You asked what I want, Head Steward.”

“.....Yes.”

“To show people, just as humans, how much they can achieve.”

The plains were a sea of golden petals, carved by Aura.

There, the Ghost Tribe soldiers possessed by Viper fought valiantly. But they were shattered by Uburka’s axe and cut down by Ester’s swordplay.

As the already dead soldiers faced death once more, blood splattered, and lovely golden roses were stained.

“Right here...”

Kim Yul slowly spoke.

“This has become another world.”

Indeed.

The purpose of the Demonic Formation Art was never to annihilate the enemy.

It was the most trivial of all goals, hardly worth mentioning.

“Is this the scene you wish for, family head?”

“Yes.”

Showing people a different world.

A different scenery, a different spectacle, thus different dreams.

“The struggle for supremacy between the Earth Spirit Tribe and Ghost Tribe. The pride of the race. The wounds. All that weighs heavily on your heart. The grudges. The grief. I understand all of it.”

But.

“Nevertheless, there is so much more in the world.”

I looked at a Ghost Tribe warrior embracing a golden rose and fleeing into the distance.

“I don’t know that Ghost Tribe warrior, but still, I imagine a life for him.”

Here, someone became a soldier because it felt natural.

No one allowed questioning, no one prepared them for questioning. They accepted it as their path, like a fish blending into the flow of a great river.

But one day, on a brilliant day, if a golden rose, seemingly otherworldly, gently falls in front of that someone.

“That would be just a coincidence, but the moment they decide to flee with the petal, it becomes fate. Now, that person is no longer a soldier. No longer a despondent Ghost Tribe warrior stained black by repeated defeats. He’s simply an artist who was captivated by a golden rose, now ready to wield a carving knife or brush. He has finally found his destiny.”

I turned back.

Silvia looked dazed, gazing at the golden plains and the deserter fleeing from them, and finally, at my face.

Kim Yul had been watching me all along.

“There is no such thing as a predetermined destiny.”

"....."

“Just a bit of coincidence, a moment of miracle, and temptation enough for a person to live as a person is created. We don’t long for life when it feels like destiny, but when life tempts us. Do you understand, Shadow? We will throw the temptation of [wanting to live a little longer] to everyone who climbs this tower.”

“.....Yes.”

Kim Yul nodded.

“There is no hypocrisy or falsehood in the family head's words. At least, I know that.”

I extended my hand towards Kim Yul, who smoothly took it as if expecting it.

“Already, family head, you have made me want to live a little more.”

Kim Yul used Divine Descent.

Our Auras, mingling from my hand and Kim Yul's, flowed out.

Demonic Formation Art.

Special Method.

Forged Dessert Beneath the Roof.

The wind blew.

Kim Yul's Aura was like the wind. It was the breeze skimming the rooftop of the school, touching the grains of sand on the sports field. Looking down, the grass of the plains had already turned into ancient grains of sand. The wind, carrying the scent of dying sand, blew forlornly.

“Yes.”

Kim Yul nodded.

Just like when he had climbed to the rooftop and looked down at the school playground – the same as that time, Kim Yul stood atop the torn mountaintop, gazing down at the sandy plains.

“I wanted to bury my head in that fake desert and die.”

"....."

“When I looked up from the rooftop, everything below seemed like a desert. There might be a spring somewhere to quench someone's parched throat. I didn't know if there was an oasis. But the scarce water was bound to evaporate soon, and I didn't want to deal with the sight of millions of hungry ghosts fighting over the last few drops.”

Kim Yul smiled.

“So, I gave up.”

"....."

“But even a rotten desert can be beautiful with rolling petals.”

Amidst the landscape of the Demonic Formation created by me and Kim Yul, Silvia Evanair's golden petals were still tumbling in the wind.

It was a breathtakingly stunning sight.

Endless wind blew across the sandy desert, and golden roses, lilies, hydrangeas, chrysanthemums, and daffodils rolled in a thousand directions or floated gently in the wind.

"....."

Kim Yul did not cease his smile.

He whispered softly.

"If my life was like a dry fake desert, then all I needed to do was wait for a few petals to enter my desert. I didn't realize this in my youth. That a vast desert can entice a single flower, and a single flower can entice a vast desert, I didn't know back then."

Kim Yul turned to me with a smile.

"Thank you, family head."

"....."

“Already, your flowery words and the Head Steward's petals have entered my desert, making it beautiful and happy.”

At that moment.

Boom!

Where Uburka and Ester fought, where the battleground was covered in Goldencup's golden petals and Kim Yul's wilderness.

On the battlefield, the possessed bodies of Viper one by one scattered their glowing Auras.

“Why.....”

Among them, one with a particularly intense Aura stood out.

His hair was disheveled. His horn was broken, signifying he was a Ghost Tribe warrior who had already been defeated once. His body was small and emaciated, clearly a warrior who had joined this battlefield driven by sheer willpower and venom.

"Why.....!"

Viper, like a haunting guardian spirit, loomed behind the warrior.

In fury.

"Why, the children under my care...!"

Viper's possessed bodies all stomped their feet at once. Boom! The corpses, already dead twice and no longer fit for possession, were hurled away.

"Then and now, King of Death...! Why! Why can't my children be like those under your care..."

Viper's eyes blazed with fire. A wrath beyond venom, his Aura took on a fierce form, and his eyes glowed with a deep purple light.

Somewhere in a snowy field, I had seen this scene before.

‘Don't get involved.’

The same look my master, who wasn't yet my master at that time, had shown.

It wasn't difficult to guess why. The very act of [Multiple Possession] must be a tremendous drain on mental strength. Splitting oneself into hundreds, thousands, and embedding into possessed bodies to control them. It was never a sane thing to do.

If it weren't for someone of Viper's martial caliber, they would have gone mad long ago.

“Then too! Even then, King of Death! Back then as well...”

What time period was Viper referring to?

I wanted to ask, but it seemed the chance to get a coherent answer had long vanished. The Aura raged, beginning to envelop Viper and his group.

“Worry not.”

Suddenly, someone took my hand.

“All will be well.”

It was Ester.

When had she returned to my side?

Ester, with a gentle smile as if saying not to worry, firmly gripped my hand.

“A comrade of family head’s, isn’t he?”

"....."

“Strike him, and tell him to come back to her senses. Family head. As you always have.”

Yes.

“That’s what I should do.”

I nodded.

Our palms touched, and the Aura began to resonate. Ester had watched me learn the Demonic Heavenly God Art from start to finish, closer than anyone. In terms of understanding the Demonic Heavenly God Art, few among my followers could match Ester.

Was that why?

Drip,

Drip-drop, drip... drip...

Drip-drop, drip-drip-drip, drop...

Rain.

On the battlefield, on the plains, on the golden rose petals swirling in the wind, on the wind rolling the sand, in the fake desert where thousands of flower petals flowed, red rain fell.

Autumn rain.

Demonic Formation Art.

Special Method.

Graceful Rain of Lamenting Heavens.

It rained.

Volume 11 – Chapters 249-273

Chapter 249:

Reversal (1)

---

It was raining that day.

"Ha. How on earth does it rain inside the tower?"

Viper grumbled as he walked through the dimly lit street. A few streetlamps were erected haphazardly, resembling a row of bean sprouts carelessly abandoned by a primary school student. Some of them were even broken.

"Damn it."

Glancing at a shattered streetlamp, Viper narrowed his one eye.

"The state of this tower is really going downhill."

The early days of the tower.

A time when infrastructure was still unestablished.

Buildings frequently experienced blackouts, and with no traffic lights or crosswalks, various crimes were rampant on the streets.

Fed up with this, Sword Saint declared he would create a [Vigilante Corps]... But well, could it really be successful? Viper was skeptical.

This place was a gathering spot for trash and madmen.

"Ah! The Celestial Martial Guild Master!"

Then, the voice of a representative among these madmen reached him from behind.

Reluctantly turning around, considering the social status of this madman, Viper had little choice.

"...What?"

"Ah. It is indeed the Celestial Martial Guild Master!"

A smile that seemed to scatter gold dust.

Turning around, a child resembling an angel stood amidst the trash-filled street. The child, who appeared never to have faced any hardship, smiled radiantly, enhancing his fresh golden hair that seemed just washed.

"Heretic Inquisitor."

Viper knew the name of this precarious being.

"What brings you out in the rain to call for me?"

"Ahaha, so stern! I've come because of advice from the Black Dragon Witch. She told me to talk to you in a public place!"

Viper frowned.

"What do you mean? Like having a chat with you in the middle of this rain, letting people around us overhear, to give them the impression that [relations between Celestial Martial Clan and the Temple of All Gods are cordial]?"

"Oho, indeed! That must be the reason!"

"You came without knowing? And followed her orders so obediently."

"I'm still learning. And I didn't have many other options! Hmm, to be faithful to that purpose, it would be more effective to go to a café and shelter from the rain together!"

Viper felt a twitch in his nose.

'Sure enough, we're incompatible.'

Something, instinctively, was [incompatible] between him and this creature.

They exchanged words, leading the other to a further refined conclusion. Yet, Viper never felt like they had [exchanged words]. On the contrary, it was the opposite. It felt like they had selectively communicated in alien languages, understanding nothing of each other.

"Hmm. A café."

"Yes, it's a nice café!"

Again.

Even when simply mentioning a [café], a sense of alienation was felt.

Was this being really using the word café in the same sense as him? Understanding it? Could a parrot, memorizing patterns of conversation and responding to humans, truly be considered communicating?

"....."

Viper glanced at the Heretic Inquisitor's eyes with his remaining one.

In the Inquisitor's blue eyes, he was not reflected at all. Those blue eyes seemed only made to reflect the sky.

Then, speaking to [this guy] and [talking to the sky] were hardly different. In either case, the conversation wouldn't get through.

If the desire to converse with gods, with whom communication is impossible, gave birth to religion, then this guy being the head of a religion would be the height of irony.

"Hey, religious nut."

"Yes, swordsman!"

"Master of the Temple."

"Yes, Celestial Martial Guild Master!"

"Heretic Inquisitor."

"Yes, Viper!"

"Right."

Viper spoke to the rain-soaked sky.

"Right. Let's go to a café."

It was raining that day.

---

The rain was falling.

"King of Death—!"

A drenched roar echoed. The Celestial Martial Guild Master, known as Viper, using the body of a one-horned noble warrior, spread his red eyes wide.

The color red was not just in his eyes. Disheveled hair. The broken horn. Muscles on his chest and elongated nails. Every part of him was soaked in red rain. As red dyed his body, Viper's possessed forms twisted in agony.

“Kaaaah!”

It was the aura from the Demonic Formations Art that Ester and I had unfolded.

Graceful Rain of Lamenting Heavens.

The autumn rain scattered by Ester when she was the Demon King. Her resentment and hostility turned into countless raindrops. Viper, who fought in multiple bodies, was struck by the red downpour.

"Ha, hooo... Haha... Ahahaha!"

One by one, the possessed bodies fell, and the one-horned warrior laughed. He stood up from a heap of his kin's corpses. He stepped on, kicked, and trampled them, carving a path for himself to move.

That figure was indeed a venomous snake.

The warrior, no, Viper, chuckled softly. Redder than the rain, his eyes were filled with intense bloodlust. A clear sign of disharmony. Coated in a veil of blood, Viper licked the rainwater dripping down his face as if it were refreshing water.

"Will you try to stop me, King of Death?"

"Yes."

I replied.

"I intend to stop you, Celestial Martial Guild Master."

"Why!"

"I was told this by one of the kids I look after."

I briefly glanced at the leader of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

"If Uburka blows you away, that's Uburka's victory, not theirs."

"Oh."

"In the same way, if you win this situation by throwing a tantrum, that would be your victory, not your tribe's."

"Uwahaha."

The madman engulfed in disharmony roared in the rain.

"Indeed, just like the tribe you lead. I have no words against such correct and upright logic."

"....."

"Ah, it's infuriating... Yes. That's right. I'm such a damn person."

"Celestial Martial Guild Master,"

"How did you manage to raise those kids so well and upright, damn it!"

Crackle-

Electricity sparked beneath Viper's feet. In response, lightning struck down from the rainy sky. Kwaah! The earth shook with the turmoil of aura. Raindrops on the ground splashed, and those adorning the sky evaporated in the lightning.

"Damn it!"

Electricity flowed in the puddles on the ground. Electrified raindrops twisted in all directions. Viper stood firmly in the middle of the electrified pool.

"My kids!"

Mysteriously, the color of the electricity and lightning was purple.

"Why do they have to suffer because of someone like me!"

"....."

"Eh? King of Death!!"

Viper yelled, pulling down the lightning from the sky.

---

It was raining that day.

"There's no need to kill."

In front of a cooling corpse in a dark alley, Viper muttered.

"Why do you kill? Is it necessary? Heretic Inquisitor, you're really something. But why do you always have to..."

"Um, well."

With his hands stained in blood, the Heretic Inquisitor tilted his head.

Whether the raining sky or the Inquisitor answered, Viper couldn't tell.

"It's efficient!"

"....."

"Corpses don't talk. They don't act. Hence, they neither break promises nor become future threats! Therefore, it's best to kill those who show enmity when you can!"

As the days of rain increased, time seemed to flow twice as fast.

In the now better-lit streets with more streetlamps, the broken deity's child, who had repeatedly turned people into part of the street, eventually spoke with a chin propped in boredom.

"Celestial Martial Guild Master."

"....."

"I know you're trying to 'fix' me."

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly.

"Thanks to your efforts, the two of us have become close enough to order coffee for each other, beyond just showing off the friendship between our two guilds."

"....."

"But, that's as far as it goes."

The Heretic Inquisitor looked at Viper.

In his sky-like eyes, neither the corpse he had just created nor Viper himself seemed to be reflected.

"You, like everyone else, can only make use of me. You cannot change my fundamental principles."

Old cars raced down the street.

These cars, belonging in an antique shop, still roamed actively in Babylon. Beep! Beep! A sound like a breathless lung echoed from somewhere.

"Why?"

"Because you can't take responsibility for me."

The words aimed in the rain were cruelly pure.

"I was born this way. I have lived like this. There is no other life possible for me, and your attempts to instill a different way of life in me are doomed to fail, despite all your good intentions."

A broken streetlamp fell under the pressure of the rain.

Even amidst this, the Heretic Inquisitor, with arms spread wide, laughed brightly.

"But, Celestial Martial Guild Master. Is that really such a bad thing?"

"I categorize anyone who tries to kill me for not being able to take responsibility for me as an enemy. Unfortunately, 99 percent of this world is made up of enemies! In that regard, you're a rare case, Celestial Martial Guild Master. Even if you had the chance, you probably wouldn't kill me!"

Lightning struck.

Amidst the fierce rain, the lightning appeared purple. Startled by the lightning, a car nearby sped through a large puddle. Like a giant splash created by an invisible hand, water sprayed up, drenching them both.

"In a way, the two of us are friends and colleagues."

"Isn't that enough?"

It wasn't enough.

But if that was the best they could achieve, they had to be content.

That's what he thought.

He had thought.

---

Lightning struck on a rainy day.

Every aura has a different color. But it's not just the color that's different. Even the same red aura could mean [blood] or [roses]. The image harbored in the aura user's heart, the deep-seated imagery, defines the aura.

My aura resembled blood or flames.

And the sixth-ranked Hunter, Viper, seemed to have harbored [rotten purple lightning] in his heart.

“...How could I know that?”

I picked up a sword from a nearby corpse.

“Why wouldn't I know, you brat!”

Viper charged.

As fast as lightning, with his aura charged with disharmony, Viper was incredibly fast. It was almost impossible to track his movements with eyes. In just a moment, Viper's figure flashed past me.

Swoosh!

“Damn it,”

Blood spurted from my shoulder. An odd fast sword strike. If it had gone a bit deeper, I might have lost my left arm, but I was angry for a different reason.

“Why the hell are you acting like a brat!? Aren't you ashamed before a much younger junior!?”

Before I regressed, Celestial Martial Guild Master was a big shot, too high for me to even look up to.

Even after discovering he was the emperor of light novels with a silly temperament, fundamentally, I respected this man.

Even considering he was in disharmony and unable to think clearly, I couldn't stand to see such a man behaving so disgracefully.

“Junior? Ha. Where would you find a junior like you!”

Viper's voice came from all directions. He was moving ceaselessly.

In a fraction of a second, he was already in front of me. I used aura to extend my sense of time as much as possible. In the endlessly stretched time, Viper moved to strike my abdomen, chin, and head.

Fatal blows.

Each strike was imbued with the intent to kill me.

I dodged his strikes by moving my feet, pushing with my hands, and twisting my waist.

“Why!”

Viper didn't stop.

Before the sound of his footsteps faded, he appeared on the other side. He swung his sword. I barely avoided his strike by pushing my aura to its limit.

“King of Death! Why you!”

In the moment I avoided the strike.

Our eyes met. His were ablaze with venom. It made me wonder if this is how a jar of venomous snakes would look, writhing within.

His eyes shimmered in a dark red color, like a jar of poison.

“Why is only you, making others happy!”

“What are you talking about all of a sudden,”

“You inherited the Martial Arts of Demonic Heaven!”

That was unexpected for me.

Frozen for a moment, Viper shouted as if coughing up blood.

“You provided the Heavenly Demon with her greatest moments! You gave her gifts. Despite being devoured by the pain of death, the Heavenly Demon could genuinely smile because of the gifts you gave!”

He was a comrade who had entered the [Veritable Records of the Heavenly Demon] with me.

I fought on the side of the Demonic Cult, and Viper on the orthodox side.

I revered the Heavenly Demon as my master, and Viper had the Head of the Martial Alliance as his master.

“Why!”

The comrade who shared winter with me yelled.

“Why couldn't the Head of the Alliance do the same!”

"....."

His cry had the power to momentarily stop me in my tracks.

Blood splattered from my cheek as I was struck by Viper's aura, but I couldn't help but stand still.

“Namgung Woon, my gramps, also fought desperately! To become a human who could rival the Heavenly Demon... he dedicated his life to training! To me, the Head of the Martial Alliance seems more noble! But why... why did he have to find his late happiness in taking care of clueless fools rather than meeting such an end...”

Viper's aura darkened further.

The purple aura rose from his shoulders, slowly rippling, and eventually stretched into the air.

“Is it my fault?”

"....."

"Is that also my fault? Did I fail to understand the Head of the Martial Alliance deeper, just like I couldn't properly take care of these guys... Why do I..."

Viper was still looking down.

But as quiet as his voice became, the amount of aura emanating from his whole body was massive. Now, Viper's aura hung on his back, moving like wriggling tentacles.

Silence.

The fight between the Celestial Martial and the King of Death Family was reaching a conclusion.

Every time Kim Yul swung his sword, a couple of possessed bodies died. Each time Uburka chopped with his axe, half a dozen bodies were severed. When Ester swung her red greatsword, a line of possessed bodies attempting a counterattack evaporated in an instant.

"....."

Only Viper's own screams were heard.

The deeper the defeat, the deeper the silence grew.

“King of Death...”

“Yes, Celestial Martial Guild Master.”

“Why me...”

And then.

Viper slowly raised his head.

Our eyes met.

His eyes were writhing in pure darkness, and I realized.

‘Ah.’

Only after locking eyes with him did I fully understand. I grasped the meaning behind Viper's eyes and the vibration in his voice. Maybe it was because I, more than anyone, could deeply understand it.

Because it was the same look and voice I had once harbored.

My first wish. The resentment I couldn't fulfill until my first death. My desire and essence to swing my sword as I pleased, walking only the paths I wanted, breathing clean air on high mountains, living as I wanted.

The first skill I acquired.

[I Want to Become Just Like You].

The moment I looked into Viper's eyes, I acutely understood the name of the venom within them.

“Me too.”

Viper gritted his teeth.

If there was a soul, it would be tearing out from his molars right now.

“I, too, wanted to be someone like you.”

Indeed.

At some point, I had already become that kind of existence to others.

Chapter 250:

Reversal (2)

---

I had become an object of envy.

"....."

No, this isn't simply an emotion that can be expressed as 'envy.'

Jealousy. Yes, jealousy best describes that bubbling loneliness.

'It's not the first time.'

Yes, it's not the first time.

Hunters I didn't know. Those who couldn't leave the first floor, waiting day after day, wondering when their skills would awaken.

To countless others, [King of Death Kim Gong-Ja] is already an object of jealousy.

'I knew that.'

I quite enjoyed the overwhelming attention like a tidal wave – the articles praising me, voices seeking autographs, the whispers pointing at me on the streets.

'But.....'

Yes, but.

'Even you.'

I slowly looked at Viper.

'Even someone like you, is jealous of me.'

Who is Viper?

The kind of casual conversations and jokes we exchanged now would have been [impossible] to the me of the past, to the point of shock.

'My idols in my heart.'

To me, who was a fan of the top hunters, they were no different from idols.

Even though the idol group's leader, Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha, retired due to unfortunate events and was preparing to become a trainee again, Viper was still one of my idols.

And there he was, boiling with aura in all directions, crying out in jealousy of me.

"Ah,"

Facing that heart directly in front of me.

"Ahahaha, Ahahahaha!"

I couldn't help but laugh out loud.

"Ahahahaha, ah, ahahahaha!"

A plain under the moonlight.

The vegetation crumbled in the sand desert, the fine sand colors undulating here and there in the wind. Millions of rose petals rolled in the valleys and hills of the sand desert.

And then, it rained.

The rain of autumn.

Red rain poured from all sides. It was a downpour. The sand desert soaked in water, the lines of the valleys glistening. The rose petals, drenched in raindrops, became much fresher.

And so, the world, the sand desert, came to life with the sound of falling rain and flowing water, and the golden petals embroidered the surface, creating the illusion that something sacred was sleeping there.

An oasis created in the middle of the desert.

When the scenery around us became an oasis, I finally stopped laughing.

"Ahaha...ha, ha.....ahaha."

Viper glared at me.

"You laughed?"

With my face wet from the rain, I nodded.

"Yes. I feel like I've laughed all I will for the year right here."

"You brat!"

Swoosh!

Viper, making use of his lightning-fast specialty, tried to decapitate me in one go.

But it was in vain. Where he stepped to take his stance, there were grains of sand from Kim Yul. In the air he passed through to fly at me, there were petals from Silvia.

Above all, no matter what stance he took, he was already soaked in Ester's rain.

"I'm sorry, Celestial Martial Guild Master."

As if I had anticipated exactly how and where he would attack, I countered Viper's strike.

"Because I was strong, I could fully serve my master? Because I was strong, I could raise children strongly? You're right. But... you seem to be misunderstanding something, Celestial Martial Guild Master."

"A misunderstanding...?"

“I wasn’t strong from the beginning.”

I grabbed a short spear rolling on the ground. Then, gathering and compressing aura, I shot the glowing red spear.

Towards Viper.

"Kuk...!"

Viper desperately rolled to avoid my attack. Shashashak! The sharp spear tore through petals and deeply burrowed into the desert sand.

Raindrops dripped from the handle of the spear, falling drop by drop.

Viper stood up, bleeding. He hadn’t completely avoided the spear I fired, and his body was already a mess.

“Damn...! What are you saying!”

“Exactly what I said, I wasn’t strong from the beginning.”

I created three aura spears. A few petals, grains of sand, drops of rain gathered and quickly focused into the form of deep red spears. The three spears circled in the air, waiting for my command.

“Even this trickery I’m doing right now.”

I lightly gestured, sending the spears towards Viper.

“Kuheeeeuuk!?”

Blood splattered.

“Really, it’s surprisingly recent. Without the support of Ester, Silvia, Kim Yul, and my vassals, I couldn’t waste aura like this.”

Viper successfully avoided two of the three spears. But that was my intention.

The last aura spear, hitting Viper’s shoulder, penetrated his flesh. He screamed and fell.

“It wasn’t because I was strong from the beginning that I defeated the Demon King of Autumn Rain. It wasn’t because I was strong from the beginning that I could reassure and comfort my master, definitely not.”

When I heard Viper’s words, I remembered when I first met my master.

So, I laughed.

Back then, I practically begged to be acknowledged as an outer disciple by my master.

My master said, [Let’s see if you qualify to be a direct disciple], and took me somewhere, where a pit swarming with martial arts zombies was dug.

The so-called hunger training of Demonic Heavenly God Art. A training course for realizing the Sword of Starving Death.

-What are you hesitating for? Fall into hell already.

As I was being battered by the zombies, my master said.

-Remember the longest time you've ever starved.

-The longest was about three to four days...

-What? Three to four days?

My master's reaction to my answer was incredulous.

-Oh dear. Oh. Tsk tsk tsk. We're not on the same page.

-Okay, it's my fault! I had some expectations, but as expected, you're just all talk.

And then my master... left me behind.

I had been abandoned in the pit, struggling and fighting fiercely, and he left me without a second glance.

-Heavenly Demon! Heavenly Demon!? Please wait a moment! Seriously, being starved isn't an achievement! How can it be that I can't learn martial arts because of that!? What!? This is absurd...

In the moment of my swearing, I was devoured by a martial arts zombie.

"Ahahaha...."

It was the memory of that time that made me burst into laughter.

My master, so cold and noble.

It was so hard to offer even a single flower to you.

And now, there are people who, out of jealousy, are striving to beat me, trying everything to surpass me. What should I do about this?

My master must have also received a lot of jealousy and envy during their lifetime. I wonder how you would have acted then. It's a bit regrettable that I can't ask you these questions now, and I can't hear your voice.

"Celestial Martial Guild Master... It wasn't because I was strong from the beginning that I achieved everything."

"....."

"It was simply that I was allowed a little more time than others."

Viper was panting heavily, looking up at me.

Of course, he didn't understand my words.

'So different from me.'

Ah, I understood Viper's heart.

I could understand it completely, without any falsehood or misunderstanding.

Not only because I had once been in a position where I envied others.

'Because I heard it.'

Since the moment Viper swung his sword at me and cried out.

Images of Viper and the Heretic Inquisitor from times I had never met and yet to meet flickered in my mind, like mirages.

Not just their appearances but even their voices.

-I know you are trying to 'fix' me.

-Because.

-You cannot take responsibility for me.

I looked at Viper.

He was still looking up at me. Under his dark, swarming eyes, his thick lips were tightly shut.

But...

-We could be friends and colleagues.

-Isn't that enough?

Even now, I could hear the voices clustered in Viper's heart.

It wasn't the awakening of a new skill. My skill list was still filled only with footsteps proving my life. It wasn't a sudden inspiration to read people's inner thoughts, it was simply.

‘The remnants left by the Tower Master.’

The aftermath of being killed by the Tower Master and witnessing her trauma.

Jaa Soo-Jeong, the master of this tower, embraces all the misfortunes and miseries of life. The moments of their suffering are all witnessed and remembered by the god. Countless, perhaps innumerable, humans' [traumas] are transplanted into the Tower Master.

As much as they suffer, the Tower Master suffers too.

When they scream, the Tower Master screams along.

Thus, the trauma of all people becomes the Tower Master's trauma.

‘The moment I saw the Tower Master's trauma... Did I also start to see the trauma of everyone dwelling in this tower?’

An overwhelming amount of memories, almost impossible for one person to bear.

Therefore, I usually don't remember, can't recall, and live on having forgotten.

‘But when Viper cries out with his past hatred like now...’

It [starts to become audible] to me.

‘Just like when I see the trauma of those who killed me.’

Scenes the Tower Master witnessed, the wounds he implanted in his heart.

Whether it was truly something that happened in the [past] of this world, or something Jaa Soo-Jeong intervened in and created, or perhaps something that will occur in some [future], I wasn't sure.

The Semi-Divine Eye.

I had opened my eyes to it.

“.....Ha.”

I let out a hollow laugh again.

This is the world the Tower Master sees.

Just by encountering people, occasionally, I could hear their screams and cries; it made me sad, wondering for whom such a life is meant.

"What have you been laughing at!"

I shook my head to clear my thoughts.

Then, I looked down at the human before me.

"Celestial Martial Guild Master... Do you want to beat me?"

Viper hesitated at the sudden question.

I continued without concern.

"Fair and square. Just you and me, one-on-one, without anything else, just to beat me up?"

Viper made a sound.

"What if that was the case..."

Blood gushed from Viper's mouth.

"Then what will you do...!"

I didn't avoid his blood.

Since Viper was lying down and I was looking down at him, a few drops of blood from his mouth splattered on my cheek.

“I’ll give you a chance.”

Like I didn’t wipe away the rain, I didn’t wipe off the blood either.

“Again, I wasn’t strong from the beginning. Time. I needed a lot of time. During that time, the children I mingled with, the children I took in, became my family.”

I grabbed the energy spear stuck in his shoulder and pulled it out. Cough! Once again, Viper’s body writhed and blood spurted.

“And there is a way to buy a lot of time for the Celestial Martial Guild Master.”

I slowly opened my lips.

“200 years, 6 months and 21 days.”

“.....?”

“That’s the time the Heretic Inquisitor endured alone on the 31st floor.”

Silence.

For a brief moment, it seemed Viper didn’t understand what I said. But slowly, his eyes widened. Drip. Raindrops from the sky flowed down my hair onto Viper's body. Drip, a few drops fell before Viper finally spoke.

“You mean, that is... so...”

“Yes.”

I nodded.

“Whether it takes 200 years or 300 years, endure time alone in this stage like the Heretic Inquisitor. Train and practice over centuries. Gather people.”

"....."

"And then challenge me again, Celestial Martial Guild Master."

Centuries.

A closed-door training trapped by time, not space.

That was the method I suggested to Viper.

Chapter 251:

Reversal (3)

---

Viper slowly opened his eyes.

Black liquid dripped from his eyes, and the intense heat that had plagued his face subsided. I could tell his reason was gradually awakening from being ensnared in delusion.

"To tell me to go into seclusion..."

"More precisely, it's not about closing yourself off in seclusion but being confined to this stage, this world. So it should be called 'Closed Realm Training.' To take an entire world as your training ground, there's no more luxurious or lavish training than that."

I smiled.

"Jealous of me, you say? Ah, I must've grown too much without realizing it. Me. How the people by my side feel, I should have paid more attention to that... How lacking I am as a person. Such a bad person... Did you expect me to look at the Celestial Martial Guild Master with a pitiful expression in this manner?"

"....."

"I am feeling absolutely fantastic right now!"

I laughed out loud, so heartily that during my laughter, petals from Silvia's flowers stuck to my lips, and tears from Ester entered my mouth. Nonetheless, I didn't mind and continued to laugh heartily.

"Being the object of jealousy, Celestial Martial Guild Master, really makes me feel so good. Ah, ah, I must've been born into this world to experience this. To think that my purpose in life is just to make everyone jealous of me, it feels just... ecstatic."

"You..."

"I mean it."

At that moment, a spear flew from the pile of corpses opposite us.

With a flick of my hand, I disrupted the trajectory of the spear, sending it off course. Thud! Simultaneously, Viper's possessed body charged at me, springing from the pile of corpses.

"Hraaaaaah!!"

Though small in stature, he wielded a great sword. Was this Viper's hidden trump card? Buried in that pile of corpses, waiting for a moment of vulnerability to strike, even if just once.

"Celestial Martial Guild Master. Or should I say, Mr. Viper."

I stamped my foot.

The ground in this vicinity turned into sand, making a rustling sound under Kim Yul's control.

"Why are you so persistent?"

I slashed the ground with my sword.

Whoooooosh-

Simultaneously, right where Viper's possessed body was charging, sand holes started to appear. He tried to backpedal in surprise, but it was too late. More sand holes appeared there. Before he could escape, the sand holes swallowed his toes, calves, thighs, torso, and finally, his head.

"Do you see?"

Resting my hand on Kim Yul's shoulder, I looked at Viper's possessed body.

"Whether it's twelve wings of the Ghost Tribe or thirty-six thousand, no, even the entire Ghost Tribe turned into clones and fought, you can't beat me now."

"....."

"Shall we fight like this? What do you say? Throwing away all honor and driving the Ghost Tribe to extinction? Anyway, if we lose the fight, we haven't lost our pride, so it's okay... A funeral where everyone says it's okay. Celestial Martial Guild Master, Mr. Viper, is this the scene you wish for?"

I grabbed Viper by the collar.

"It's not, is it?"

"....."

"You don't desire such a glorious defeat, do you?"

Silence followed.

Then, Viper's lips parted.

"I want..."

"Yes."

"I want, even if just once..."

"Yes."

"To get ahead of you."

"Yes."

"I want to be the protagonist!"

Right.

That was the real bottom line.

If we were to articulate this wish, it would be a pitifully mundane sentence.

[I] [want] [to be like you]

What a raw desire.

"Ahaha."

Yet, this mass of desire appeared beautiful in my eyes.

Because Viper is a man of action.

He's different from someone who merely envies and types away on a keyboard. Different from someone who waits for an uncertain fortune, wasting away their days.

Viper is different from me.

He thought, strived, and acted to catch up to me while envying me. He is a strong person who turns his jealousy into personal growth.

How could I not laugh?

"Celestial Martial Guild."

Looking at Viper, I said.

"As you said, Namgung Woon, the Head of the Martial Alliance, is the Celestial Martial Guild's Supreme Leader."

A question arose in Viper's eyes.

I continued without regard.

"I've heard that he usually trains the guild members of Celestial Martial Guild. But no matter how well-off the guild members of a tower's famous clan are, would they ever catch the eye of the head of the great family, who was once revered as a genius in one world? That must be why you're suffering too."

Viper's face contorted in pain, silently acknowledging the truth of my words.

I spoke slowly.

"But think back to the last Great Orthodox-Demonic War."

"....."

"On either side of the vast snowy field, a thousand troops of the Demonic Cult were arrayed. Their lives as shadows, they were draped in black robes from head to toe. A grand total of a thousand. As the world was being engulfed in snow, leading to its downfall, they gathered from all over to escort the Heavenly Demon, truly the epitome of the Demonic Cult's might."

As I continued.

The warriors of our family, who had been quietly arrayed until then, began to move.

They formed a precise and exact line on the wide sandy plain.

Even the moonlight seemed to fade as it neared their battalion. From a distance, they appeared as one gigantic mass, like a black dragon.

"....."

Viper swallowed dryly.

Even if he hadn't regained his body yet, the sight of a thousand elite Demonic Cult troops arrayed on the sandy plain was worth seeing. Being a spirit didn't mean he couldn't recognize their strength.

"But, Mr. Viper. They are not the only ones here."

I activated my skill.

"Ghoul Reincarnation."

Then.

On the plains right opposite where the followers were arrayed, new moon shadows began to cast.

It was murky. Various shadows peeked out from the dark bushes. At first, it seemed like a weasel peeking through the bushes, then it looked like a deer running through the reed forest.

The skins they wore over their bodies were white, and their fur was utterly white. Thus, they seemed to illuminate the world simply by existing. As the summoning ended and they fluctuated as one entity, they stood firm in place, resembling a great white tiger.

"They are..."

Viper recognized them.

I nodded.

“Yes.”

The ghouls I had never summoned before.

Though I had the ability to summon them, I didn't feel worthy to call upon them, so I had left them in their final rest.

“The Martial Alliance’s 1,000 orthodox elites.”

“.....”

“You are a disciple of Namgung Woon, the Alliance Leader. Therefore, just as I, as a disciple of the master, became the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult, you too have the right to lead them.”

Viper gazed blankly at the 1,000 orthodox troops etched across the plains.

“But now, they will not swear loyalty to you.”

“That’s right. ...You were the one who prepared for the Great Orthodox-Demonic War there.”

“It won’t be easy to win their loyalty, one by one.”

“Are you saying I should try...”

“No.”

I looked at Viper and said.

“You can do it.”

Viper plucked the spear stuck in his chest with a crackle.

He stood upright, his face twisted in pain and humiliation.

“Those orthodox warriors will vanish along with you when you leave the stage.”

“Yes. They exist as part of my skill.”

“Then, winning their acknowledgment will have to wait until after the closure of the world.”

“It seems so.”

Viper spat out blood-stained saliva, glaring at me.

“Wait for me, King of Death.”

The eye of the Ghost Tribe warrior he possessed, the one eye of Viper within him, focused on me like the tip of a spear.

“I lost this stage! Yes, our Ghost Tribe children have lost! But next time will be different... Next time! Just you wait quietly there!”

“No.”

And again, I negated his words.

“What will the loser do even with closed realm training?”

Viper seemed momentarily unable to understand.

However, my retainers understood. Especially Ester, the advisor of the King of Death family, who had bought Divine Descent for a steep price of 10,000 race points for just 5 minutes in the real world, surely understood my thoughts better than anyone else.

“Princess! I forfeit this stage!”

Even when I shouted so, my retainers remained unshaken.

Only Viper was disturbed.

“What!? Wait, forfeiture, why...”

I raised my hand to stop Viper.

“Look behind me, Celestial Martial Guild Master.”

The heat in Viper's eyes cleared again. Through his hazy vision, he would have started to see the scene beyond my shoulders.

The Earth Spirit Tribe was there.

-.....

-.....

Thousands of Earth Spirit warriors. They all had their arms crossed.

The weapons they once held and aimed at enemies were now placed at their feet.

Their angry gazes were directed at our family's retainers, the great white giant Uburka.

-.....

-.....

The Earth Spirit Tribe remained silent. Yet, it was clear what they meant, despite their silence. [They could not accept such a victory].

“Ah, ah. No matter how absurd things get, it seems I've crossed a line.”

I laughed bitterly, spreading my arms.

“Taking care of children is truly a difficult task. What you think is best for them can sometimes be an intrusion and disregard for them.”

Viper's eyes, now free of fever, would have seen more.

Including the Ghost Tribe survivors who had fled from the fiery mansion, looking at the resurrected Viper in their borrowed bodies with incomprehension.

“But there's a significant difference. Do you know what it is, Celestial Martial Guild Master?”

Between the Earth Spirit Tribe protesting me and the Ghost Tribe fearing Viper, I said to Viper.

“The winner has the right to refuse a victory they don't cherish.”

Viper's eyes widened.

“You...!”

I nodded and said.

“On the other hand, the loser has no right to refuse such a refused victory.”

“Stop joking around!”

Viper roared in protest.

“I can't accept such a victory, this kind of victory...”

Viper's words faded, not because he understood the phrase 'the loser has no right to refuse a refused victory' intellectually.

If the King of Death's family hadn't intervened and he had possessed the corpses of the Ghost Tribe to annihilate the Earth Spirit Tribe, the surviving Ghost Tribe would not have wanted such a victory either.

Recognition dawned in Viper's one eye. Even amidst the scorn of the Earth Spirit Tribe, I couldn't help but find it gratifying.

Viper will become stronger.

Stronger and stronger, endlessly stronger.

“Celestial Martial Guild Master.”

Therefore, I had no complaints or fears about stepping down here.

The Earth Spirit Tribe will do well.

The Black Dragon Witch, the Paladin, the Sword Saint, and of course, the Celestial Martial Guild Master, will splendidly complete the climb up to the '40th floor,' or in effect, up to the '50th floor.'

“Work hard. See you next time.”

As I was about to turn away.

“Liǎofàn!”

Viper called out.

“Yes?”

“My name is Liǎofàn!”

Viper glared at me.

“It’s not an alias or a nickname, my name is Liǎofàn! Got it!”

"....."

“Liǎofàn! Next time, I’ll call you by your name, and you’ll call me by mine! Don’t forget!”

In that moment.

Whoooooosh-

A white light began to envelop us.

[Stage forfeited.]

[You have forfeited clearing the 36th floor.]

Enveloped in white light, nothing else was visible.

Not just me, but all my family members, excluding Uburka, along with Silvia Evanair, Kim Yul, Ester, the Four Demon Lords, the followers, everyone began to fade away in the white luminescence.

“You crazy bastard!”

Then, below, a Ghost Tribe member, his horns broken and his body battered, but his eyes unwaveringly focused on me, was giving me the finger.

So, I also calmly raised my middle finger in response.

“A lunatic only sees lunatics-.”

“What? You damn bastard, just you wait! When I see you next time, I’ll—”

As Viper grimaced.

[You will be transferred to a temporary space!]

The transfer finally took place.

And our consciousness faded.

Chapter 252:

Independence (1)

---

The luminescence enveloping me slowly dissipated.

Swoooooosh-

Despite the somewhat drained sound in my ears, the sight before my eyes was nothing short of divine.

Starting from the light encircling my head, then my neck, shoulders, arms, and eventually legs and feet, the light unfurled like silk threads, dispersing in all directions.

‘Perhaps these luminescences are some sort of skill.’

Then, whose life might be encapsulated within them?

I quietly observed the shimmering silk threads dissipating with a somewhat poignant sentiment....

“No way! A forfeiture!”

I couldn't just stand by and watch.

The familiar face of the princess suddenly popped up from the ground.

Not only the sound effects but even the background seemed drained, with a hole forming on the ground and her emerging with grunts. A ghost, perhaps? Had the horror movie industry hit a slump, leading her to take up roles in comedy films? Such a pity....

“King of Death, what are you thinking? Why forfeit here!?”

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages.

Being both a pillar supporting the tower and the daughter of the Tower Master.

The girl, who likely held the most powerful influence next to the Tower Master, was venting her stress, flailing her usual pillow.

“Are you mistaken? Huh? Our King of Death, just pretending to forfeit while concocting some cunning plan, right? I trust you completely. Come on, speak up!”

“No.”

I replied calmly.

“I’m really going to forfeit.”

“What! Seriouslyyyyyy!?”

The princess exploded in disbelief.

“Not even spoiling the broth! What’s going on! After all the effort you put into nurturing the Earth Spirit Tribe kids! It was just about time for the real Earth Spirit Tribe to unify the continent. But why, why would you forfeit...”

“The kids didn't want it.”

“Huh?”

I sat down on a white chair. This space, with only white extending to the horizon, was surprisingly convenient. Just thinking, [It would be nice to have a chair here], made one appear.

As I sat, tea and cups also appeared as if they had been waiting.

“Hmm.”

I lifted the tea to smell its fragrance. It was indeed a sophisticated peach tea. To put it metaphorically...

"....."

It was as if a Lipton iced tea, knighted for its service, led to significant victories in battle across three generations, finally receiving formal nobility.

Hmm.

I tasted the tea, bowing my head slightly.

“I wonder when my food metaphors will become more elegant...”

“Sigh...”

“Don’t sigh, Princess. I’m the one who wants to sigh.”

Seeing my commoner-like attitude, perhaps the princess regained some of her noble dignity.

She propped her forehead and plunked down opposite me, shrugging as if postponing her reprimand.

“Well, it’ll get fancier, won’t it? When I first tried pizza as a kid, I was as moved as when eating 3 pork cutlets. But as I grew older and ate seasoned chicken, I was shocked as if it were 5 pizzas.”

“So, in your world, there are pork cutlets, pizza, and seasoned chicken.”

“Yeah. So now, my basic unit of taste is seasoned chicken. Compared to my childhood, I’ve indeed become quite a gourmet.”

Truly a luxurious palate.

‘Is this befitting a kingdom’s noble... or rather, a pillar of the tower?’

For someone like the princess, who lived a life above the clouds, the idea of someone like me, who had to count how many rice cakes were given on the street, must be unimaginable... I was thinking this when she spoke, hugging her pillow.

“But still, the most delicious thing was the bean paste stew my mother cooked.”

“There’s bean paste stew too.”

“Yeah. That’s the one taste I couldn’t express with any amount of seasoned chicken. It's literally the taste of memories. That's why I still often ask her to cook it."

"I understand. I also often recall the egg fried rice with sesame oil and soy sauce that the director used to make. Actually, before challenging the 31st floor, I asked a few times and got to eat it."

If my family members were here, Ester would have asked, 'Does the Tower Master cook bean paste stew?', Silvia would have wondered, 'Is your family really noble...?', and Kim Yul would have scolded, 'Stop exploiting my friend for egg rice, family head. Do you not have hands or feet? Make it yourself.' But none of that happened.

It's metaphorical, indicating that only the princess and I were present, not the family members.

-Crazy bastard....

[Shiny deeply agrees in silence with the Sword Emperor.]

As always, let's not mind these two.

Anyway, that's how the princess and I, from different economic classes, dramatically reached a consensus.

‘Huh.’

Suddenly, I felt slightly dizzy.

The Semi-Divine Eye activated while facing Viper.

Without warning, it flickered before my eyes, pulling me into a daydream.

---

-My child.

It felt like stealing someone's past in a trauma.

-The daughter of a humble servant...

It was a dark underground place.

The Amethyst Viscount, not yet the Tower Master, was caring for someone with a face she had never shown before.

A small child.

Much smaller than now, but I recognized her as [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages].

-The daughter I love...

The figure who would become the Master of All Lives and the Goddess of the Tower caressed the child's cheek,

-Yes, let's go home. Let's go to sleep, mommy.

said the girl, not yet the overall administrator of this stage, caressing her cheek in return.

"....."

I blankly watched the daydream.

The place where the mother and daughter caressed each other's cheeks was a sanctuary. It seemed that no one should dare approach. In the eyes of the Tower Master looking down at her daughter, there was only affection, a kind that brought tears to the eyes just by watching.

Perhaps this was one of the true faces of a god.

The god and her daughter held hands and left somewhere. That was it.

In the daydream shown by the Semi-Divine Eye, I couldn't tell where they were going or why they said [let's go home].

Just as the two left the dark underground and climbed some stairs,

"....."

Thunk,

the daydream ended.

---

I blinked my eyes.

Reality continued where the dream had broken off.

“---So, I’m actually quite good at cooking, you know?”

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages chattered excitedly.

“If I had to grade my cooking, it would be EX rank. It can’t be anything else. Anyway, I’ve inherited my mom’s cooking skills. If I, instead of bean paste stew, make seasoned chicken... If that becomes the taste of memories, King of Death, that would be a revolution in taste. A journey worthy of being chronicled in about 200 novels titled ‘Princess Cooking’...”

The princess, unaware that I had just had a daydream, proudly rambled on about what she wanted to say.

In her eyes, I appeared troubled. Not just because of her terrifying plan for a culinary revolution.

I was pondering the [phenomenon] that had just occurred to me.

‘Is this also a fragment of the Tower Master's trauma?’

For Jaa Soo-Jeong, her entire life was practically trauma.

She collected not only her own traumas but also those of others, and even created countless parallel worlds under the premise [what if something else had happened]. In each parallel world, Jaa Soo-Jeong saved someone, died, was tortured, or was brutally murdered.

‘All those memories are now potentially hidden within me.’

It seems the speculation I had while facing Viper was correct.

‘Even now.’

The volume of information is so vast that I can't consciously grasp it while awake,

But occasionally, unconsciously, like in a dream, it appears.

‘This is troublesome.’

I might see a scene from decades in the future or an event from hundreds of years ago in a world completely unrelated to me.

No, or perhaps I'll see a possible world like the one where Yoo Soo-Ha was with Jaa Soo-Jeong.

What else should I call this if not a daydream?

‘I understand why she tried so hard to dissuade me back then.’

I inwardly smirked.

When I declared I wanted to see the Tower Master's trauma, she desperately tried to dissuade me. Offering other gifts or rewards, she begged me not to look at her trauma.

-Please, I beg of you.

-You will be torn apart.

The Tower Master pleaded with me like that.

Now, I think I somewhat understand the meaning of her warning.

After sipping what seemed to be an ultra-evolved version of Lipton iced tea, I looked at the princess.

“Princess.”

“Huh? When will you let me taste your cooking? Sorry, King of Death, but first, you need to convince me with your cooking skills. I’m like the final boss in cooking manga. When you bring your best dish, I’ll easily surpass it and expand the universe of culinary arts—”

“No, Princess, it’s not about that... You really love your mother, don’t you?”

The princess paused.

After a moment, a smile formed on her lips.

“Yes. I love my mom.”

Her smile was immediate, without a hint of hesitation.

“As a daughter of a god, didn’t you ever feel burdened? Why, in typical clichés, they say, ‘I wish I was born in a normal family.’”

“Ahaha. What’s that?”

The princess laughed while fiddling with her teacup.

“Well, okay. I was going to question you about forfeiting. But for now, I’ll indulge in the King of Death’s banter.”

“How is it really? Living as the daughter of a god?”

“Hmmmm. Being my mother's child is incredibly nice and happy!”

The princess beamed brightly.

“But there’s an error in one of your questions. You know, like, ‘Wouldn’t it have been happier to be born in a normal family?’ That doesn’t apply to me... well, to any of my mother’s children.”

“Huh?”

I tilted my head, not understanding her point.

The princess sipped her tea, peering at me over the rim of her cup.

“It's hard to grasp all at once, isn't it? Imagine it like this.”

Beside the teacup was a glass jar filled with sugar cubes.

She opened the jar and delicately picked the topmost sugar

cube with slender fingers.

“There exists a certain ‘special’ human who inevitably commits massacres upon birth.”

The lifted sugar cube slowly moved out of the jar.

“In any world, this person is the same.”

The sugar cube, transferred over the teacup, dropped with a plunk.

“Ruining people, burning lands, destroying countries, crumbling continents.”

The sugar cube dissolved, swirling in the tea.

“In any world. In any family. Under any parents, this doesn’t change. This person is truly, truly ‘special’ in that sense.”

That was the wish I once harbored for Yoo Soo-Ha.

Wishing that Yoo Soo-Ha would be an irredeemable being from the moment of birth, or even before, envisioning some demonic entity.

“No one can reform this person. No one can teach this person about love. No one can convince or persuade this person that ‘the world is better existing as it is rather than not.’”

The princess lifted her cup to her lips.

As she set the cup back on the table, I anticipated the conclusion and shivered at the conclusion I surmised.

Chills ran down my spine.

“That’s...”

“There are exactly 24 of these ‘special’ ones across all creation.”

The princess smiled broadly.

“And coincidentally, there are 24 children of our mother.”

“Hmm, among them, I'm the eldest. In our kingdom, I'm known as Baek Soo-Jeong*, or Quartz. Really. It's tough with such mischievous siblings!”

*Her name has the hanja for ‘Quartz’, a white crystal. ‘Baek’ in korean means ‘White’ and ‘Soo-Jeong’, as mentioned before, means crystal.

I remained silent.

Unconsciously, I murmured the Tower Master's often-spoken maxim.

“There are no humans born wrong in this world...”

“That's right!”

Clap. The princess clapped softly.

“Our mother might seem a bit foolish, right? Anyway, she gathered only those children who would have been born wrong and made them her own.”

“And she taught us all about love.”

The princess winked playfully.

“But that’s where the limit was.”

“The limit...?”

“We now understand the emotion of love. But we only love our mother. Our scales are much different from others, you see, if you weigh the entire world against our mother, she easily outweighs it. Hmm. The world is almost like a feather.”

I see.

In other words.

In stark contrast to the relationship I formed with the Earth Spirit Tribe as their father...

"Yep."

The princess before me, the daughter of a god, is

"Right now, the only reason I don't bring down the tower or towers is simply because Mom asked me not to."

She's completely dependent on her parent.

The princess, who sits in a completely different parent-child relationship than mine, smiled radiantly.

"Don't worry. We don't really disobey our mother's requests, maybe as a joke sometimes... but we never do anything that would truly make her sad. There are a few crazies, but they can't enter the tower, so don't worry."

"....."

"So, what was it... Ah, right. Forfeiture! Why did you forfeit, King of Death! The Earth Spirit Tribe was just two steps away from conquering the continent! It doesn't make sense to forfeit there!"

I calmed myself down.

Perhaps, just now, the princess wasn't aware of the expression she wore.

When she said [I could bring down the tower], her eyes... No. Let's not speak of it. What's the point of describing a demon? There's no need to unlock a curse sealed in solitude with words.

The princess is the manager of the floor. I am the one climbing the floor.

That should be enough for our relationship.

"As I mentioned, the kids didn't like it."

"The kids? The Earth Spirit Tribe didn't like it? That's why you forfeited?"

"That's right."

I nodded.

“We offered our help to the Earth Spirit Tribe. In the midst of life and death battles, who wouldn’t want help? Yet, the Earth Spirit Tribe flatly refused, saying, ‘This is our matter.’”

“Hmm.”

“They are already forging their own path. Everything happening there, the mistakes... even the deaths, they believe they can and must handle on their own. They have the capability too.”

I recalled the current Chairman of the Council who had replied to Uburka in a way that said, [Ancestor, please just back off], and smiled slightly.

“They’ve grown up.”

"....."

“I shouldn’t interfere with them anymore. Of course, not interfering might lead to greater harm. It’s sad and infuriating, but unless the Earth Spirit Tribe kids ask for help themselves, I'll just observe them."

Luck and ability favored me, and I succeeded in raising the Earth Spirit Tribe to be the top race of the continent.

But I don't want to say or hear things like, 'It's all thanks to me raising you' or 'You should worship me as a god.'

'This is it.'

My role in guiding these kids from outside their world ends here.

The Earth Spirit Tribe kids have stood on the ground with their own feet.

They have proved they don't need more than their own strength to defeat their enemies and don't need a god's shoulder to reach their destination.

Then, the only thing left for a god is to step back and watch them.

“But still! Aren’t you worried or curious?”

The princess flapped her pillow.

“Like, what disasters await the remaining layers? What will become of the Earth Spirit Tribe’s last evolution? The identity of the deferred rewards?”

“I do know the identities of the remaining layers.”

Naturally.

Before regressing, I had seen Yoo Soo-Ha clear up to the 40th floor.

‘Especially from the 37th floor, they’re what you call [World Quests].’

No longer localized missions, their content wouldn’t stray far from what I knew.

“I also know about the rewards.”

Once, I told my comrades in the tower that the mystery itself of the sequential clear rewards not being revealed was a puzzle.

This will be disclosed the moment the 40th floor is cleared.

Moreover, for that reason.

“I don’t worry about not meeting the Earth Spirit Tribe after their final evolution.”

I stated confidently.

“I, the King of Death, will forfeit at the 36th floor. Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages.”

"....."

“And soon, I’ll resume climbing and, as promised, save your mother.”

I bowed my head.

“So, please.”

"....."

“Allow me to let these children be independent.”

A long, long silence followed.

The princess sighed and looked at me. Intently. Endlessly. The aroma of the tea had settled, and its temperature had all evaporated. After many minutes of mutual silent observation, the princess slowly spoke.

“Okay.”

The princess smiled bitterly.

“The goblins are gaining independence before me.”

With that quiet lament, the voice of the tower announced.

[Stage forfeited.]

[You have forfeited clearing the 36th floor.]

['The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages' acknowledges the King of Death's forfeiture!]

Here we go.

Children.

Now, it's your era.

Chapter 253:

Independence (2)

---

“Shall I transfer you to the first floor of Babylon? Or...”

“No, I'd like to wait here.”

I set down my luxurious Lipton black tea and replied.

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages gave a slight smile.

“Alright, good. As a service, I'll add one camera for you.”

With a clap of her hands, a vast hologram unfolded in the air.

The screen showed the Earth Spirit Tribe and the Ghost Tribe. I could inspect any city I wanted, even quickly scroll to cities far away from the continent.

“This is... impressive.”

“Yes. You can even set the playback speed! X10, X100, X1000, X10000 speeds are all possible. Watch as you wish.”

“Thank you.”

Thus, we watched the flow of the [world].

---

On the screen, warriors of the Earth Spirit Tribe roared, waving their arms.

-Charge, everyone!

Amazingly, they were fighting Uburka.

-Ugor! Damn ancestor! We refused your help!

-Hahaha!

Uburka laughed heartily.

-Yes, you did say that! But the Ghost Tribe wanted to oppose you with the power of gods! They couldn't even properly resist, having been caught off guard, could you defeat that?

-That too was a trial we had to endure!

-You talk well! But the right theories of the powerless are just empty talk!

Wielding his axe, Uburka exclaimed.

-If you say you could overcome it by yourselves! If you say you don't need my help! Ugor, you damn guys!

Uburka laughed.

That laugh was the same as when he blocked the holy site of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

-Fight me, win, and prove your words are not just bravado!!

Flames sparked in the eyes of the Earth Spirit Tribe warriors.

-That's what we wanted!!

While the Earth Spirit Tribe took their 'final exam', the defeated Ghost Tribe also confronted their god.

-I'm sorry.

Viper bowed his head to his followers.

-The work of gods for gods. The work of humans for humans. If I, as a god, was to help, I should have at least revealed that I am a god.

-.....

-I failed as a god and a warrior, not adhering to this basic courtesy. Moreover, to fail after all that, I'm truly ashamed...

Viper scratched the back of his head, a forced smile on his lips fading like morning dew.

-I just... could have done better....

Tears flowed from the eyes not covered by the eye patch.

-Just... could have been better....

The surviving Ghost Tribe members were few, and even they were battered. But they did not blame their god.

-Please raise your head, O God!

-You did your best!

The Ghost Tribe shouted.

-We have not perished yet!

-Our horns have not yet broken!

Some even smiled.

-We have lost countless times!

-We are familiar with defeat!

-Hahaha! God, you should get more used to it too! With such a tofu-like mentality, you'll ascend from frustration!

It was neither self-mockery nor self-hatred.

It was simply their way of comforting their god, a strong testament that the first joke ever made was not to ridicule but to comfort.

-You guys...

Viper murmured, his face a mess of tears and snot.

The Ghost Tribe bowed to their god.

-We have much to improve.

-That means there's much room for growth!

-We can win!

-Please guide us toward that.

-Lead us, O God!

Viper was silent for a while.

Then, clenching his fist, he shouted.

-Damn it! Of course! Follow me, my children!

The Ghost Tribe answered loudly.

-Yes!

So, while the Earth Spirit Tribe fought with their proud heroes, the Ghost Tribe pledged a comeback to their god who appeared before them.

It was a touching moment of contrast.

“This is epic!”

“Wow, what a surprise!?”

While engrossed in the screen, a familiar voice suddenly rang next to me.

Not the Princess's, but a voice I knew well. The woman with dark hair tinged with blue, wearing clothes as dark as her hair, watched the hologram excitedly.

My friend.

The Black Dragon Witch.

---

I shouted in shock.

“B-Black Dragon Witch? No, Anastasia. How did you suddenly...?”

“I called her!”

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages cleared her throat, beaming like a child who had done something praiseworthy.

“You called her?”

“Yes. She was eliminated from the mission.”

“How did that happen?”

I asked, and the Black Dragon Witch shrugged.

“I went bankrupt, that's what.”

“Bankrupt as in...”

“Literally. My race points went into the negatives. Trying to merge the Vampire and Dream Demon tribes, I ended up in debt knowing I couldn't repay it.”

Dream Demon tribe.

Hearing this name after what felt like an eternity, I blinked in surprise.

“You met with the Dream Demon tribe again?”

“Yes. They've grown quite a bit.”

“What exactly happened...”

“You'll see it soon enough. But now, you guys! Hurry over here and sit down.”

You guys?

Looking around, not only the Black Dragon Witch but also the Paladin, Countess, and Heretic Inquisitor were summoned. All of a sudden.

“Indeed, I called them. Everyone must be curious about how their nurtured tribes are doing, right?”

The Princess coughed again.

It seemed she had deliberately arranged this gathering.

“Thanks for calling. I was worried about how the Mermaid children were doing.”

The Paladin approached the sofa, sighing deeply.

As everyone settled, I contemplated the profound changes unfolding before us - the Earth Spirit Tribe challenging their greatest heroes and the Ghost Tribe recommitting to their god under new understanding.

Meanwhile, the Countess coiled herself atop the backrest of the sofa.

“It’s fine. Haven’t they tightly grasped the logistics? With good relations with the Earth Spirit Tribe, as long as they don’t get greedy, they’ll firmly hold onto maritime logistics.”

Hmm.

It had been quite a while, but the Countess’s specialty is [Transformation Technique], cat transformation to be specific.

So, the one coiled on the sofa backrest wasn’t the Countess but a cat. Even if the Countess wasn’t a master of yoga, it was still a plausible sight.

“It’s great to see you after so long! Master!”

The Heretic Inquisitor hopped over and leaned on my sofa.

I carefully observed the scene that had turned into a social gathering or a picnic mat for top-tier hunters. The Princess served cup noodles and Lipton iced tea to the hunters, and they happily partook.

“What chaos...”

“How did you know?”

“Huh?”

“This time, upon returning to Babylon, I rooted out heretical forces lurking within the Temple of All Gods. Ahaha, I thought I managed the personnel well, but they were still crawling around! Just now, I crushed a secret organization called [Chaos]!”

“Uh....”

No.

That's not what I meant....

I was just saying the situation itself is chaotic....

“Everyone! Look at this!”

The hero to quell this chaos was, as always, the Black Dragon Witch, Anastasia. She pointed at the screen with sparkling eyes.

“The Earth Spirit Tribe’s Fire River Council has been challenged to a duel by the Ghost Tribe!”

We were all drawn into the Black Dragon Witch’s enthusiasm and watched the screen together.

In the brief moment I looked away, significant time had passed in the world. It was hard to say how many years, but since the mountain peak Uburka flung away had turned into a fenced tourist site, at least half a century must have passed.

In that world, after so much time, the current Fire River Council President was brutally defeating seven Ghost Tribe members one after another.

“Getting thrashed, aren’t they, Anastasia?”

“That’s not the important part! King of Death... Gong-ja, you too! With that sharp mind, why only be dense at times like this!”

-No, it's the opposite. This guy is naturally dumb, he only becomes smart when scheming.

Though the Guardian Spirit added a remark, fortunately, his words were only audible to me, preventing his disgraceful distortion of facts from spreading to the members gathered here.

Meanwhile, Anastasia continued her explanation.

“It’s crucial that a non-Earth Spirit Tribe member entered the Fire River Council! Look, Gong-ja! Those Ghost Tribe members attended as official delegates!”

“Delegates? But, the Fire River Council is an Earth Spirit Tribe assembly. How did the Ghost Tribe...”

While the two of us were discussing the scene on the screen, I suddenly felt something odd about the reactions around me.

“...Why are you all acting like that?”

As I expressed my confusion, the cat Countess, who had been staring blankly at me, panicked.

“Oh, no. If my ears aren’t deceiving me, just now, the Black Dragon Witch... and the King of Death, referred to each other by their names...”

“It’s not a misunderstanding.”

I nodded.

“Anastasia and I are friends.”

"....."

Ever seen a cat with a look of astonishment? At least for me, it was a first. Mouth agape, eyes widened - not exactly a beautiful expression worth seeing twice.

“Yep, that’s right. Gong-ja and I are friends.”

The Black Dragon Witch added fuel to the fire.

Or, to startle the cat further, perhaps throwing a cucumber would be more accurate.

“We decided to call each other by names. We even wrote a friendship contract about it.”

The cat Countess straightened up in a bizarre angle.

“Friendship contract...? Is that some kind of friend payment...?”

“Countess... you can't buy friends with money.”

“You just destroyed most of my social relationships!”

“Anyway, that's not what's important right now.”

While the cat Countess wallowed in the sorrow of lost friends and the other hunters were still in shock, Anastasia nonchalantly pointed at the screen again.

“As you said, Gong-ja, the Fire River Council, initially an exclusive property of the Earth Spirit Tribe...”

Anastasia picked up where I left off.

“Given the Earth Spirit Tribe’s nature of being utterly useless in anything but combat, it effectively became an assembly anyone could join, regardless of their tribe.”

Lastly, the Countess licked her paw, purring.

“At first, the Fairy Tribe, being the closest economically and culturally, began to enter the council. Then, as the Mermaid Tribe grew in the logistics sector, they followed. Now, even the Ghost Tribe has started sending their representatives.”

We fell silent.

"....."

"....."

We looked at each other. Anastasia’s eyes were still ablaze with excitement. The cat Countess, seemingly acknowledging her fervor, nodded gently.

The Paladin crossed her arms.

“A global council, huh.”

An assembly where all tribes participate.

That future was unfolding right before our eyes.

Chapter 254:

Independence (3)

---

Time swiftly passed.

As the flag symbolizing the Fire River Council became more splendid, the number of tribes gathered under it increased. The rapid pace of development left us, the onlookers, occasionally exclaiming in amazement.

“Wait, wait! Slow down a bit!”

The most excited among us was the Black Dragon Witch, my friend Anastasia.

“Another tribe has challenged the chairman of the Fire River Council!”

“Which tribe is it this time?”

"The Mountain Calamity Tribe! Look at their attire, they are miners. A miner from the Mountain Calamity Tribe has challenged the council chairman!"

"Really?"

The Black Dragon Witch pointed to a corner of the hologram with her finger.

"Don't just sit there with your eyes! Enhance your vision and take a closer look!"

Ah, it was true.

It was the Mountain Calamity Tribe with seven tentacles. Originally having eight, it seemed one was lost to life's hardships.

But losing one tentacle didn't seem to negatively affect them. Like a soldier wearing scars as medals, the one-armed miner sat with a stern face.

On the ground was a red carpet, with the Earth Spirit Tribe members lined up on both sides. Each member of the Earth Spirit Tribe was immensely built, glaring down at the small Mountain Calamity Tribe member with intimidating auras.

-Lime.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe spat out phlegm.

Their phlegm wobbled, reminiscent of a slime toy from childhood.

It appeared as a declaration of, [From now on, I will play with you like toys].

-First, on behalf of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, I pay my respects to you moldy bastards!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe shouted.

-Without you, we would have perished long ago, and those who survived would have become slaves, worked to the bone until our shells cracked and our skin melted, Lime. Being able to live moderately while mining is all thanks to you! Especially thanks to the legendary chairman Uburka!

Despite the seemingly friendly words, the face remained fiercely stern.

-Thank you! But enough is enough. We're now capable of fending for ourselves. It's been hundreds of years since anyone tried to destroy us, and it's shameful and embarrassing to rely solely on your protection!

-Ugor.

The current chairman of the Fire River Council chuckled softly.

-Shame is a mark of greatness. It leads to bravery. I acknowledge your shame. Now, speak of your courage.

-I am the strongest among the Mountain Calamity Tribe!

Shrrrk, clank, shrrrk.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe member raised its seven tentacles. Its chosen weapon was neither a sword nor a spear. An unassuming tool, far from ornate armaments, was held in its grip.

A pickaxe.

The modest miner's pickaxe was firmly held in each tentacle.

-Ugor!

The Earth Spirit Tribe warriors laughed. Excluding the chairman seated on a massive rock, dozens of Earth Spirit Tribe warriors chuckled simultaneously.

-We thought some outstanding creature from the Mountain Calamity Tribe was sent as a representative!

-Daring to defeat us with a pickaxe!

-A miner should return to the mine and dig! Mine salt! If you find silver or gold, take it as the blessing of your life! Ugor! Who brings a pickaxe to a sacred duel arena!

-Ugor! Ugor!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe remained silent.

They did not glare.

Simply, from beginning to end, they looked up at the chairman of the Fire River Council.

-Hmm.

The chairman nodded.

-I order those who just sneered. Duel with this Mountain Calamity Tribe member.

The Earth Spirit Tribe warriors stirred.

-Chairman, that's...

-When we were still trapped in the vast caves of Limepolis, we had no weapons. Spears? Swords? Don't make me laugh. We only had buckets of water and hammers. With those hammers, alongside the beloved White Lion, we toppled the empire of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

-.....

-A hammer is a weapon that destroyed an empire. A weapon of our ancestors, our people, our own. How is a pickaxe any different? A warrior who fails to recognize the essence of a weapon does not deserve to boast their rank in the Fire River Council. If you lose to this Mountain Calamity Tribe member, relinquish your rank and return to Guru!

The expressions of the Earth Spirit Tribe turned pale.

Yet, the chairman, ruling over fire and river, the Fire River Council, did not retract his command.

-Quickly!

Five Earth Spirit Tribe members timidly stepped into the duel arena.

-Lime.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe's expression remained unchanged. However, when she shook her tentacles, whoosh! The pickaxe sharply swept through a radius of three meters.

-Come at me, one by one or all at once, as you prefer.

The five Earth Spirit Tribe members were easily defeated.

The true duel began thereafter.

Warriors who could easily restrain their own ridicule stepped forward. They lost.

Warriors who had long discarded prejudice against other tribes followed. They too lost.

Warriors who observed not only the appearance of a person but the movements of the aura pulsating from their hearts, considering them as important as the words they spoke, came forward. They also lost.

A warrior who saw the aura in all things as beautiful, believing the world to be an [Eternally Burning Flame], stepped up. He too was defeated. However, the Mountain Calamity Tribe member lost five out of seven tentacles in the process and one was crushed, leaving her with only two tentacles, like human arms.

-Huff... hah... huff... hah.

Bloodied.

-This is easier... than mining caves, Lime.

Her snail shell was crumpled like a car bumper after an accident. Blood and mucus flowed from her body.

Looking down at the injured Mountain Calamity Tribe member, the chairman of the Fire River Council, seated on a rock throne reserved for the strongest warrior of the era, laughed heartily.

-What is your name?

-Seimslam.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe member groaned, oozing mucus.

-I am the last descendant of the Lekamulime family, one of the seven lords who ruled the now-destroyed Ravine City, and the successor of the Spirals.

-Impressive.

The Earth Spirit Tribe chairman revealed his huge fangs.

-From now on, you, Seimslam, are the second-ranked Vice-Chairman of the Fire River Council.

Time swiftly passed.

In the history of the Earth Spirit Tribe, a Mountain Calamity Tribe member ascended to the position of vice-chairman. It was unprecedented. Considering the Earth Spirit Tribe once ruled over the Mountain Calamity Tribe, this was like entrusting a crucial position to an arch-enemy.

Many Earth Spirit Tribe warriors challenged this decision. Each time, the vice-chairman of the Fire River Council, the Mountain Calamity Tribe member, Seimslam, repelled the challengers. She never refused a duel.

-Someone with pride.

The Earth Spirit Tribe decided to dissolve the bitterness of their long history.

-A strong being.

The Earth Spirit Tribe buried the sorrows of the past in the beauty of the present.

-That is enough.

Thus, the Mountain Calamity Tribe was officially accepted into the Fire River Council.

At least, those of the council with sufficient strength to hold their rank, should never be ridiculed or ignored anywhere. Strength Resides. This was the only commandment uniquely observed since the White Lion led them to Guru.

".....Amazing."

As we all watched the hologram, Anastasia suddenly murmured. In the hologram, Seimslam, the Mountain Calamity Tribe vice-chairman, was receiving respectful greetings from warriors of lower rank.

"Less developed than us, with a much more rugged society... not capable of achieving as much as us, certainly knowing less than us."

The Black Dragon Witch slightly parted her lips.

"Yet, as strong as us, or perhaps, even stronger."

"....."

"These children live with pride. The Mountain Calamity Tribe miners in the salt mines, the Gill Fish Tribe swimming in the waterways, the Fairy Tribe touching gold and occasionally gracing the stage of the Fire River Council, the Ghost Tribe always sending duelists in place of war... all of them. Truly strong."

I nodded.

"Yes."

Feeling an endless sense of pride within.

"These children are as strong as us... and healthier than us."

At that moment, a strange emotion curled up in the center of my heart.

Something transparent, yet not sticky, spread slowly from the center to the edges of my heart.

Glancing slightly to the side, I saw the Black Dragon Witch and the Paladin with similar expressions.

'That's right.'

I realized the nature of my emotion.

'This is what pride feels like.'

I wasn't sure if it was the pride a parent feels for their child.

Simply, humans can feel proud watching others, not just themselves.

This realization brightened my mood.

[The 37th floor commences.]

The hologram displayed a snowy landscape.

In the frozen North, a Red Dragon that had been slumbering in the permafrost awoke. This very dragon had once arisen long ago, setting off a volcano and flying away.

Every hunter gathered here knew where that volcano was, how hot its lava was.

“...So it was this dragon that caused the volcano in the 31st floor jungle.”

Anastasia frowned, reading the quest description.

We couldn't interfere with the stage anymore, but thanks to [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages], we could briefly read the quest descriptions.

"Hmm. It looks formidable, like a Constellation-level!"

The Heretic Inquisitor glanced at the hologram, stroking his chin.

"If necessary, Uburka is there, so we can intervene..."

"No."

I shook my head.

"The Fire River Council will try to handle it on their own. Look."

The Fire River Council was gathering its forces.

What started as a small assembly of the Earth Spirit Tribe had become, over time, not exclusively theirs. Gill Fish Tribe, Fairy Tribe, Mountain Calamity Tribe, Vampires. Numerous warriors gathered under the flag.

The Earth Spirit Tribe still made up over half of the warriors. However, everyone here earned their rank through fair combat. There were no complaints from the Mountain Calamity Tribe about the Earth Spirit Tribe's dominance, nor grumbles from the Vampires about the Fairy Tribe's presence.

They were warriors.

-Are we assembled?

The chairman of the Fire River Council asked.

Thousands of warriors thumped the ground in unison.

The chairman nodded lightly.

-We are gathered. Let's go.

To the icy North.

On the way north, they encountered an army. One-horned giants. The Ghost Tribe's army.

-Ugor.

-Krrr.

It hadn't been 100 years since Viper descended to wage war with the Ghost Tribe. There was still an odd sense of rivalry and competitiveness between the Earth Spirit Tribe and the Ghost Tribe.

The two armies faced off across the Tundra Plains. The Earth Spirit Tribe's chairman rode a lion to the Ghost Tribe, while their High Priest, who worshiped the serpent god, tapped his staff as he approached.

The Earth Spirit Tribe's chairman asked.

-Are you here to fight?

The Ghost Tribe's High Priest answered.

-We must fight. But not with you.

-The Red Dragon?

-If left alone, it's said to cause a catastrophe of mythic proportions. All mountains will erupt, all rivers will burn, leaving the land uninhabitable.

-It's a scene I'd like to witness once. Ugor.

-Agree, but the youngsters think differently.

The chairman and the High Priest chuckled together.

-What does your serpent god say? Does it wish to descend?

-Our god pondered...

The Ghost Tribe's High Priest slowly shook his head.

-But in the end, announced non-interference.

The Celestial Martial Guild Master.

Viper, who would have wanted to care for the Ghost Tribe more than anyone, decided not to intervene this time. He chose to step back, allowing them to face their crisis on their own.

It was the choice of the Celestial Martial Guild Master, still residing in that world.

-When the red dragon spread its wings before, the gods protected us. But much time has passed. The gods trust us now. We are strong. We will become stronger.

-Weaker than us, but, Ugor.

-Damn moldy bastards.

The High Priest grumbled, and the chairman extended his right hand.

-Dear parents and friends watch over us from the heavens.
Let's show them how strong we've become.

-Let's unite in battle.

We hunters silently watched the 37th floor.

-Kooooooooo!

In the middle of the snowstorm, the giant Red Dragon roared.

Blizzards swirled around, insufficient to cover its blazing red skin. Heavy snow fell from the sky, but too feeble to bury the dragon's intense heat. The permafrost cracked and screamed with every movement of the dragon.

-Let's go.

In the first battle, the Ghost Tribe's High Priest perished.

Caught in the dragon's breath, he vanished into the frozen snow without leaving his ancient staff.

-Let's go.

In the second battle, the chairman of the Fire River Council died.

Someone had to buy time for the warriors to complete the Demonic Formation Art. Just a minute, even 30 seconds, for the warriors to focus their aura, share their visions, and bring their landscape into this world.

The chairman of the Fire River Council lasted 1 minute and 23 seconds. His axe sliced the dragon's scales, and his fist burst its left eye. Facing the mythic monster that could cause earthquakes and volcanic eruptions by its mere existence, the lone warrior swung his axe and died, crushed in the dragon's jaws.

-Let's go.

In the third battle, the Red Dragon's neck was severed.

The dragon's skin was thick. Its flesh, thicker. Its bones, thickest.

The first pickaxe scrape grazed the skin, the second opened it, the third finally cut the flesh. The fourth severed it, the fifth tore it, and the sixth scratched the bone.

The seventh pickaxe strike severed the bone.

-Lime.

With one remaining tentacle coiled around the pickaxe.

A lone Mountain Calamity Tribe member sat atop the dragon's neck.

-Easier than mining caves, Lime.

And delivered the final blow.

The dragon's head, as large as a hill, kept screaming as it fell endlessly into the abyss. Even plummeting down the ice cliff, the screams continued.

Eventually, the sound of water signaled the end of the screams as the dragon's head sank into the icy sea.

-Lime.

Atop the cliff, the Mountain Calamity Tribe member shook her head. Mucus scattered.

Turning around, she saw fewer warriors than when they set out from the North. One. Two. Three. In total, seventy-four warriors had died, including the Ghost Tribe's High Priest and the chairman of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

-Impressive.

Yesterday, the second strongest warrior on this continent, and today, the strongest, the Mountain Calamity Tribe member smiled bitterly.

-Let's return to our homeland, Lime.

Seimslam.

629th Chairman of the Fire River Council.

The first time in history a Mountain Calamity Tribe member became chairman.

[Stage Clear!]

[Today, the 37th floor has been cleared!]

A success without any hunter's help.

It was — the first time a stage was cleared without any 'player' intervention.

-Gong-Ja.

‘Hmm? What is it, Sword Emperor?’

-Aren't you forgetting about some old man and the tribe he's taking care of...?

Hmm.

To clarify.

It was — possibly the first time a stage was cleared without any 'player' intervention.

'Something about that sentence doesn't quite resonate...'

Anyway, what does it matter?

Right next to me, the Black Dragon Witch is shouting "Ajaajaaaaa!!" in excitement, even hugging my arm and jumping for joy. Surely, the Celestial Martial Guild Master's and the Sword Saint's issues will be resolved smoothly.

I smiled, deciding to simply bless those reflected in the hologram.

'Congratulations on your independence, kids.'

Proud of our children, more than anyone.

Chapter 255: One Who Did Not Clear the Stage (1)

---

Time passed swiftly.

Despite the unprecedented rise of a Mountain Calamity Tribe member as the chairman of the Fire River Council, there was no significant turmoil. Those who harbored doubts nodded in agreement upon hearing, "That Mountain Calamity Tribe member beheaded the Red Dragon." Numerous warriors from both the Earth Spirit and Ghost Tribes testified to Seimslam's accomplishments.

"This is no longer just a nation of Earth Spirits!"

The Black Dragon Witch exclaimed excitedly.

Seems this topic suits Anastasia's taste.

“Our children’s nation will be greater than Rome! Do you realize how incredible this is, Gong-Ja?”

“Anastasia, I’m a middle school dropout. Dropped out of high school too. Please explain in a language I can understand...”

“Ah, okay. Rome initially began as a nation solely for Romans. But it truly became a great empire encompassing everyone when outsiders from different provinces were allowed to enter the center, and a certain faith from a remote border became the state religion.”

Looking at that world, the Black Dragon Witch pointed to her cheeks.

“But Rome had its limits... Do you know what they were?”

That’s why I’m saying I don’t know.

There was no need for me to interject.

"It’s because religion became overly sanctified!"

“It ran out of nations to conquer, making it difficult to sustain a war economy, right?”

“It's because of the corruption in politics and society's decadence.”

It wasn't me but the Heretic Inquisitor, the Countess, and the Paladin who interjected these points.

The Black Dragon Witch uttered an "Oh", waving her arms dismissively.

“You all go away. I'm talking to Gong-Ja.”

They retreated with drooping faces.

The Black Dragon Witch cleared her throat.

“Hmm. There were many limits, but I think it was because the interests of each group were not distinctly divided.”

“What do you mean?”

“Look over there.”

The Black Dragon Witch pointed towards the seats of the Fire River Council.

"While the goblins manage national defense and food production, the Fairy Tribe handles capital. The Gill Fish Tribe takes charge of logistics, and the Mountain Calamity Tribe oversees underground resources... This creates factions on a biological level. As long as one tribe doesn't go extinct or become enslaved, it's impossible for someone from a specific tribe to monopolize power!"

The Black Dragon Witch's cheeks were slightly red, perhaps from drinking too much.

Her words even slurred.

"This is important. Decisions made on a biological level. Mutual dependence naturally leads to checks and balances..."

"....."

"This system is strong and robust. Even gentle to newcomers. Any tribe, say, a new one, if they excel in an area that an existing tribe manages, they naturally take over that domain. But, yes, it's a treacherous journey until the system is established."

The Black Dragon Witch brushed her hair back.

"For instance, if a tribe fears challenges to its domain. Fears being ousted from their specialty. And decides to oppress the newcomers. And if the established tribes see this as normal. If such a trend dominates, this system will decay over time. But..."

No tribe went extinct.

Uburka did not allow the extinction of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

When it seemed like the Earth Spirit Tribe would dominate the continent, the Fire River Council timely eradicated racial discrimination.

Ssonia. That Fairy Tribe child who yearned to dance, dedicated his life to performing the Blood Fire Drama on stage.

The discovery of the new continent bolstered the standing of the Gill Fish Tribe, who led the way, and the natives of the new continent, the Dream Demons, reportedly merged with the Vampires led by Anastasia.

And through the war with the Ghost Tribe, people gained a sense of distance from the gods.

One by one.

One life at a time.

One life changed the world, and finally, a Mountain Calamity Tribe member ascended as the chairman of the Fire River Council for the first time.

The Fire River Council was transforming into a council that truly embraced both fire and water.

"Everything, yes, fell into place so perfectly."

The screen showed a grand festival celebrating the defeat of the Red Dragon.

A flamboyant Fairy Tribe member showcased all sorts of circuses and fire dramas, and tourists from across the country laughed along with the festival.

“What we see before us, this scene, Gong-Ja. It’s like a sacred scripture created by the footsteps of countless people, a grand miracle.”

The Black Dragon Witch murmured dreamily.

Not feeling bad about it, I slightly smiled.

“That’s true. Truly a miracle...”

“Unless this miracle was ‘created’ by someone.”

I paused.

Before I could blink, the dreaminess in the Black Dragon Witch’s voice was gone. Simultaneously, the atmosphere, more precisely, her eyes changed.

“You, Gong-Ja.”

The Black Dragon Witch turned to me.

Everyone else who had been dismissed was far enough not to hear our voices.

In this place where only the two of us were having this conversation, those purple eyes focused on me.

“You didn’t [Return] without telling me, did you?”

"....."

“You have a return skill, Gong-Ja. Like when you defeated the [Demon King of Autumn Rain]... Did you go ahead to the stage alone, die, find a non-lethal route, and bring us to this point where everyone is happy... You didn’t do that, did you?”

The Black Dragon Witch’s hands gripped my shoulders.

The beer can fell, and the chair rolled away. I lay on the cold floor, pinned down by the Black Dragon Witch.

“This world wasn’t built upon your corpses, was it.”

Ah.

"....."

I see.

'Um.'

Embarrassingly, I almost cried.

Not because my efforts were being recognized. That emotion, now past its expiration date, had been discarded long ago from the fridge of my heart.

It wasn't that.

‘As expected, senior is a beautiful person.’

In Anastasia's eyes, there was regret, gratitude, something like anger, and things not quite like that. Even the numerous things that almost reached that state were starkly mixed.

Even though I lack a mind-reading skill.

[I hate the idea of a friend dying without me knowing.]

I deeply understood what senior's eyes meant.

Because Anastasia had already experienced it with me.

A battle thought to have ended miraculously and harmlessly... The war in the Aegim Empire was actually a flower bloomed from my countless deaths.

Now, she knows too.

“Senior.”

Therefore.

“Let’s renew our friendship contract.”

I spoke earnestly.

"Huh?"

“Our previous contract. Oh, can you move off a bit? If Raviel sees me like this, she’ll mock saying, ‘As usual, you get drunk and someone jumps you at every gathering.’”

“Ah, that’s vividly imaginable... Sorry, I’ll sober up a bit. The contract is here.”

The Black Dragon Witch extended her nails and sliced through the air. Like opening a zipper, the air split apart, revealing a pitch-black abyss.

Nonchalantly, the Black Dragon Witch reached into the abyss and swiftly pulled something out.

[Friendship Contract]

This contract is established upon the agreement of Anastasia Zelensky (hereinafter referred to as A) and Kim Gong-Ja (hereinafter referred to as K).

A, not trusting the shelf life of human emotions, believes that only a diligent attitude and an industrious intellect can solidify the relationship between two people. Accordingly, A and K agree as follows:

1. All promises are valid only when both parties agree.
2. All promises can be voided if both parties agree.
3. However, the establishment or voiding of a promise is only possible on weekends (Saturday or Sunday).
4. In case of disagreements, roll the dice and follow the opinion of the person with the higher roll.

Signature: Anastasia Zelensky

Signature: Kim Gong-Ja

+

“Yeah. This is our contract... Why this?”

I slightly concentrated aura on the tip of my finger.

“I’m adding a promise to it.”

Scribble, scribble.

The aura on my index finger carefully wrote the letters. Or rather, it was slightly burning the surface of the paper, so “burning letters” would be a more appropriate description.

+

5. Just as both parties can say what they want to each other, they can also choose not to say what they don't want to, and can even lie.

6. However, when asked a question with the phrase "I swear on the contract," they cannot lie.

7. And we will never doubt the answer that comes with the phrase "I swear on the contract."

+

I looked up.

"How about that?"

"....."

"It should help us build more trust, don't you think? A bit childish, yes, but we were already out of the ordinary when we wrote a friendship contract. I was thinking of aligning with senior's thoughts..."

“I swear on the contract.”

Before I could even finish talking, Anastasia grabbed my right hand.

And looked me straight in the eyes.

“Did you never die in creating this world?”

"....."

Just a few lines of text.

A few promises.

Text and promises are so powerless that ignoring and breaking them is too easy.

If these easily breakable things suddenly become difficult, it's only because the hand that wrote the letters and the fingers that made the promises are far from ordinary.

"....."

As a child, she lost her father when her country split apart. I never asked what happened to her mother, and she never told me.

But she once abandoned the world.

The Black Dragon Witch's coldness was evident in abandoning the world, Anastasia's deficiency was revealed in craving recognition despite having abandoned it, her nobility was clear in rebuilding the tower in that forsaken world, and her anxiety was felt in her inability to detach from the tower she had built.

If the heart has a color, hers would surely be blackened too.

Yet, she never stopped acting.

Instead of sitting and crying, instead of curling up and hiding, she always took a step forward and addressed the problems in front of her.

Anastasia is a strong person.

“I died once.”

I said quietly.

“Talking about that death requires a lot of stories. Who I met, why I died, what happened as a result... I'll tell you about them, perhaps right after these stages are over.”

“But Anastasia, there's one thing I can promise.”

I spoke to Anastasia.

“From the 31st to the 37th floors, up until now as we climbed these stages— I never died once.”

“The children we nurtured, the children you nurtured, are amazing. Really. I didn't reverse anything. All these miracles you mentioned, they were possible even without me.”

"Okay."

Suddenly.

The Black Dragon Witch stroked my head.

"That's right."

"....."

"I see."

Once, twice.

The hand of Anastasia stroking my head was trembling.

"I..."

"I..." she said.

After a moment of silence, she continued.

"One day, I'll ask you to 'die'."

.....

“For the tower. For the world. For the people.”

It was a scene I could easily imagine.

“To die. To bring back the dead. To reverse time.”

The day I revealed I was a returner, Anastasia said.

“Under the pretext of sympathy. Using justice as bait. Setting friendship as a trap. Shamelessly, I’ll make such demands of you.”

Using me.

Proclaiming herself as a person who can exploit my life, and even our friendship, for something she values more, for the tower.

“So, I really don't have the right to say this but...”

I knew that Anastasia was that kind of person, and she knew she was that kind of person too.

Yet.

“Still, let me say it now.”

Anastasia showed a smile.

“I’m relieved.”

That smile was as complex as the hues of her heart, but like her eyes that had looked at me just before, it carried an unmistakable emotion.

“I’m really relieved that you weren’t hurt while leading these children.”

I nodded quietly, accepting her words.

“Yes.”

I smiled back.

“Thank you for worrying, for feeling relieved on my behalf.”

Then, the voice of the tower echoed calmly.

[Announcing to everyone.]

[Entering the 38th floor.]

[Repeating.]

Together, we turned our heads to look at the hologram.

[We are now entering the 38th floor.]

The races living in this world.

Our children were facing the next trial.

Chapter 256: One Who Did Not Clear the Stage (2)

---

[We are now entering the 38th floor.]

The moment the voice of the tower resounded.

A change occurred in the hologram we were watching.

“Look over there!”

The Heretic Inquisitor exclaimed with excitement.

I was sitting on the sofa, so the only place for the Heretic Inquisitor to lean in was the back of the sofa. Hanging onto the backrest like a child getting a piggyback ride from their dad, he looked forward.

“Something is emerging from the sea surrounding the right side of the continent!”

It was just as the Heretic Inquisitor said.

In the hologram, something gigantic was rising from the depths of the sea.

“Aha! It’s incredibly huge!”

The Heretic Inquisitor chuckled like a child watching a monster movie.

However, the other colleagues gathered in the waiting room for being eliminated couldn't share his excitement.

Speaking on behalf of all of us, the Black Dragon Witch murmured.

“What’s that?”

[It] resembled a long-necked turtle.

When it fully rose, waves rolled from its knees. As the monster lifted its long neck akin to a skyscraper and roared, its bellow alone caused tidal waves in all directions.

“That’s a dragon that has been sleeping since the dawn of this world.”

Said the Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages.

The Black Dragon Witch flinched.

“...A dragon? There was a dragon on the 37th floor, and now another dragon on this floor?”

“Yeah. And actually, that dragon is the true dragon... In your terms, it can be considered a [Constellation].”

The Princess smiled brightly.

“Think of the Red Dragon from the 37th floor as one of the apostles controlled by that dragon!”

Grrrrrrrrrr-

The monster in the middle of the sea belched.

Thud!

The blue-shelled, blue-eyed monster lifted its massive front legs and headed towards the shore.

Thud!

With each step, earthquakes occurred. Kuwoong! Kuwoong! Without even taking a few steps, the monster had already left the middle of the sea and was trampling the sandy beach. Kuwoong! On its final movement, the monster crushed the dense jungle trees like straws.

Grrrrrrrrrr-

The monster shook off the seawater on its head. Each drop formed its own pond. The fish from the sea, crabs wandering the beach, and beasts hiding in the jungle tangled up as they fled in panic.

[The Constellation 'The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss' roars!]

Even though we were just spectators from afar.

"....."

"....."

We all fell silent.

It's natural to become quiet when faced with a monster almost the size of the Korean Peninsula.

“Hmm! It’s tricky.”

Let me correct that.

Bambolina seemed to have something to say.

“I just checked with my skill, Temple of All Gods... it’s really difficult!”

“Well, it’s that big. It’s hard to figure out what to do with human power.”

The Countess let out an incredulous remark, which Bambolina shook his head at.

“Of course, size is an issue, but it’s not just about the size! More problematic is the nature of that Constellation.”

Right.

Constellations have types, and they vary greatly. Simply being strong does not make one a Constellation. At least from what I know.

Uburka didn’t become a Constellation just by lifting dumbbells. He overcame himself again and again to reach the status of a Constellation.

Born with albinism, destined to be an enemy of the sun. However, Uburka overcame the sunlight by learning Aura and enveloping his body with it. Physical limits. Life limits. Every time an unavoidable limit approached, Uburka overcame it by reconstructing flesh and bones with Aura.

The overcomer.

Those who defy the world that birthed them, the sun that nurtures the world, the life indebted to the sun, everything - and ultimately transcend. The Constellation [The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide] proved its will and thus earned the right to become a constellation shining in the night sky.

‘On the other hand.’

Constellations like that monster were different.

“That Constellation belongs to the ‘beginning’!”

Beginning.

Nature.

Constellations that [constitute] this world.

“That giant monster is actually not the main body. It’s a kind of terminal, an puppet controlled by connecting consciousness!”

If the main body of the Constellation is likened to a giant hydra, that monster was just one of its tentacles.

“Therefore, fighting and killing it is nearly impossible! However, if a way is found, hmm. Instead of destroying that puppet, sealing it to trap the Constellation's consciousness within and inflicting continuous pain to shatter that consciousness might be the only way!”

Shiny shuddered. So did I.

What Bambolina described was almost the same as what the Constellations of the world where my master lived had suffered at the hands of the Constellation Killer.

Unaware of such details, the Black Dragon Witch stroked her chin.

“Indeed. It’s like a curse.”

“Yes! Initially, the medium is a puppet. The counter must be along those lines.”

“That’s right, there is a way to confront it... But can those children over there use it?”

“The idea itself is straightforward. Saying the medium is a puppet means it's rooted in primitive sorcery!”

As the Black Dragon Witch and the Heretic Inquisitor continued their discussion, someone crossed their arms.

It was the Paladin.

“The problem remains whether such a method is necessary.”

“Huh? What do you mean?”

“If we go by the Inquisitor's words, that Constellation seems like a creator of that world. Meaning the residents of that world could only exist because of that Constellation, so why would they antagonize such an entity unless they are mad fanatics with a belief like [Constellations must absolutely be killed]?”

I shivered. So did Shiny.

After all, there was someone with that background among my vassals.

Nevertheless, the Paladin's point was sharp.

‘As expected of the Paladin.’

Before I returned,

Flame Emperor Yoo Soo-Ha only cleared up to the 40th floor.

And since it was a world quest and not an individual racial quest, I knew the contents of this floor.

“But that creator is trying to destroy the world now, isn't he?”

“The same logic can counter that, Black Dragon Witch. If the Constellation doesn't want to commit suicide, there's no reason to destroy the world. It's not like the world's residents are causing havoc against the whole world.”

That was also true.

‘Actually, even if they caused havoc, it wouldn't lead to destruction.’

Flame Emperor.

During the past when Yoo Soo-Ha climbed the tower, the continent was in a mess incomparable to now.

The elven fanatics who worshiped the Flame Emperor as a god. Yoo Soo-Ha, commanding those elves to slaughter and conquer. Every race going crazy and turning all others to extinction or slavery.

‘Except for the Earth Spirit Tribe.’

The reason why those children survived, let's talk about that later. Anyway, the important point now is this.

‘That Constellation doesn’t destroy worlds.’

Just a bit more malicious.

[The Constellation 'The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss' roars!]

The jungles, beaches, and seas trembled.

The roar emitted by the Ki Dragon was so grand that it resonated clearly to the opposite coast.

-To those living upon my skin!

-To the races born from my breath!

-I am the great flow! There is no flow in this sky, land, or sea that does not originate from me.

-I am the flow, and the flow is me. Those who can feel the flow are my priests, and those who can use the flow are my warriors.

People around the world turned their heads.

The Earth Spirit Tribe wrinkled their noses, the Mountain Calamity Tribe trembled their antennae, the Fairy Tribe perked their ears, the Capable Scribes Tribe opened their gills, the Vampiric Tribe flapped their wings, the Pure Humans Race turned their eyes, and the Ghost Tribe rotated their single horns.

In an instant, in a fleeting moment.

Their noses, antennae, ears, gills, wings, eyes, and single horns all pointed in one direction, and beyond that, in the distance, lay a gigantic monster. Its hind legs on the tidal beach, its front legs in the tsunami-swept jungle.

...This is unbelievable.

The Guardian Spirit, with crossed arms, let out a groan.

-That turtle kid, it just sent 'Aura' 'Telepathically' to 'all races' living in this world, didn't it?

It was as the Guardian Spirit said.

That immense ability instantly resonated across the entire continent.

[The unidentified voice causes the Pure Humans Race to tremble in fear!]

[The unidentified voice causes the Capable Scribes Tribe to drop their scales!]

[The unidentified voice puts the Earth Spirit Tribe on alert!]

[The unidentified voice startles the Fairy Tribe!]

[The unidentified voice aggravates the Ghost Tribe's mood!]

[The unidentified voice makes the Vampiric Tribe swiftly fall asleep!]

[The unidentified voice surprises the Mountain Calamity Tribe, and they continue their work.]

Utter chaos across the continent...

“It's a bit too varied to call it chaos, isn't it...?”

What's going on?

Why aren't they all running away in panic or lying flat on the ground or crying out loud?

‘During the Flame Emperor's time, it was like that...’

Especially the Vampiric Tribe and the Mountain Calamity Tribe. Why are the Vampiric Tribe suddenly falling asleep, and why are the Mountain Calamity Tribe just continuing their work?

"....."

I glanced back and forth between the Black Dragon Witch and the Heretic Inquisitor. Neither avoided my gaze; in fact, they seemed very confident.

“Didn't I tell you? The Vampiric Tribe merged with the Dream Demon race. They just entered a strategic meeting at the racial level. It's very, very, very, very important to consolidate opinions before acting.”

Anastasia said it nonchalantly, as if stating an absolute truth.

“I educated them to continue working if it seems they're not about to die immediately! Swinging a hammer one more time is more beneficial in life!”

Bambolina said it with a ridiculously bright smile.

"Indeed....."

I couldn't help but lament.

“Are these really my close friends and subordinates...”

As I looked at my human relationships, I heard a tsk-tsk-tsk sound.

-Really, birds of a feather flock together. A match made in heaven.

The Guardian Spirit glanced at the hologram while cleaning his ears.

-So, what's this 'flow' the turtle is talking about?

Ah.

That.

'Aura.'

-Huh?

'It's evident in the name of the Constellation. Ki Dragon. The world's Aura flows through the breath of this Constellation.'

-Ho ho.

If the Amazon rainforest is the Earth's lungs, then this Constellation can be considered the lungs of Aura.

The Guardian Spirit wiggled his thick eyebrows.

-Indeed. Indeed. So that's why the kids in that world are exceptionally good at Aura? There's a lot more Aura floating in the atmosphere compared to other worlds?

'That's right.'

-Well then.

The Guardian Spirit nodded as if he understood everything.

-After all, you're damn smart when it comes to Aura, but the Earth Spirit Tribe was learning at an alarmingly fast rate. Now I see, those brats were spoon-fed by the world. Huh? I knew about silver spoons and gold spoons, but an Aura spoon too?

‘...Well, I'm not sure if that's such a good spoon to have.’

-Huh? Why? Isn't it always a good thing if Aura learning is easier?

'.....'

I didn't respond to the Guardian Spirit's question.

-Blessings to you all for your achievements!

The Ki Dragon in the hologram roared again.

-You are truly my priests and warriors!

It was an acknowledgment of those who live.

-But sadly! There are still those who are neither my priests nor warriors, walking on my body!

It was also a denial.

-After being given such a long time, how are there still so many 'worthless ones'!

Worthless ones.

‘Those who can't use Aura.’

The majority of the world's population, who can't use Aura, were referred to as 'worthless' by this world's nature-formed Constellation.

"....."

Anastasia's face darkened.

The use of such [words] was all too familiar to her, having fled from Ukraine.

-I can no longer tolerate those who are 'worthless', unable to accept and feel my breath, using resources that should belong to the worthy.

As the atmosphere in the waiting room grew heavy, the blue Ki Dragon shouted.

-[Selection] will begin!

Then.

A voice echoed in our heads.

[Displaying the 38th floor quest.]

Perhaps it was the consideration of the Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages.

Even we, who had already been eliminated and had no right to participate in the quest, could see the contents of the 38th floor quest.

[The Great Selection]

Difficulty: EX

Objective: The Constellation that has been forming this world since the beginning has awakened. 'The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss' is a being made of Aura, and for this reason, this world was richer in Aura than other worlds.

Now the Ki Dragon wants to claim its dues for those prosperous times.

Those who cannot feel its breath. Those who cannot use or detect Aura. The Ki Dragon treats these people as 'worthless' and seeks to sweep them from this world.

Among the native races of the continent, those who are Aura users will survive.

All others will perish.

Save as many lives as you can!

+

And then, silence fell.

Chapter 257: One Who Did Not Clear the Stage (3)

---

The 38th floor.

Before my regression, it was a place solely conquered by Yoo Soo-Ha.

At that time, I was not part of the [Raid Team]. Far from it, I was just a lowly hunter who couldn't even make it into the rankings.

‘How exactly was it conquered?’

I only learned this much later, from an interview article.

-38th floor? It was damn easy.

The strategy revealed by Flame Emperor in the interview was simple.

-Just do nothing.

Inaction.

-The boss that appears there isn't meant to be defeated. Ah, you know, like those invincible monsters in game tutorials? The ones that can't be killed even with cheats or hacks. Like, the Demon King on the 13th floor or the Librarian that appears on the 21st floor.

To Yoo Soo-Ha, Constellations were like [boss monsters designed for forced defeat], and the elves he personally led were no different from [NPCs in a game].

-The 38th floor boss is the same as those guys.

Therefore, Yoo Soo-Ha's conclusion was simple.

-No need to do anything.

Observation.

Ignorance.

-The boss monster there... something like a Ki Dragon from the sea. Anyway, that thing isn't really hindering stage clearance. It's more like a sieve filtering out those moving from the 38th to the 39th floor.

Hunter Yoo Soo-Ha, who always topped the rankings, acted accordingly.

No hunter could dissuade Yoo Soo-Ha.

Looking back now, it wasn't just his sole opinion.

He was so devilishly unique, making such inhuman decisions, I can no longer say that.

-The NPCs did die in large numbers. But what can you do?

Regarding the Tower's residents as 'NPCs' and Constellations as 'bosses'.

Denying all contexts of those who lived, are living, and will live, and defining all stages as tactical spaces.

Viewing the Tower as a 'dungeon'.

-What matters is us climbing the Tower.

That was not only the Flame Emperor's view but also a principle shared by all who climbed the Tower at that time, and even after my regression, it was a principle that lingered with me for a long time.

'And that principle will bring about the worst outcome in the next stage... the 39th floor.'

I shook my head.

Ending my reminiscence and returning to reality, I heard Anastasia gritting her teeth.

“What the heck is this quest!?”

Anastasia was visibly enraged.

“Selection!? Just killing off kids who haven’t awakened their Aura, isn’t that setting the bar too high!?”

“That’s what I’m saying. They should at least provide an option to handle it with a tribute or something.”

The Countess also couldn’t hide her dismay.

“Hmm! This is quite a predicament.”

Bambolina said, lightly smiling while stroking his chin.

“The Paladin said the creator would never destroy their own world, but the owner of the estate does arrange the garden to their liking. And a deity with a personality is more akin to the owner of an estate.”

Paladin remained silent amidst the heavy atmosphere.

Seeing my companions like this, I bitterly smiled.

‘Not bad, this situation.’

I was satisfied.

‘Compared to before my regression... No, frankly, it’s embarrassingly better.’

No one thought it was a quest that would clear itself if we just stayed put and did nothing.

‘Everyone views the Tower’s residents as people just like themselves.’

Naturally, when you start seeing people as people, you adopt a corresponding attitude.

Thinking of those who can’t use Aura as throwaways, you can no longer consider the same approach.

‘Even if they adopt such an attitude after much deliberation, it's not from the standpoint of a [game player] but that of a [leader].'

Thus, the weight of the decisions they make cannot be the same.

It simply cannot be.

“...Kim Gong-Ja.”

Anastasia called out.

As a leader of the Tower, she turned to me.

“You have something in mind... right?”

Her question was laden with various meanings, each carrying its own weight.

I nodded.

“Yes, of course.”

I looked at the hologram.

There, the Earth Spirit Tribe, along with the other seven races, were displayed, already heading towards the Fire River Council. The Mountain Calamity Tribe was slowly climbing the walls, the Ghost Tribe strode confidently on the main road, and the Vampiric Tribe flapped their wings, hanging on the pillars of the conference.

“I planted seeds there a long time ago and left a farmer to tend to them.”

---

The building of the Fire River Council wasn't imposing.

Rather, it was crude.

A circular amphitheater was dug down to create a basin, and in the center, the chairman sat on the bare ground. The ground was just as hard-packed as the steps, with only some small props used in blood dramas scattered around.

It was hard to believe this place was the [pinnacle of power ruling over the continent].

-Heard some dog barking, Lime.

In the center of the circular basin lay a representative of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

-Wonder if you heard it too, Laimu.

629th Chairman Seimslam.

The hero who decapitated the dragon in the last stage.

The hero had now aged into an old woman. Her shell was wrinkly, her tentacles had lost their plumpness. The severed tentacles hadn't regrown, leaving only one tentacle wriggling.

-They said they'd let those who use Aura live, and kill those who can't... I thought some fearless bastard was messing with me through telepathy. I tried to trace it back, but it was a way higher being than me, so it failed.

Seimslam's remaining tentacle gently scratched her shell.

On the shell of the Mountain Calamity Tribe representative, there was a beautiful pattern painted in blue.

Perhaps influenced by the custom of goblins tattooing their bodies, which I introduced in the first stage as [Primitive Fashionista], it had persisted until now. Though the pattern became more complex over time, there was something uneroded by time, and I felt a bit moved.

-What do you all think?

-We also tried to trace it back but failed!

-We felt something much bigger, much, much bigger than us.

Mountain Calamity Tribe's chairman asked, and Earth Spirit Tribe warriors replied politely. It was a wise stance. At least 11 warriors who underestimated the chairman, thinking she was weak with only one tentacle left, ended up with only one leg themselves.

-It felt too powerful to be just a living being.

-Right. It's more like the will of nature, the violence of the world.

-What are you talking about? So are you saying we should just let those unknown bastards prattle and leave those who can't use Aura to die? Eh?

-This is why it's impossible to have a conversation with the Fairy Tribe. They always jump to conclusions. What I'm saying is, the guy who sent us the telepathy is a damn powerful monster.

-Doesn't that mean we're surrendering!

-It could also mean let's give it a fight.

-We, [The Group Dealing with the Voice in the Head Incident], demand the establishment of an investigative team to thoroughly uncover the conspiracy involved in this incident....

Debate raged in the Fire River Council.

Much had changed in the decades since Seimslam became the chairman, with the Earth Spirit Tribe previously dominating the conference. The multi-racial conference became more adept at handling various situations, but it also meant dozens of opinions easily clashed.

There were also more oddballs spouting strange things.

Just then.

-Everyone, quiet down! Fresh information just came in!

Amidst the uproar in the Fire River Council.

The representative of the Vampiric Tribe, who had been sitting in the middle, seemingly asleep to the world, suddenly opened his eyes and shouted.

-Everyone, close your eyes and take a nap for an hour! I will use [Dream Notification] to send you the footage!

The members of the Fire River Council looked at each other. Soon, one by one, they leaned back in their chairs and fell asleep.

Sleeping during a conference often indicates negligence, but in this case, it was a clear execution of duty.

In the dream brought on by the Vampiric Tribe representative's [Dream Notification], a privilege gained by merging with the Dream Demon Tribe. While it couldn't abuse people in dreams like the Dream Demon Tribe in its prime due to many restrictions, it could send brief footage, and that was enough for now.

-Incredible.

-What kind of monster is that?

Thus, the cutting-edge intelligence obtained by the busy wings of the Vampiric Tribe's intelligence unit was relayed to the members of the Fire River Council.

The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss. The location and identity of the giant turtle were revealed in less than a day.

-It's huge!

-Damn, is that a continent or a turtle? You could live on that thing.

-No matter how sharp the blade, it wouldn't leave a scratch!

-And what's with the Aura surrounding it? No, it seems like its entire body is made of Aura!

One by one, the awakened council members began to stir up commotion again.

-Silence.

Snap!

The strongest entity of this era smacked the ground with his tentacle, quelling the noise.

-Let's sort out the situation first.

The commotion gradually subsided.

Seimslam spoke.

-An unidentified monster, this turtle, called itself the [Deep Sea Dwelling Ki Dragon]. It's probably a being with a special name like the gods we worshiped, so we must seek advice from someone who has directly communicated with the gods.

The council stirred at Seimslam's words.

-Gods?

-Are you referring to beings like [The Great Puppy], Chairman Seimslam? But Lime, hasn't the bloodline of that divine beast ended?

-Damn it! Even when we lost the holy land, we still managed to escape with the descendants of the Great Puppy!

-If only it weren't for the chocolate that came from the new continent, Lime... We, [The Group Commemorating the Great Puppy], strongly recommend the council establish an investigative team to look into the conspiracy of poisoning the divine beast....

-Silence!

Snap!

Seimslam smacked the ground again.

-[The Great Puppy], [The White Lion], [The Serpent God], there was a time when gods were with us. Lime. And there were people like Gorke, who directly communicated with them.

Seimslam scanned the audience.

His gaze transcended the prejudices and distrust inherent to his race, filled with a kind of street wisdom.

-And isn't the second prophet, succeeding Gorke, still alive, waiting for the day his master calls him while sitting alone on the harshest snowy mountain of this continent?

Indeed.

Just as Viper decided to stay in the stage enduring all the time, Uburka also stayed in his homeland.

‘If I also disappear when things get tough, it'll be a problem.’

‘After all, Daddy is a father who needs to watch over his child's independence. But as the eldest son of the family, I'm like the big brother to the Earth Spirit Tribe. Big brothers always meddle, whether the younger siblings are independent or not. Ugor.’

‘So go, Daddy.’

‘I'll be waiting, just like I did before.’

But hoping for a sooner reunion than before.

That was the conversation Uburka and I had when we parted.

‘Such a reliable guy.’

Just as I was proud of how well I raised my son, the Fire River Council decided to formally invite Uburka. Although some protested, not wanting the intervention of an ancestor, they failed to present a practical plan to match their will.

Unproven will is nothing but childishness. Seimslam broke their petulance with his remaining tentacle and shouted.

-Bring the 212th Chairman of the Fire River Council, Uburka!

The summoning ritual commenced.

Uburka had apparently told his descendants to perform a special ritual if they ever needed him.

Twelve warriors with an exceptional amount of Aura gathered, exerting all their strength, shooting a beam of Aura straight into the sky.

Boooooom!

Blue, yellow, apricot – twelve different colors merged in the beam piercing the clouds. The beam, a clear beacon visible even from the opposite side of the continent, lasted barely six seconds before fading.

-Gasp, gasp...

-Can't do this again, Ugor...

The warriors collapsed, drained of their energy.

-But, does this really bring the ancestor?

-I don't know, Ugor. Probably the first time we're using it.

-Even if he comes, it won't be immediate...

Then, how much time passed?

1 minute, 2 minutes, 3 minutes... Just as it was about to hit 200 seconds.

-Ugor?

One of the Earth Spirit Tribe members, looking up at the sky, tilted their head.

-Something like a meteor...

In that instant.

Something crashed with a thunderous roar into the center of the Fire River Council.

Kaboom!

The Fire River Council was thrown into chaos.

-Agh!

-Lime!

Dust engulfed the area like a wave. Those with antennae, horns, wings, or gills trembled under the pressure.

Once the dust settled, a giant figure stood in the crater.

[The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide has descended.]

Uburka.

A living legend had appeared.

-Ugor, I thought you'd call me soon.

Uburka didn't ask why he was summoned.

Obviously, the situation unfolding in this world was clear to anyone.

-Uburka!

Seimslam called out.

-We seek wisdom from you, the former chairman! Do you have any advice for us regarding the threats of that turtle creature?

-Hmm.

Uburka grinned.

-Seeing as you call it a turtle, you've identified the monster. Ugor. You're really quick with your work.

-We appreciate the compliment, but does it relate?

-Of course. My advice is quite simple.

Uburka crossed his arms.

-If you've figured it out, that Ki Dragon is a massive Aura entity. It's like a pure Aura crystal.

Uburka, a martial artist who reached the heavens, sat in a lotus position and inhaled.

It was a basic Aura cultivation technique.

-So, Ugor, that means.

A white stream of Ki flowed into his nostrils, sweeping through his body before escaping.

-Why not just do this, Churrrrrup, and suck it in?

The council members tilted their heads.

-Suck it in...?

-What do you mean?

Uburka stood up, grinning.

-You don't get it.

-What?

-You fools! That huge-ass turtle is made entirely of [pure Aura]. The Aura you all have been desperately building up. Ugor, that massive body is nothing less than an [Elixir of Life], superior even to a thousand-year-old ginseng!

Only then did the council members pause.

Realizing Uburka's point, their eyes widened or antennae twitched, and they began to murmur.

Among them, Uburka delivered the final blow.

-Gather people. Not just those who can use Aura, but also those who haven't even stepped into it. Tens, hundreds, thousands, millions of people. Ugor. This isn't a crisis but an opportunity! Even those stuck in low-level cultivation can soar to first-class in one go, a once-in-a-lifetime golden opportunity!

-.....!

Mass Aura cultivation.

Or rather, should be named a Constellation-Absorbing Technique, as Uburka proposed.

-Gather everyone, have them sit on the turtle's back in a lotus position, and cultivate!

The council members gaped.

My colleagues, watching the children through the hologram, also gaped.

And I smiled lightly.

‘I really raised my son well.’

Yoo Soo-Ha did nothing and conquered the 38th stage.

My method, declared to be different from the Flame Emperor's, was somewhat similar.

‘Now they’ll reap the benefits on their own. Well done!’

Inaction.

But unlike Yoo Soo-Ha, who did nothing and let hundreds of thousands of children die, my inaction would lead to a markedly different outcome.

Beyond the hologram, my son was proclaiming that [different outcome].

With a wicked smile on his face.

-Let’s suck up that turtle bastard like beef soup and all become top-class masters!

Chapter 258:

Sealing the Dragon

(1)

---

-Whether it's a Ki Dragon or whatever, it's just a mass of Aura!

-Let's suck it up like an elixir and nourish ourselves!

An outrageously simple proposition.

Yet, this simplicity stirred the members of the Fire River Council. The amphitheater-like sunken meeting room quickly filled with buzzing voices.

-To absorb such a monstrous creature through Aura cultivation? Is that even possible?

-That's nonsense.

-But if it really is a pure collection of Aura as the monster claims, then there's no reason we can't devour it....

Snap!

Chairman Seimslam smacked the ground with his tentacle.

-Quiet.

Everyone instantly silenced. In the Fire River Council, where the rule of the strong prevailed, the chairman's action was understood as "Excuse me, but I'd appreciate it if you weaker ones would kindly shut up."

Seimslam was strong, and a graceful silence followed.

-I ask Uburka. Are you saying we can eliminate this monster through Aura cultivation?

-Ugor! In my opinion, that's exactly right.

Although the much younger Mountain Calamity Tribe used informal language, Uburka didn't mind at all. He just chuckled as if indulging in a mischievous prank.

-Think about it. What we eat becomes part of our bodies, right? Similarly, the Aura we absorb, even if it comes from that creature's breath, becomes our Aura.

Uburka clenched his fists, making a thumping sound.

-So, you take a bite, I take a bite. If we all come together and share bite by bite, Ugor! That turtle will vanish without a trace, leaving us stronger!

-Hmm.

Seimslam pondered deeply.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe was naturally smaller in size, similar or even smaller than goblins. Now that the Earth Spirit Tribe had evolved into Hobgoblins, they were no match. Even the one sitting next to Seimslam, arms crossed, was Uburka—the largest warrior in Earth Spirit Tribe history.

-Lime.

So imagine how small Seimslam looked next to Uburka?

Even Seimslam's tentacles, the pride of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, were reduced to just one. His old snail shell was wrinkled and unsightly.

Yet, even next to the green mountain that was Uburka, Seimslam was dignified, and his dignity felt natural.

-Listen, everyone.

Maybe it was inevitable.

-We'll now decide the Fire River Council's stance on this unprecedented situation.

In that world, my teachings of the Demonic Cult had spread, and the Earth Spirit Tribe was trained and disciplined according to those teachings. The Mountain Calamity Tribe had been subservient to them for hundreds of years. The teachings of Demonic Heaven permeated the Fire River Council. Therefore, if Uburka was the first Heavenly Demon, then Seimslam was the 417th.

The scars from losing all but one tentacle were not a source of shame under the doctrine of Demonic Heaven but a source of pride. The more scars, the longer the path of the sword; the deeper the wounds, the freer the Demonic Heavenly God Art.

-We accept the former chairman Uburka's advice and will absorb the Ki Dragon's Aura!

It was the moment the Fire River Council's stance on the Ki Dragon incident was decided.

Soon after, as if waiting for this landmark decision, the council members stood up.

-Chairman! We'll send a summons to all of the Fairy Tribe!

-What are you antler heads rushing for? The Serpent God went first, so we horn-bearers have the right of way!

-Ho ho... everyone is so eager. But can we really get there without our ships?

-Ah, everyone's so greedy. We, [The Group Firmly Against Monopolizing the Ki Dragon], strongly propose establishing a committee for fair and equal use of the Ki Dragon....

-Silence!

Seimslam smacked the ground again.

-I know you're here representing your tribes, Lime! But that's true for 'everyone'! Everyone here represents their respective tribes!

The council members paused.

Seimslam continued.

-Therefore, we can come to a conclusion representing 'all tribes'! And it's our duty as council members to reach such a conclusion!

This statement caused the council members to cough awkwardly.

She was the first in history to become chairman without being from the Earth Spirit Tribe. Not only was Seimslam strong, but she also possessed the political acumen to maintain that strength.

Before long, a consensus was reached in the Fire River Council.

-Our Vampiric Tribe will immediately announce this to the world. We'll use Dream Notification to spread the word.

A Vampiric Tribe council member spoke.

Other tribal representatives followed.

-Our Fairy Tribe will mobilize all merchants to host [Pilgrims]. Just announcing it will cause chaos.

-Our Ghost Tribe will ensure the safety of the roads to prevent bandits from causing trouble.

-Our Gill Fish Tribe will gather ships for the pilgrims. Leave the large-scale passenger transport to us.

-Our Mountain Calamity Tribe will handle construction, Lime. That turtle is huge, so we'll need construction to climb onto its shell.

-Our Earth Spirit Tribe will mobilize all Blood Drama Troupes. Ugor. We'll share the troupes' know-how to make Aura cultivation easy for beginners through learning Blood Dramas.

Even after resolving these issues, Seimslam was not satisfied.

-Fools! The most important problem remains! To eat turtle soup, we first need to catch the turtle. Lime. But that turtle is alive! Discussing which plate to use and how to cook it before that is absurd!

Again, the council members' faces flushed with embarrassment.

Watching them with content, Uburka, the former chairman of the Fire River Council, laughed.

-Ugor. Right. It's indeed a tiny problem.

-Tiny? It's a pretty major problem, Lime.

-One could say that. That Ki Dragon has a [self-awareness].

Uburka stroked his chin.

-The dragon you recently beheaded and threw into the sea....

-Recently? That's ancient history from decades ago, Lime.

-Ah, sorry, Ugor. When you become a Constellation and focus solely on training, your sense of time becomes quite different from ordinary people. Anyway, that dragon you obliterated had no self-awareness. It just cried when hurt, retaliated when attacked, nothing more than an animal. But that turtle is different.

Uburka scratched his chin while speaking.

-How a massive Aura mass developed a [self-awareness] is a fascinating topic for scholarly types who love to think, but Ugor, it puts us in a tough spot while they have their book party.

-It's a messy situation. If it gets annoyed with the parasites clinging to it, it'll kick them off. To prevent that, we have to decapitate the turtle as previously mentioned....

Seimslam scratched her remaining tentacle on her shell.

-It's far too big for us to handle. How many warriors will die, or even if they do, whether we can decapitate it, I can't say.

-Ugor. We could just stick to it and start Aura cultivation right away. Eventually, its resistance will weaken.

-Don't think with your standards, Lime. Aura cultivation should ideally be done in a calm state over a long period, but the turtle's shell is a terrible place for meditation, acting up unpredictably.

Seimslam scratched the back of her head with her tentacle.

-Plus, if it acts up at that size, it'll surely affect the world. Ships traveling between the New Continent and the mainland will capsize, cities on the coast will be swept away by earthquakes and tsunamis, and the damage will be unimaginable. Heck, the pressure might cause a series of volcanic eruptions, popping like acne. Lime.

Seimslam sunk into deep thought.

The extent of her concerns was vivid even beyond the hologram. The fate of the continent and all tribes depended on this council, and she was its chairman.

And her being the council's 'chairman' also meant she wasn't the 'king'.

-Excuse me.

A representative of the Vampiric Tribe raised his hand.

The same person who had used Dream Notification to reveal the location and identity of the Ki Dragon.

-I have a clever idea.

Since Seimslam was not the king but the chairman, she didn't have to come up with all the solutions herself.

A council is a place for exchanging ideas.

As Seimslam herself said, the council members gathered were those whose job was to propose ideas.

-A clever idea? What is it?

-That would be....

The Vampiric Tribe council member began his story. His lips moved precisely, and his neatly groomed Kaiser mustache followed suit.

Moments later, as he closed his mouth, the council members who heard the story were engulfed in shock.

-Oh, indeed.

-Certainly a clever idea.

-Hmm. But is that even possible?

-Having a [self-awareness] means it's possible, doesn't it?

Amidst the flowing opinions, Seimslam tapped the table with her sole tentacle.

-It's worth a try. Lime.

The Vampiric Tribe council member smirked.

However, Seimslam's statement was not yet finished.

-We need to attract the turtle's attention for that clever plan to work effectively.

Sounds of agreement like 'Hmm!' and 'Hmph!' resonated around the meeting room.

The task was no different from putting a bell on a cat, an understandably challenging proposition, but Chairman Seimslam was unfazed.

-I'll volunteer first.

The council members hesitated.

Chairman Seimslam looked at them and chuckled in the unique way of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

-Think about it, you moldy fellows. The first ones to contact the Ki Dragon and sit in meditation will be the lucky ones to savor the biggest honey, right?

".....!"

-As the 629th chairman, I declare that I will lead the vanguard. I have no intention of entrusting the role of the lucky one to anyone else.

Seimslam turned her head to look at Uburka.

-What about you, ancestor?

-Ugor. Whether the turtle belches or throws a tantrum, I'm confident in sticking to its shell and savoring the honey.

Uburka smiled, revealing his fangs.

-As the older one, it would be shameful to covet only the honey. Ugor. But it would be embarrassing as a younger brother to always rely on the elder in times of need.

In the past, the Fire River Council had rejected Uburka and my help.

Even on the 37th floor, Uburka did not intervene, and Viper, known as the Serpent God, also refused to participate.

Issues of this era should be handled by the people of this era.

Issues of this world should be addressed by the characters of this world.

Such was the atmosphere at the Fire River Council.

But...

-Ha!

Seimslam snorted.

-Willpower is only beautiful when there is the strength to prove it, Lime. Willpower without proof is just vain struggling. And as a result, those who suffer are not the vain strugglers, but Lime, the powerless people who should have been protected by them.

Seimslam slammed the desk with a whip-like sound.

-That turtle bastard said it would kill all those who cannot use Aura.

The council members' expressions darkened as they recalled the Ki Dragon's declaration.

-It's essentially the same as saying it will kill all newborn babies who can't understand language.

Seimslam slammed the desk again.

-I'm not sure if there's any creature that wouldn't get angry when its offspring is threatened, but we are not that kind of creature.

-Uoooo! That's right!

The council members raised their voices.

-Correct, Chairman!

-We are not that kind of creatures!

-We are not...! We are not...!

-We, [The Group That Isn't That Kind of Creature], openly support the chairman's declaration and....

-Silence!

Seimslam smacked the desk again.

Amid the awkward silence of the council members, Seimslam turned to Uburka, annoyed yet hopeful.

-Therefore, we have to use even dog poop if it's useful. Can you help, ancestor?

-Ugor. Calling it dog poop is harsh, but alright.

Uburka laughed.

-I'll help.

-Good.

Seimslam nodded.

-Then, centering around the ancestor and me, we will form a special task force to attract the turtle's attention, Lime. As mentioned earlier, those who volunteer for the task force will have the right to be the first ones on the turtle's shell to meditate.

The task force was quickly formed. Requests to join came flooding in like ants to dropped honey candies.

The Fire River Council was a gathering of both council members and warriors. With their chairman leading the way, there was nothing to fear.

-Hmm. It's a bit lacking.

However, Seimslam frowned.

-Excluding me and the ancestor, frankly, the quality is a bit lacking. It would be perfect if about 200 to 300 more powerful guys would drop out of nowhere....

-Kuk-kuk-kuk.

It was at that moment that the doors of the Fire River Council opened.

-I've been waiting for that.

The large doors opened, letting in sunlight.

The sunlight that couldn't make it in cast long shadows on the floor. Hundreds of shadows, especially the horns on their heads, stood in a row.

-We who serve the Serpent God.

-The Serpent God's direct Shadow Troop.

-All of us from the [256 True Color Ghost Division] are here!

A moment of silence ensued.

-Hmm.

Seimslam propped her chin.

Uburka scratched the back of his head.

-Hey, current generation.

-Hmm.

-You said you'd use dog poop if necessary.

-I did.

-Are we using those?

-Hmm... just wait a moment, Lime.

I'm in deep thought right now...."

After a long time passed, that day's Fire River Council came to an end.

Soon after, those who took on the mission began their journey towards The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss.

It was the opening of the pilgrimage route that would come to be known as the "Path of Aura."

---

Guooooooooo-!!

The Ki Dragon, the strongest among the dragons dwelling in the deep sea, roared.

The Ki Dragon, which had sunk into the deep sea, was incredibly powerful, the strongest in this world.

-Uaaaak!

-Gaah...!

Both Uburka and the entire 256 True Color Ghost Division were defeated. Even all together, they were no match.

The Ki Dragon in the deep sea was unique in the world.

Anyway, it roared.

-Uaaaah, it's over!

-Damn, let's run!!

The worthless ones who couldn't awaken their Aura fled.

But the Ki Dragon was stronger than them.

-Ah, damn...!

-If only I had studied Aura more diligently...!

Therefore, their regrets were nothing but vain hopes.

Guooooooooo-!!

The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss.

That was the moment it completely and irreversibly annihilated all those who couldn't awaken their Aura....

---

-Brother, that turtle is smiling?

-Leave it. Must be having a nice dream.

The leader of the Vampiric Tribe said as he lit a cigarette.

Behind him, tens of thousands of Vampiric Tribe members—merged with the Dream Demons—flapped their wings, shooting out flames.

Chapter 259:

Sealing the Dragon

(2)

---

[The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss sea falls into sleep.]

The massive turtle slowly buried its head in the jungle.

Kwoong!

Dust and sand whirled around the palm trees felled by its massive body.

[The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss sea falls into a deep sleep.]

The Ki Dragon's back rose and fell gently. It began to breathe comfortably. The breath was so immense that, with each exhale and inhale through the Ki Dragon's nostrils, the jungle foliage trembled as if caught in a fierce wind.

"Hmm."

Beneath the trembling palms, stirred by the dragon's breath, there was someone flapping their wings.

"We have selected only the best Dream Demons from our race, who are adept at manipulating, guiding, and leading dreams. There's no need to worry."

A high-ranking member of the Vampiric Tribe.

During his speech, the vampire never blinked. His posture was awkward, and the language he spoke seemed jumbled and clumsy, as if translated by a machine.

It was expected.

This vampire was a kind of conduit. Currently, he was completely possessed by the Dream Demons, his memory, mind, and even his body fully under their control.

"Ugor."

Uburka looked somewhat perplexed in front of him.

"Excuse me, but what's your name...?"

-[We] have no name.

The handsome vampire stated blandly.

-We are us.

"[As crazy as 'Daddy is a lunatic'] is a pointless proposition."

-For us, there is no you and no I. Only dreams. In dreams, anyone can become you, and anyone can be I. That's why we are us.

Uburka shrugged his shoulders.

"Ah, well, I take it as you saying there's plenty of you. Alright?"

-.....

"Your silence seems like a yes. Ugor. So, Dream Demon gentlemen, or should I say gentlemen and ladies, how long can you keep that Ki Dragon asleep?"

Uburka pointed at the behemoth.

The Ki Dragon was unimaginably huge, like an island. This monstrous island took a deep breath every approximately 20 minutes, exhaling and inhaling with a vast, echoing sound.

A literal heaving mountain.

"Now is the time! Finish the construction quickly, Lime!"

On the slope of that heaving mountain, snails were crawling up with great effort.

"We must complete all work before the dragon awakes!"

"Surround the whole body with support structures! We need to create space for as many people as possible to simultaneously perform Aura synthesis. Lime. Keep in mind that this thing keeps moving and adjust the construction accordingly!"

"We will finish it within the day!"

They were the Mountain Calamity Tribe, in charge of construction for this operation.

Thousands of Mountain Calamity Tribe members climbed onto the body of the monster. Unlike most races that had to walk on the ground, the Mountain Calamity Tribe could climb walls by secreting a sticky mucus.

Even now, they were the same. The slightly trembling mountain slope was just a light picnic course for them. They wielded tools and lumber with four or five tentacles and started the construction. From afar, they looked like tiny people crawling on the body of the giant Gulliver.

"We can't let those little guys get hurt during the construction."

Uburka commented.

"Millions are flocking from all over the continent right now. It might even exceed a million. They all need to cling to it and absorb its Aura for this to barely work, but if that dragon wakes up, it's all for naught."

-7 days.

The vampire, possessed by the Dream Demon, spoke.

Uburka immediately dropped his nonchalant demeanor and turned to the vampire with a serious expression.

"7 days? You can keep it asleep for 7 days? Ugor. That's impressive...."

-Our Dream Demons, if classified in your terms, number a staggering 800,000. These 800,000 Dream Demons are creating a sea illusion, showing the cool origins of waves in fantasies, and fulfilling the Ki Dragon's desire to tear apart and kill impure beings. They are presenting a continuous dream. 800,000 of them.

"....."

-We satisfy the happiness of the Ki Dragon, console its sorrows, guide it to where its sorrow was born to overcome its trauma, and support it in understanding why it exists, and if it must exist, what the purpose of that existence is. 800,000 Dream Demons are working on it.

The vampire sighed softly.

-Anyway, for the next 7 days, we'll ensure that monster sleeps soundly without even snoring. How much Aura you can absorb from this monster in these 7 days will be the key to this operation. Ideally, absorb the Aura vigorously enough to shrink it down like a doll.

With that, as if concluding his words, the vampire flapped his wings.

At that moment, Uburka reached out and grabbed the vampire's leg. The flapping continued, but the vampire couldn't fly away.

-What is it?

The vampire—now a Dream Demon—asked incredulously.

"Sorry, but. Ugor. I still have something to ask you."

-Ask.

"From what I know, hundreds of years ago, before our daddy visited your dreamy or whatever world. You guys were just selfish, weren't you?"

-.....

"You didn't care whether the Merfolk or Earth Spirit Tribe outside died or lived as long as you could expand your dream world. You were content living in dreams, enjoying endless plays. But why, what change of heart made you cooperate with us on such a monumental event involving the fate of our races?"

Silence lingered for a moment.

-People don't trust in goodwill, Chairman of the Fire River Council.

"Regrettably, I only trust my own goodwill."

-Half right, half wrong.

"Hmm?"

Uburka tilted his head.

Looking down at the largest Earth Spirit Tribe in history, the Dream Demon slightly lifted the corner of his mouth.

-You not only trust in your goodwill but also in your father's goodwill.

"....."

-Tell your father when you see him. Next time he visits our world, we won't be so easily subdued as [last time]. Even the creator who claimed to have made this continent was put to sleep by us. Would your father, revered as a god by you, be any different!

For the first time, the Dream Demon laughed out loud. As Uburka's grip weakened, the Dream Demon pulled away and flew into the sky.

Flap, flap, flap!

As one Dream Demon flew away, hundreds, thousands of vampires followed. They had been waiting in the dark shadows of the jungle for the conversation to end. Countless vampires flapped their wings, and their wings, along with the palm leaves, covered the sky.

And soon, they vanished into the distance.

"Ugor."

Uburka chuckled bitterly.

"Going around capturing people, regardless of their race. Our daddy, truly a man burdened with sins."

Clang! Clang!

The sound of the Mountain Calamity Tribe working with their tools echoed through the heart of the jungle.

---

"Amazing! Truly incredible!"

We were watching the whole story unfold from the disqualified contestants' waiting room.

The Mountain Calamity Tribe had actually finished the construction in just one day. The wooden beams and stairs formed a geometric harmony, allowing anyone to easily climb onto the monster's body. The Heretic Inquisitor's eyes sparkled as he admired the holographic architecture.

"The architectural knowledge I taught is still intact! The empire has fallen, and we've been living abroad for hundreds of years. Ahaha! It's more delightful than I thought to see that my teachings haven't been forgotten by the children!"

"You consider them your children only at times like this..."

"What are you talking about, King of Death? I've always regarded the Mountain Calamity Tribe as my children! I'm proud to have nurtured and cared for them."

Yeah. The image of a very affectionate parent who gifts their children a slave from the Ghost Tribe for Christmas, saying, 'Kids, this year I brought you a Ghost Tribe slave as a present! Be careful not to break it while you abuse it!' springs to mind.

"...It truly is a magnificent sight."

Black Dragon Witch murmured from the side of the couch.

"The Earth Spirit Tribe and Mountain Calamity Tribe, along with the Ghost Tribe, have almost all arrived. Other races are also gathering steadily. ...We might actually clear the stage without any harm."

The hologram showed a scene of races from all over the continent converging.

Many of them were Aura users. When the warriors took the lead and swung their swords, the wildly overgrown jungle trees flew away like straw. Where the trees were cut down, roads were formed. Like hundreds of spread-out blood vessels, main roads and alleys appeared throughout the jungle, and through them, the races walked unimpeded.

Undoubtedly, the jungle was pulsating with [all races] at that moment.

-This way to the Aura absorption ascent!

The Fairy Tribe set up stalls to welcome visitors. Where people gather, money gathers, and where money gathers, fairies gather.

Unfortunately, that's what the Fairy Tribe is in this world.

-Feeling tired from Aura synthesis? Oh my, miraculously, here's the famous fatigue recovery white ginseng in abundance! What's the use of accumulating Aura if you're just tired? A true master is not someone who accumulates Aura, but someone who enjoys life! Have a bowl of white ginseng soup before you go!

-If you meditate in the lotus position all day without sleep, it'll be disastrous! You need at least seven hours of sleep a day! There are many nasty bugs here, and the leaves are sharp, making it impossible to sleep, really impossible. But don't worry! Cozy hammocks are prepared for you!

-Buy insect repellent! If you apply it to your body, you won't get bitten at all! Buy insect repellent!

.....

Isn't this a bit too spirited?

Aren't you guys there to make money rather than absorb Aura?

We all looked at the Countess in disbelief.

"Eh? Why are you looking at me?"

Still transformed into a cat, the Countess leisurely scratched her chin.

"Money should be made when there's an opportunity. Money is a flow that needs to be grasped when fortune comes. In that sense, I think I've raised my children well. If I could, I'd even send the subordinates of Sang-Ryun to learn from these kids."

"Countess... No, never mind. Just stay as you are forever..."

The Paladin patted the cat's back and sighed. Meow, the Countess contentedly settled on the Paladin's lap.

While the disqualified contestants' waiting room was leisurely, the characters in the hologram were bustling with activity.

-Now's the time, oooooo!

-Leave it to me, FFFFFFF!

256 members of the Ghost Tribe climbed onto the Ki Dragon's shell and sat in the lotus position in unison.

-Hhhhhhhm!

Then, the Ghost Tribe members each radiated a brilliant Aura, performing the Aura Absorption Technique.

The so-called 256 True Color Ghost Division.

The legacy left by Viper and currently, in real-time, the culprits tormenting our hearts. What's with that codename? Do you really think that's the best, Celestial Martial Guild Master...?

"Are all 256 of them Vipers?"

Black Dragon Witch said with a disgusted expression.

"No. Only one of them is the Celestial Martial Guild Master. The rest must be Viper's elite disciples or their descendants."

"How do you know? It's not easy to distinguish them here..."

"Somehow, I just know."

I grinned wryly.

'After all, I've become a rival.'

There was one among them where gray and violet Aura intertwined. The codename would probably correspond to the gray something or other.

Centered around that Aura, like a rainbow, the brilliant Auras burned brightly.

Apparently, Viper had established [Celestial Martial Guild] in this other world from floor 36 to 38.

"Anyway, now the opportunity has come to catch an [Impossible] rated monster."

I smiled.

'Go, guys.'

And I cheered in my heart.

'Drain it dry, down to the last drop of marrow.'

Not only the rainbow-colored Ghost Division but also the Earth Spirit Tribe, Pure Humans, and other constantly arriving warriors and workers of different races, all gathered around [The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss] and sat in the lotus position.

On the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th day...

The jungle soon became a sea of people.

The warriors approached those who did not know how to synthesize Aura and guided them kindly. The 'mother' of the Earth Spirit Tribe held a child's hand and climbed the wooden stairs made by the Mountain Calamity Tribe. None of them seemed to think they should display hatred towards each other.

Something unimaginable a thousand years ago.

But facing the arrival of [The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss], the races united as one.

'Go.'

I clenched my fist.

'This 38th floor isn't being cleared by gods from another world.'

Despite the night, the jungle was as bright as the Milky Way.

The Auras raised by countless children burned in red, green, blue, and the colors imbued in their imaginations.

The night sky shimmered like silk, soaked in the colors emitted by those races.

'You guys. You are the ones breaking this quest!'

And.

The father's encouragement undoubtedly reached the children.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe is about to evolve!]

Chapter 260:

Sealing the Dragon

(3)

---

Let's discuss the last [enemy] humanity fought in the tower for a moment.

---

This story is from before my return.

Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha, true to the alias he received, was good at burning everything.

-Hahaha! Haha!

His ability was to burn objects well, his sin was to burn people equally well, and lastly, his cruelty was to burn the world itself.

And that was the misfortune of everyone else.

-Being a god feels pretty good!

Yoo Soo-Ha possessed the Fairy Tribe and led the other races. They burned anything that obstructed their path. Burned people they encountered on the road. Even tried to burn the world surrounding them.

The Karma Flame Army.

That's what Yoo Soo-Ha called the fairies following him. Indeed, they were the incarnate of karma flames that descended upon the continent, burning everything that came into their sight.

-Burn it!

When Yoo Soo-Ha commanded,

-For his highness! For his highness! For his highness!

The elves chanted in response.

Their voices were fierce, sharp, and venomous.

-For the sublime being!!

Primitive worship.

-O god of fire, we offer these sacrifices! Please accept them!

Human sacrifice.

-Burn!

-Purify the world!

-We are the only ones chosen by the god of fire! The only ones with worth!

Ethnocentrism.

-Your weakness, your hunger, it's all because you were born lowly!

-How dare you, the lowly trash, step on the sacred flames!

Contempt and discrimination.

-They are strong, their rank is high, all because they took it from us!

-Priest, no, the former priest! Look! This is proof you're no longer favored by the god of fire!

Hatred and lust for power.

-Yes, that's right. This is how people live.

-Love? Friendship? Dedication? Bullshit. Don't rely on such fantasies! How can people love each other!

-Come on, kids! You are the true humanity! Now, unify this continent! Understand!

The elves saluted.

-For his highness! For his highness! For his highness!

Yoo Soo-Ha set the world ablaze.

And to lead that fire, he kept purchasing the [Character Possession] and [Divine Descent] items whenever the timing was right.

-Why bother with farming? Are you a fool?

-Farming isn't easy, you know. You need to make a farm, and to make one you need the technological prowess, for which you need researchers, and to support them you need money, and to gather money you need a market, and for a market, you need a village, and for a village, you need a ruler, who uses all these - the villagers, market, money, researchers, and farmers - to finally after six months or a year, produce tiny grains of rice. Oh.

Yoo Soo-Ha scoffed.

-Are you all fools?

The elves growled.

-We are not fools!

-We are not fools! We, [Flame Cross Order] who are not fools, strongly support the oracle of the god of fire!

It seemed like lava, not blood, coursed through their veins.

The elves, naturally born with physical and intellectual prowess, channeled all of it into killing. Born with the innate ability to sense Aura, the elves were formidable killing machines. These killing machines, with their superior brains, pondered how to efficiently sever limbs of their enemies, how to climb to higher positions.

Zealous followers of the god they called the Flame Emperor.

In that era, that's what the Fairy Tribe was.

-Little rascals. Carrying heads in their hands, they're not fools, I see.

Yoo Soo-Ha stood on the altar, igniting Aura in his right hand.

Whoosh!

The head of a Mountain Calamity Tribe member he was holding burned instantly, turning to ash.

-You don't need to farm! If you're hungry, eat the crops others have harvested. Kill their cherished chickens and throw a feast!

-You don't need villages either. If you kill everyone in the village, isn't that a luxury hotel just for you? Leave a few villagers to serve you, and relax in that hotel for a couple of weeks. Eat the food and meat they bring regularly. Isn't that paradise? Huh?

-After two weeks, kill the food-bearing villagers too. Kill them all. How does that feel? Light, right? After resting for a fortnight, you feel unstressed and energized again, right? That's it. Guys, that's it.

-Time to find the next hotel!

The Fairy Tribe shouted.

-For his highness! For his highness! For his highness!

-For the god of fire!

-For his highness!

Wherever the Karma Flame Army went, nothing was left. Yearlong crops were burned, prized cows in barns were scorched and roasted. Everything the people had painstakingly built for tomorrow, next year, for the future, crumbled to ashes overnight.

All that remained was an unbearable reality. Whenever the Karma Flame Army plundered a village, they deliberately left five or six people alive, but only after breaking their legs, arms, or backs. The surviving villagers blankly saw their vanished past and severed future, the corpses overflowing at the village edges. And then,

After the Karma Flame Army left, ropes quietly hung on the streets. The surviving villagers hung themselves there.

Yoo Soo-Ha, the tyrant who set the world on fire.

However, he encountered a crisis on the 39th floor, and upon reaching the 40th floor, he fell into unprecedented danger.

It was a mystery that he even faced a crisis.

The Karma Flame Army had long exterminated many races. They tore the Mountain Calamity Tribe to death, nailed the Ghost Tribe, beheaded the Pure Humans, burned the Gill Fish Tribe, and trapped the Vampiric Tribe to death.

Who, from where, would dare to bring crisis to the god of fire?

-Ugor.

Only one race.

For thousands of years, as the continent groaned in the fiery hell, the only children who escaped [extinction].

-Who's that? The crazy elf leader.

Earth Spirit Tribe.

Their world was harsh. Only the strong survived in the ever-burning inferno. Luckily, they were tenacious. They survived doggedly, planted seeds, and a few of those seeds grew into warriors.

Yoo Soo-Ha's opponent on the 40th floor was them, the Earth Spirit Tribe.

-What about you? 38th floor... No, you won't understand if I put it like that, being NPC monsters. Well. Right. How did you survive the The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss or whatever?

-We survived.

-Interesting. How?

-Dozens among us can use Aura. Those dozens clung to the Ki Dragon and absorbed as much Aura as possible for as long as time allowed.

-Hmm. So...

-That's right.

Kwoong.

Fourteen members of the Earth Spirit Tribe stepped forward.

-We are the last of the Earth Spirit Tribe in this world.

-.....

-Despite all our kin being dead, we survived and became incomparably stronger than before.

Yoo Soo-Ha let out a short sneer.

-Just fourteen of you left and you dare call yourselves a race? Ridiculous. Fine, dirt-poor brats. I'll send you comfortably to join your million kin today!

But.

That day, Yoo Soo-Ha did not accomplish the quest.

Instead, he had to admit he was woefully unprepared to face [these enemies] and had no choice but to retreat.

Usually, he could've easily won by charging with his Karma Flame Army.

But for some reason... Yoo Soo-Ha lost the trust of the elves on the 39th floor.

Not just lost, but became the enemy of all elves.

-Damn it.

Yoo Soo-Ha had no allies. There were rumors of a romance with the Saintess, but in hindsight, it was probably just gossip spread by irresponsible media.

Even the fairies who could've been his subordinates had turned their backs on him.

The term 'all alone' was made for Yoo Soo-Ha.

-Fighting unfairly with numbers, huh? Fine! Fuckers. I'll prepare thoroughly and come back! Understand!

[Retreating from the 40th floor.]

[You have failed to achieve the quest!]

[Please try again next time.]

Thus, Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha's unbridled conquest of the tower paused here.

He wasn't exactly defeated by the 40th floor boss. He just retreated. There weren't many who mocked this as Yoo Soo-Ha's [failure].

After all, he was the legend, Flame Emperor - Yoo Soo-Ha, who had conquered every stage from the 11th to the 39th floor.

-Breaking news.

Yoo Soo-Ha wasn't the only one frustrated on the 40th floor.

-The Black Dragon Guild's assault on the 40th floor of the tower.

-They were confident this time they'd show the true strength of a top-tier guild, right?

-Unfortunately, they returned empty-handed again.

Her fame overshadowed by Yoo Soo-Ha, she, the most powerful in the tower, set out to reclaim her guild's honor. She attacked with all the elites of the Black Dragon.

[Retreating from the 40th floor.]

[You have failed to achieve the quest!]

[Please try again next time.]

She too failed.

Unable to defeat "the mere fourteen remaining Earth Spirit Tribe members," the Black Dragon Witch retreated. She had killed six of them and injured four. That was the limit of the Black Dragon Witch's power.

Eventually,

-Number one in the Hunter rankings!

-Flame Emperor has once again soloed the boss!

The one who landed the final blow on the prey wounded by the Black Dragon Witch was Yoo Soo-Ha, who had been waiting for the right moment for revenge.

Despite a previous retreat, the Flame Emperor remained the unshakable top-ranked hunter. With six corpses and four wounded, the remaining Earth Spirit Tribe members stood no chance against Yoo Soo-Ha.

-Damn it!

-Cursed brats, they've been a real pain!

Yoo Soo-Ha cursed as he set the Earth Spirit Tribe's heads ablaze.

With that, the last of the Earth Spirit Tribe on the continent perished, marking the extinction of a race.

-You...

The Earth Spirit Tribe member opened his mouth. He was the last remaining one. Held by the head in Yoo Soo-Ha's grasp, his entire body burning, he recited emotionlessly.

-You will be cursed.

-Huh?

-You're not a god, but a devil. You masqueraded as a god and led the fairies down a devil's path. You set the world on fire and destroyed it. Everything is your karma. If there is truly a god in this world, not a devil like you...

-What the hell are you talking about, monster?

-You will surely face revenge.

Woosh.

The Earth Spirit Tribe member's head burned to the brain. Only after that, his words disappeared. Even though his throat was burned, his tongue turned to ash, and his bones melted, the last of the Earth Spirit Tribe used Aura to leave his final words.

-Bastard.

Yoo Soo-Ha brushed the ash from his hands with a flick.

-Talking about revenge, such insignificant beings.

Thus, Yoo Soo-Ha conquered the 40th floor of the tower.

Media outlets waged wars to get an interview with Yoo Soo-Ha. On the internet, people were divided between praising and mocking him, proving how significant the name Yoo Soo-Ha was in their lives. Hunters ridiculed the incompetent Black Dragon Witch, and someone like me admired Yoo Soo-Ha.

That was the era.

That was the day.

-Talk? Ah, talking. Good. Very civilized.

-But I set the rules for the conversation.

That very night, the Saintess died.

-But you know I'm the Flame Emperor. You saw that the Saintess died by my hand.

-Then you should die too.

An F-rank hunter also died.

Thus.

The 40th floor was the highest stage humanity had ever conquered in a standard manner.

Although I briefly visited the 50th floor to meet Constellation Killer, it was a trick using a bug. It was not officially recognized. Before and after my return, the last realm humanity had ever reached was up to the 40th floor.

The being who once defeated the Flame Emperor and made the Black Dragon Witch retreat on the 40th floor.

That being, who made me choose 'Goblin' as my race amidst the mockery of my peers, left a deep impression on my mind.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe is undergoing evolution!]

That very being was now entering my timeline.

---

The change began with a small Hopgoblin child.

-Ugor?

The child sat cross-legged between his mother on the left and father on the right. Tiny toes wiggled. The parents preferred to channel their Aura into their child rather than themselves. As warriors at the bottom of the Fire River Council, their combined Aura cultivation technique was quite exceptional.

That's why the child was the first to experience the glory of evolution.

-My child?

-This is...

The child began to glow.

His parents were shocked, but soon realized this change was not limited to their child.

-Hmm?

-Ugor?

Whoosh!

The Earth Spirit Tribe members, whether perched on the Dragon's back, sitting atop its knee, or just on a claw, began to glow one after another.

-What, why is my body...

-This is ominous! Something terrible is happening, Ugor!

As the Earth Spirit Tribe members were about to unravel their cross-legged posture,

"Don't panic!"

A roar came from atop the Dragon's head.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' admonishes its kin.]

It was my magnificent Muscle Pig, Uburka. He sat between the giant creature's left and right nostrils, i.e., the philtrum. Every time the [The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss] exhaled, Uburka's body rose and fell as if riding a violent roller coaster. Despite the intensity, he looked as comfortable as if lounging in an armchair.

"Never unfold your legs! Keep channeling your Aura!"

-But...

"This is not an ominous sign. It's similar to what you call metamorphosis!"

The Earth Spirit Tribe members widened their eyes.

-Metamorphosis?

-Isn't that the realm only Uburka, our ancestor, barely reached?

Uburka grinned, showing his fangs.

"Ugor. It's just similar. I know because I've experienced it. While similar to metamorphosis, it's different. Besides, aren't all our kin glowing at once?"

-Then what's happening, ancestor?

"I don't know. But exploring unknown caverns is always exciting!"

Whoosh!

Uburka too began to glow. His flame was wilder than any Earth Spirit Tribe member's.

"Fellow tribesmen! Do not fear. Fire has always been our ally. Even when our ancestors moaned buried in smoky caves, fire burned for us. How can the monster that created this continent extinguish our fire?"

Red flames fiercely enveloped Uburka, but they didn't burn his body or the world, merely entwining quietly around the Dragon's head. Many Earth Spirit Tribe members admired their ancestor's realm and looked up to Uburka.

"Breathe! Accept the world's temperature into your bodies! Concentrate! Remember the ancestors who mined salt with pickaxes long ago!"

The commotion subsided.

The Earth Spirit Tribe members immersed themselves in Aura cultivation again.

"Everyone, unify your mind images!"

My family's Chief Warrior, like an orchestra conductor, led the flames emitted by the tribesmen.

"Whether this is metamorphosis or whatever, when we open our eyes next, we will be different beings! But what's the use of tomorrow and the day after for those who forget yesterday? They just pass time, not live it. So remember. Never forget the screams of our long-dead ancestors! We burn eternally just to [not forget]!"

The flames grew fiercer.

From the Dragon's scales, knees, toes, and philtrum, various flames soared. Millions of flames in myriad hues, but soon the strongest color — the clearest one — swallowed everything.

Red.

Just the red flame consumed blue, jade, yellow, black, and white. The [The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss] was entirely engulfed in blazing flames. The giant creature became like a wick of a huge candle.

[The Constellation 'The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide' is using Demonic Heavenly God Art.]

And then,

[The Earth Spirit Tribe is using Demonic Heavenly God Art.]

Crack.

The children's green skin, their shells, peeled away.

Like burnt charred shells, their green skin dropped away in red flakes.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe is experiencing evolution!]

No.

It wasn't just the skin that turned red due to the burning Aura.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe's status is changing!]

The children's skin truly turned red.

It wasn't the green of spring's goblins or the summer scent of Hopgoblins.

[The Earth Spirit Tribe has evolved into its final form, Asura!]

For millennia,

The Earth Spirit Tribe, which had embraced all seasons, turned their experiences into red blood and flesh.

"....."

In the dropout waiting room,

We blankly watched the Earth Spirit Tribe harvest red autumn.

The Earth Spirit Tribe grew larger. Their fangs sharper. Their eyes gleamed red. The Aura born from their minds merged fiercely with their bodies. Red muscles seemed ready to burst on their forearms, back, abs, and thighs.

“Ogre...?”

The Black Dragon Witch murmured unconsciously.

“...No. I've never seen Ogres with reddish skin. They're not just big like Ogres, their Aura purity is unbelievably high. That's...”

“Yes, it's not.”

We kept our eyes on the hologram.

“This is a place only they can reach.”

I whispered to myself.

Watching the majestic Blood Flame raised by the children,

‘Open race status.’

Sssk.

Text appeared before me.

+

[Asura]

Extinction Grade: F (No Danger)

Maxim: 'We are fire.'

Political System: Fire River Council

Description: Earth Spirit Tribe.

Born from the earth, digging burrows, loving the swamp to smear their bodies with mud, knowing the scent of rain from the sky as happiness, a race that loved all shadows and moisture has, after enduring a long time, finally embraced the world's flames in their hearts.

Ignition.

They symbolize an unquenchable fire. When they kindle their aura, the flames split into six directions, and when they step onto the battlefield, their arms strike as fiercely as if wielding six swords.

They lament the lives fading in this world. By mimicking the faces and gestures of the dead, they transplant the lives already vanished from the dark and shadowy stage into reality.

They can always become others, themselves, and us. Thus, they are often metaphorically described as having three faces.

Asura.

Loving the waterways made by humans and taking pride in the flames they kindle, the Asuras will forever race through this world turned into hell.

If someone calls the Earth Spirit Tribe demons, it is perhaps because they have willingly chosen to dwell in hell.

Their beloved father still laughs in hell. Where else could be their home?

May fortune be with you.

Traits: [Fire River Council], [Blood Fire Drama], [Demonic Cult], [Demonic Heavenly God Art], [Demonic Formations Art], [Doctrine of Malice], [Legacy of Records], [Competitive Spirit], [Multiracial Culture], [Conquerors of the Continent]

Evolution: Complete.

Alias: Asura is a name unique to them.

+

I nodded.

".....Yes."

In the silence of the dropout's waiting room, where all my colleagues were silent, only my voice flowed softly.

Perhaps because people naturally don't hear their own voice well, I felt as if I was both expressing joy and suppressing emotions that couldn't quite be expressed.

"They are my children."

Still.

I spoke the words I wanted to, could, and needed to say.

"All of them... every one of them, are my proud children."

[Stage Clear.]

[The 38th floor has been cleared.]

[You did not participate in the stage.]

[No rewards are given to you.]

Those were.

Words of immense happiness.

Chapter 261: Idol Destruction (1)

---

After my children completed their final evolution, soon after.

[The Dream Demon Tribe is evolving!]

[The Gill Fish Tribe is evolving!]

[The Mountain Calamity Tribe is evolving!]

Changes occurred in other races as well.

The ability to evolve wasn't exclusive to the Earth Spirit Tribe. The children of the earth simply opened the gate first. Several other races capable of evolution also began to emit their aura one after another.

Paaaah!

The world under the sky was momentarily dyed in a rainbow of colors.

-Oh!

-This is...

Millions of people had gathered around the [The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss]. They sat cross-legged on the limbs of the giant beast, even on its toenails, as they all ignited their colorful auras.

The area lit up as if wrapped in a rainbow.

[The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss's existence becomes faint.]

This light was also like a candle, with the giant beast as its wick, burning brightly.

[The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss is unable to wake up from its sleep.]

[The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss's existence becomes faint.]

'It's over.'

I opened my eyes slightly as I watched the hologram.

The colossal body of the dragon turtle shrank rapidly. This was a phenomenon I had witnessed before in person when I fought the Demon King of Autumn Rain. It was a fall from grace.

'But this is much more subdued than last time.'

The dragon turtle didn't resist.

Rather, it couldn't.

The Dream Demon Tribe was holding it in the dream world.

The giant turtle probably didn't feel any pain or despair.

[The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss's existence becomes faint.]

[The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss can no longer maintain its authority.]

[Beginning the authority adjustment process.]

[Stripping the alias of the The Ki Dragon Dwelling in the Abyss.]

A good death.

Finally, the monster's body crumbled.

The Throne, who virtually created this continent itself, was devoured by its own offspring.

".....It's a fair ending."

The Black Dragon Witch spoke.

Anastasia was speechless for a while after watching our children evolve, but now she seemed to have regained some composure.

"Even if the dragon's contribution enriched the continent with aura... and all eight tribes owe it a debt, there's no room for pity."

Anastasia calmly assessed the death of the monster.

"A being that tried to kill its own children. How can it be a creator or a parent? Once it bares its teeth, it's a beast. Fighting and killing each other, with only the strong surviving."

"And our children were the strongest."

"Right. Our children did a great job."

Anastasia and I smiled at each other. Not just us, but the expressions of other colleagues were also bright. They seemed happier than when they directly conquered the stages themselves, perhaps even more so.

It was a warm atmosphere.

"Well, every tribe did well, of course."

I said with a smile.

"But if I had to pick the best performing children, wouldn't it be the Earth Spirit Tribe?"

".....Huh?"

Anastasia frowned.

"What do you mean? Without the Dream Demon Tribe putting the dragon to sleep, we couldn't have conquered the stage in the first place. The Vampire Clan, who brought them, should be credited the most. If you think about it, the Earth Spirit Tribe just stole the show."

"Hmm! A valid point, but without the Mountain Calamity Tribe's construction skills, millions couldn't have climbed onto the dragon's body each day!"

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed.

"The key to this operation was aura absorption. The more people clung to it at once, the more successful the operation, so the Mountain Calamity Tribe played a crucial role in realizing the strategy!"

"Huh. You all don't know anything. What's the use of having millions of people?"

The Countess licked her cat-like hand.

"They need ships to move quickly, food to eat while moving, and living space after moving. Needless to say, the continent's capital and logistics are managed by the Fairy Tribe. See? Objectively, the Fairy Tribe's hidden contribution is the greatest."

"By the way, all the ships transporting the logistics were led by the Gill Fish Tribe. Um. My point is, that is also an objective fact."

Huh?

Are these people seriously thinking their own children did the best?

"Aye. No way. It's obvious the Earth Spirit Tribe did the best. You guys are so biased toward your own children. It's clear as day, and yet you defend them."

"....."

"....."

Uh-oh.

The mood turned serious.

What was a warm atmosphere a moment ago, now grew chilly in the dropout's waiting room.

'Really?'

Do they really believe their own children played the most significant role? Isn't that almost a level of cognitive dissonance?

As much as our Earth Spirit Tribe stands out, this seems like ugly jealousy and envy, too sticky and excessive.

[Ding! The King of Death harbors negative feelings towards his colleagues. At this moment, he didn't know yet. The camaraderie and friendship that seemed eternal would be twisted by their children.]

"What are you doing, Princess?"

"Playing with messages."

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages intervened among us.

"You know? All those messages and descriptions, statuses you receive, are all manually typed by someone."

"Really? .....Yes?"

"Anyway, you've conquered the 38th floor! Congratulations!"

The Princess mimicked a celebratory sound with her mouth.

"The stages you've been conquering are different in each world. From floors 1 to 10, they're similar because they're tutorials, but from 11 to 31, they're entirely different. There are more worlds than stars in the night sky, and countless stages await you, the ascenders!"

"Heh."

Anastasia and other colleagues turned their attention to the Princess's words.

"Different stages appearing in each world... does it mean there are other worlds with towers besides ours?"

"Yep! Until the 49th floor, ascenders from other worlds hardly meet."

"Is it a beginner's consideration?"

"Something like that. From the 50th floor, you'll have to compete with ascenders from all sorts of worlds."

My colleagues looked fascinated. I already knew or guessed this information a long time ago, but they seemed to be hearing it for the first time.

'Ah. Right.'

I suddenly realized.

'They really are hearing it for the first time.'

My colleagues are different from me.

I already knew about the existence of [Hunters from Other Worlds], thanks to the Guardian Spirit. After all, the Guardian Spirit itself was a legendary figure who had reached the 99th floor in another world.

'But... apart from the Sword Saint, the others wouldn't have known.'

I, who met with the Tower Master and delved into the truth of the tower, was a special case.

Most wouldn't seek nor have a way to know such things.

While I was feeling the disparity in information, the [Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] continued to chatter.

"But from the 31st to the 49th floors, it's generally the same. Universal, or should I say, multiversal?"

'Hmm.'

This was new information for me.

"In the end, it's about how you handle the stages. Some choose the easy path, while others deliberately seek a more difficult one. Consider it a prior experience to prepare for when you'll mingle with people from other worlds on the 50th floor!"

The Princess smiled brightly.

"And now, it's time to face the consequences."

The consequences.

"When a child grows up, they eventually see their parents' true faces."

Just as my colleagues were about to question what that meant, the next moment came.

[Sequential layer progression in process.]

[Challengers will be forcibly transferred to the 39th floor.]

[The 39th-floor quest is displayed.]

Words appeared before our eyes.

+

[Idol Destruction]

Difficulty: Undecided

Objective: You have aided your chosen race.

Your chosen race has overcome numerous obstacles. Sometimes fierce nature, sometimes different races inhabiting the same world, sometimes mysterious plagues from new worlds, and sometimes the very being that created this continent posed challenges.

Now, it's time for you to be the final test!

You have reigned above your race as a 'god'. But you are not a god. You are a human who needs to earn a living each day, eat, laugh, or get angry. Just like those races, you are nothing but a human.

Make your choice.

Will you reveal to your race that you are human?

Or will you hide the truth forever and rule your race as servants?

*However, if you choose to hide the truth, you will no longer be able to ascend the tower.

+

"....."

Yes.

I nodded slowly.

'This quest.'

The reason our tower faltered before my regression.

Why the Flame Emperor struggled when reaching the 40th floor.

The trigger for one's own written history to become the enemy, not monsters or thrones.

'We are not gods.'

Just the same people as those races.

It's time for the children to know that too.

---

For a long time.

I had been preparing for this 39th floor.

"Strictly speaking, Kekerkker is our bad friend."

I constantly emphasized to the children that I was not a god, but merely their parent, or more accurately, a friend.

"Apostle Gorke insisted until his death that Kekerkker was not a benevolent transcendental being, but merely a friend who tried to look after us."

"His mouth is foul, his temper petty, not exactly a friend one would want to keep close."

Maybe pretending to be a real god would have been easier.

I protected the Earth Spirit Tribe from the lava flowing from volcanoes. I helped the children escape from the salt caves of the empire. I taught the Earth Spirit Tribe tattoos, created letters for them, and showed them the path to becoming the conquerors of the continent.

There were many opportunities for me to become a god to the Earth Spirit Tribe.

If I had wished, I could have created followers more fanatical than any religion.

"Names referring to Kekerkker are 'Lion with a Foul Mouth', 'One who Enjoys Beating', 'Believer in Violent Education'."

But I didn't.

"Kekerkker."

"Come, daddy."

I couldn't.

Because eventually, I had to tell the children that I was nothing like a god.

-What?

-Oh God of Fire, what do you mean by that?

The Flame Emperor had reigned as an absolute god over the elves.

When the elves slaughtered other races, set the world on fire, and caused all sorts of chaos, the Flame Emperor always used excuses like [God's Command] or [Heaven's Will]. The elves, having witnessed miracles from the very beginning, had no choice but to fall for the Flame Emperor's tricks.

-I'm not a god.

Thus, the betrayal felt even more excruciating.

-What do you mean by that...

-Ah, damn it. What kind of quest is this? I knew it was going to be trouble when they said 'sequential progression.' Tch.

The Flame Emperor revealed the truth to progress the stage.

-Can't you understand? I'm not a god.

-Why those faces? Does it taste bad that I'm not a god?

-You're kidding me. Without me, you would have been destroyed long ago. Thanks to me, you became the most powerful race on the continent. So what if I'm not a god? Does that change the fact that I helped you?

-What about the massacre? Orders?

-That's your fault for being deceived.

-Wow, these bastards are funny. You enjoyed everything and now you make a fuss? I didn't use you; you used me. You also enjoyed killing other races, right? It was so convenient to use 'God's name' as an excuse.

-You should be grateful.

-Ungrateful bastards.

The outcome was, of course, catastrophic.

The elves realized there was no god among them. There was no [God of Fire]. There was no reason for other races to be destroyed.

The history they had built over thousands of years, the massacres, the wars. Everything was just a scam, a deceitful play by [a human just like them] pretending to be a creator.

-Are you glaring at me? Think I'll be scared if you glare?

Thus, the elves fell apart.

-Come at me if you dare.

The priestly class, which had reigned at the top of their race, was the first to be killed, by the very people they had led.

The warrior class split, starting civil wars among themselves. As expected, most warlords turned against the false god, Yoo Soo-Ha.

The enemies we faced from the 40th floor were none other than the elves.

The very race that had revered and worshipped the Flame Emperor as a god suddenly became 'enemies' and 'monsters', obstructing our tower's path.

The few survivors of the races doomed by the Flame Emperor also became enemies. They had resisted even when he claimed to be a god. After it was revealed he was human, their resistance only intensified, never weakening.

A clear case of self-inflicted retribution.

"How can a being that shows its fangs to its children be a creator or a parent? Once it shows its fangs, it's just a beast. They fight each other, kill, and only the strong survive."

The world before my regression flowed just as Anastasia had described.

Our tower plunged into endless strife with the elves.

"Now."

That was the past I knew.

"What will you do?"

And now, the story that will change.

"If you choose not to reveal the truth here, you can continue to reign as gods, just as you have been. Ah. Even if you fail the quest, the stages you've cleared so far will be preserved. The entire continent from the 31st to the 39th floor will be incorporated into your tower! The races that worship you as gods will come along as a bonus."

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages grinned widely.

"But if you choose to reveal the secret... everything you've done will be exposed. Yep. All your conversations, actions, everything will become videos directly [broadcast] in the minds of all races."

"It's going to be a huge mess. The Muscle Pig knows what you are, but that's just him. The others don't know anything!"

The Princess looked at each of our faces one by one.

"I'll ask one more time. What will you choose?"

Of course.

My answer is already decided.

Chapter 262: Idol Destruction (2)

---

"Feel free to show the truth."

I confidently spoke to the princess.

"No, I'm actually pleading you to show the truth. You mean to replay everything I've done for our race in their heads as images? My goodness. How could you be so kind?"

"Kim Gong-Ja.....?"

While my companions hesitated, my answer came out refreshingly swift.

As if I had been waiting for a chance to say this.

"While I can't claim we raised the best race, we certainly did our utmost in raising them. Ah, I can say this without a single blemish on my heart. Don't you think?"

"....."

"Anastasia, what are you hesitating for? Are you worried that they'll be shocked to see our true faces? That they'll despair and go mad upon realizing that we are just like them?"

Anastasia didn't answer. But her eyes, the black pupils of my comrade, were clearly filled with anxiety.

Her eyes whispered with unease.

『What if they are disappointed in me?』

『What if they complain that I'm a fake god, curse, and insult me?』

『What then?』

It was a deep concern.

I slowly nodded.

“Of course..... It's natural to feel anxious.”

Parents know everything about their children.

That's why they can say they love without a hint of doubt.

But what about the children?

Children know almost nothing about their parents.

Children are born when parents have already grown up. They don't know what their parents did before, where they were born, what kind of people they were in their hometown, how they felt leaving it—all those life events are unknown to them.

And they don't try to know.

Parents only show aspects they want to show their children. Using mature gestures. Smiling. Stroking their foreheads, becoming great angels towering over these little children.

“Anastasia, please look at my face directly.”

"....."

I stood up to meet Anastasia's eyes at the same level. As she was shorter than me, I had to kneel on one knee to face her.

“The director who raised me..... did a lot to raise us. Imagine how hard it must have been to run an orphanage back then?”

I shared my story.

Deliberately light, as if it was nothing.

“When some public official's grandfather died, the director, unlike herself, would wear black clothes and go to the funeral. It was a person who had nothing to do with us, and she wasn't even close to the director. But she made sure to show her face at every ceremonial event in the city. Always. It's all about making an impression. It's very important in our country.”

"....."

"If there was an event at the district office, she would go right away. Even if there were mountains of work to be done at the orphanage, she would go if called. The district office events were just stalls lined up on the streets, selling colorful pottery, succulent plant pots, handmade wallets, and so on. All supported by the district office. They were trying to revive the local market."

"....."

"When the director went there, she would stick to the district mayor, always buying exactly three gifts. [Such beautiful work.] Though usually she would pinch every penny... she would casually spend 30,000 or 20,000 won."

I closed my eyes.

That day, I had secretly followed the director from a distance. The street event was some kind of festival, selling colorful masks too. I wore a mask and pretended to be a child among the adults, sneaking glances at the director moving around with the mayor.

-No, Mr. Mayor. How did you make such beautiful works?

Wow, only the best artisans have gathered here. It's like Artisan Street. It seems like our district has something to be proud of. The kids would love it too.....

The director's face, voice, tone were completely different from when she dealt with us at the orphanage. If any other child had seen the director's behavior then, it would have been the shock of a lifetime. To us, the director was always somewhat distant, shrouded in a mysterious fog.

-So, all these are handmade products, right? Can we have the people who made these teach at the orphanage?

-Hmm? Teaching at the orphanage...?

-Yes. I'm the director there, and our children are so good. They're good, but they lack things to play with or learn. Even just having one succulent pot-making class a week would be great for their character development..... Wouldn't it be a fulfilling thing for you too, Mr. Mayor? The workshops established with the support of the city and district. Now, they're teaching classes to local children..... It's a beautiful picture, isn't it?

-Hm. Then, about the teaching fees...

-Oh, if the district office could support us, that would be great. Then it would become a project led entirely by the district office. Mr. Secretary, you know, don't you? Our orphanage is very clean. It's one of the cleanest places around here in terms of accounting. It would be easy to work with us.

-...This orphanage is indeed known for being easy to work with. It never had missing or overdue documents.

-Hm.

A middle-aged gentleman, whose name and face I didn't know and probably would never know, nodded.

-Then Mr. Secretary, take charge of this task. I'll direct the guidelines your way... But, focusing on just one director might look odd. Hey, kindergartens. Wouldn't kids love playing with sand and mud? Try looking into pottery or handicraft classes.

-Yes, I understand.

-Thank you! Mr. Mayor! You not only beautify the streets but also people's hearts. I feel so relieved when someone like you comes to work with us.

-Haha. Our director here really has a way with words.

The mayor and his entourage gradually moved away. I should have followed, but I couldn't muster the strength to walk. Seeing the director's true face had struck me with an immense shock.

‘Embarrassing.’

At that time, the director was my parent. Something even above that. She was our teacher, a counselor for difficult times, the wise lord of the closed world of the orphanage.

Every night, she vividly told us stories from thousands of years ago, and we inherited all our legacy from her voice, tone, and expressions. To grow up with continental-scale ambitions. To always be calm. To be rational. Above all, to be angry at injustice...

To us young children, wasn't the director a god?

‘Shameful.’

I had learned what face the director put on in the [outside world], how she talked. She wasn't our kind and wise god. She was just... from afar, when talking with the mayor or officials... just an aunt.

A normal aunt.

"....."

I opened my eyes.

Perhaps due to the strange silence.

Anastasia was quietly looking at my face without saying anything. The Heretic Inquisitor, the Countess, and the Paladin also looked at me. I nodded once and quietly said to them.

"So what if it's a bit embarrassing?"

"....."

"We're young. We're still young. It's natural for young hearts to feel immense shame upon realizing their gods are just ordinary humans. Ah. The ones who prophetically spoke to us in majestic voices were just... people who knew a bit about aura. We thought they would watch over and protect us with some great miracles, but actually... they were just people, running around and making efforts in places we couldn't see..."

One day.

A free succulent pot-making class was held at the orphanage.

The children, tired of cross-stitching and caricatures, seemed to find the novelty of playing with clay to shape pottery surprisingly refreshing. Every time a class was held, as many as 15 children flocked to touch the clay.

The pottery teacher was kind, and the children enjoyed themselves.

I did not participate.

Being there felt somehow shameful. It felt like committing a severe disloyalty to the director.

And so, I quietly continued my life at the orphanage without telling anyone what I had seen.

“Seeing our true selves... they might feel quite embarrassed. Probably will.”

Recalling the burns of my childhood, I spoke to my current comrades.

“But that’s it.”

"....."

“With time passing by, when those kids are ready to accept it, they will eventually understand that we strived, worked, and put effort into raising them for what it truly was. They will come to understand that we are humans just like them.”

“Really...? Will they?”

Anastasia hesitated.

"I heard it's tough even in ordinary parent-child relationships. And for us, being like gods to our race..."

"It's okay. We are neither ordinary parents, nor have we raised ordinary children."

On the hologram, a giant monster had shrunk to the size of a big mammoth and was lying defeated.

Around the monster, hundreds of thousands from different races celebrated with a festival of colorful auras. They were overjoyed by the fact that they had endured the disaster without any damage and had achieved perfect success under their own command, irrespective of their race.

'Yes.'

We are not ordinary parents and children.

"Anastasia. We are a group of the finest humans who have entered the tower."

"....."

“And honestly, our children are far superior to the humans of our world. There’s no reason for things to not work out.”

I withdrew my gaze from the hologram.

Then, I spoke crisply to the [Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages].

“Tell all the children.”

“...Really? For real? You don’t need to ponder over it more?”

“What’s there to ponder about? There’s no one better than me to raise them with utmost sincerity. Frankly, whether I am a god, a human, or even an alien monster with a hundred tentacles, those kids will accept me. Just tell the truth to our race now.”

“Wow. As expected of the King of Death. I like that overflowing confidence.”

The princess looked at the other comrades.

“What about the rest of you? Do you agree with the King of Death?”

"....."

“You all started collaborating from the 31st floor. If even one of you disagrees, it puts me in a difficult position. Though, anyone who votes against will be specially barred from accessing floors beyond the 40th...”

“I’ll do it.”

Anastasia opened her mouth.

Her face already showed determination.

“I’ll do it. Whether the children despise me or not, that’s their right. If I was afraid of that, I wouldn’t have chosen a race in the first place. To keep them in the dark forever now would just be... my selfishness. Tell the truth to the Vampiric Tribe too.”

“Ah. I agree as well!”

The Heretic Inquisitor raised his hand.

“I’ve done my best to raise the Mountain Calamity Tribe! Ahahat. My best might be different from others, but compared to parents who don’t even try, aren’t I quite exceptional? The Mountain Calamity Tribe will surely think highly of me. Please reveal the truth to them too!”

“.....Setting aside our innocent psychopath for now.”

Paladin sighed.

“Children have the right to know about their parents. Even more so for grown ones. The tribes living on that continent have reached a mature stage. Reveal the truth to the Gill Fish Tribe.”

“.....Hmm, hmm, hmmm.”

The Countess pondered. Washing her face several times with her cat-like hands, she hummed and groaned. But after five minutes, she made up her mind.

“Well, alright! At least I kept them from starving to death.

Considering how many people in this world die of hunger, I've practically bestowed a great favor upon the Fairy Tribe. Once born into the Fairy Tribe, middle-upper class status is guaranteed, isn't it? Aura and all, this is the biggest scam. I'm proud!"

"You're agreeing too, Countess?"

"Agreeing, indeed. Show the truth to the Fairy Tribe!"

The [Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] chuckled.

"Really. Such cute kids. I hope I don't end up favoring them too much... Well, it's out of my hands now."

Clap!

The princess clapped her hands.

"Viper and the Sword Saint, still on stage, have agreed to disclose information. All seven participants in the raid voted in favor, so under administrator authority, I'll disclose the information to all races!"

[The Heretic Inquisitor's information will be revealed to all of the Mountain Calamity Tribe!]

At that moment.

A buzzing sound began to emerge from beyond the hologram.

-Lime?

-What is this, Lime...? An illusion?

-No, it can't be a collective hallucination since we are still communicating...

The first to react was the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

With their wrinkled snail shells, now removing the now useless wooden steps and tools, the Mountain Calamity Tribe sensed something strange and raised their antennae.

Just as the [Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] had announced, [our raid team's footage] automatically played for them.

-.....Tower? A raid?

-Our Great Puppy God, what is this.....

But the confusion showed no signs of abating.

Rather, it accelerated.

[The Black Dragon Witch's information will be revealed to the entire Vampiric Tribe!]

Bats hanging on palm trees in the jungle tilted their heads, saying 'Ki?' 'Kuu?' The steps built on the monster's body buzzed, and countless leaves in the jungle stirred.

[The Paladin's information will be revealed to the entire Gill Fish Tribe!]

The Gill Fish Tribe, transporting food, drinks, and bedding for hundreds of thousands on ships, flinched. Their fluttering tails created splashes, and a few boats tilted due to sudden reckless steering.

And it didn't stop there.

-What is this!

-You, are you seeing something flash before your eyes too?

-We are... Is this some curse unleashed by the Ki Dragon as it died?

-No. I clearly heard a voice in my head. This is the truth of the great Red Dolphin. Unless some demon is deceiving us...

-Ugor? What's going on with you guys?

All across the jungle, across the whole world, turmoil began. Everywhere the races had settled, a commotion broke out. Villages. Towns. Cities. Nearly all warriors who had gathered here, even at the very site of the Energy Dragon's tomb.

[The Countess's information will be revealed to the entire Fairy Tribe!]

[The Viper's information will be revealed to the entire Ghost Tribe!]

[The Sword Emperor's information will be revealed to the entire Pure Humans Tribe!]

And then.

[The King of Death's information will be revealed to the entire Earth Spirits Tribe!]

The moment that was bound to come, unfolded right then.

Chapter 263: Idol Destruction (3)

---

[Quest Complete.]

[All races have learned the secrets of their gods!]

Have you ever seen a sunset in the jungle?

[Stage Clear.]

[The 39th floor has been cleared.]

When the sun falls to the horizon, drawn by its gravity, all the palm trees bend their backs to watch the sunset. The sun doesn't grant them a gaze. Thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands, millions of palm trees, all become blackened by the shadows... allowing only the sky and river to possess 'color', exiting the stage as black pillars.

A world distinctly divided into black and color.

-It's impossible! Our god would never do such a thing!

In the midst of nature's indifferent play of colors, hundreds of thousands of people were clamorously bustling.

-Above all, our god takes the form of a great puppy! But these images keep flowing out of my head... Lime! That's a total pureblood! This makes no sense!

-Kekerkker looks handsome.

-True, calling him a white lion felt a bit too much given how intense the romance in the fire dramas was.

-So, that was a disguise? The gods, they took animal forms to approach us easily. Not just any animals, but ones that looked very special, either white or black. Thanks to that, we revered them like gods. Isn't it all for the best in the end?

-This is deception!

-We are worshippers of the great puppy, not followers of some weird-looking brat!

The Heretic Inquisitor watching the hologram with me tilted his head.

"Do I look strange?"

The Black Dragon Lord answered his question.

"You don't look like a snail."

"Is that so? I thought I resembled a snail quite a bit."

"What are you talking about... No, now's not the time for such discussions."

That's right. It wasn't the atmosphere for joking around.

The chaos in the hologram footage was getting worse.

Being in the waiting room of the eliminated, all we could do was watch for the time being.

'Although the stage clear announcement appeared...'

No one was able to rejoice over the stage clear.

Anastasia, the Countess, the Paladin, everyone was just tensely staring at the hologram.

'It's not over yet.'

Rather, it was just the beginning.

What reaction would the children, now knowing the truth, show?

The success or failure of this raid depended on that.

[Sequential Layer Progression in progress.]

As if to confirm our premonition, the tower immediately presented us with the next challenge.

[Forcibly entering the 40th floor.]

[Since you've entered the 40th floor, the original eliminated participants regain their status as raid participants.]

[Displaying the 40th floor quest!]

The era had not changed.

The body of the Ki Dragon was still freshly molted, and the children were engulfed in confusion and excitement. Truly a sequential layer. Without a moment's break, keeping the current moment alive, we were confronted with a new quest.

+

[Mountain Calamity Tribe's Idol]

Difficulty: B+

Mission Objective: The Heretic Inquisitor has aided the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

Under your dedicated care, the Mountain Calamity Tribe achieved the most successful early civilization! The extent of the Slime Empire is almost the same as the territory now covered by the Mountain Calamity Tribe. The Mountain Calamity Tribe distributed jobs according to their racial characteristics, developed a highly concentrated division of labor, and continuously prospered, turning great cities into trading hubs.

But the brighter the light, the darker the shadow.

In your empire, other races were enslaved. Eventually, the slaves rebelled, destroying your grand empire and the proud cities of the Mountain Calamity Tribe. Thereafter, the Mountain Calamity Tribe became public enemies of the continent, forced to live in foreign lands.

Heretic Inquisitor, you have tasted both the first glory and the first defeat.

Now the Mountain Calamity Tribe has come to know about you. They have realized that you are not a god. They understood that the glory and luxury they enjoyed, the yokes they had to bear, the oppression they endured, all originated from you.

How will the Mountain Calamity Tribe treat you now?

The voting begins.

Option 1: 'I am glad to have been guided by you.'

Option 2: 'I disliked being guided by you.'

You must obtain as many votes for Option 1 as possible. If Option 1 receives more than half the votes, the 40th floor will automatically be cleared. However, you cannot bribe or make promises for votes, and must only sway the hearts of the Mountain Calamity Tribe through [conversation] and [meetings].

*However, if you lose in the vote, you must exterminate all Mountain Calamity Tribe members living on the continent to move on to the next stage.

+

Everyone sitting in the waiting room was silent.

Anastasia, the Countess, the Paladin, even I, kept our mouths shut.

And slowly, we all turned to look at the lunatic chosen for this quest.

"Ahaha. I understand! Yes, I get it!"

This psychopath, who would definitely be in the top 5 of the 'list of people you should never meet as parents', laughed cheerfully.

"It seems I'm the first batter!"

---

"Ah, ahhhh..."

Anastasia was in despair.

"This is serious..."

"Why? Is it because the Heretic Inquisitor is the first batter?"

"Yes. Ah, I shouldn't have fallen for Kim Gong-Ja's sweet talk. At the very least, I should have prepared a minimum safety net before starting work. We should have created and distributed propaganda about how much we've worked for these kids, stirring up sympathy... Damn, it's my specialty."

"That's not revealing secrets, it's brainwashing."

Anastasia always seemed unflappable, but whenever something seemed like [her failure], she became incredibly flustered.

Perfectionists must be exhausting.

"Don't worry too much. It's okay."

"It's okay? Is it the situation where all the kindness we showed those kids turns into naught and only anger grows? Or..."

Anastasia turned sharply and pointed at the Heretic Inquisitor.

"This situation where we entrust our fates to that 100% pure psycho!?"

"Ahaha."

"How well will he convince the Mountain Calamity Tribe kids? All I can vividly imagine is him tilting his head in confusion, not understanding what he did wrong!"

The Heretic Inquisitor just kept smiling brightly.

Meanwhile, the situation in the hologram was continuing to worsen.

-Our guiding deity is a beautiful pink-skinned dolphin! Keeek, how can a human without gills or fins pretend to be our god!

-Well, but our god can transform into a cat, right? Then I don't see much of a problem. The cat god polymorphing into a human to wander the world and have fun is a pretty common theme in old blood fire dramas...

-That we built mining cities, burying children in them...

-That we were dragged to the mines and lived like slaves for hundreds of years, it was all because of that Mountain Calamity Tribe's god!

The jungle sunset illuminated each of their faces.

Their faces were half blackened, resembling the shadows of the palm trees, and the other half brightly red, receiving the sunset from the sky.

-Why would you do such a thing!

-Were we just pawns in your little game!

-No, look at the footage carefully. The gods were merely trying to take care of us...

-The problem is they're not gods but humans!

People with open mouths in anger, those enraged, others holding their heads in confusion, some unsure what to do, individuals resting their chins on their hands deep in thought, and occasionally someone realizing something with an 'Ah, so that's why that happened...'

-False gods!

Someone shouted out.

-We must drag the false gods from their sacred thrones!

-They're just humans!

-They always said they were doing this for us, that they loved us, but in the end, it was all for their own agenda! To climb the tower and incorporate stages into their own territories, wasn't it!

Though still a minority...

A faction violently reacting to the fact that we were human and feeling betrayed had emerged. To them, it didn't matter how much we had struggled or what lives we had led.

[They are not gods].

That alone was enough for them to feel betrayed. Their sense of betrayal turned into curses against the gods who had reigned over them for thousands of years. Their curses soon became calls for our execution.

-Yes! Let's bring down the false gods!

-Let's hold the false gods accountable for the suffering, life, everything our ancestors endured!

-Bring down the false gods! Bring down the false gods!

Still, the absolute majority of the races were either dazed or puzzled. But if left alone, the minority's anger would spread like a plague, swiftly engulfing the jungle.

"...It's not okay. Kim Gong-Ja. This is really, not okay."

Anastasia muttered.

She had lived as the guild master of the Black Dragon. More than anyone, she was deeply involved in public opinion and propaganda campaigns. Being the Black Dragon Witch, she must be feeling most acutely how dire the situation was turning, and how unreliable the Heretic Inquisitor was for this situation.

"No."

But I continued to cut off Anastasia's worries.

"What I meant by saying it's okay isn't that the current situation is good. Nor am I saying that the Heretic Inquisitor is reliable. It's just..."

I turned to look at the hologram.

"Our children will be alright."

That's when it happened.

Whack!

A whip crack echoed across the jungle. The enraged, the shouting, the contemplating, the anxious, everyone's ears were sharply pierced by the sound of the whip. Hundreds of thousands in the crowd were startled, turning towards the source of the sound.

-Be quiet, Lime.

The 629th Chairman of the Fire River Council.

The strongest warrior of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, Seimslam.

-Stop talking.

-What? How can we not discuss such a shocking event...

-Let me propose a bill as the Chairman of the Fire River Council. The bill's name: [To speak even a single word about the gods here, one must duel the Chairman of the Fire River Council. For every attack you block or dodge, you will be granted one chance to speak.]

-.....

Let me reiterate, the Fire River Council has a unique custom.

Anyone from any race or origin, if they're around the 2000th strongest in the world, can join the council. Upon joining, they are treated as members and can freely speak or vote in meetings that determine the fate of their race.

However, if they lose a duel, they must yield their opinion.

Consequently, the [strongest fighter] typically becomes the Chairman, and decisions usually go as the Chairman wishes. Isn't it obvious? If there are any dissenters, just challenge and defeat them in a duel.

-.....

-Well then, all members of the Fire River Council present here, raise your hand if you oppose this bill.

Seimslam spoke coolly.

-Though I doubt there will be any opposition. Unanimity has always been a long-standing tradition and pride of our Fire River Council.

-.....

The warriors hesitated.

It was the first time in council history that someone from a race other than the Earth Spirit Tribe became the Chairman. Just this fact alone sufficiently proved that Seimslam was a formidable fighter. Many Earth Spirit Tribesmen, reluctant to accept this proof, led to a boom in the funeral industry at that time.

-Ugor... Chairman.

As all members remained silent, one from the Earth Spirit Tribe raised a hand. Or rather, he should now probably be called an Asura.

Unlike before, the children's skin glowed red. Bulging muscles on the shoulders, chest, and abs were like red flesh faintly oiled. The fangs protruding from the mouth in a crescent moon shape were incredibly sharp, instilling fear in those who saw them.

-I don't necessarily oppose the bill proposed by the Chairman but... Huh?

The formidable Asura adopted a very respectful attitude. Hands placed over the stomach, head bowed at a 45-degree angle, and not emitting any aura or fighting spirit. What are you guys doing?

-If it's not that. What is it?

-We, we look quite different, don't we? Ugor. Our bodies have grown larger. Just looking at it, it seems the amount of aura itself has risen enormously, doesn't it? And it's not just low-quality aura that seems to be stacked up and ready to blow away. It's the aura of the Ki Dragon, which has been in this world since the beginning. Isn't it amazing?

-What do you want me to do about it?

-Ch-Chairman. We seem to have become stronger, right...? Maybe the Chairman position will move from the 629th to the 630th today, and maybe you will be that person...

-Are you challenging me to a duel?

-Just, once.

No more words were needed.

Seimslam grasped the sword with her remaining tentacle and charged at the challenger. In one step, she closed the significant gap between them.

-Ugor!?

But the challenger was no amateur. A master worthy of swaggering in the Fire River Council. The Asura countered with an axe, and clang! His red palm went numb from the impact.

-Crazy,

-It's either a life-and-death knot or just a life knot, if you don't answer within 1 second, I'll...

-Life knot! Life knot! Life knoooooot!

Boom.

The challenger flung away his axe. Seimslam's sword had already reached right under the challenger's chin. Sweating profusely on his red forehead, the challenger looked at the strongest of his era in disbelief.

-No... we... even evolved....

-Did only you evolve? Lime. I evolved too. While you were gorging on the Ki Dragon's aura, do you think I was just breathing the nice air of the jungle?

-Damn it!

-If the Earth Spirit Tribe and Mountain Calamity Tribe split into two factions and fight, the Earth Spirit Tribe would certainly win a sweeping victory. Your evolution seems to have had much more dramatic effects. But, I'm not just any snail. Lime.

Seimslam shook off his sword.

-I'm the strongest snail in this world.

She looked around at the hundreds of thousands watching her duel and spoke.

-Any opposing opinions?

-.....

-If there are none, I declare the bill I proposed passed. This place has become the temporary chamber of the Fire River Council, and under the authority of the Fire River Council, all of you who have stepped in here must follow our orders. And if you want to blabber about the gods here, at least, block my sword once. Like the council member who just got defeated by me.

Seimslam chuckled, puffing out air.

-This world is too beautiful to waste time on the excuses of the weak.

And then.

In the waiting room of the eliminated, another anomaly began. Whoosh! White light leaked from the sofa where the Heretic Inquisitor sat, slowly enveloping his body.

As we all turned to see what was happening, the Heretic Inquisitor seemed to have realized something.

"Eh? Ah. I see. So persuading through [conversation] and [meetings] means [I have to go there and talk in person]! Ahaha. Of course, it's much more efficient for me to be summoned there than summoning the entire Mountain Calamity Tribe here!"

Whoosh-

The light intensified rapidly. In just a few seconds, it would probably engulf the Heretic Inquisitor and transport him to that world, not here.

I had to warn him before that.

"Heretic Inquisitor!"

"Yes! My master!"

"You are those children's parent! A parent, you understand? Respond and converse with the feelings of a parent... No, damn it. Even if I tell you this, you won't understand!"

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed broadly.

"Yes! I don't understand!"

Damn it!

"Just try your best to think and imagine from others' perspectives! Got it? If it's hard, ask the kids around for help!"

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed, saluting.

"I'll do my best!"

Whoosh!

The white light completely enveloped the Heretic Inquisitor.

Chapter 264:

Family Interview (1)

---

The Heretic Inquisitor disappeared without a trace.

In the empty space, only the sofa's center sagged slightly, as if bearing the weight of the Heretic Inquisitor. We looked back and forth between the empty sofa and the hologram.

“Gong-Ja, do you really think he can handle it well...?”

“Hmm. The Heretic Inquisitor has grown a lot compared to before.”

“Even if a psycho changes his heart and becomes less psycho, it's just a reduction of one letter. He's still crazy.”

“Anastasia. Think about it. Isn't it a great progress if we consider it as losing the 'path' in psychopath?”

“Indeed. That’s one way to look at it....”

“Hey. What nonsense are you two exchanging...?”

The Paladin interrupted our idle talk with a look of disbelief.

“Ever since you two became friends, just overhearing your conversations makes my head go blank. The Black Dragon Witch and the King of Death. I never thought such unlikely figures would become friends, but the shock of seeing you two get along so well is even greater... One is the epitome of a clueless thug, and the other was a perfect ice queen.”

“Why? Feeling lonely because we’re besties? I’ve always kept my heart open to you too, Paladin. Hey, hey. Friends. Friendship! Come on!”

“This woman is the second in command of our tower...”

The Paladin sighed behind her helmet, just as something changed in the hologram.

“Ahahaha!”

That familiar laughter, which often resounded in the waiting room, now came from beyond the hologram.

As if instinctively turning our heads away from a foul smell encountered on the street, we looked towards the hologram, where the Heretic Inquisitor appeared.

“Greetings! To the Mountain Calamity Tribe and non-Mountain Calamity Tribe!”

The cutest blonde trash can in the world smiled broadly.

“This is my first time meeting you in this form! When I was in Limepolis, I mainly possessed dogs to communicate with you. Even in your dreams, I insisted on appearing as a dog! So, I believe— the best greeting for this occasion would be this.”

The Heretic Inquisitor floated in the jungle’s void.

“Nice to meet you! Mountain Calamity Tribe!”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly.

It was as if a dazzling light twinkled in the sky.

“That, that...?”

“Same as him. Exactly like the person we saw in the video!”

“What is this.....”

The Mountain Calamity Tribe gazed up at the void in a daze. Not just them, but many other tribes turned their attention there, especially since the overwhelming duel by Seimslam. The spot where the Heretic Inquisitor was transmitted was right above Seimslam's head, capturing everyone's attention instantly.

“Lime. Truly godlike in appearance, isn't he...?”

“He's beautiful....”

The Mountain Calamity Tribe murmured unconsciously.

Yes.

The leisurely floating figure was already divine in itself. In reality, he was continuously using the ability [Holy Technique-Teleportation], every 0.5 seconds, creating the illusion of floating in the sky. The Mountain Calamity Tribe couldn't possibly know that. They gazed up at their god with rapturous faces.

"....."

At this moment, a flicker of hope passed through the minds of us, his colleagues, watching the hologram in the waiting room.

"Huh? This is..."

"Surprisingly, is it working?"

"Right. The Heretic Inquisitor's original appearance is to die for. Nobody would object if he ranked fourth just based on his looks. Just a few national-treasure-level smiles from him and..."

"He might easily sway them."

Yes. Perhaps we underestimated the Heretic Inquisitor.

His stunning appearance.

Sharing the beauty quotient of our tower with the Black Dragon Witch, his deceptive face, along with his enchanting voice and smile. Even when walking on the ground, he could charm people, let alone floating in the sky. Isn't that practically divine!

“Mountain Calamity Tribe.”

The Heretic Inquisitor clasped his hands in front of his chest. Having been the guild master of the Temple of All Gods for 10 years, his gesture of praying was truly devout.

“I love you all.”

The face of the praying Heretic Inquisitor was as beautifully sculpted as marble. His slightly lowered eyebrows, eyes twinkling between them, lips exquisitely closed as if about to confess a secret....

All his gestures made the Mountain Calamity Tribe gaze up in a daze.

“You must have seen all the footage and know about me, the Heretic Inquisitor. The one praised as the great dog for you, was isolated for 200 years just for you. I wanted to live with you, to watch over and care for you from the closest distance!”

“Lime...”

“Right. Other gods leave as soon as their work is done, to another world or something. But our god stayed with us... It’s hard for one person to endure even 50 years, but he withstood 200 years... Without revealing his true self to anyone, unable to talk with friends, he endured for 200 years.... That’s.....”

“That’s right.”

The Heretic Inquisitor clasped his hands.

And once again, he smiled brightly.

“It’s because I love you.”

Ooooooh!

The Mountain Calamity Tribe began to get excited. Naturally. The truth that [the one leading you was actually not a god, but a human] is shocking, difficult for each person to accept.

But conversely, the truth that [even though he's human, he still loves and dedicates himself to you], was enough to overturn the shock. What if he's not a god? What is a god anyway? Someone who watches over and takes care of us, isn't that our god?

“An angel!”

A young Mountain Calamity Tribe waved their tentacles.

“He's an angel!”

“Right! An angel who loves our race!”

“Angel! You're so beautiful! Ah, angel! Thank you!”

The name of god simply changed to angel.

“Ahaha. Oh! My lovely snails!”

And the Heretic Inquisitor was an optimal figure for propaganda, spreading falsehoods, deceiving the masses, fabricating stories, MLM business, and producing and distributing fanatics. Attach the most beautiful face in the world, the most enchanting voice, and then equip the most terrible psychopath AI, and you get someone like the Heretic Inquisitor.

“Don’t be surprised that my appearance differs from yours. Compared to the love we share, appearances are truly nothing! Likewise...”

With a snap of his fingers, the Heretic Inquisitor slimmed down. He transformed into an adult form. The Mountain Calamity Tribe, startled, fluttered their tentacles, shouting ‘Lime!’ ‘Lime!’ Seeing this, the Heretic Inquisitor returned to his child form.

“As you see, I can change my appearance at will. Appearance is not important! Love! Only my love for you and your affection for me are truly beautiful!”

“Ooooo, Lime....”

“The great dog, guiding our race....”

Hmm.

Indeed.

Perhaps I underestimated the Heretic Inquisitor’s abilities....

I sat in the waiting room, watching the hologram with incredulous eyes.

“He could just be dropped into any world and he’d start a cult...”

“Yeah. He’s a natural, born with the talent to be a cult leader... Isn’t it too much? Like, such inherent talent shouldn’t be allowed in this world.”

“.....The Heretic Inquisitor has encountered and dealt with all sorts of religions, sects, and heresies that have flooded the outside world. Those not dealt with were managed. In the realm of religion, it's almost impossible to beat the Heretic Inquisitor."

However.

There are always exceptions.

-It's noisy.

Slap!

A whip crack filled with sound energy echoed throughout the venue. The leaves of the dense palm trees in the jungle shook, and the bark fragments flew off with the wind. The Mountain Calamity Tribe, jolted back to reality, turned their tentacles toward the source of the sound.

-Just now, I submitted a bill to the Fire River Council, yet my foolish kin still fail to realize its gravity.

The strongest of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

Despite having only one tentacle left, Seimslam still reigned over the Fire River Council with an irritated expression, crinkling her tentacle.

-To talk about gods, one must challenge me to a duel and withstand at least one strike of my sword. That's the law. Clear, concise, and obvious. Despite such clear laws, are you all barking like dogs because Lime forgot the grace period for guidance?

-.....

-Ordinarily, it would be permissible to execute all who broke the law.

The air in the jungle turned ominous in an instant.

-Considering the uniqueness of this matter, I will overlook it this time.

-Huurrrrrghhh...'

-Limeeee....

Sighs echoed throughout the jungle. No one was unaware of how strict Seimslam was as a chairperson, especially among her own Mountain Calamity Tribe. The consensus was that she was stricter with her own race.

-Lime.

As the surroundings quieted down, Seimslam raised her tentacle to look up at the Heretic Inquisitor.

-Heretic Inquisitor, you said.

“Yes! That’s correct!”

-Let me ask first. Is that truly the great Lime's real name?

“If you’re asking if that’s my true name, hmm, it’s a bit difficult to answer.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled.

-I have a name that represents my life, and one that represents my birth. 'Heretic Inquisitor' is the former. It's similar to your title, 'Chairman of the Fire River Council'! It reveals my position, declares my stance, and showcases my duties and abilities.

-I am Seimslam.

Seimslam looked up at the Heretic Inquisitor expressionlessly.

-Seimslam. That's my name. I could be the Chairman of the Fire River Council, I could step down from it, I have a life before becoming the Chairman, and I can forge a new life after not being the Chairman. Thus, your word. Seimslam. Only that is my name.

"....."

-What is your name?

Time passed.

It was still high noon, the sun blazing down. The midday sunlight, bouncing off and blocked by the palm leaves, scattered fractal-like shadows on the ground. Seimslam stood under a shadow halved by the leaves, and the Heretic Inquisitor, too, had his face covered by shadows split into two or three parts.

“Bambolina.”

-Bambolina?

“Yes.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled faintly.

“It means ‘doll.’ It’s a foreign word from your perspective. You can also call me KyKna if you like. It means the same thing. However, I would prefer not to be called Bambolina.”

-Why is that?

“That’s a name my only master sometimes calls me!”

-.....

“If you really must call me by my real name, please call me KyKna.”

-Understood, KyKna.

Waiting Room.

As the conversation unfolded, my colleagues quietly glanced at me.

"....."

"....."

The fact that I became the Heretic Inquisitor's master was, not from anyone else but from the Heretic Inquisitor himself, subtly spread. Anyone like the Black Dragon Witch or the Paladin would have some idea about the special contract we shared.

Only to me.

The Heretic Inquisitor had sworn loyalty to me and now shared his real name with his children. He had revealed it.

“It must be dawning on Bambolina now.”

It was inevitable.

“He must realize that it’s not just a gathering of a cult leader and followers.”

I had to fulfill many conditions to learn the Heretic Inquisitor’s real name. I had to overcome numerous obstacles and prove my qualifications and abilities. That I was more competent than him. That I could use him much more effectively....

However, in the world, there are those to whom you must reveal yourself without such [conditions].

“That place, if I were to make a comparison, is like a meeting between parents and their children.”

Children.

Daughters.

Sons.

“Even as the head of one of the top five guilds in the tower, the Heretic Inquisitor cannot reveal his title as the ‘Master of the Temple of All Gods’ in front of his children. Rank four? He can’t boast about that achievement either.”

Perhaps, if parents and children spend time together, with parents growing older and children maturing, living in the same society—then they might understand and respect the weight of titles like ‘Master of the Temple’ or ‘Rank Four,’ and between understanding and respect, affection might blossom.

But not now.

“As Bambolina said, he is facing the Mountain Calamity Tribe for the [first] time.”

The first encounter between parent and child.

There, the Heretic Inquisitor, not as the Master of the Temple, but only by his real name, could only reveal her true face.

Unless he intended to exploit her children.

"....."

Across the hologram, the Heretic Inquisitor was still smiling.

Yet, the air surrounding that smile was somewhat cold. The warmth and gentleness that filled her smile when she was the cult leader for everyone, had now transformed into a mere politeness to reassure the other party.

Even though that other party was none other than her children, akin to the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

-Lime.

Seimslam looked at the god-angel-father figure with an expressionless face.

-Our Mountain Calamity Tribe has a unique way of thinking. Only things with utility have value in this world. Only those with utility should survive, and the useless should be ignored and left to naturally fade away.

Seimslam swung her remaining tentacle.

-We strive our whole lives to be useful. Rest is just a preparation for work. Sleep is a rest for daily life. Wake up early to train oneself, and return after finishing work at night. In the meantime, constantly check whether one has been useful enough or if there's been any negligence.

Seimslam continued. Her words, hidden in the shadows of countless palm trees, crept into the darkened ground. Lime. The Mountain Calamity Tribe in the shadows chirped, nodding their tentacles in agreement with Seimslam's words. Lime.

-Useless ones are inherently flawed. We give them blue stones and let them rot in their squalid burrows, among themselves.

Blue stones, glowing sapphire stones, were a drug commonly consumed by the Mountain Calamity Tribe. Due to their addictive nature, even the tribe members avoided them. Listening to this, the surrounding Mountain Calamity Tribe nodded again.

Lime.

Like the sound of cuckoos echoing in a dark forest, the Mountain Calamity Tribe chirped from the shadows.

-No need to kill them. Rather, we keep them alive as much as possible. Seeing them begging for blue stones even at the brink of starvation lets us [normal] Mountain Calamity Tribe members reassure ourselves of our utility. We are still useful beings.

Lime.

-For life's failures, it's not a bad deal. They ruined their lives over their love for blue stones. If they love blue stones more than life, then we're giving them more than life itself. Lime. Eat. Eat more. Eat as much as you want.

Lime. Lime.

-Even as outcasts, they are [useful]. They keep us alert and cautious. Lime. We are a great race. We subjugated six races under our tentacles, built great caves, and reigned from them. Although our thousand-year empire eventually fell to the lowly blades of slaves, in our hearts, in our spirits, the empire still exists, and we strive every day as imperial citizens to be [useful].

Lime.

-.....All of this.

Lime.

-All of it, I learned from you.

Lime.

"....."

-You taught us what is useful and what is not. As children, we nodded our heads. As adults, we acted with our tentacles. You taught us to have pride, and we built an empire under your guidance, we were shaped by your words.

Lime.

-You gave birth to us.

"....."

-What we feel. The way we disdain others. The way we find joy. What we take pride in. What we strongly feel we shouldn't do. All of it was taught and inherited from you.

"....."

-So, KyKna. Even if you didn't physically give birth to our bodies, you gave birth to our minds, our senses, our lives. You are the parent to all of us. Even look at our language. Originally, you called yourself 'Lime.' Because of that, we say 'Lime' when happy, 'Laimu' when rigid. See? Your name even dictates our happiness and discontent.

Lime, Lime.

Laimu.

Lime.

-But.

Seimslam glanced around.

-Hanging around with these idiotic Earth Spirit Tribe...

Dark red Asuras stood with their arms crossed, listening to Seimslam's words with utmost seriousness.

Was it their seriousness that amused her?

Seimslam laughed, "Pfft."

-I realized how [abnormal] I, our race, am.

"....."

-A person can be useful and then become useless. Or useless and then become useful. Uburka, hailed as the strongest warrior in Earth Spirit Tribe history, was born with albinism, struggling to walk under the sun. A failure as a warrior. But he turned his albinism into a challenge to overcome, overcame it, and built his life as a series of triumphs.

Seimslam muttered.

-If he were born into our tribe, he would've been addicted to blue stones from childhood, rotting in a filthy burrow. And his [utility] would've been to endure our mockery and scorn.

"....."

-KyKna.

Seimslam looked at the Heretic Inquisitor with an expressionless face.

-Our father.

"Yes."

Gradually, the Heretic Inquisitor's expression had also faded.

A wise child of the Mountain Calamity Tribe asked the parent with no smile.

-Father, why are you such a psycho?

Chapter 265:

Family Interview (2)

---

"Hmm."

The Heretic Inquisitor stroked his chin.

"Why I became a psycho..."

-Yes, Lime.

"Hmm. That's a difficult question."

From beyond the hologram, he groaned and pondered deeply. The Heretic Inquisitor's serious face was the same, whether he was facing a complex math problem or this situation.

It was both his strength and weakness.

At least, it wasn't the face his children wanted from a parent.

-Why are you so obsessed with success?

Thus, Seimslam continued her offensive.

-Why do you pour all your energy into distinguishing [what's useful] and [what's not]? It would be fine if it were just distinguishing, but why are you so eager to categorize everything [quickly]?

In the presence of all Mountain Calamity Tribe members.

No, even other races watched as Seimslam interrogated their god---a deity who once ruled the continent with absolute faith in an ancient empire.

-We are not omniscient. We don't know many things. It's impossible to instantly discern what potential a child in front of us might have. Therefore, we become humble and patient, giving the child time to develop their abilities. This should be called education. Laimu. But why, KyKna, are you so quick to sort everything into [useful] and [useless]?

She questioned the parent.

-Father, why do you live like that?

"....."

-Can't you live differently? Really?

Night began to fall in the jungle.

The last rays of sunset slipped away from the damp palm leaves. Flutter! The Fairy Tribe hurriedly placed torches around. Whoosh! Then, the races that were hidden in the forest shadows, including the Mountain Calamity Tribe, became visible in the dim light.

-.....

-.....

Hundreds of thousands of Mountain Calamity Tribe members.

A race that could crawl on the ground and climb walls, capable of going anywhere but—living their entire lives carrying their homes on their backs, like snails. These races, destined for freedom and bondage, were now silently listening to the conversation between Seimslam and the Heretic Inquisitor.

-Lime...

-Laimu.

It wasn't because they were overwhelmed by Seimslam's power.

Nor were they overawed by the Heretic Inquisitor's divinity.

Simply, Seimslam was speaking on behalf of the entire Mountain Calamity Tribe—voicing questions, grievances, and accusations they wanted to ask and blame their parent for, all gathered into a form of inquiry.

Effectively, Seimslam became the spokesperson for their race, or more precisely, the elder sister. As the elder sister pointed out the parents' faults, the other Mountain Calamity Tribe members sat quietly around like younger siblings.

It was just on a massive scale.

Literally, a parent-teacher meeting.

"Hmm."

Thud.

The Heretic Inquisitor slowly descended from the air and sat opposite Seimslam. He had cut off the [Holy Technique-Teleportation]. Now, nothing separated the parent and child—not a difference in eye-level, not heaven and earth.

Only the torches someone had lit flickered quietly.

“Seimslam. I can apologize to all of you anytime. It’s my fault that the empire fell. The privileges you enjoyed vanished, and since then, the Mountain Calamity Tribe’s life has been reduced to a mere barony, mining salt on the outskirts and supplying it to the Earth Spirit Tribe. It’s my failure. Regarding that, I have nothing to say even if I had ten mouths, so I apologize...”

-No, that’s not it.

Seimslam stroked her face with her tentacle.

She seemed to massage her forehead with her tentacle due to the stress.

-The first empire, the glory of childhood, the failure of youth, and the return to a mere laborer now... I'm not blaming such changes. No. On the contrary, father did really well.

“Huh?”

-In this world, which race has ever been the conqueror of a continent, even just once? Mountain Calamity Tribe. Earth Spirit Tribe. Aren't those the only two? Father reached a height only two beings have ever achieved in this world. Even though you fell later, Lime. We respect your abilities.

"....."

-We're not questioning your success or failure. Look at us.

Seimslam approached closer.

-Look at us. KyKna.

Her one remaining, battle-scarred tentacle gently covered the Heretic Inquisitor's hand.

"....."

The Heretic Inquisitor looked.

-Look at us, Father.

And then.

Seimslam wore a smile exactly like the one the Heretic Inquisitor had made.

Faced with that smile, the Heretic Inquisitor was paralyzed for a moment.

-We throw useless children into blue stone caves and laugh, saying, 'Lime, it can't be helped.' It might be our wickedness. It might be laughter born from cruelty. But it's different,

Father.

"....."

-It's the innocent laughter you implanted in us.

『Ah! Unfortunately, this is useless!』

『Shall we throw it away?』

『Ahaha..』

-We might look a little different, with more or fewer arms than you, Father.

Seimslam playfully wiggled her one remaining tentacle.

-But still, we've inherited almost everything from you. What you intended and what you didn't. Your laughter, gestures, the weight you chose to carry in this world... everything.

"....."

-So, Father, you don't need to thank us for establishing the first empire, nor apologize for our fall from it. Those are trivial matters. I, we, want to know.

-Why did you become such a psycho.

Because.

-So we can understand why we are psychos like this.

All the Mountain Calamity Tribe's tentacles turned towards the Heretic Inquisitor.

-Speak, Father.

"....."

-We want to know ourselves.

Silence followed.

In the sticky stillness, the Heretic Inquisitor opened his lips.

“I am.”

“.....

“I am.....”

[The 40th floor quest is currently in progress.]

And then.

---

-No, why are you so obsessed with making money?

The Fairy Tribe surrounded the Countess.

The air in the jungle was noisy, like a hearing, and the Fairies, despite their beautiful faces, scowled viciously, launching a relentless assault on their [god].

-It's always about money. Doing or not doing, it's always money. The world is all about money, seriously.

“So, does that make you feel bad?”

The Countess puffed on a water pipe, exhaling smoke. It was a product developed by the Fairy Tribe, but he had just bought it for an extra sum. Although it was a product developed by his children and bought by a parent, the mood didn't seem too pleasant.

“Earning money should feel good, right? Isn't it?”

-Well, it feels good to handle money, but... can't you teach us something other than money? Like music? Songs? Art? Exaggerated self-promotion like the world is so beautiful I could die? Or ways to screw over others by saying I'm too beautiful for this world?

"....."

“You don’t understand. I can’t teach anything other than making money.”

-Why is that?

“I was born a nobody’s kid.”

Through the smoke of the water pipe, the Countess smirked.

“My house was so poor, actually, we didn’t even have a house. Ever heard of a garbage city? Maybe not. The world I was born in was much larger than your continent and had far more people. So much so that the garbage discarded by people could build mountains.”

-Ah....

“But among the garbage, there were sometimes recyclables. Stuff that could make money. Naturally, traders get attracted. Garbage left by others eating, wiping, playing, or even making love... sifting through all kinds of garbage, trying to find the ones that could make money.”

-Oh...

The Fairy Tribe all had bright expectations. They quickly ran calculations in their heads.

-Is that a profitable business? The profit margin seems too slim.

"Heh heh."

The Countess chuckled, seemingly in a good mood.

"It won't make money, right? It's lousy, isn't it?"

-Yes.

"Right. Spot on. That's why our daily wage was even less than a kid's booger."

-.....

"At least if the adults extort from you, there's nothing left in your hand. What can you do? You have to sneak out while the adults are sleeping, secretly rummaging through the garbage piles. If you get caught, you're done for. You have to sleep in short spurts throughout the day and act like nothing's wrong. That's the only way to gather the most valuable trash."

-.....

"Listen well, my children. At least, those who are like my children."

The Countess slowly put down her water pipe.

Then, bending her waist, she whispered to the Fairy Tribe—tens of thousands of them looking at her.

In a dark voice. Using telepathy.

"Don't whine about why I didn't teach you anything else. The moment you whine about such things, you're already proving that you're nothing more than a brat."

-.....

“Making money is hard. The act of making money itself is a stroke of luck.”

The Countess’s eyes brimmed with demonic energy.

“A moneyless child. Say, a little kid living in the heart of a garbage city like me, suddenly wishes one day to [learn the piano] intensely. That’s a delusion, isn’t it? It only looks beautiful in dreams. If that child really wants to learn the piano, they’d have to luckily find a used piano in a trash heap, luckily find an old man nearby who knows how to tune pianos, and, furthermore, luckily gather readable sheet music from the trash, and, finally, be lucky enough to have musical talent.”

-.....

“For someone without money, the mere wish to learn something, to want to do something, is a lifetime gamble. It’s betting all your time, luck, life, everything, on a gamble that might just be within reach.”

-.....

“What about you?”

The Countess scanned the audience.

As some of the Fairy Tribe met her gaze, their shoulders twitched. Among them were certainly fairies who had lived longer than the Countess, but the pressure emanating from the 5th ranked being of the tower was too much to handle.

“What do you think?”

It's easy to overlook this fact when she sometimes transforms into a cat and leisurely taps on dog grass.

The Countess, born a commoner in some trash village, had risen to the position of a tycoon, holding all the trade in the tower.

There were few humans on this continent, in our tower, or even in the outside world who could withstand the venom in the Countess's breath.

“Want to learn music? Pay up. Use money to find a teacher. Buy music sheets. Buy an instrument. Yes, picking an instrument might be a bit troubling. It's quite expensive. Choose your instrument while alternating between considering your passion for music and your family's financial leeway. Carefully... Yes, carefully.”

The Countess laughed.

It was a laugh refined from long-aged poison.

“Money allows you to worry.”

-.....

“Money gives you countless possibilities. Music? If you try and don’t like it, quit. It might cost some money, but you have enough, don’t you? Many people mistake this, but money is not a goal or result. It’s a [starting point]. I, as your parent, have simply gifted you with a starting point.”

The Countess pulled out a fan from her bosom.

“So, [why did our parents only teach us how to make money]? Is that your worry? Good. Very good. Go ahead and worry. Even if you waste time worrying, you won’t starve to death because you didn’t earn your daily wage, right? Waste it cheerfully.”

-.....

“Worry, thought, contemplation. All of these are [pleasant] luxuries. Every time you immerse in worry, every time you dive into contemplation, you subconsciously realize how lavishly you’re living your life. See? These subtle luxuries are what make you great. Or at least, they plant the illusion that you’ve become great.”

The Countess smiled.

Then she opened her fan and covered her lower face with it.

“To think when you want, to live where you desire, to do what you wish. I call this freedom. Money frees you. Only money does.”

-.....

“Let me ask once more. My children. Or at least, those who are like my children.”

The Countess, with cat-like eyes, surveyed the tens of thousands of Fairy Tribe members.

“Were you unhappy to be born as my child?”

“Or did you [think] you were unhappy?”

“If so, how did you feel at the moment you thought, [I was unhappy because I was born as that person’s child]? Did it feel bad? Or maybe...”

The Countess chuckled.

“Did you start feeling a bit prouder of yourself for even having such thoughts, a bit more proud, or did it make you a little happy?”

-.....

“As I said, thoughts and worries, contemplation, are all pleasant luxuries.”

It was a smile like a dark crescent moon.

That crescent moon chuckled out loud, "Aha."

“In my view, your lives seem quite pleasant?”

And then.

[The 41st floor quest is currently in progress.

---

-Why did you choose us?

The Gill Fish Race asked the Paladin.

-We are beings who live in water. In contrast, the great dolphin... You seem to be a being who lives on land. Our worlds are too different.

The Gill Fish Race resembled mermaids.

With wave-like tattoos all over their bodies, when the Gill Fishes swam together, it looked like beautiful waves washing the shore. They were a water tribe.

-Kekerkker chose the Earth Spirit Tribe. Lime chose the Mountain Calamity Tribe. While they look very different, both were born and live on land. They have more similarities than differences. But, why did you choose us?

The Gill Fishes were still gathered in the river.

-Why us?

The Paladin sat on a huge rock that had emerged above the river, surrounded by thousands of Gill Fishes--- perhaps tens of thousands, including children swimming underwater.

" ....."

The Paladin gazed down at the river.

Chapter 266:

Family Interview (3)

---

“I'm sorry.”

Slowly.

The Heretic Inquisitor knelt.

“I was wrong, everyone.”

The Mountain Calamity Tribe, watching the Heretic Inquisitor from a distance, gasped. 'Huh,' 'Hup!' 'Hoo!' Even though the truth had been revealed, the Heretic Inquisitor was a god they had worshipped for thousands of years. A transcendent being who had bestowed care since the beginning of time and a father who had shown them both the glory and downfall of their tribe.

This divine being knelt before them.

“I am aware that I am by no means normal. I think I am normal, but others... especially the King of Death said otherwise, so, hmm. Probably not. Then, as you said, the term [psycho] might suit me too!”

-Why.

Seimslam, representing the entire Mountain Calamity Tribe, spoke up.

-Why did you become a psycho...?

“It’s not such a rare story. I was kidnapped by the mafia around the age of three. Whether it was because my parents couldn’t pay or because they chose a useful kid from the orphanage, I can’t say. Those who could have told me are all dead now.”

-.....

“I was trained in ways to kill people, to keep them alive without killing, to cut strong people into hundreds of pieces of scrap metal and then make them my subordinates, and techniques to enchant people. Overheard from others, I learned how organizations collapse internally and externally. I am a person who knows nothing but this. It can’t be helped...”

The Heretic Inquisitor sighed.

Then, brightening his expression, he looked at Seimslam.

“I thought I should not teach you [these things]!”

-Why is that?

“Well. They are what I do best and excel at. But even so, I wished you wouldn’t live a life like mine. If people like me increased in the tower, it would be troublesome! One of me is enough.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly.

“Of course... I couldn’t just teach you nothing. Mountain Calamity Tribe, this world... this world is not an easy place. It’s truly terrifying. If you just sit still, eventually you’ll be attacked, maybe even kidnapped like me.”

-.....

“I had to make you strong.”

The Heretic Inquisitor.

He mobilized all her knowledge to advance the civilization of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

“There is no one you can fully trust in this world. If there is, it’s just one person. A once-in-a-lifetime miracle, purely dependent on the luck of your life. So ignore it. Ignore it and control others before they betray you.”

He enslaved all the other tribes.

He confined them in caves so they couldn't betray him, divided the cave into hundreds of sections for isolation, and always had watchtowers observing the slaves.

“Then, you won’t have to fear this world.”

-.....

“I'm sorry for being a psycho. For being a psycho father.”

A dark silence filled the jungle.

Seimslam slowly raised her head and looked up at the Heretic Inquisitor.

-Father KyKna.

“Yes.”

-You might be a psycho. But you tried to teach us only the most moderate, the most sensible, the most valuable things in your mind.

“That's correct.”

-Even if it's a house made of planks with a hammock for a roof, prone to light collapse and ruin, but still, you tried to build us the best house possible. Right?

“That was the case.”

-Then, it's settled.

Seimslam released his tentacles.

She grabbed the hilt of a greatsword embedded in the ground.

-You tried to teach us your best. You hid your worst from us, never asking for understanding. You just...

『Wished.』

『Hoped we would at least be better people than you.』

-You truly did your best to care for us.

-I don't want to curse you, Father, for giving birth to us and raising us, despite your many shortcomings.

Chuk.

Seimslam pulled the greatsword out of the ground and slung it over her shoulder, on her shell.

-I'm glad you're my father.

"....."

-Maybe.

Seimslam smiled.

Always expressionless, only scoffing when smiling, the Mountain Calamity Tribe, who had reigned as the Chairman of the Fire River Council for decades, lifted their lips in a bright smile for the first time.

-Perhaps, just at this moment, I might feel a bit happy.

"....."

-Thank you for saying you're sorry to us. To me.

And then.

-Thank you, really. Father.

[Quest Progress.]

[Mountain Calamity Tribe voting begins.]

[Option 1. I am glad to have been guided by you.]

[Option 2. I disliked being guided by you.]

Swish.

Fireflies began to rise from the jungle.

Or so it seemed at first glance. It wasn't fireflies.

Mountain Calamity Tribe members crouched at the base of palm trees, stuck to tree trunks, sprawled on tree branches, hiding in the dark recesses of the jungle, all had been listening to the conversation between Seimslam and the Heretic Inquisitor.

[Vote counting in progress.]

Blue lights emitted from the bodies of the Mountain Calamity Tribe, detached, and floated towards the sky. From afar, they resembled fireflies.

Hundreds. Thousands. Tens of thousands. Hundreds of thousands of fireflies rose, twirling around palm trees and the jungle, ascending to the dark night sky. The countless twinkling lights gave the illusion that the jungle was floating in the Milky Way.

[Vote counting complete.]

A voice echoed through the forest of the Milky Way.

Like a small bell.

[Option 2 votes: 22.5%]

[Option 1 votes: 77.5%]

[Majority for Option 1 confirmed.]

"....."

The Heretic Inquisitor looked up at the night sky, bewildered.

In the dark sky, the Milky Way swirled in blue and green.

Mesmerized by the stunning dance of fireflies and falling starlight, the Heretic Inquisitor was captivated.

『I'm glad you're my father.』

Perhaps it was Seimslam's last words that had stolen everything from him.

But....

As long as I live with the Heretic Inquisitor, I will come to know it someday.

[Stage Clear.]

[The 40th floor has been cleared!]

---

-Right. Money is the best.

A member of the Fairy Tribe shrugged her shoulders.

Apart from her, numerous other Fairy Tribe members passionately agreed, saying, "That's true," "Life without money is horrible," "We may lack pride, but do we lack money?" Before my return, the elves were fanatic followers of the Flame Emperor, but on this continent, the elves were apostles and preachers of a materialistic worldview.

Hmm.

I'm seriously doubting the nature of the elf race...

-Mother's words are so profound, they're indisputable. Honestly, we were just curious. Wondering if you raised us Fairy Tribe as misers, who know nothing but money.

"I'm relieved to have fully satisfied your curiosity."

The Countess chuckled.

"If you knew how much it costs to talk to me, you'd naturally develop filial piety. After all, every minute and second is precious for a merchant like me. Well, since I watched over you like a parent, consider this a parental discount service."

-A discount service is great. We gratefully accept.

The Fairy Tribe gracefully bowed her head.

-Then, taking advantage of the service, may I ask one more thing?

"You're thrifty, I see. Go ahead, ask away."

-Why are you still so desperate to earn money?

“Hmm.”

The Countess blinked her eyes.

The Fairy Tribe members also blinked in unison.

“What do you mean?”

-Didn't you say that money makes many things easy? It allows you to learn music if you want to. Do other things if you desire. Even comfortably contemplate your own life. We completely agree.

“And then?”

-How long will you keep earning?

The Fairy Tribe tilted her head.

-Mother, you seem to have enormous wealth. Can't you already do whatever you want, choose any life you wish, without needing to earn more money?

"....."

-Why earn more?

The Fairy Tribe spoke up.

-What do you plan to do?

-What do you want to do?

-What are you contemplating?

-Why?

The jungle was dark.

Thus, the murmurs of the Fairy Tribe sounded like whispers flowing simultaneously from the forest, branches, and leaves.

-What are you doing?

-Is there really something you want to do?

-Are you contemplating something?

-Now?

"....."

The Countess gripped her fan.

Squeeze.

As the fan closed, the Countess's expression was revealed. The 5th ranked hunter, with an expressionless face, looked ahead quietly, with a fury that was too old and chewed over too often, leaving nothing but dregs.

“Trash...”

The remnants of her anger first emitted a foul smell, then,

“I’ll change the world.”

The sentence was refined after being filtered through the air.

“There’s too much garbage in the world.”

-.....

Even after refinement, the Countess's voice was too sinister for the Fairy Tribe to handle. Aura rippled over her shoulder. Even the Countess, who initially struggled to skillfully handle aura, had become somewhat accustomed to it after passing through the previous stages.

With this accustomed aura, the Countess was revealing the color of her heart.

“Listen. I realized one thing after being born on a garbage heap, growing up in a garbage village, and moving to a garbage city. The only real epiphany, which makes me regard being born from a trash can as some kind of luck.”

-...What is it?

“Garbage washed up from the sea, garbage fallen from the sky, garbage buried underground, garbage discarded anywhere... All of them are less filthy than [humans].”

The Countess laughed strangely.

It was a mocking laugh.

“Yet there’s no specialist in cleaning only humans. So I thought, if the market is such a blue ocean, shouldn’t I be the first to seize it?”

-.....

“Humans like garbage, I will clean up with money.”

The Countess laughed with her arms crossed.

“Of course, I don’t think all humans are garbage. Not at all! Quite the opposite. I believe many people shine brighter than stars. The distance between stars is so vast, making it that hard for beautiful people to meet... but it’s only hard. If you look from afar, so many stars embroider the night sky.”

Perhaps she was recalling someone.

The Countess tilted the corner of her lips in a pleasant manner.

“They need a cleaner like me.”

-How do you plan to do that?

A Fairy Tribe member asked.

-Do you save the shining ones with money?

-Do you drive away the bad ones with money?

-How?

To the Fairy Tribe's questions, the Countess burst into laughter.

“Is there a need for that!”

Her laughter was hearty.

“No need to play the hero. No need to flap around in bat wings, barely flying between legal and illegal, saving poor victims from webs between crimes, holding a giant shield to protect them.”

The Countess's voice was firm.

“Just spend money!”

And simple.

"Just make them earn money!"

Establishing a proper economy.

“Good companies and bad companies. Good organizations and bad organizations. Good businesses and bad businesses. Good humans and bad humans... Yes. Many struggle to distinguish them, wondering when and how to see [human nature]. Most of them who harbor such curiosity create artificial environments for ‘extreme situations’, but it’s nonsense. Listen well.”

And a celebration of uncorrupted circulation.

“Human nature is such a thing.”

Creating good money out of bad.

“Not [when you have nothing], but [when you have everything], you can truly see it.”

Perhaps.

Believing in people more than anyone.

“I scatter money, the good ones reveal their good nature, but the trash start to stink. Still, my job doesn’t change! I give money. I make them earn! I fatten them up, nurture their meat to become fragrant. Until they rot on their own, until they commit crimes on their own, I will invest my money in them.”

Perhaps it’s this woman smiling on a rock in the middle of the jungle.

“Then, if any human or company turns out to be rotten trash... well.”

Suddenly, such a thought crossed my mind.

“My generously sponsored heroes will take care of it.”

“For that, I keep earning money relentlessly, as you all say, desperately. Sometimes, well, unavoidable things happen in life. A little illegal activity, that is.”

The Countess of Sang-Ryun, grinned slightly.

“This is why I make money.”

Before long.

The Fairy Tribe was gazing up at the Countess blankly.

Their gaze was a bit more dazed than when they worshiped the Countess as a god. Originally, the Fairy Tribe wasn't very devout. They were loyal to the command of the god of money, not the god itself. Among all races, the Fairy Tribe was the most relaxed about faith.

“And.”

But.

“This is also why I raised you.”

Today was different.

In the eyes of the Fairy Tribe looking up at the Countess, there was definitely something akin to faith.

Admiration for those above them. Respect for those who walked before them. Reverence for those pointing to distant places.

“You all are far more capable than most merchants working in my tower. Naturally. They just live life and make money, but you live life while making money. Understand that you were born merchants.”

-.....

“I have been eagerly, sincerely, eagerly waiting for people like you to come to my tower.”

The Countess stood up.

The Fairy Tribe flinched.

Unconcerned, the Countess descended from her place and walked towards the Fairy Tribe surrounding her.

“Those who know how to make money.”

One by one.

“Those who see the flow of funds and materials.”

One by one.

As the Countess strolled in front of the Fairy Tribe, she raised her fan, gently supporting the chin of each elf with the tip. She made eye contact with each fairy before her. The Fairy Tribe, mesmerized by her gaze, could not escape her eyes.

“Those who find joy in making money but also seek other pleasures. Those who contemplate what this money is for. Those who find joy in such contemplation. In short...”

The Countess did this to each one, lifting the chins of dozens, gazing into the eyes of hundreds, and speaking to the ears of thousands.

“People like me.”

The jungle was dark.

So the Countess's whisper sounded like it was simultaneously flowing from the forest, branches, and leaves.

“My children.”

The Countess said.

“Follow me.”

The breath of the Fairy Tribe slowed down.

“This continent is small. It’s just a corner in the universe. Even if you monopolize the logistics and goods of this corner, what meaning does it have? Follow me. Climb the tower, seize all the money streams flowing in the myriad things, trample and rip apart the wealth piled up in the universe, make everything flow smoothly, from a coin wandering the world to a piece of wire thrown in a trash can.”

“You are needed.”

Already, the eyes of the Fairy Tribe were hazy.

“You will come to love it.”

Their breath was warmer than their body temperature.

“I am the lord of all merchants, the master of Sang-Ryun. You will become my children and join me in flushing the world’s toilet.”

The Fairy Tribe looked dazedly at the woman who once was their god.

And now, had become their mother.

“Will you follow me?”

It didn’t take long for the Fairy Tribe's lips to part.

-Yes....

In the dark jungle.

The palm trees, branches, and wide leaves all murmured simultaneously.

-Yes. Mother.

[Quest Progress.]

[Fairy Tribe voting begins.]

[Vote counting complete.]

The Countess smiled like a moonlit night.

[Option 2 votes: 11.60%]

[Option 1 votes: 88.40%]

[Majority for Option 1 confirmed.]

Swish.

As she opened her fan to cover her lower face, the smile embedded with the moon split in half.

“Thank you all.”

The Countess held the half-moon at the corner of her lips.

“Let’s flush the world's toilet together.”

And then.

[Stage Clear.]

[The 41st floor has been cleared!]

Chapter 267: Family Interview (4)

---

-Mother?

A member of the Gill Fish Race addressed the Paladin.

The Paladin was gazing somewhere. The Gill Fishes too, with their webbed feet on the rock, flicking their tails and splashing water, looked in the same direction.

-Mother, why are you interested in the place where the Fairy Tribe is...?

“No. It’s just unbelievable. After talking about parents and children for so long, that person is really hopeless.”

-.....

A bitter smile hung on the Paladin's lips. It seemed to have stirred unease among the Gill Fishes.

-We know a lot about you, Mother, but not much about that person. Is she a good person?

“She’s a sad person.”

The Paladin simply defined the Countess that way.

“And a clear one.”

The Paladin then fell into thought, seemingly recalling her own past.

It wasn't for long.

"Hmm."

The Paladin picked up her helmet that was left beside the rock. Clank. Silently, she put the helmet back on.

Inside the helmet, the chattering of the world was filtered out. The distracting colors from the world narrowed down. The filtered and narrowed view was just enough to remind her of her duties.

“Gill Fishes.”

The Paladin stood up and looked around.

In the river where the islet had sunk, all the Gill Fishes were swimming or floating motionlessly, gazing up at the mermaid. In an instant, the number of Gill Fishes looking up at her amounted to tens of thousands.

“Thank you for comforting me in my foolishness, for praising my mistakes as lovely. I will keep the stories you told tonight, the scenes of you crossing the dark water, in my heart for a lifetime.”

-Are you leaving, Mother?

“I'll visit sometimes.”

The Paladin nodded.

"I have a lot to do. It can't be helped."

-.....

Silence followed.

The river and sea water where the Gill Fishes lived always rippled irregularly. The Gill Fishes had developed a habit of whispering softly, gripping each other's shoulders. This time, too, they gently grabbed the shoulder of a fellow tribe member, one whispering to another, then one to ten, the whisper spreading like contagion. Gill Fish

-Mother.

After the whispers ended.

A mermaid representing the Gill Fishes spoke.

-Won't you take us with you?

"....."

-You mentioned a place called the tower. You said it would soon be visible to us. If that place is your homeland, Mother, wouldn't it be okay for us to follow you there?

-We love the water. But we love the land we can't swim in even more. If that place is where Mother lives, we will come to love it even more.

-Please take us with you.

The Paladin remained silent.

She simply fiddled with her sword hilt.

“There are many vile people in the tower. I don't want you to be hurt by such people.”

-What kind of vile people?

“They will call you fish just because you have tails. Not because they think it's a funny joke, but simply because they want to upset you.”

-.....

“There are many, many people who live with the mentality that as long as they can spoil someone else's mood, nothing else matters. So...”

-Mother.

The Gill Fishes looked at each other, then back at the Paladin.

-There are many ordinary people like that here too.

The Paladin closed her mouth.

-Among us as well.

-Weak people.

-Sick people.

-Those who torment others because they themselves are tormented. Such people are everywhere in the world.

-Such people will always exist, anywhere and in the future.

-Not beyond them.

-But among us.

The Gill Fishes spoke in unison.

-So that can't be a reason why we shouldn't see your world, Mother.

“I am.....”

As the Paladin hesitated.

“Wait a moment.”

Someone grasped the Paladin's shoulder.

It was a gentle yet considerate hand, laden with firm determination.

The Paladin knew only one person who would grab her shoulder this way.

[The King of Death descends.

---

“There’s no need to be so scared, senior.”

“.....King of Death.”

The Paladin turned her head to look at me.

“What do you mean, I’m scared?”

I didn’t respond.

I didn't say anything like she was afraid that the Gill Fishes would one day realize she's just another 'ordinary' person.

I simply spoke cheerfully.

"How about this?"

"What's that?"

"Instead of inviting the Gill Fishes children directly to our tower, let's send them for study abroad to the Aegim Empire starting from the 11th floor. There are mermaids living there too."

"Ah."

The Paladin's eyes widened.

I nodded.

'She wouldn't have thought of it. The Paladin didn't participate in the conquest at that time.'

There was such an incident.

At that time, as a hero, I collected Preta. However, the Aegim Empire was still unaware of this. They came after me, forming a multi-racial alliance to capture the witch, among whom was this character.

『In my view, the current issue boils down to something simple. Whether this...』

『Young man is truly the Emissary of the Founder. Whether that woman is really a witch. Just confirming these matters would resolve everything.』

『This is the Soul Orb bestowed by the current king of the mermaids.』

『If you drop a drop of blood on it, it reveals whether the owner of the blood possesses a [good soul] or an [evil soul]!』

As everyone knows, I coolly splashed my blood on the orb.

『Ah? Uh, what...?』

『How... how can a soul be so... how many lives must have been saved for it to be this white, this is... this is truly...!』

『This person is... the Light...!』

Radiant Sir.

That was the moment I ascended to that title.

“There are mermaids living on the 15th floor who are extremely friendly to me. They think I'm a real apostle of the god. Well, the god there is the [Goddess of Protection], and this Goddess of Protection is Shiny, hanging at my waist, so it's not entirely a wrong analysis...”

The sheath at my waist rustled. It seemed like a protest, asking for more attention.

I have so much to do, meeting with the tower owner, raising children, mediating among comrades, joking around with the Guardian Spirit. Hang in there, Shiny. Just a bit longer. Maybe one day there will be a spin-off like 'Shiny, the Goddess of the Tower's 1st Floor Dining Diary' starring you on a gourmet journey.

Anyway.

“The point is, there are mermaids in another world who are very friendly towards me.”

"....."

“A kind of tutorial. Wouldn't it be a suitable place for study abroad for the Gill Fishes?”

The Paladin looked into my eyes.

“Can you build a bridge?”

“Of course. What's the point of having connections if not for times like this?”

-Kim Gong-Ja?

The Paladin's expression changed.

Given her usual stoicism, even I could only read her expressions as either [she's in a good mood] or [she's feeling stiff]. But this time, her expression was too transparently readable.

“Let me express my thanks.”

“No, no. There's no need to thank me. I'm just doing what's natural.”

“Kim Gong-Ja. No, Radiant Sir Gong-Ja. You truly are a kind soul.”

“Ahaha... Well, I am a bit kind. Um, anyway---”

“Kind and handsome too. They say life reflects in one's face, maybe that's true.”

“No... I mean, I happen to be a bit handsome, but there's no need to—”

“And even your voice is beautiful. You could be a singer right now. Is this what they call a natural-born singer? Singing Sir Gong-Ja.”

“Singing Sir Gong-Ja? Um... uh... Senior? Excuse me?”

“Kind, handsome, and a good singer – you'd probably be great at dodging military service too. There's mandatory military service in Korea, right? Are you a veteran? Military Sir Gong-Ja.”

“No, it changed to a volunteer system when I was young! The thing about celebrities avoiding military service is a really old story. More importantly, I'm a tower ranker, so even if there was military service, I probably would have been exempt for some national merit reason...”

“Indeed, that makes sense. A national hero.”

“Yes, a national hero... No, wait, Senior! You're teasing me, right!? Just like when we first created the Blood Flower Drama!?”

“I have no idea what you're talking about.”

The Paladin feigned ignorance.

I sighed. The Paladin then smiled slightly at me and grabbed my shoulder.

She pulled.

"Uh!"

Instinctively, I bent over.

Wrapping her arm around my neck, the Paladin showed my face to the Gill Fishes.

"This is the King of Death. The god of the Earth Spirit Tribe, a ranker of our tower. As you can see, he's my junior and also a friend."

The Gill Fishes murmured.

-The King of Death!

-The god of the Earth Spirit Tribe!

-The mother's junior!

-The mother's friend!

-A national hero!

Damn, I feel like my face is on fire.....

“So, King of Death.”

The Paladin released her arm from my neck. A soft smile lingered on her lips.

“Thank you for the wonderful suggestion. Hmm. Let's plan it according to the King of Death's idea.”

Then the Paladin quickly formulated a plan.

Selecting some students for exchange to the [Mermaid Falls of the Aegim Empire].

After observing the problems and conflicts that arise there, they would develop solutions and gradually increase the number of exchange students.

Eventually expanding the exchange destinations and finally inviting the Gill Fishes to the 1st floor city of our tower, [Babylon].

“Hehe.”

The Paladin chuckled lightly. The Gill Fishes, convinced by this proposal, unanimously agreed to follow her words. They excitedly discussed, “What do mermaids from another world look like?” “They live not in the sea, but in a huge lake!” “Is there really such a big lake?”

Like children who had just been promised a school trip.

“Life really is unpredictable.”

“Hmm?”

“Although it's just a metaphor, I've become a parent raising children, reconciled with the Black Dragon Witch to become friends again. Even my relationships with other guild leaders...”

The Paladin looked at me with a smile, but her gaze was directed elsewhere.

“Really. Such things have happened.”

Her voice suddenly sounded distant.

Was she reminiscing about the past?

"....."

I remained silent again.

Before reaching the 15th floor of the tower with the mermaids' lake. When I first ascended to the 13th floor of the tower, we faced an internal betrayer and were divided.

We had been divided.

"....."

I had a suspicion about who the betrayer was. But instead of revealing their identity, I deeply buried it by changing the stage itself so that such an incident would not occur.

I often questioned whether not pursuing the identity of the betrayer was the right decision. But at this moment, looking at the side profile of the Paladin, I could think without any hesitation.

‘Yes.’

It was the right decision.

‘That's enough.’

Dawn mist was slowly rising in the jungle. Under the palm trees, the Heretic Inquisitor was still talking with the Mountain Calamity Tribe. The Heretic Inquisitor's expression was serious, but occasionally he laughed like he used to, "Ahaha."

Elsewhere, the Countess was patting the heads of the Fairy

Tribe. Was it some kind of oath of allegiance? Or the first expression of affection from a parent to a child? Probably both, but the Countess was smiling, and the fairies seemed happy.

“Thank you.”

The Paladin spoke.

Then she looked at me.

“You're a good friend, Kim Gong-Ja.”

"....."

“Patricia.”

Silence fell.

“That's my real name. Patricia. You can call me Patricia when no one else is around. If the Vigilante Corps members hear, it might cause favoritism controversies.”

"....."

"You've raised children who will surely understand you, mi amigo."

The Paladin walked to the creek where the Gill Fishes were splashing. She then discarded her heavy armor, helmet, and gloves, and dived into the water among the mermaids. [Quest Progress.]

[Gill Fishes voting begins.]

Splash!

[Vote counting complete.]

[Option 2 votes: 01.32%]

[Option 1 votes: 98.68%]

[Majority for Option 1 confirmed.]

From a distance, I could hear the Gill Fishes laughing.

There were stories of gods who walked with them, gods who carried them on their backs, even gods who danced with them...

But a god who swam with them was a happiness granted only to the Gill Fishes.

[Stage Clear.]

[The 42nd floor has been cleared!]

From the jungle's palm-laden river, I watched for a long time the scene of gods and tribes, parents and children swimming together.

And then.

“Ugor.”

A familiar voice of a familiar child called from behind me.

“Daddy.”

It was Uburka.

I nodded.

‘Yes.’

Now that the Heretic Inquisitor, the Countess, and the Paladin had cleared their stages in turn, it was time for the Black Dragon Witch and me.

The Black Dragon Witch had made me promise not to peek when she came out of the waiting room, just like when we first created the Blood Flower Drama.

"I won't watch, Anastasia!"

But unlike Anastasia, I wasn't embarrassed at all. How close am I with my children? I wish everyone could see how amicably I converse with my children, how strong our parent-child relationship is. I would appreciate their envy.

“Okay, Uburka---”

Slowly, I turned around and spread my arms to embrace Uburka.

The Heretic Inquisitor showed spiritual growth by expressing regret to his children, the Countess flaunted her capitalistic virtue by personally offering employment to her children, and the Paladin always showcased a heart that prioritized her children's feelings.

And I, Kim Gong-Ja, was literally the sky.

Speaking metaphorically, the sky.

Confident in showing spiritual growth, capitalistic virtue, and even heart.

Naturally.

Unlike other parents, I was always aware that my true nature would eventually be exposed to my children.

Knowing yourself and your enemy ensures victory in every battle.

In a way, your greatest enemy in life is your own children. In that sense, the Earth Spirit Tribe children were never a match for me, already having insight into everything.

‘Ugor! Even when comrades ridiculed us for choosing goblins, did father steadfastly choose us, the Earth Spirit Tribe.....!’

Or...

‘I knew from legends that daddy taught us all about letters and tattoos, but seeing it in my mind's eye, I'm deeply moved! Ugor! How did daddy manage to take care of everything for us from one to ten!’

Or...

‘Daddy's kindness is like the sky, impossible to repay... If it weren't for daddy, we would have been far more miserable and vicious. Daddy is a true friend.’

In my ears, I could already hear hundreds of thousands of Earth Spirit Tribe members singing praises of ‘Daddy! Daddy!’

Of course, in response to such praise, I was prepared to humbly respond,

‘Oh, come on. It’s all because of your greatness.’

‘Seeing you grow up well is enough for this daddy...’

‘I love you, my children...!’

Perfect.

Now, I am not just the light. I am the sky that holds the light.

Not Radiant, but Sky.

I am about to be reborn as the dignified Sky Sir Gong-Ja.

With a business smile honed by the Black Dragon Witch, I turned around, expecting my child's warm embrace.

"Come, embrace me---."

"Daddy."

There was indeed something enthusiastic.

"A completely exposed back."

A massive axe eagerly aimed at my chest flew towards me.

"---Damn it!?"

Whish!

I narrowly dodged the attack, purely thanks to my elevated skills. Perhaps it was also thanks to the Guardian Spirit, who had been watching me with an exasperated expression, but even so, without my extraordinary stepping techniques, I would not have been able to evade.

“Ugor.”

Uburka grimaced as he swung the axe.

Then spat on the ground.

“Daddy's movements are like a squirrel frolicking in the forest. I thought the attack would land perfectly.”

“What, what is this! Uburka!”

I panicked and glanced over Uburka's shoulder. Following him, other children, the Earth Spirit Tribe, flushed with anger, were gathered.

If my eyes weren't severely damaged, they too were holding weapons.

Highly inappropriate items for a heartwarming reunion.

“Where's the touching reunion!? Didn't you watch the video of me caring for you for thousands of years!?”

“We did.”

“Then why swing an axe at me!”

“I don't understand.”

Uburka bared his fangs.

“I've known for a long time that daddy cares for us, so watching the video now doesn't move me.”

“Wh-What?”

“Think about it, Ugor. We go to the theatre when bored. The Blood Flower Drama always focuses on daddy's love, trials, and friendship stories. I can recite every play where daddy is the protagonist, even with my eyes closed.”

"....."

“Seems you forgot that people have a threshold for tolerance, daddy.”

How can this be?

Is this what happens when you shower too much love, making them take the parent's affection for granted?

“That’s absurd!”

“It's not.”

Vroooooom!

Uburka swung his axe again, this time meticulously wrapping it in aura. Absorbing the energy of the Ki Dragon had advanced his aura skills, and the already formidable attack was further enhanced.

“Eeek!? Save me!”

“Ah, the day has come when I’ve been longing to show daddy!”

Uburka's biceps throbbed.

“I was embarrassingly defeated by daddy the first time we met! Even after ascending to the Constellation, I was thrashed by daddy! But today! Finally, on this day, I will show daddy!”

“You crazy! If you lost twice, let it go! Why hold such petty grudges!?”

“Ugor. What do you take me for, daddy?”

[The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide roars.]

“Here stands the Chairman of the Fire River Council, the Chief Warrior of the King of Death Family, your child, Uburka!”

What’s with this guy's nicknames?

Chapter 268: White Lion Faith (1)

---

-Baraya, Baraya!

“My heart is a torch!”

-Agabaraya!

“I shall achieve parricide!”

The Earth Spirit Tribe sang the song of the Blood Fire Drama with gusto, while I barely, just barely, evaded Uburka's axe swings in front of them.

But my heart churned with unease.

I shrieked while dodging the sixth blow.

“Hey! Don’t sing Baraya here, you maniacs!”

“What’s wrong with singing it?”

“Don’t sing if I tell you not to!”

The doctrine of the Demonic Cult is widely spread among the Earth Spirit Tribe.

Through the cultural project of the Blood Fire Drama. Also, through the military tactics of the Demonic Heavenly Art, the Earth Spirit Tribe consciously or unconsciously lived by the doctrine of the Demonic Cult. ‘Agabaraya’ was a kind of chorus that boosted the morale of the Earth Spirit Tribe. It was their freedom to sing it as much as they wanted, but...

“To catch just me, you’re singing Baraya Baraya! What!? Even when capturing the Ki Dragon, you didn’t use Demonic Heavenly Art, just performed ki meditation, why are you exerting full power to hunt me!?”

“Ugor.”

Hearing my words, Uburka sneered.

“Don’t you really understand, daddy?”

Swoosh!

Uburka swung his axe widely, destroying everything within its radius. Just the wind pressure alone shredded the palm trees, rocks, and all life forms in between. “Damn!” If I hadn’t quickly retreated, at least a heel would have been crushed.

“To us, daddy is everything.”

“What?”

“Everything, I say.”

Thud.

Uburka approached with red light in his eyes, his gaze so intense that it made my heart skip a beat.

‘What?’

I wondered if he had been overwhelmed by the spirit and fell into a frenzied state. But that couldn't be. Uburka wasn't so lowly skilled to fall into such a state, and in our Demonic Cult, succumbing to one's own emotions is considered a disgrace.

Just...

"You still don't fully realize how significant daddy is to us. You haven't truly felt it."

Uburka was raising aura throughout his body, to the extent that I mistook it for a frenzy.

"What are you saying? Of course, I am your closest friend..."

"That's what I'm saying. Ugor. Daddy, you really don't know yourself."

Uburka chuckled lightly.

Then, as if his previous words were a joke, he opened up.

“Daddy said it himself, you gave us letters. Seeing daddy meticulously creating characters for our tribe, even though I knew it intellectually, it felt differently.”

-Ugor! It was worth seeing.

The blushing Earth Spirit Tribe, the Asuras, chimed in from behind. “Ugor!” “Ugor!” Their chorus added momentum to Uburka’s words, like a red wave turning into a giant tidal wave approaching me.

“Do you remember the first day daddy taught us letters? The day you taught us how to make sounds?”

"....."

I clenched the hilt of my sword.

From the red wave, an ominous aura was surging.

It was like the sensation I had when Constellation Killer approached to kill me on the 50th floor. Something bigger, stronger, and perhaps more desperate than me. The chilling murderous intent I felt when that thing pointed its sword at me, was now palpably present in this red wave of children.

I estimated the distance and spoke.

“I remember. As vividly as if it happened yesterday.”

“Daddy taught letters to immature children. While teaching, you created characters for things they loved, played with, and were happy with.”

"....."

“Gently.”

Mud is ■.

Sky is O.

Sun is ☆.

Moon is ★.

Water is ~.

In the soft mud, carving out with the claws of a lion, teaching the little goblins letters, those days are still brilliantly preserved in my mind.

As a warm memory.

“Daddy could have known many languages. But you knew we only needed about seven words in our life. Thus, you could have reproached us.”

Why see the world so narrowly?

This is a tree, and that is a mountain.

Learn more, know more.

“But you didn’t reproach.”

"....."

“Instead of reproaching, you wanted us to fully explore this small world we had. You didn’t teach us that [the rain will stop soon, so don’t worry]. Instead, when we were scared and trembling in primitive fear because the rain was hitting the earth in anger, you were the first to cry out.”

-Keeeee!

Using the goblin word for rain, [Ke].

If translated into modern language...

Water is coming.

-Kerererer! Keeeeee!

On the earth, on the land, water is coming.

Huddled in the hut while the torrential rain poured outside, the little goblins shrank their shoulders. To the primitive

Earth Spirit Tribe, the torrential rain was a kind of deity. The deity was angry, raining down.

‘Maybe we’ve wronged the deity.’

In a tribal society where language hadn’t evolved, it was difficult to even form such a clear sentence. In reality, it was more like broken words [We, sky, wrong?].

Unable to articulate even their own fears, it was that kind of era. Such was their tribe. A time when the color of the sky wasn't fixed, the reason for the sun and moon's orbit was a mystery, and every born life trembled in fear of what attacked from outside and the unknown inside.

-Kerererer! Keeeeee!

Then someone cried out.

-Kere! Kee! Kerere, Kee!

Water is coming.

Water is coming to the land.

Just that mere cry.

Amid the rainforest and torrential rain, it felt as if the entire world would be swept away by the flood at any moment, but the white lion roared defiantly. Water is coming. Water is coming. Water is coming...

-Kere...

-Kererk...

It was a spell.

More lucid than any mystical fortune-teller.

-Kerer...

-Kee... Keeeeee!

Several goblins left the hut and approached the White Lion. Already half the hut was submerged by the heavy rain, so there was no hesitation in their steps. They climbed the high rock, the slippery rock wet with rain, missing several times. They kept crying out while climbing.

-Keeee!

-Kere, Kee! Kere, Kee!

Water is coming.

Water is coming to the land.

As the goblins struggled to reach the top, the White Lion stood there, looking up at the dark sky with a straight jaw.

-Kii...

The goblins gasped for breath, engulfed in fear.

They were afraid. The dark clouds seemed to boil over with the deity's wrath, ready to unleash at any moment. Lightning, thunder, storm. To the goblins, who knew so little, all these were divine powers.

Incomprehensible, unattainable, unavoidable. Only to be obeyed... The deities, favoring us, pitying us, allowed us to survive today...

-Keeeeee!

Still, the White Lion roared.

The world was entwined with grey giants, everything dreary and confused, swirling in the swift winds. Even at a moment when the world seemed on the brink of destruction, the White Lion merely raised its head and roared.

-Keeeeee!

Water is coming.

-Keeeeeeeee!

Water is coming.

-.....Keee, rrr. Kerrr...

-Keeeee.....

-Kerrrr....

The little goblins began to cling to the White Lion's body. They clung to its paws, tail, torso, and mane, trembling fearfully.

They couldn't understand why the White Lion was roaring, why they were drawn here by that cry, or why they felt the need to echo the White Lion's wails, but...

-Keeeeeeeeee!

-Kee, keeeeeeee!

-Kerrr! Kee!

The goblins shouted with all their might.

Water is coming, they said.

Water is coming.

Water is coming.

.

.

.

.

.

.

Thud.

The all-night downpour had now eased. The goblins perched on a distant rock first noticed this. Thud – the raindrops on their beak-like noses felt lighter. Thud – the raindrops on their crinkled green foreheads were gentler.

-Kee.....

What was happening?

-Kerrr...?

What miracle was unfolding?

-Keeeee.

The goblins all looked up at the White Lion. Drenched in the night's rain, its mane hung long, but the White Lion's eyes shone brighter than the morning sun just beginning to rise.

The water, the water that seemed like it would destroy the world, had receded.

-Kekerkker.

The White Lion growled contentedly.

With the harsh rain gone, leaving only gentle raindrops to moisten the plains, the White Lion pointed towards the droplets falling from the sky to the earth and declared.

-Kekerkker.

The goblins tilted their heads, engulfed in a strange feeling. They echoed the White Lion's words.

-Kekerkker?

-Kekerkker.

Rain.

-Kekerkker.

Rain.

-.....

Rain.

-Kekerkker.

And that day, the Earth Spirit Tribe realized something.

The White Lion might have simply intended to teach them the word "rain." But it was more than that. The impact the White Lion had on the Earth Spirit Tribe, the legacy it left, was far too immense to be contained in a mere word.

-Kekerkker!

The Earth Spirit Tribe triumphed over fear.

They could have huddled in their safe huts, trembling, hoping the deities would spare them, praying and muttering prayers. They could have prepared altars and sacrifices to appease the deities' wrath, offering a goblin every rainy season, thus wasting a thousand years.

They might have called out "rain" in fear. Rain, not as water flowing on the land, but as water pouring from the sky. Water unleashed in the deity's anger. And thus, "rain" would have become a deity, its name becoming something like "The One Who Sweeps the World Away" or "The Ruler of Autumn's Terror," much longer and more terrifying.

“But.”

Uburka.

The living witness of the Earth Spirit Tribe held his axe aloft.

“It didn't happen that way.”

"....."

“Daddy didn't just teach us letters. No, he did, but he taught us something far greater. Daddy taught us victory!”

It was a victory over fear.

The world was covered in the unknown, where one had to burrow into the earth, crouching under small huts, mere refuges from the world.

“Thanks to daddy, we conquered water.”

-Ugor! Ugor!

“Thanks to daddy, we conquered fire.”

-Ugor! Ugor!

“Thanks to daddy, we conquered thunderstorms, rivers, the sea! We even conquered the salt hell beneath the earth!”

-Ugor! Ugor!

“Kekekekekeke!”

Uburka spread his arms wide and shouted.

“It's not the name of a terrifying deity, but simply rain! Just rain! Something we triumphed over, something we shook off our fear of! To us, kekekeke is not just a letter, but the name of a war we won, thus our proud trophy!”

-Kekeruk!

“Sky! It's not a punishing deity. We stripped the sky of its divine status. Sky! Just the sky! We admire the purple silk it drapes at dawn, shed tears at its lazy evening blush, but it's no different from pity for a defeated foe! Sky! It too is a name we plundered.”

-Ugor! Ugor!

“There are two ways to write letters. To carve fears into characters. While other tribes developed the character for fire out of fear, needing to escape it, hoping it wouldn't come, we etched fire into our letters to celebrate our victory! It's a prey we successfully hunted and captured! We carved the character for fire in our damp caves and laughed over it!”

-Gor!

“Gor!”

-Gor!

“Gor!”

In the pre-dawn jungle, not the sky, but a fire ignited on the low ground.

“That's the name our fire bears!”

The multitude of Asuras ignited their aura.

“When they feared fire, dreaded it, tried to escape it, tried to control it, we just shouted at the fiery red Gor.”

-Ugor!

“Good!”

The flames intensified.

“Fire, beautiful! Beautiful!”

-Ugor! Ugor! Ugor!

They were all elite members of the Fire River Council. They started their martial journey with the Demonic Heavenly God Art during their trainee days, mastered the Demonic Formations Art one by one as warriors, and eventually reached the pinnacle, securing a position in the Fire River Council, the elite of the elite.

“Daddy!”

At the forefront, Uburka stood with open arms, laughing.

-Kekerkker! Kekerkker!

Behind him, excited Asuras shook their spears, swords, axes, and fists.

"Daddy didn't just teach us letters! Nor did he teach us the world! Nor did he merely teach us how to win! He didn't just teach us to face the fears ingrained in every living thing, to confront them, to coexist, and overcome together! What did daddy give us? What is daddy to us? Is daddy just a teacher who taught us many things?"

-Ugor! Ugor! Ugor!

"No! Then what is he? Is he a god? The creator who gave us the earth and the sky, allowing us to breathe? Is daddy merely a god to us?"

-Ugor! Ugor! Ugor!

"No, he is not!"

[The Muscle Pig Dreaming of Parricide roars.]

"Then what is daddy to us! My beloved brethren! Those of you who love the damp waters, are enchanted by the rain, tremble at the sky's quivering, and whose hearts pound at the sight of soaring flames! What is daddy to us!”

-Kekerkker! Kekerkker!

“That's right!”

Uburka laughed heartily.

“Daddy is, our world!”

Ah.

“Daddy is everything to us!”

I am.

“In this world, we have conquered everything! I, Uburka, have even conquered death. Hence, we can joyfully sing every word. Every sentence is a trace of overcoming fear! Every conversation is a continuous celebration of our victorious battles! We are brave, we shed tears, we respect everything in the world that fought us, yet we laugh because we have won and will continue to win!”

-Kekerkker! Kekerkker!

“Except for one thing.”

Uburka pointed his axe at me.

“Daddy.”

"....."

“Kekerkker!”

"....."

A white creature descended from the sky.

In the language of the Earth Spirit Tribe, it signifies.

Not a demon, nor a god, but...

“Our world!”

The world.

“Born in your world, opened our eyes in your world, smelled in your world, stepped in your world, we were happy! Ugor! With all sincerity, I cry out, Kekerker! We love this world!”

The entire jungle.

In the shade of the palm trees and bushes, untouched by dawn's light, a bonfire was raised. The Asuras who ruled this continent's land, created by a certain turtle, ignited a beacon.

Demonic Formations Art.

Hundreds of thousands of Asuras ignited their Baraya together.

“Now, it's time to put the final mark on the last thing we haven't conquered!"

-Kekerkker! Kekerkker!

To them, I was a much greater entity than I thought.

I had become such an entity to them.

"....."

I closed my eyes.

The sensation of the world's flames engulfing me.

Strangely, these flames, brimming with love and affection for me, were not hot. Only the joy of trying to defeat me heated my heart.

There couldn't be a softer flame to stoke the heart.

‘So, it is.’

I recalled the scene of my Master slicing through the snowy mountains.

What the Master had in mind at that time was not the towering peaks.

‘Can a person also become a world to someone?’

The Master had surely sliced through the seasons at that time.

He had cut through the time that froze all life.

He had sliced the world.

‘Yes.’

I gripped my sword handle.

“Those who wish to become gods to someone must be prepared to be parents.”

I drew my sword with a long, scraping sound.

“And those who wish to be parents must also be prepared to become the world.”

White.

The holy sword that had been with me for a long time now shone brilliantly.

Giving life, journey, and world to the fire, in response to my sense of responsibility, the sword that was once a goddess gleamed brightly.

“You are fire, suitable to burn the world.”

I took out a pair of gloves from my pocket.

Thud.

I threw the white gloves, scented with Raviel, towards the lush foliage.

“Before a duel, it's a martial realm's law to reveal oneself. Our Demonic Cult, originated from the martial realm, must also uphold the respect for our ancestors.”

While being ready to summon the army of the King of Death Family at any moment.

“I am the second-ranked hunter of the City of Ascension, the emissary of the Aegim Empire, the direct disciple of the late peony in the snowy plains, the Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult, the only Moon of the Ivansia Ducal Family, the family head of the King of Death Family, and your---.”

Towards the children who have continually triumphed for thousands of years.

I spoke of my history, which had been victorious for even longer.

“Kekerkker.”

I brandished my sword.

That moment.

[World Naming.]

['Unnamed World -30-1316782' is officially registered.]

[The name of this world is 'The World of the Lone Child'*.]

*The Korean term "사자세계" (sajasegye) is a transliteration of the Chinese phrase "獨子世界" (dúzǐ shìjiè). It has the same meaning as in Chinese, referring to the concept of an "only child's world." Just like in Chinese, it describes the unique perspective, experiences, and challenges of being an only child in a family in the context of Korean culture. It emphasizes how growing up without siblings can shape one's worldview and experiences in distinct ways.

Thud.

Something fell onto my sword.

[May luck accompany the World of the Lone Child.]

A droplet of water.

A speck of rainwater splashed on my sword blade.

Chapter 269: White Lion Faith (2)

---

‘Rain.’

I observed the water droplet on my sword blade.

‘It's raining.’

Every movement of the slowly sliding droplet was clear to me, moment by moment. Due to the heightened concentration from drawing up aura throughout my body, my heart rate and senses were far beyond that of an ordinary person at this moment.

Thud!

I channeled aura into my sword blade and flicked the water droplet away. My red aura instantly enveloped the droplet. Should I call it coating? The droplet, now plated with my aura, I sent it flying directly towards Uburka.

Thwack!

The reddened droplet hit Uburka's cheek.

It burst.

Like a child playfully throwing a water balloon. Red paint smeared and ran down one side of Uburka's face. He could easily dodge my strike, yet he jovially received it as a playful jest.

“At this point, showing off the mastery of your aura is uninspiring.”

Uburka grinned.

“The sorrow and resentment mixed in the droplet from your blade, that aura-infused tear becomes more than just one of many raindrops to be washed away, but rather a single drop that feels dirty, gloomy, and as if it needs to help someone. Remarkable. A fascinating intricacy of aura.”

“Uburka.”

In the midst of this small exchange, where we gave and took mutual respect, I fully composed myself. The habit of Kim Gong-Ja, who awkwardly inserts himself into conversations or tries to draw favor from strangers he meets for the first time.

I shed all the shells that made me who I am, one by one, focusing my mind solely on the [believer].

At this moment, the one wielding the sword is the Vice-lord of Demonic Cult.

“Do you believe I created that?”

“What?”

“A raindrop is nothing more than moisture clumping together, falling when it can no longer hold its own weight. There's no reason beyond physical action. Just water, just force, just gravity. That's why there are raindrops.”

Master.

I conveyed the teachings I received from the lord of the Demonic Cult, about snowflakes, to my believer.

“I infused human desires and resentments into the droplet with my aura, turning a simple droplet into a projectile. Adding something that wasn't originally there makes it unnatural. That's how the Demonic Cult manipulates aura, right?”

"....."

“But son, you are mistaken.”

To the orthodox, land is just land. Emulating the land means a martial artist themselves become a speck of dirt.

But to the Demonic Cult, what is land? It's the enemy that must be dug with broken fingernails to bury a sister's corpse. It's the enemy that was so peaceful on that day that it caught the lord's eye. Despite all their hard work, it's the bastard that never becomes theirs, forever hiding in the landowner's ledger, mocking their miserable lives.

Sword Emperor.

I shared the explanation I heard from another master with my offspring.

“I didn’t mix my own emotions into it.”

“Then whose did you mix?”

“People’s.”

All the grievances and resentments of people living in the world gather to form the sky, which we call Demonic Heaven.

“I am the Vice-lord of Demonic Cult, its representative.”

Therefore, the emotions mingled there are not mine. I dare not call them mine.

They belong to someone who once existed, someone who will exist someday. They are resentment, grief, hatred.

“This is the sword of the Demonic Heaven!”

I swung my sword.

Thousands of red raindrops flew horizontally at once. My responsibility. My charge. My representation. Precious things shot out, striking Uburka sideways with an unbelievable loud boom! With a cry that seemed more of a wail, Uburka was swept away, and the jungle shook violently.

---

In the drenched forest, birds could not fly. Instead, water droplets hanging from tree branches flew all at once.

“Indeed.”

In the middle of it all, from a meteor crater carved in the heart of the jungle, Uburka spoke.

“Indeed. So it was.”

Uburka boldly laughed, then clapped his fists together with a thud!

“In that case.”

Uburka stood up.

Covered in rainwater, his figure flickering in and out of visibility, the white giant laughed, revealing gleaming white teeth.

“This time, let us show you our world.”

Meanwhile, the rain kept increasing.

This place, being the wettest jungle on the continent, made rain a daily occurrence this season. Drizzle, monsoon, misty and heavy rain. Nearby, a school of piranhas thrashed in the river, and river eels swiftly devoured them.

The jungle was engulfed in heavy rain.

-Uu...

In an instant, the jungle was wrapped in low-lying fog. Unable to see even a few inches ahead, the river flowed beneath the fog, where piranhas leapt up from the water only to vanish again. Below, the sound of flesh being torn echoed.

-Uu...

The base of the palm trees was submerged in fog. Trees with obscured bases appeared to be hanging in mid-air, as if tethered to the sky rather than the ground. Perhaps like pillars of a temple carved from wood in worship of some deity. Millions of trees were enveloped in fog, transforming the entire area into a damp, misty temple.

And from beneath the fog,

Half-concealed by the palm trees turned into temple pillars,

Centered around me, forming an impenetrable surround,

The Asuras were deeply burping in chorus.

‘Indeed.’

I looked up at the sky.

Realizing that the dark clouds were not just sea-breeze-driven rain clouds.

Krrrrumble... Lightning streaked between the clouds, thunderbolically swallowing each other. The dark clouds churned, threatening to unleash their fury.

‘I wondered why Uburka didn’t call for a one-on-one duel and instead attacked with a pack... It wasn’t Demonic Heavenly God Art he was using, but Demonic Formations Art for a showdown.’

The moment I realized this, the entire jungle was already resonating with the sounds of summoning rain.

-Uu! Uu! Uu! Uu! Ugohr! Ugohr! Ugohr! Ugohr!

-Kerukke, Uu! Kerukke, Uu! Kerukke, Uu!

-Ugohr!

-Kerukke, Uu! Kerukke, Uu! Kerukke, Uu!

-Ugohr!

The Earth Spirit Tribe pounded their weapons on the ground, beat palm trees with their fists, and struck rocks with their feet, awakening the dormant sounds of the forest. It was a wild rhythm.

Having evolved, they became Asuras, and their auras burned red without exception. “Kerukke! Uu!” When one Earth Spirit struck a wooden drum, the aura mercilessly vibrated the wood’s core. The palm tree became a giant instrument, roaring noisily. Koooom! Koom!

‘Impressive.’

The fog acted as an invisible, intangible wall separating this world from the other.

Thus, the river beneath the fog became the banks of hell, and the land that emerged from the fog became earth.

But with even the land obscured by fog, what is there to rely on in this world?

‘Excellent.’

The leaning palm trees.

Palm trees stretching lazily into the sky, piercing through the fog, were the only refuge from the shores of hell, making them pillars of a temple singing the grace and glory of gods. Small animals, snakes, squirrels, and spiders in the jungle all took refuge in the palm trees.

Demonic Formations Art.

Special Method.

Ashen Cloud Blood Dew.

Not yet perfected.

Despite merely bringing rain and thick fog.

The Earth Spirit Tribe transformed this space into a [strange stage].

“Truly a remarkable sight.”

I admired the spectacle of the Asura's Demonic Formations Art unfolding.

“It's beautiful.”

Heaven above.

The ash-colored sky spreads low with dark clouds. From one side of the cloud, a lightning bolt tries to strike, only to be swallowed by the neighboring cloud, and on the other side, a thunderstorm roars down.

And Earth below.

Endless fog covers the jungle. Flowing rivers, rocks in the river, rugged shrubs, insects chirping beneath the bushes. All hidden by fog. Now, they secretly whisper. Insects, birds, beasts – none can be seen beyond the fog, only occasionally passing as ominous shadows.

Zirrrrrr... Krur, ...Kiiikiiki...Kii...Krrrrrrrrrr...Grrr...Pii...

Incomprehensible noises.

Discordant cacophony made by the shadows.

"....."

My vision encompassed only the dark cloud-filled sky and the land covered in dark fog.

Between the half-lowered sky and half-raised earth, rows of palm trees, bent over, seemed to be hanging onto something desperately.

"Haha."

I lightly swung my sword to cut through the fog. The density of the fog remained unchanged. Instead, more dense grayness gathered, forming a river of fog.

‘This isn’t ordinary fog. It’s made of aura.’

Further disrupting it, the fog began to take on a bloody hue. The color of the Earth Spirit Tribe’s aura was starkly revealed.

“To cover this entire area with fog... Consuming the Ki Dragon was worthwhile.”

Blood-red mist oozed from the fog cut by my sword. It flowed like a stream through the gray fog, eventually turning all the fog on the ground a bright red.

In an instant, I was transported into a different world.

“Is this my hell?”

“No, daddy.”

Splashing.

Stepping on the fog-covered river, making a sound more akin to a bell than water, Uburka approached me.

“This is our origin.”

“Origin?”

“Ugor. When we first opened our eyes and gazed at the world with tender sight, the world reflected to us was merely like this.”

Uburka looked around.

“The sky wasn’t blue. There was no reason to look up at the blue sky. For us to pay attention to the sky, it first had to rain, and a rainy sky was always ash-colored. Hence, to us, the sky was always a bizarre lump of clouds, rumbling with indigestion, spewing lightning.”

“The earth? The earth was terrifying. Any beast could harm us. Even a tiny insect seemed powerful enough to poison our children. A place where big and small demons roamed... Unidentifiable beasts howled in the distance, and adults who said they’d return by night never did. Why? We didn’t know. We knew nothing. Beasts howled, adults didn’t return, the world was unknown, shrouded in dense fog.”

"....."

"Only occasionally."

Uburka envisioned the world of the beginning.

A gray world infinitely stretching with ash-colored sky and earth.

“Like these palm trees, we only had something to cling to, a place to escape to. Whatever saved me and became a home for my family was a god. We wandered between hell and refuge, looking for gods to cling to.”

I smiled slowly.

“Raising you in this place wasn’t easy. The only words I knew were water, sky, earth...”

“Ugor. In a world that appears to us like this, why would we need many words?”

Rain fell.

Although the rain clouds were summoned by the Asura’s aura, the raindrops from the clouds seemed gentle. It was just rain. I opened my mouth wide and caught a few drops. It was refreshing. The rain, far cleaner than the old aura, soaked my entire body.

“Nothing happens if you dwell here.”

Uburka said.

“Daddy. You love us. There is no one among the Earth Spirit Tribe who doubts that love. But wasn’t it hard?”

“Hard? Well, facing this imminent collective parricide is difficult, but...”

“After you led us out of this primeval forest, there were many events. Progress, conquest, defeat, enslavement of all races. I can’t imagine there were no deaths.”

"....."

“Those tortured to death, accidentally killed, died of bad luck, speared resisting the Mountain Calamity Tribe, mocked to death as gladiators for mere audience amusement, killed while escaping, died failing to escape...”

Silence lingered.

“Do you feel all this is your responsibility, daddy?”

Long silence flowed.

Chapter 270: White Lion Faith (3)

---

Translator's Note:

Hello everyone, considering this is the first chapter where I've been ahead of the old translator, I imagine a lot more of you guys are joining me on this journey from this chapter. Before you begin reading the chapter, I wish to let out some thoughts and context beforehand.

For the new readers, my terminologies are very different from the old translators. I've followed and amended the terms used by the manhwa translators and modified a lot of things. From my comparison, I also seem to be translating a newer version of the novel, which has some things modified by the author/publisher, hence the terms are vastly different, especially in the latest 'Race Wars' and 'Race Wars Part II' arcs. So, at the very least, I would recommend everyone to re-read the 'Race Wars' arcs. I understand that not everyone would like my term changes and my methods, and I respect that. I am not a perfect translator, I doubt anyone is. Especially with a novel like this one, where the interpretations are so poetic and it's really up to the reader how they want to interpret a lot of things. This is simply 'my version' of the novel. It's my way of showing love to the series.

Now, time for some context, as some of you might have been wondering how this release rate was possible. I've basically been grinding translations for this novel at a, quite frankly, concerning rate during my uni semester break. I had initially decided to catch up within a couple months, but well, I ended up getting hyper-obsessed and did 10-15 chapters a day until today, when I'm caught up to the old translators. I plan to reduce my release rate soon, since I don't want to spend my entire 1-month semester break on my desk, typing while looking at a laptop screen, but I promise that I plan to consistently keep translating this novel until its end.

I hope you all will continue enjoying this hyper-obsessed fan's translations. Please do not hesitate to report any possible change suggestions or fixes by reaching out in our discord server.

For the ones who are still too lazy to re-read, here are some terms which will help you in this chapter, as well as coming chapters:

- Pure Humans Tribe: Humans - Sword Saint's race
- Ghost Tribe: Dokkaebi - Viper's race
- Mountain Calamity Tribe: Snails - Heretic Inquisitor's race

- Gill Fish Tribe: Mermaids - Paladin's race
- Vampiric Tribe: Vampires + Dream Demons - Black Dragon Witch's race
- Fairy Tribe: Elves - Countess's race
- Earth Spirit Tribe: Goblins/Hobgoblins/Asuras - King of Death's race

Thank you and enjoy reading!

---

I turned my gaze away from the beautiful ash-gray refuge and looked at Uburka.

“I know such a person.”

“What?”

“I know of such a person.”

Tower Master.

I recalled someone who felt everything was their responsibility, someone who went beyond that, turning everything into their own responsibility.

“But, I am not that person.”

Kieeeeeeeee-

Distant rocky mountains.

Through the mist, a white beast climbed a soaring rock and howled. Small green creatures that feared such a beast were also sporadically visible. Gororor... They seemed to be deliberating whether to climb up to where the white beast was, clinging to the bottom of the rock.

“I chose a different path,”

I held my sword upright.

“You can blame me, of course. The mistakes you make, the curses you'll hear from others, it all might feel like it's my fault for carelessly choosing you as my tribe and exposing you to the world. For bringing you into existence. For raising you. So you can blame me, but---”

"....."

“Come to me when you are stronger than me.”

I smiled slyly.

“Come to me if you can make them happier than I can!”

I swung the Holy Sword.

Shiny, the Goddess of Protection, shone brightly as its name suggested, cleaving the ash-stained dark clouds in two.

Through the gap created by the cleavage, a glimpse of blue sky appeared.

“Make them more lovable than I do! More splendid! Smarter! More beautiful! If such a person comes and complains--- I will gladly admit my failure in parenting!”

Until then.

“I am the mightiest father there is!”

I clenched my right hand.

“Ester!”

“Yes, family head.”

Suddenly.

Without any warning, Ester knelt on one knee beside me. She must have been waiting somewhere else than our hunters' waiting room, ready to appear at any moment when called.

“Ester, the advisor to the family head, is here.”

“The rain looks pretty pathetic, doesn’t it!”

"....."

Ester glanced upward. Despite the rain reminiscent of the jungle's rainy season pouring down, Ester appeared indifferent, as if looking at a drizzle on a neighborhood street.

“Yes. It seems trivial.”

“Clear it away!”

I laughed and extended my right hand.

Ester also smiled and firmly grabbed my hand.

“Okay, family head. I will clear it.”

Our auras resonated through the clasped hands. It wasn't just the mingling of red and black aura becoming stronger. We circulated a single vision, a single drop of aura. A downpour of blood-red rain on some continent,

Demonic Formations Art.

Special Method.

Graceful Rain of Lamenting Heavens.

Rain falls.

“The primordial fear was terrible, wasn’t it, Earth Spirit Tribe?”

Rain falls.

“The sky of those ignorant times was merely gloomy, only causing unsettling premonitions and disquiet in your hearts, so profound that they could hardly surface.”

Rain falls.

“Those are no longer the rains we fear!”

Rain falls.

The resentment of villagers unjustly burned alive, the screams of countless deaths faced in the empire, all contained in the crimson raindrops, fall in the [Demonic Formations Art] spread by the Asuras.

Thud!

Thick fog is penetrated by the blood droplets reaching the ground in an instant. Thud! Before the fog could recover, another drop of blood falls, mercilessly eroding the base of the fog. Thud! Thudududu! Thudududu! Thud! Thudududu.....

“The fears you will face from now on are even more terrible!”

The fog couldn't withstand the carpet bombing of blood droplets. It burst, dwindled, was crushed, and was torn to pieces by the raindrops.

What Demonic Formations Art revealed was the bare ground of the jungle.

A land not mystified or enchanted, simply existing.

-Our meticulously executed formation...

-Impossible, Ugor. We're overpowering him in terms of aura...

The Earth Spirit Tribe came into view as the ground was exposed.

They were in a state of confusion. They had planned to conceal themselves in the fog, attacking me with unseen swords and axes. The strategy failed before it even began.

I bared my chest and spoke.

“The place we live, this tower... From the 50th floor upward, it's filled with masters from all sorts of worlds. Surely you don't think all parents are like us, do you?”

-.....

“We conversed with you, we understood each other. You fighting me now is not out of dissatisfaction, but merely to achieve a dignified end.”

Ester’s Autumn Rain had melted all the fog away.

All the gathered tribes in the jungle were now looking at me.

“But the ones gathered on the 50th floor will be different.”

I said.

“The Princess mentioned it. The content of each tower is different, but from the 30th floor, they are generally similar.”

"....."

“To accept you as humans, to embrace you as children, our hunters first need to accept all this as reality. Not as NPCs or dungeons. They must see all of you as living beings right before their eyes.”

But.

How many towers have prepared themselves in this way?

Even our tower, even when the Black Dragon Witch was the second in the hierarchy, before my regression, didn't we consider the tower a kind of [game]?

“How many of them cleared the 40th floor by annihilating their nurtured tribes?”

I remembered the 14 Asuras who perished in my previous tower, and I also looked at the hundreds of thousands of Asuras now before me.

“If there's one such tower, that's millions. Ten towers, hundreds of millions. A hundred towers, billions. Countless corpses will be beneath those who stand triumphant.”

Before I knew it...

The vassals of the King of Death Family had gathered around me.

Kim Yul, with long hair tied with the hairband I gave, quietly looked down at the jungle. Silvia Evanair, with her hands clasped in front, stood demurely, unfazed by the millions of humans gazing up at her.

“Those who don’t see people as people.”

The former Flame Emperor.

“Those who flatter such people as heroes.”

The former me.

“That’s exactly what lies there.”

I pointed to the red sky with my hand.

“That’s the world beyond the 50th floor.”

If that's not hell, then what is?

[Quest Progress.]

[The Vampiric Tribe's voting begins.]

Then.

The Black Dragon Witch landed silently beside me with a thud.

She stood emotionlessly next to me, gazing at the world drenched in blood.

“The words of the King of Death are true.”

“Anastasia.”

“It’s hard to see this as the fault of us humans. After all, the wolves that appear in the hunting grounds are called monsters, and people who appear in the Aegim Empire are identified as [NPCs] when read with psychic powers. Well, the Aegim Empire might be like that because it’s a reenactment of a once destroyed world.”

The Black Dragon Witch tilted her lips, almost in a sneer.

“Humans kill people even if there are reasons not to. If it’s of no consequence to kill, it’s essentially granting them a license for free slaughter. If the world beyond the 50th floor of all towers is a battleground as the King of Death said... it might be even harder to find someone who isn’t a slaughterer.”

The Black Dragon Witch turned her head.

Bats were hanging from the thick palm branches.

“Sorry. I’ve been a nuisance in your conquest of the continent. Even as a mother.”

-.....

“But this world is wider than you think. The enemies you have to face are more than you can imagine. Of course, monsters that you cannot defeat.”

-.....

“You have watched over other tribes for thousands of years. The Earth Spirit Tribe would never betray you first. Neither would the Gill Fish Tribe or the Ghost Tribe. Even now, the Mountain Calamity Tribe and the Fairy Tribe. Kids, your task isn't to chase dominion over this cramped continent and quarrel with meek tribes.”

The Black Dragon Witch smiled gently.

“Unite, and strike down the enemies that will threaten your world.”

Flap, flap.

The bats flapped their wings.

[Vote counting complete.]

[Option 2 votes: 01.32 percent]

[Option 1 votes: 97.55%]

“We are a blood alliance.”

[Stage Clear.]

[The 43rd floor has been cleared!]

The 43rd floor.

A level I had reached in my previous world before regression — surpassing the 40th floor, which even the Flame Emperor failed and the Black Dragon Witch despaired.

We had successively conquered those stages.

But that wasn't all.

[Quest Progress.]

[The Dream Demon Tribe's voting begins.]

‘Huh?’

I blinked and looked at the Black Dragon Witch.

The Dream Demon Tribe wasn't originally part of the tribes we were taking care of.

She then gave me a small smile as our eyes met.

“Kim Gong-Ja, Sometimes you see me as too simple.”

“What?”

“There are others who are frantically working to clear stages, not just you. Remember I told you I exhausted all my points bringing in the Dream Demon Tribe, inevitably failing. Have you ever thought about what I, someone of my standing, would risk failure for?”

[Vote counting complete.]

[Option 2 votes: 00.00%]

[Option 1 votes: 100.00%]

"....."

I couldn't help but be slightly astonished.

"Not a single objection..."

"Well, let's just say I've successfully concluded various contracts. Even among friends, contractual secrets should be respected, right?"

The Black Dragon Witch winked lightly.

[Stage Clear.]

[The 44th floor has been cleared!]

Haha.

Truly.

"....."

I smiled and turned around.

"Uburka."

I looked at my son.

"You know, I don't consider choosing you as a mistake."

"....."

"Even if I go back, I would choose you. Even if I'm reborn, I would raise you. If I am the best father to you, then you are, to me, the best children."

"I know."

Uburka jerked his jaw, saying Ugohr.

“I know. Daddy, but just.....”

“If you challenged me to a duel because you wanted to lighten the burden I carry, wanting to become stronger and join me.”

“There’s no need.”

I smiled brightly.

“Just as I am precious to you as a world, you are also precious to me as a world. You see the world as I see it. You feel as I feel. But, Uburka. I will also see the world as you see it and feel as you feel.”

"....."

“We are people of the same world.”

I took Uburka’s hand.

“We are humans.”

I looked beyond Uburka at the many Earth Spirit Tribe members arrayed.

“My dear friends.”

“There will be those who did not enjoy the same fortune as us, beyond the 50th floor. Even those who regard all this as a mere game, becoming kings and lords, indulging in debauchery.”

[Quest Progress.]

[The Earth Spirit Tribe's voting begins.]

“Let’s go.”

[Vote counting complete.]

“In the name of the Demonic Heaven. With the steps and words of the Blood Fire.”

[Option 2 votes: 00.00%]

“Let’s show them who we are.”

Uburka remained silent.

But it was not an ominous silence; it was a silence to embrace my words. Uburka’s fangs were always sharp, so it didn’t take him long to chew and digest my words.

“Shall we kill those who deserve death, daddy?”

“We shall rightfully save those who need to live.”

“How will we recognize who should live, how they should live?”

“By my death.”

I produced a dagger from my bosom.

Then I tapped the tape-wrapped handle of the dagger.

“By their life.”

"....."

So it is, then.

Uburka nodded, muttering to himself.

He then firmly grasped my hand that tapped the dagger.

Without words.

“It’s okay.”

I stroked Uburka’s red arm.

[Option 1 votes: 100.00%]

“We are stronger and more capable than any tower.”

[Stage Clear.]

“And thus capable of saving countless worlds, numerous people.”

[The 45th floor has been cleared!]

I looked down.

To my children who would be known as Asuras from now on, who will stand in the heavens one day, the Heavenly Demons who were once at the lowest.

I reached out to those children.

“Let’s ascend the tower together.”

Chapter 271:

Epilogue (1)

---

There's a story to tell.

The tribes, seeing their god for the first time in thousands of years (literally in front of their eyes), celebrated.

Was it a neat meeting?

Many tribes were happy to find that their parents were better than expected.

".....Ah."

It was when we were sitting together on a wide rock, watching the jungle festival. Ah, said the Black Dragon Witch, as if she had realized something.

"Why?"

"No... It's just that, hearing from [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages], there are many hunters climbing the tower from other worlds, aren't there? It's hard to imagine."

"Well, yes...?"

I glanced back subtly. A ghost was floating and yawning in the air. Despite being a ghost, it burped, "Gurgle! Huhuhu." It was an amusing sight I thought would be fun to show others.

"Huh? Why are you looking back suddenly? Is there someone there?"

The Black Dragon Witch narrowed her eyebrows, following my gaze into the empty jungle. To Anastasia's eyes, it would just be the sight of the jungle with vines hanging down the palm trees.

She doesn't have spiritual insight. What a pity.

"No, just felt a presence. Probably a snail or squirrel."

"Hmm."

"Please continue."

"Well, so... As such, strong warriors from all sorts of worlds are flooding into the tower, right?"

"That's correct."

"Among them, there will surely be hunters much stronger than us. King of Death, you're right that we are strong but... we're not invincible. There may be forces more ruthless, stronger, and more numerous than us."

"Yes."

"So I was thinking..."

The Black Dragon Witch slightly lifted the corner of her lips. A hint of awkwardness, absurdity, or whimsy? Anyway, it was that kind of smile.

"Why don't we just not climb to the 50th floor and live?"

"....."

"Ah. Don't misunderstand. I'm not suggesting we do that. It's not like we are going to. Just, it seems like many hunters and residents of the tower might think that way."

Hmm.

I quietly sipped my tea.

"That's probable."

In the remote jungle, far from cities and towns, and gathered here for a war against the Ki Dragon, it was hard to find even proper tea leaves, let alone a cup.

But the Earth Spirit Tribe found unusually sturdy leaves. They selected non-toxic ones, overlapped and knotted them, creating a respectable makeshift leaf teacup from the jungle. The children of the Earth Spirit Tribe shyly laughed and gifted me the teacup.

-The jungle is cold in the morning! The body gets cold.

-Ugor, you need warmth inside to have a happy day!

That was my offering this morning.

As a god, there couldn't be a happier offering than this, and as a parent, there couldn't be a more endearing service than this.

I'm happy.

"There would be many people like that."

I took a sip from the world's most luxurious teacup.

Warmth slowly enveloped my throat and stomach.

The care of people isn't just seen in smiles and laughter, but also permeates deep into their insides.

"Right. We've already incorporated the continent ruled by the Aegim Empire into our tower. The magic books obtained there are just the most trivial resource. Millions of labor forces, countless monsters and hunting grounds, ores, gold, oil....."

"There are already many extremists who want to drive out the Aegim Empire."

The Black Dragon Witch lowered her voice.

"Like America did to the natives. They argue that if we seize all the lands they occupied and loot their resources, we, with our advanced civilization, can become the new conquerors of the world."

"Thanks, Anastasia. If you hadn't strictly limited the movement between stages in the Black Dragon Guild, such incidents would have already happened."

"I'll gladly accept your gratitude, but I can't suppress the voices of the extremists forever."

"....."

"Kim Gong-Ja. You are a hero."

The Black Dragon Witch's face became serious.

It was the expression of a friend giving a heartfelt advice to a close companion. Therefore, her words "You are a hero" felt not like praise, but the beginning of a warning.

"You've been treated as a hero so far because you really didn't get involved in governance. Black Dragon, Temple of All Gods, Merchants Union, Celestial Martial Guild, Vigilante Corps... top-tier guilds offered you vice-guild master positions. But you never once used the title to wield power. You didn't jump into politics. You understand what I mean?"

"If I start governing the tower, even the mask of a hero will be stripped away."

"More like the mask will be split in two. One half held by those who fervently follow you and the other trampled and shattered by those who oppose you. It'll split into two factions."

Indeed.

Perhaps because of her experience with civil wars in the outside world.

The Black Dragon Witch's words were laden with heavy conviction and strong intuition.

"If the two forces are evenly matched, a civil war will break out. Guilds following you against those who dislike you. They'll fight over who will dominate our tower... but not this time."

"This time it won't happen."

The reason is simple.

"The five guilds ruling the tower from above. Black Dragon, Temple of All Gods, Merchants Union, Vigilante Corps, Celestial Martial Guild, all strongly support you."

We are bound by an unprecedented trust relationship.

On the other hand, what about the opposing side?

Those who want to snatch and break my mask are simply too weak.

Overwhelmingly weak.

There can't be a war.

Therefore.

"I'm planning a [purge]."

"A purge means..."

"Yes. I'll purge all dissidents and extremists."

There was silence for a moment.

---

Somewhere, the sound of wood crumbling into charcoal in a bonfire was heard.

I wasn't listening to that sound. Instead, I remembered the story told by the Heretic Inquisitor in Raviel's world.

I recalled the repeatedly heard words, "You have died."

"Anastasia."

I looked into the Black Dragon Witch's eyes.

"That purge once broke all the guild masters' relationships."

Long ago.

Since the great purge that cost hundreds of thousands of lives, the relationship between the five great guilds deteriorated.

The Sword Saint descended from the Vigilante Corps Captain position. The Paladin stayed as a Vice-Captain instead of becoming the leader. The Black Dragon Witch hid in the darkness, and the Viper, the Heretic Inquisitor...

The view of a rainy street in another world seen through half-closed eyes. The world shown by the Tower Master. Thinking of that while I brought up that topic, the Black Dragon Witch didn't remain silent.

She immediately responded.

"Yes, that happened. But Kim Gong-Ja, you appeared, and thanks to you, we became good friends again. I'm truly grateful for that."

The Black Dragon Witch took a breath before continuing.

"But back then, it wasn't like the five great guilds tightly held the political power like now. That's why it was hard to weed out and eliminate the rotten apples. That's why there were so many unnecessary noises. But now..."

"Now?"

"Now it's different. The relationship among the five great guilds is better than ever, and I've been accumulating information about influential hunters in the tower for a long time. Roughly what kind of thoughts they have, what they've been doing. We just need to single out the extremists and deal with them. Swiftly. And secretly."

The Black Dragon Witch said firmly.

"No one will even know that they died."

At those words, I thought of a certain alley.

I remembered a nameless hunter who died there.

Then I thought of a certain hunting ground.

There, I remembered a nameless hunter who died and is now in my shadow.

"....."

I crossed my arms.

Thought about it, then spoke.

"What about after that?"

"....."

"People keep coming in. As you said, the number of [extremists] will increase over time. What will you do with them?"

The Black Dragon Witch bit her lip slightly.

Then she said.

"I'll deal with them too."

"....."

"Skin peels and changes. Digested food turns into waste. Accumulated nutrients turn into fat. It's just dealing with the inevitable waste products... the necessary tasks to maintain an ideal self. You keep repeating that. Without it, you can't maintain an ideal organization---"

"Anastasia."

I reached out and laid my hand on Anastasia's hand. Despite the stifling heat of the jungle, my friend's hand was always as cold as if holding ice.

“I've talked about this before.”

In the past.

When I was conquering [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness]'s world.

“Bring them to me.”

I declared to the Black Dragon Witch, the Heretic Inquisitor, the Countess, the Paladin, the Viper, that I would become their king and lead them. I proclaimed that I would guide them forward. I never intended to retreat from my declaration.

And the same holds true at this very moment.

“What kind of person are they? Do they really deserve to die? Anastasia, you can advise and warn me about them, but in the end, it's me who will decide. I will judge them by looking into their eyes and observing their life.”

"....."

“I will make the decision. So, bring them to me first.”

“Ah.”

Anastasia sighed.

It wasn't a sigh of fatigue but one tinged with sorrow.

“So, what? Planning to persuade them?”

“Choosing to kill will be my last option.”

“How difficult that is to...”

“Once you get a taste for killing, persuasion feels bothersome. But, Anastasia. That’s the correct sentiment. You should find killing the most difficult.”

Anastasia closed her mouth.

After a moment of silence, she spoke slowly.

“As you are, nominally, the vice-guild master of the Black Dragon, it would be difficult to criticize you for wandering around our guild. I won't guide you, so find the extremists yourself and try to persuade them.”

“Okay.”

I smiled.

“Thank you, Anastasia. For listening to me...”

“I'm truly grateful, Black Dragon Witch.”

Thud.

There was the sound of footsteps behind us.

Without any hint, someone approached suddenly, the footsteps resounding within 10 meters.

"-----!"

It took 0.5 seconds for me to grab and draw my sword.

"Black Dragon Witch! I agree with you!"

"[Teleport]!"

It took Anastasia 1.5 seconds to grasp my sleeve, seek agreement, and activate the skill.

"Gong-Ja, step back."

"Hey. It's really impolite to approach our family head without making a sound. What kind of unexpected guest is this, intruding like this?"

Ester, along with the Four Demon Lords, jumped down from the top of the palm trees, rushed out of the dark bushes, and emerged from the shadowy corners of the rocks, taking 2 seconds.

“Whew.”

"Hmm."

And Anastasia and I were teleported far to the rear. By this time, my holy sword was already drawn. Hundreds of church members began to perfectly encircle the area.

3 seconds.

In just 3 seconds, we perfectly responded to the intrusion of an unidentified intruder.

"Huh....."

The intruder stroked his beard. His face was masked, and his voice was distorted by aura, making it difficult to identify his expression and voice. His body was wrapped in a cloak, concealing his identity.

A true uninvited guest.

Yet, it was clear that the guest was quite surprised.

“I just wanted to test how much you’ve improved as a joke. But this... It would only be embarrassing for me if the joke failed, but I saw something remarkable. The protection here is nearly perfect.”

Yet, even with a distorted voice, there was a rhythm hard to conceal.

I roughly estimated the intruder's physique, posture, and aura intensity.

And with a stunned voice, I called out the intruder's name.

“Uh. Could it be... Sword Saint?”

“It's been a while.”

The intruder removed his mask.

A familiar face appeared.

Aged gracefully, the wrinkles only added charm to the smile of the old man.

“When I met the Heretic Inquisitor on my way here, we had a brief conversation. He pledged allegiance to you, and the Black Dragon Witch has become your friend, right? That’s understandable, after all, I’ve lived long enough to know that extraordinary things happen from time to time. But,”

The Sword Saint chuckled lightly.

A rare sight to see him smile, and when he did, it was as pure as a child’s, leaving me no choice but to gaze at it in a daze.

“I heard that even the Vice-Captain of the Vigilante Corps has become your friend! Haha.”

"....."

“What a way to confirm things, huh? Sneaking around incognito?”

“Of course.”

The Sword Saint now removed the cloak he was wearing.

“It was an important event that needed to be confirmed before my retirement.”

Thud.

As the straw cloak fell, the Sword Saint's true attire was revealed.

A suit that seemed ready for a corporate meeting. The black suit perfectly fit his physique, showing off his muscular build.

“Retirement? What are you talking about?”

As I was admiring the Sword Saint's appearance, the Black Dragon Witch inquired about the worrying words with a sharp look.

“Finally fantasizing about becoming a secluded old man?”

Congratulations. Even after retiring from the Vigilante Corps, you've been just like a secluded old man, but now you're truly realizing your position."

"Hmm."

"Really? When you were chasing the Demon King with Gong-Ja, I thought your heart might have changed a bit, but then it was the same laziness afterward..."

"I've been trying my best."

"That attitude is annoying."

The Black Dragon Witch frowned.

"You did the same this time as well. The Pure Humans Race you chose had almost no impact on history. It should have been the most active race, but you must have ordered them to hermitage and seclusion, right?"

The old man smiled faintly.

It was also a rare occurrence.

“I won’t deny it.”

“Why? Thinking of retiring?”

“No matter my position in the outside world, now I’m just a hunter here. My profession is a swordsman. If a swordsman retires from the sword, it’s only at the moment of death when the sword slips from his grasp.”

"....."

“I’ve been watching you. Not surveillance, no, not that. Ah, there’s a more suitable term.”

The tension around seemed to grow thicker.

Mostly due to the Black Dragon Witch glaring at the Sword Saint.

The Sword Saint nodded as if understanding her pressure.

But that was it. The Sword Saint wiped the smile from his lips and spoke softly.

“I was testing you all.”

Test.

The Black Dragon Witch let out a scoff.

“Still speaking from a high and mighty position. Who are you to test someone—”

“If.”

The Sword Saint said.

“If the King of Death had accepted your [purge], I would have done everything to kill the King of Death.”

"....."

“Right here, right now.”

At that moment, the encirclement was complete.

Ester drew her red sword and confronted the Sword Saint, with the Four Demon Lords forming a line behind her. Sssring! Sssring! The sound of swords being drawn echoed from all directions. A thousand church members, hidden in the shadows of the jungle, concealed by palm trees, ready to pounce at any moment.

No one uttered a word. Thousands of eyes watched the Sword Saint's hands, feet, waist, and eyes. The Sword Saint was segmented by their gazes.

The moment the Sword Saint ignited aura or harbored killing intent, a thousand swords would mutilate him along those dividing lines.

"....."

But the Sword Saint only kept his eyes on me.

I slowly sheathed my sword back into its scabbard. The Black

Dragon Witch nudged my shoulder, but it didn't matter.

“Sir.”

I too looked into the Sword Saint's eyes.

“I know you would never harm me.”

"....."

The old swordsman's eyes were clear.

Chapter 272:

Epilogue (2)

---

“Are you so certain? That I won’t kill you?”

“Yes.”

I nodded my head.

“You could have ambushed us earlier by silencing your footsteps. The Black Dragon Witch’s hand would have flown off, and I might have lost half my body too. You had the perfect timing... but you deliberately made a sound to reveal your presence, didn’t you?”

“Hmm.”

“It’s just a threat. A mere warning. [If something like a purge happens, I will not stand idly by]. That’s the clear message you sent to me, no, to the Black Dragon Witch.”

"....."

"There's already a relationship of iron-clad trust between you and me."

Amidst the still palpable tension around us,

I smiled and approached the Sword Saint.

"Hey! Kim Gong-Ja! Don't go! Stick with me, you fool!"

Naturally, the Black Dragon Witch was shocked.

"Can't you understand? Stick with me so you can use teleportation or whatever! Ah, Kim Gong-Ja! Really! That lunatic!"

From behind me, the Black Dragon Witch was fuming at me like I was insane.

The interesting part was that the sound of her anger was getting closer to my back. Meaning, while she was angrily telling me not to go, she was actually diligently following me.

Towards a swordsman who had never lost the top rank for over a decade.

“.....Ahem.”

It was then that the Sword Saint observed my form.

“Haha.”

Laughter emerged from the old man's wrinkled lips.

“Uahaha! Haha! Hmm, hmm..... Hahaha!”

Caught off guard by the sudden burst of laughter, both the Black Dragon Witch and I stopped in our tracks. We turned our heads, exchanging glances, trying to comprehend what was happening. But the Black Dragon Witch just shrugged her shoulders.

“Uahahahahaha!”

The old man's laughter grew louder. As if he had seen something he thought he'd never see in his lifetime, like witnessing a truly incredible spectacle, the Sword Saint laughed heartily, holding his belly in a manner unbecoming of his dignified persona. With every laugh, his neatly groomed white beard trembled.

“.....Has he gone senile?”

The Black Dragon Witch approached me with a disgusted look.

I cleared my throat.

“Should I contact the Apothecary to make some dementia medicine?”

“Ah. Come to think of it, the Apothecary is also one of your close people.... How do you always manage to snatch up such promising talents? Makes me think we need to establish a system of fines for hoarding talents.”

“What's that weird system....”

As evident from this idle chat between the Black Dragon Witch and me, the Sword Saint's laughter lasted quite a long time.

Finally, the Sword Saint stopped laughing.

"What was so amusing?"

"How could I not laugh, young man. The owner of the Black Dragon and the so-called Black Witch, known for being cold-hearted and unhesitating in killing those who stand in her way, is so worried about your well-being."

Ah.

The title he used to address me changed from King of Death to young man.

I prefer being called young man to King of Death. It feels much more comfortable.

Like being treated like a grandchild by a grandfather? There was something pleasant about the Sword Saint's way of saying [young man].

“You, on the other hand... I was worried that you might not change.”

The Sword Saint was saying.

“You now belong to the highest floor of this tower, in name and in reality. It’s even natural to see you hanging out with the leaders of the 5 great guilds.”

"....."

“Young man. I was worried that you might unknowingly receive [bad influence] from those kids while mingling with the guild leaders.”

“What?”

The Black Dragon Witch bristled.

“Bad influence? What do you think of us to say something like that?”

“Did it upset you?”

“Should I be happy about it? What makes you so great!”

The Black Dragon Witch bared her teeth, looking as if she wanted to tear the Sword Saint's neck apart.

“Pretending to be noble and superior after carrying out a mass purge together, and then abandoning your role as the leader of the Vigilante Corps to spend your remaining days in a quiet hermitage, only to go around killing hunters suspected of being murderers! Crazy old coot!”

"....."

“Shouldn't people have some shame? Huh? What we do is righteous purging, but what you do is justice as a dark hero? Why don't you just get a bat mask then? Even a hero in a bat mask doesn't kill people!”

The extent of the Black Dragon Witch's long-held resentment towards the Sword Saint was palpable.

Any ordinary person would have been overwhelmed, even turned pale, by such a storm of criticism, but the Sword Saint did not even blink. He just listened silently, and then casually threw out a single remark.

“The Black Dragon Witch is a human at heart.”

Anastasia flinched.

“.....What?”

“In the tower, most residents know the Black Dragon Witch as a ruthless ruler. A woman who secretly poisons her enemies, scattering spies everywhere, so that every happening in the tower reaches her. A cold-blooded empress who decisively cuts down anyone who blocks her path, no matter who it is.”

"....."

The Black Dragon Witch clenched her fists. Her lips trembled, unsure if the old man was mocking her or had some other malicious intent, making her unable to respond.

“But, look at this woman here.”

The Sword Saint released his grip from the sword hilt.

And pointed at the Black Dragon Witch with his empty hand.

“She’s just an infinitely human person.”

"....."

“She rejoices at reducing meaningless sacrifices. She sheds tears for unavoidable sacrifices. She gets angry at corruption and incompetence, praises effort and struggle, and respects heroes who achieve success.”

Until this moment, the Sword Saint had been laughing loudly.

But for this instant, his eyes were not smiling.

His moon-like eyes glanced at the Black Dragon Witch and me.

“Despite being a powerful figure who assassinated and purged many people.”

"....."

“Young man. The Black Dragon Witch is human at heart. That’s why I couldn’t help but worry about you.”

The old man’s tone softened when speaking to me.

But the words he offered me were firm, and his white eyebrows firmly set.

“Normally, people say that everyone becomes human once you peel off a layer. But this old man thinks the opposite.”

"....."

“Anyone can seem human once they put on a mask.”

I remained silent.

Across the wide rock where we stood, the sounds of the festival were still audible. Dugurur, Dug! Dur! The Earth Spirit Tribe, having brought drums from who knows where, energetically played them. The Fairy Tribe offered free alcohol, and all races were intoxicated.

“That’s a valid point.”

The Black Dragon Witch, the Heretic Inquisitor, the Countess, and Viper.

Their hands must have been stained with countless blood.

Even the old man in front of me, before he met me and changed.

"....."

And Raviel too.

If, for some reason, I were to face a complete death. If I were to disappear. If I were to be lost forever, never to be reclaimed.

Just as she completes me, I too complete her.

If one of us were to vanish, what would remain is nothing but shattered remains.

A heart completely frozen over.

It doesn't take much for a person to break.

"But it's okay."

I looked straight into the Sword Saint's aged eyes.

"As long as I am alive, it's fine."

"....."

"Anastasia always tries to choose the easy path, resigning to inevitability. But if I'm by her side, she'll think twice. If I ask her to, she'll ponder it thrice. And if I outright say I hate it, she might sigh, but she'll relent her own view. [Ah, choosing the hard path again], she'll think."

"....."

"The same goes for the other members."

I looked down at the festival.

Dozens of tentacles from the Mountain Calamity Tribe formed a net to carry the Heretic Inquisitor on a stretcher. "Ahaha! Haha! Amazing! This is an incredible ride!" I could hear the Heretic Inquisitor's laughter from here.

The Countess having tea time with the Fairy Tribe, the Paladin swimming with the Gill Fish Tribe, were also visible.

"The Heretic Inquisitor often blurts out things like [Mmm! Kill them and get rid of future problems!]. A child who knows only the easiest, simplest, and most definitive method. But if I ask him to think again... he will. That child definitely will."

"....."

"You said, sir, that anyone can appear human when they put on a layer of a mask. Elder, if that's the case, I'm willing to become the mask for our members."

Thud.

I walked up right in front of the Sword Saint.

A distance where if someone drew a sword, one of us would surely lose our life.

There, I looked straight up at the Sword Saint.

“You’re not an exception either, elder.”

"....."

“After meeting me, you stopped relying on skills to kill murderers. You decided to trust your own eyes.”

"....."

“What makes a person human isn't a mask, pretense, or acting superior, elder. What keeps a person human is always someone else being there for them.”

I raised my hand and grabbed something in my pocket.

The white lily-scented handkerchief Raviel had given me.

Unseen by anyone, I tightly held the small white handkerchief.

“I am that person for Anastasia, and she is that person for me.”

"....."

“And I hope to be that person for you as well, elder.”

Silence ensued.

The distant cheers and laughter echoed in our ears. Especially the Heretic Inquisitor's high-pitched laughter. Ahaha, ahaha. Ahaha....

Other than that, it was all quiet.

No sound came from the surrounding jungle.

“.....Indeed.”

The old man opened his lips.

“You have already become one of those people to me.”

Ah.

My heart rejoiced.

I smiled faintly.

“I am glad to hear that.”

“You have painfully taught me that [I myself can be wrong]. Now, you have shown me that [even someone like the Black Dragon Witch can change]. Every time I meet you, I change a bit. You're more than a good friend; you're a good teacher.”

No.

That's too generous.

This elder always tends to exaggerate. His threats, warnings, emotions, compliments, everything is over the top.

He might look neat in a suit, but in reality, he's incredibly passionate.

“But young man, there's a fatal flaw in your words.”

“Yes?”

I tilted my head in confusion.

“A flaw?”

“Hmm. A flaw, or perhaps a weakness, would be a better term.”

The Sword Saint nodded.

“It's that if you die, everyone around you will revert to being worse than before, worse than beasts.”

It was the same thing the Princess had once told me.

“The Black Dragon Witch who made a pact with you. The Heretic Inquisitor. Those hundreds of warriors watching us right now, ready to jump in at any moment... all of them, if not as much as your Matriarch, would lose their minds. They'd become beasts tearing the world apart.”

“So.”

Thump.

The Sword Saint lightly tapped my chest.

The location of my heart.

“If we want to remain human, young man, above all else, you must value your own life the most."

"No matter what happens. No matter what sacrifices are made, you must protect your own life. That is the duty of someone who decided to lead the Heretic Inquisitor on a human path, the responsibility of someone who befriended the Black Dragon Witch, and the obligation of a young man who stopped me from slaughtering anyone in the past few months."

".....That is true."

I nodded slowly.

A fact I already knew, but I reaffirmed it once more.

"I will never leave."

"Never?"

".....I will do my best."

“Hmm. Yes. That’s the most truthful promise you can make.”

Only then did the Sword Saint smile playfully.

“Sorry, but I trust people less than the Black Dragon Witch. Since I was young, I found humans somewhat unreliable, sometimes even despicable. I used to hear such remarks from McCallister, wondering why I had such little faith in humanity.”

"....."

“The promise you just made... I have a feeling it won’t be kept. No. Rather, I’m certain it will be broken. I hate to gild my own face, but predicting ominous feelings is one of my specialties.”

Huh?

"King of Death"

“Yes?”

Rustle.

The sound of grass being lightly crushed was heard.

The Sword Saint had knelt on one knee in front of me.

“I want to become your bodyguard.”

"....."

What?

“I want to be your bodyguard, to protect your life, and to eternally guard the humanity of those around you.”

The old gentleman gave a cheeky wink with his left eye.

A remarkably fitting gesture despite his advanced age. A wink that suggested he must have been quite the heartbreaker in his youth.

“Although I’m well past the average retirement age for a bodyguard, would you hire this pitiful old man?”

No, elder.

You're a former conglomerate president and currently the top-ranking swordsman.

Why would someone like you want to be my bodyguard!?

Chapter 273:

Epilogue (3)

---

“You, becoming my bodyguard? .....You, Elder?”

"Hmm."

The Sword Saint nodded vehemently.

“Don’t think for a second that because of my age I’m incapable of being a bodyguard.”

“No, it’s not about age. That’s absurd.....”

Well, just the act of nodding reveals the beautifully contoured trapezius muscles peeking out from under his shirt collar, making me doubt if physical age really applies to him.

“Don’t be so surprised. Didn’t you say it yourself? That as long as you are alive, the Black Dragon Witch and others won't revert back to their old, disastrous selves."

"Disastrous? Who might that be, this disastrous one? Ah, perhaps you're referring to a certain old man who goes around slashing and killing murderers every ten days? Kim Gong-Ja. Gathering information on people is a specialty of the leader of the Black Dragons. Oh my. Interestingly, the list and details of those the old man has killed are securely stored in a vault only I can access. How about we take a look together later?"

"Thankfully, my list is still too short to be included in that vault, Black Dragon Witch. Your list is so long, you'd probably need to rent out an entire building to store it."

"It's recorded on USBs, not paper! What, you think I'm some old geezer?"

Your relationships are really terrible....

"Oh ho!"

Perhaps the sound of their argument reached far. The Heretic Inquisitor, who had somehow approached without notice, was now exclaiming behind me. Well, he probably used [Holy Technique - Teleportation] to transfer here instantly.

“The unshakable top-ranked Sword Saint and the rapidly rising second-ranked King of Death. It appears they maintain a peaceful relationship, but the tower's residents are interested to see how it will end. A bodyguard! Now that's news.”

The Heretic Inquisitor nodded, grinning from ear to ear.

As always, he had an angelic face, but just moments ago, he was being tossed around by the Mountain Calamity Tribe kids. Tossed around by tentacles. Following the laws of physics, the slime from the tribe had transferred to him, and now as he nodded, slime dripped from his face.

Drip, drip, drip, drip.

“Uh, Bambolina, sorry but could you step back a bit.....”

“Ahaha! If the Sword Saint becomes the King of Death's bodyguard, everyone will know! It'll reveal who has the upper hand between the two!”

Thump!

The Heretic Inquisitor spread her arms wide and laughed heartily. The fluid from the children, that is, the aloe-like slime from the Mountain Calamity Tribe, shot out like bullets. Naturally, I was the target, standing right in front of him.

"....."

This attack feels like it might be good for the skin.

"It's about time for the King of Death's power to fully emerge. Let's take [The Number 1 Ranker becoming a bodyguard] as a symbolic event and make it public!"

"What? Make what public?"

I slowly evaporated the slime off my body with my aura and asked.

"Of course, the fact that the King of Death has unprecedented power in this tower!"

"....."

“The King of Death is already a hero of the tower, but the image of a warrior is strong. Thanks to the Black Dragon Witch's image-making! But now it's time to also adopt the image of a ruler or leader. Haha. Perhaps, the King of the Tower.”

“No, I don't see why I need to...”

“Because it's the truth, master.”

The Heretic Inquisitor smiled brightly.

"....."

I looked around with a strange sensation.

At some point, both the Black Dragon Witch and the Sword Saint had stopped arguing and were looking this way.

Silently.

Looking around again, not only Ester and the retainers of our family but also the Countess having tea with the fairies and the Paladin swimming with the mermaids were all gazing in our direction.

"....."

Uh.

What's this atmosphere?

"Gong-Ja, that rogue old man mentioned it to you earlier."

In the midst of the unfamiliar silence around me, Anastasia opened her lips.

"That he was testing you."

"....."

"I hate to make you feel bad, but it wasn't just the old man testing you. Me. And all of us. We have been continuously observing you."

I recalled hearing something similar before.

That they were watching to see if I was worthy of being their [comrade].

But I thought that test had already been passed. Why...

“To see if you truly deserve to be our [leader].”

"....."

“Having you as a friend, becoming comrades with you, I’m happy. It’s fortunate. But we cannot merely accept misfortune as an accident or fortune as mere joy.”

“We are the ones on the frontline, after all.”

Splash.

The sound of wet footsteps resounded.

“The Black Dragon. Temple of All Gods. Sang-Ryun. Celestial Martial Clan. Vigilante Corps.”

It was the Paladin.

He had climbed up onto the broad rock. He was soaking wet from swimming with the Gill Fish Race. The Paladin squeezed the water out of his hair once, and droplets of water fell onto the rock where we were gathered.

“The mid-tier guilds under us, including the Alchemy Castle, number 13 on the rankings. Officially unannounced, but virtually direct subordinates, there are 4 guilds. Hundreds of guilds work for us as subcontractors, and if you count their subcontractors, it spans the entire city of Babylon.”

"....."

“It’s easy to become our business partner. To become our comrade, that’s hard. To become our friend, even harder. And you’ve managed that difficult task.”

“So.”

The Black Dragon Witch continued.

Accordingly, my gaze shifted to her.

“Maybe we thought that you could handle [something a bit more difficult].”

“We had hopes.”

The Paladin took over.

“We maintain the 5 great guilds system, not for any other reason but to keep checks and balances. Almost everyone living in the tower belongs to a guild, that is, they are [members].”

“The idea was for the 5 equally powerful and specialized guilds to cooperate while competing. Furthermore, to protect the personal and property rights and safety of the members.”

“Which guild to join, leave, or rejoin, it all depends on the residents’ freedom. Guilds that can’t make money will naturally decline, and those that don’t share the wealth will naturally disappear.”

“That’s the system we created for the tower.”

“In other words.”

“We didn’t trust ourselves alone.”

The Paladin spoke softly.

“To not become corrupt.”

"....."

“If I had the power to subjugate the Black Dragon guild, I would have gladly thrown them in jail. Declaring all their legally and illegally operated shops, stores, and informants as tumors of the tower and punishing them. During that execution, could I have remained true to myself? I wasn’t sure.”

“I have scenarios ready to assassinate all hunters from rank 1 to rank 10.”

The Black Dragon Witch said.

“Haven’t used them since the mass purge though.”

"....."

“If the Black Dragon were the only guild instead of one of the 5, would I really have carried it out? Even if I think of myself as a person with strong self-control, that self-control comes from the presence of others.”

Meow.

A cat's cry came.

With the body and eyes of a cat, but not the eyes of a beast, the tricolor cat spoke.

“As you know, we never really trusted each other. Yet, the reason we didn’t fall into civil war or reached rock bottom is because we didn’t trust ourselves much either.”

“That’s right.”

The Sword Saint spoke.

"After all, we also appear human just because we put on a layer of a mask."

"....."

“King of Death. We were testing to see how you would be.”

Testing.

What test are they talking about?

When did it start?

“There have been quite a few times when we gathered without you and discussed you.”

“When exactly.....”

“After clearing the Great Library of All Knowledge and before entering the 30th floor. We conducted various background checks on you, your spending habits, the people you meet, how you behave when you meet strangers. Almost everything was investigated and shared.”

Gathering information is my forte.

That’s what the Black Dragon Witch said calmly.

“That’s... a violation of privacy, isn’t it?”

“Yes. Sorry. Really sorry for the intrusion. Ah, how awful of me to dig into a comrade’s past. Vice-Captain of the Vigilante Corps? Could you arrest me for the crime of snooping around people’s backgrounds?”

“Hmm. I declare you not guilty.”

“See? Kim Gong-Ja. Not guilty. Let’s just say I’m sorry and move on.”

"....."

Gosh, my comrades and friends here are indeed wielding unparalleled power in the tower....

"Don't worry. We only confirmed that your private life is disgustingly clean."

"I feel like you just put together two contradictory words..."

"We also confirmed that you write a diary every night to show the Duchess of Ivansia. Be thankful that I didn't get my hands on the contents of your diary. I really debated whether to order my subordinates to find out what's in it or not..."

"Hello? Anastasia? Have you lost your mind?"

"Oh, but the first sentence is always the same, so I got to know it. Dear..."

"Let's break off our friendship!! Bring back the friendship contract! Right now!"

“.....Anyway, the conclusion is that you are a person with integrity.”

The Paladin smirked.

“But just being consistent isn't enough. If we are to consider you as our leader, there are qualities a leader needs. Convincing us to be human is just a secondary issue.”

“It's not about political power either.”

The tricolor cat clung comfortably to the Paladin's calf.

Then, the Paladin picked up the cat, and in his arms, the Countess in her cat form said,

“Politics should be left to the experts. Law enforcement to the Paladin, internal affairs to the Black Dragon Witch, economy to yours trule, and when you need a shoulder to lean on, you can rely on the Viper. Diplomacy with the outside world can be handled by involving the Sword Saint. He's terribly stubborn, but he might listen if it's a request from you, King of Death.”

"....."

“So, the last thing we need to test is only one thing.”

The cat opened its eyes narrowly. It was the Countess's playful smile.

“If you were to become a leader, we were interested to see how you would rule the people.”

A real example.

“When I first received the quest from [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages], I thought, Aha.”

From the 31st to around the 40th floor.

“Could this be useful?”

Stages where one becomes a god and leads a race.

"It wasn't that I immediately drafted the test. The Temple of All God's Master. That child wreaked havoc for over 200 years purely out of his own will."

"Ahaha."

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed innocently.

"Right! This is the first time I'm hearing this!"

"Well, not just you, the Celestial Martial Guild Master didn't participate in my plan either."

The Countess said.

"But eventually, the spontaneous actions of the Temple Master gave me a lot of inspiration. To be able to watch from up close as you rallied us all together in a time of dire crisis, where every race was enslaved, and led a rebellion."

The cat gently stroked the Paladin's cheek with its paw.

"In short, you had the makings of a revolutionary. A revolutionary! Not bad, I don't dislike it. But the leader we need isn't a revolutionary but a ruler of the tower. Countless refugees who fled from various countries, these tower residents who are busy hating, despising, belittling, and mocking each other, need a leader who can gently stabilize them. I needed a bit more information. For example..."

The Countess spoke.

"How would you treat [different races] under your rule?"

"...Different races?"

I briefly thought of the Earth Spirit Tribe, but changed my mind seeing the Countess's eye smile.

"Don't tell me, the Fairy Tribe.....?"

"Correct. King of Death. I like how quick-witted you are."

"....."

I opened my eyes wide.

The Countess looked at me and growled softly like a cat.

“The Heretic Inquisitor was the first to drop out. Then it was me. When [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] announced my elimination, I remember your dumbfounded face.”

"....."

That time.

『Wait a minute! That's absurd! Why am I being eliminated!?』

『Erm, the Fairy Tribe gave up their dominance.』

Certainly.

In the video shown by the Princess, the elder fairies whispered,

『Let's surrender. We can't win in a fight, and there's nothing to gain by winning. No point in investing money or gaining anything. It's a losing deal no matter what we do.』

『Let's offer our country to the Earth Spirit Tribe and become people under their rule. In return, we ask for protection.』

『Yes. Let's surrender.』

『We're just using them, that's all.』

『Thank you. Great Cat.』

That's how it was.

I thought it was just a trivial incident that the Countess played off as a joke.

"....."

I spoke up.

“.....Did you deliberately get eliminated?”

“More accurately, I induced my own elimination.”

“The Fairy Tribe kids surrendered to the Earth Spirit Tribe on their own.”

“Right, but who nurtured those kids? Who was revered as a god by them?”

"....."

“With just a little prophecy, suggestion, and command in their dreams, the kids easily followed. King of Death. It wasn’t much different from how you conquered the stages.”

Thinking about it.

The Fairy Tribe was the financial backer behind the multi-racial alliance.

Before I met Uburka, I had a discussion with the Countess.

She advised me to [negotiate in a way beneficial to all races], and following her advice, I entered Uburka's dream.

From beginning to end?

If the Countess's grand plan was for the Fairy Tribe to surrender bloodlessly to the Earth Spirit Tribe without any battle or war.

“Why would you do such a thing.....”

“Didn’t I say it? To test you.”

The Countess said.

“Discrimination based on nationality alone is easy in governance. Let alone another race under your rule. Ah, they look different, have different habits, and even worship different gods. Wouldn’t the Earth Spirit Tribe discriminate against the Fairy Tribe?”

"....."

“I was curious. How you would handle the Earth Spirit Tribe is your business. But beyond that, I wondered if you could also manage other races that fled their homelands like us. That's the quality our leader needs.”

I fell silent.

I slightly raised my gaze to look at the Paladin's face.

Holding the tricolor cat, the Paladin's expression was calm.

“Patricia.”

The next person to be eliminated after the Countess.

A comrade who [voluntarily] abstained from the stage.

The Fairy Tribe held the capital, and the Gill Fish Race held logistics. Along with the Countess's race, she herself naturally became part of the Earth Spirit Tribe's hierarchy.

"Hmm."

The Paladin nodded.

“Yes, Kim Gong-Ja. I abstained on purpose.”

"....."

“To understand the person you are.”

I realized.

Why the Earth Spirit Tribe was able to conquer the continent with so little bloodshed.

Volume 12 – Chapters 274-298

Chapter 274: Swordsman (1)

---

The Paladin had said when she abstained on the 34th floor,

『If you have to choose just one person, make it me.』

『It's fine.』

『I'm saying this now, but I don't necessarily want the Gill Fish Tribe to have continental dominion. Just having enough to live and protect is sufficient.』

Was the Paladin lying to me, or was it all an act?

I don't think so.

Probably, after hearing about the [Kim Gong-Ja Test Plan] from the Countess, she agreed to participate. But not so much out of suspicion about me; rather, she joined because she trusted me.

『I leave the rest to you, Gong-Ja.』

She just didn't tell the whole truth.

The Paladin.

Patricia was almost always that kind of person.

“I expected you wouldn't fail.”

The Paladin stroked the cat in her arms.

“The issue was how you would control the failure.”

“Control?”

“Discrimination against the Fairy Tribe by the Earth Spirit

Tribe is inevitable. Conflicts will surely arise. And even if resolved once, they won't disappear overnight. Gong-Ja, even if you mend the wounds of conflict, they will reopen over time. That's why....."

The Paladin smirked.

"I thought you'd be a bit frustrated."

"....."

"Who would have imagined you'd introduce a new art form to the Fairy Tribe? I didn't see that coming. Blood Fire Drama! Right, Countess? Neither you nor we thought of such a clever solution!"

The Paladin's strokes became a bit more vigorous. Receiving the petting divine art, the Countess cat meowed, Maah, Maah.

"Nya. Choosing the Fairy Tribe as the revivalists of Blood Fire Drama was an excellent move. Blood Fire Drama isn't just a stage art; it's beyond a normal performance. It's not martial arts, even though it uses aura. It's both art and martial arts. Martial arts and art. Truly, a martial artistry. ....But vice-captain, your touch is a bit, well, overwhelming....."

“People discriminate and despise everything! It's impossible to heal discrimination and contempt!”

Pet, pet.

The Paladin, seemingly oblivious to the Countess's complaint, started getting excited.

“But there are two things where people willingly, voluntarily abandon their contempt. Strength and beauty. Physical strength prevents others from physically provoking them, and aesthetic beauty makes people open their hearts voluntarily!”

“V-Vice-Captain...? Maybe stop petting for now.....”

“Blood Fire Drama encompasses both! Brilliant. Who among the Earth Spirit Tribe would look down on fairies who elegantly dance and scatter strong aura? Aah. The perception of the Fairy Tribe must have changed. No, it might have been a turning point for the Earth Spirit Tribe to soften their view of [different races] completely! Completely!”

“Miyaaaah...!”

Hmm.

I understand the Paladin is excitedly praising me, but it's a bit awkward focusing on her words while watching the cat, melting like ice cream in real time.

Wait a minute. Could it be the Countess, walking around transformed into a cat and mandating cat ears for the Sang-Ryun guild members, is not her own taste but the Paladin's?

That's a dangerous thought. Surely not. Even if it's true, I'll faithfully respect the privacy of my friend....

“.....You're not listening and again daydreaming about something strange, aren't you.”

The Black Dragon Witch seems to be reaching max level in reading my expressions.

“Well, sure. I'm great, but Blood Fire Drama was originally a culture the Earth Spirit Tribe kids had. I just helped their talent to fully bloom.”

“Did you hear that! Countess!”

The Paladin became even more fervently excited.

“I have the [Lie Detection] skill on now! That statement is utterly true without a hint of falsehood. Even when he said [I’m great], the [Lie Detection] didn’t go off. Isn’t that amazing! Countess, when you speak, the detector buzzes annoyingly 8 seconds out of 10, but this is a different level!”

“Miyaa, Miyaaaah...!”

“That's how it is. Countess, you think the same way. Great! No more need for tests. Kim Gong-Ja, you not only passed the Countess’s test, but you also solved the difficult problem in the most effective way. If you are our leader, I will gladly follow you.”

Leader.

“I, of course, agree!”

The Heretic Inquisitor chimed in.

“Some of you may not know this. Right after clearing the 32nd floor, I already swore loyalty to the King of Death! I was a bit faster than the rest of you!”

".....Loyalty and such are irrelevant, but yeah. Talking to him seems pointless.”

The Black Dragon Witch sighed.

“I agree too.”

“.....Anastasia.”

“I know you don’t need the title of leader.”

Her eyes, holding the colors of the night sky, looked at me.

“But we need you. It’s not me, the Paladin, the Heretic Inquisitor, or the Countess, but all of us, the guild masters who act independently. To call us ‘us’... Kim Gong-Ja, we need you.”

"....."

“And you also need us.”

The Black Dragon Witch nodded. Was she unconsciously showing that she had convinced herself? Or did she connect this conversation to some other thought?

The answer came straight from the Black Dragon Witch's mouth.

“We've been together for quite a while, haven't we?”

“.....Yes.”

“I've never heard a single joke about Ukraine from you.”

I tilted my head, not understanding at all.

"What?"

"Ukraine. My homeland.”

"No, I'm aware of that... A joke? What do you mean?"

"Aren't I pretty?"

"....."

Is Anastasia sick?

Worried, I examined my respectable friend, but she just looked at me expectantly, as if it was the most natural question in the world.

"I'm pretty, right?"

"B-Beautiful, certainly. It's not for nothing that you're on magazine covers with the Heretic Inquisitor."

"Then why haven't you ever joked? Because I'm from Ukraine, like 'You're beautiful because you're Ukrainian'?"

What's she talking about?

It's not just a cold but a flu-level issue?

Did she become infatuated with her own appearance while fighting with mirrors summoned by her skill? Was there a warning in the skill description like [*However, you may become somewhat addicted to your own appearance]?

“.....Yes, that's right. That expression. ....It seems a bit like you're treating me as a fool, but anyway, it clearly shows your way of thinking.”

“Sorry. I'm still not getting what you're talking about.”

“I've heard that joke over 300 times. Also been asked if I'm a communist over 200 times, and about my thoughts on the Nazis about 50 times. I've received countless questions about which side I supported in the civil war.”

“I-Is that so?”

"Yes."

The Black Dragon Witch turned her head to look at the Paladin.

The Paladin, too, gave a slight nod and moved her chin.

“Gong-Ja never made a joke about Venezuela to me. I sometimes use beauty jokes or oil jokes to lighten the mood, but I can’t recall him ever doing so.”

Uh.

...I just didn’t know much?

“Nor have I!”

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed.

“I’ve never heard Kim Gong-Ja delve deeper into my past! Aha. It’s curious. Normally, one would ask out of curiosity!”

“C-Cat jokes too, I’ve never heard them from him.”

While enduring the Paladin’s assault, the Countess in her cat form managed to speak.

“Weren't you curious about our religion? Whether we are atheists or not? Didn't you want to ask?”

“Uh....”

“Have you even thought about it?”

I hadn't.

“Maah.”

The Countess laughed.

“You have no interest in that area. None at all.”

None.

“Your indifference is comfortable for us.”

"....."

“We’re not indifferent to humans themselves. Rather, we’ve been very passionate in learning about you. You know almost fervently about what we said, what we did, the mistakes we made. Frankly, you like us. But interestingly, your interests seem quite limited, aren’t they?”

"....."

“The Black Dragon Witch and others call you a virtuous person for that.”

Blam.

Finally, the Countess jumped out of the Paladin’s arms.

As she fell through the air, she was a cat, but by the time she touched the ground, she had transformed back into a human. Her beautiful emerald sari fluttered like a cape for a moment. Flap! The sari concealed the shadow of the Countess between the sky and the earth.

“I don't care whether you are a virtuous or evil person.”

The sari gently settled.

There, the Countess stood, holding a fan with a crafty smile.

“Your character might simply be the result of not wanting to be disliked by others. Deep down in your heart, there might be a strong desire to be recognized by others, so maybe your attitude towards us is all flattery and fawning.”

"....."

“But that doesn’t matter to me. What I care about is not where a person's character originates from but where it is going and where it has arrived. The destination you’ve chosen is quite comfortable for us.”

Isn't that an overestimation?

Of course, I want to appear good in front of these people.

But suddenly, I was worried. What if my wish was too successful, earning their favor more than I could handle? Can I always meet their expectations, my comrades' trust, my friends' belief? Was my success too excessive?

Will I disappoint them?

“Nisha.”

"....."

“That's my real name. You must have heard the Paladin casually call me by my real name.”

Indeed.

I knew the Countess's real name.

When fighting against [The Immortal Missionary of Happiness], the Paladin undoubtedly shouted the Countess's name. Although she never told me her name directly, it was registered in a corner of my memory.

“But you never mentioned my name. Not even a hint or suggestion that you knew it in front of me.”

“That’s because obviously.....”

“Obviously, you were just practicing common courtesy, you must be thinking that now.”

The Countess flicked her fan.

“That’s precisely why we, I, want to endorse you as our leader.”

"....."

“Become a natural existence for us, Kim Gong-Ja.”

As the Countess smiled broadly.

[Quest Progress.]

[The Pure Humans Tribe voting begins.]

I looked at the Sword Saint.

The intimidating aura he had when he first approached us had completely vanished. Now, the Sword Saint was just gently smiling at us.

“Before coming here, I told the kids to start the vote if they didn't hear any sounds of a fight after 30 minutes. They listened well to my words.”

“Elder.”

“I already agreed with the Countess's opinion. I observed if you could really cooperate to advance through the stages without giving any help, without participating as much as possible.”

[Vote Completed.]

[Option 2 votes: 23.81%]

[Option 1 votes: 76.19%]

“Not just me, but all the races who watched your actions directly through [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages] have been watching you.”

"....."

"Responsibility is heavy. I too once took the lead in the tower's conquest, bearing responsibility. And to take even a piece of responsibility for the purge, I stepped back from the front lines, never to involve myself in the tower's politics again."

The Sword Saint chuckled.

"In other words, standing before you is a [failure]."

"....."

"What you are seeing now is [the worst case], the end of my merciless failure, and the fears and worries you have becoming reality. Now, tell me, King of Death."

The old man's eyes twinkled.

"Does this failed creation look truly unbearable?"

“.....No.”

I spoke.

“Elder... you are not... terrible. Not at all. At least, to me, Mr. Callenbury is not.”

“That’s good to hear.”

The old man nodded.

“Then your failures won’t be so terrible either.”

" ....."

“Although I may not be the most reliable source, don’t fear failure too much. Perhaps, like me, you will also get a second chance. Someone might appear, bringing you back from retirement to active duty.”

[Stage Cleared.]

[The 46th floor has been cleared.]

"....."

Heretic Inquisitor.

Real Name, Bambolina.

In charge of the Mountain Calamity Tribe.

Vote Percentage, 77.50%. Stage Cleared.

Countess.

Real Name, Nisha.

In charge of the Fairy Tribe.

Vote Percentage, 88.40%.

Stage Cleared.

Paladin.

Real Name, Patricia.

In charge of the Gill Fish Tribe.

Vote Percentage, 98.68%.

Stage Cleared.

Black Dragon Witch.

Real Name, Anastasia.

In charge of the Vampiric and Dream Demon tribes.

Vampiric Tribe Vote Percentage, 97.55%.

Dream Demon Tribe Vote Percentage, 100%.

Stage Cleared.

Sword Saint.

Real Name, Marcus Callenbury.

In charge of the Pure Humans Tribe.

Vote Percentage, 76.19%.

Stage Cleared.

King of Death.

Kim Gong-Ja.

In charge of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

100%.

Stage Cleared.

“---Hey, hey.”

Then.

“Nobody objected except me. Is this for real?”

Everyone's too naively good-natured. “Ah? Your relationships are like, ‘Hey, I like you,’ and ‘Hey, I like you too,’ but if it ends there, therapists would be out of work and wandering the streets. Eh? Emotions, you see, they don't resolve with words.”

Crushing the shadows of the jungle, the one-eyed swordsman walked forward.

“Hey.”

The swordsman started the conversation with a casual greeting.

“I’ve been through a grand retreat just as you said. Now, I feel like the protagonist of a martial arts novel. You know, a martial arts protagonist should first converse with the sword before agreeing with words. That’s the way of the martial realm. My kids also said they would ignore the voting and everything unless we have a rematch.”

Among all those gathered here.

Excluding the Sword Saint, he was the first to reveal his real name to me.

“Draw your sword, Kim Gong-Ja.”

Viper.

Real Name, Liǎofàn.

In charge of the Ghost Tribe.

“Let's have a bout.”

Vote Percentage.

Undetermined.

[Quest Progress.]

[The Ghost Tribe voting begins.]

Voting initiated.

Chapter 275: Swordsman (2)

---

You're not listening.

Is it immersion?

This guy has cojones. I like it.

Hey, my name is Liǎofàn.

Even if you don't hear it, it doesn't matter.

Back in the audience chamber, you saved my life. I always make sure to return favors.

Just keep running straight ahead.

I'll take care of the left side.

That's an enormous privilege, you know.

No one who stood to my right has ever died.

Go, rising star.

---

"Come on, King of Death."

"....."

I quietly observed Viper.

'What should I say to you?'

Viper had one eye, with a patch covering where the other should be.

Have you ever made eye contact with someone who has only one eye?

It's not common. Like most, I grew accustomed to interacting only with people with two eyes. My eyes, my gaze, my thoughts – they're all adapted to binocular vision.

But it's different with a one-eyed person.

When facing them, when I need to look at them, my field of vision narrows to half its usual breadth. My eyes, usually adjusted to a wider perspective, narrow down to a single path. As my vision constricts, my thoughts deepen and stray.

Maybe that's why.

Even as I'm making eye contact with the Celestial Martial Clan Master, my mind drifts to the past.

'Viper doesn't remember.'

That was during the battle against the monsters summoned by the Demon King of Autumn Rain.

For the first time, I was completely engrossed in the fight with my sword. Back then, Viper had assisted me, ensuring I could stay in a state of mindless fury for as long as possible. A kind gesture, wasn't it?

'He doesn't remember.'

I died hundreds of times at the hands of the Demon King of Autumn Rain. Viper's assistance was just one of those hundreds of deaths. Buried and obscured by time, it's impossible for Viper to recall that specific moment.

Simply impossible.

'But I remember.'

Slowly.

I drew the holy sword from its sheath.

Before the blade was fully drawn, the moment my palm touched the hilt, I had already begun to summon my aura.

Another red hue flowed alongside the blood in my veins.

As the aura surged more violently through my veins, swirling tightly around my heart, my thoughts accelerated and my vision slowed.

During the brief moment the sword was drawn from the sheath, I thought.

'You said you were jealous of me.'

Why...

Why are the children I look after...

Even now, same as back then, King of Death, why? Why can't the ones under my care be like the ones you tend to?

'Even though you don't remember my countless deaths, I do.'

Why was it you who was able to give the Heavenly Demon such precious moments? Despite being devoured by the pain of death, she could genuinely smile because of the gifts you gave her.

Why.

'My realization always found you by my side.'

Why couldn't the Head of the Martial Alliance do the same?

Is it my fault?

King of Death.

Why am I...

'As much as you've become an object of my jealousy, you too occupy a part of me.'

The sharp sound of metal.

The sword, embodying the Holy Goddess, was now fully drawn.

'How can I convey this to you?'

That you're not meaningless to me.

That I'm aware of your existence, and I still remember a day you've forgotten?

Can I even convey it?

“Very well. That's it. You're getting it.”

With words?

“That's right. During my seclusion, I fully grasped the teachings of my master, Namgung Woon. He taught me something, and in the solitude, those teachings came flooding back. Perhaps it's true that a person needs their own time.”

With a mere tongue and one eye?

“Thanks for recommending seclusion, kid.”

What should I say?

“Anyway... why have you been silent?”

Maybe, no words at all.

“Did my ascended aura intimidate you? That's disappointing. I was so glad to see you after decades that I didn't even greet the others. Even if we fight, we should exchange a few words, right?”

It's easy to defeat you with words.

To overpower you with a sword might be effortless as well.

“Right? Aren't I?”

Though you've trained for decades, the realm you've reached now seems beneath my vision.

Your stance, the color of your aura - I can guess from these.

It's easy to hurt you with words, saying, "Is that all you've achieved?" And just as easy to prove it with my sword.

“...? Hey, King of Death?”

It's always been easy to inflict wounds and win.

What's always been hard is winning your heart.

“...Really, you won't say anything?”

This makes me remember my master's teachings.

Reflecting on it, my master only taught me a few things.

How to infuse wounds with emotions.

How to overlay voices onto the sound of a sword.

"....."

Words uttered by humans are mere noise, but when that noise takes direction and meaning, it can wound the unseen heart.

The sword I wield is also just a chunk of metal, but when it takes direction and purpose, it can cut through hearts it otherwise couldn't.

My master aimed to cut the cycle of suffering with a strip of metal, while I aim to cut your stubbornness, obsession, contempt, and delusion.

"Indeed."

Can I cut it?

"That settles it. If words aren't needed, then."

With a single stroke of metal, a line of reality can be formed.

As I let aura flow through my veins and wrap around my heart, extending to my blade, I bring the flow of my life, the warmth I've gleaned from the world – here, where my blood flows, where my heart beats – to you.

If I extend it, you might understand.

For you are a swordsman, who has closed yourself off from the world, enduring decades of solitude.

“Here I go.”

Shine.

[Shiny responds to your call.]

Hwiya.

[.....]

[Goddess of Protection listens to your call.]

The Idol.

[.....]

The Pity.

[.....]

The Prayer.

[Goddess of Protection responds to you as follows.]

The Sacrifice.

[Yes, King of Death.]

The Salvation.

[I obey your command.]

As I called the swords one by one and reached the third name, Hwiya had already perceived my intention and manifested in this forest.

Hwiya radiated light.

The light was intense. As the light grew and spread, to my eyes, it appeared slowly, like a series of photographs.

The light diffused in all directions. As the blade's light brightened in the air, its shadow on the ground deepened. As if pressured by the surrounding light, the shadow cast by the sword on the ground steadily narrowed.

It became narrower and darker.

More.

A bit more.

[The Salvation Sword obeys your command.]

Finally, the length of the sword in my palm and the shadow cast on the ground were equal.

[The Sacrifice Sword obeys your command.]

Neither were mere physical entities nor mere shadows.

[The Prayer Sword obeys your command.]

Stir.

Despite the intense light, the shadow that no longer shrunk suddenly moved as if it were alive.

[The Pity Sword obeys your command.]

Viper, who was about to charge at me, hesitated.

".....!"

He squinted his one eye.

In a mere moment, the shadow stirred and divided into four separate shadows. One. Two. Three. Four. The single sword shadow split into four directions – east, west, south, north, forming a square.

They scattered, but not in disarray.

The sword shadows surrounded me as if guarding me.

Like the hour, minute, and second hands of a clock, the shadows slowly revolved around me as I stood in the middle, holding The Idol.

[The Goddess of Protection manifests.]

I then aimed the tip of the sword at the Viper.

"Ah..."

The Viper paused and lifted the corner of his mouth.

I heard that sound.

His breath folding along with the curl of his lips, the Guardian Spirit behind me blinking heavily, the Sword Saint, Black Dragon Witch, and Paladin widening their eyes, and Ester moving her eyes - all these sounds rang clearly in my ears.

“Hey---.”

Swish.

Four swords emerged from the four shadows.

“Really?!”

The swords which arose from the shadows maintained their shadowy hue even after leaving the ground. They were dark, with continuously writhing textures rather than clear outlines. They pulsed. Throbbled. Undulated. Growled. Like half-ripe beasts.

They were alive.

“This is cheating...!”

The aura that coursed through my body and played around, now serving as the avatars of the [Goddess of Protection], manifested themselves.

"Just one sword was barely enough to win, and now you use five?!"

If mere aura is called sword energy, then what approached was akin to sword force.

As I turned my head, the four swords moved with me. As I aimed the sword tip, the four tongues whined in unison.

Unerring.

My Salvation, my Sacrifice, my Prayer, my Pity. Ever since I held the sword, everything I've gathered, collected, and harvested, now perfectly synchronized with the Idol in my hand.

“Fine! Let’s do it!”

This is the level I stand on now.

The view I see with my own eyes.

I may not yet be able to fade the shadows like my master, but...

"If you plan to defeat me without a single word!"

I might not be able to slice through the tail end of winter, but perhaps I can cut a strand of the heart tucked within your chest.

"I'll definitely drag at least a word out of you!"

Viper swung his sword.

I've seen this swordplay somewhere before.

When was it?

Ah.

It resembled the techniques demonstrated by the Head of the Martial Alliance Namgung Woon in the snowy field, battling my master. Yes. Even as his body crumbled and flesh decayed, he manipulated his muscles with Ki, turning into a puppet with rigid joints, resembling that desperate technique.

"King of Death!"

If it were the old me, maybe I wouldn't have recognized it.

Back then, I wouldn't have understood the martial arts, no matter how expertly they were displayed. I couldn't read it. I couldn't understand it even when I saw it.

Even the sword dance between my master and Namgung Woon, even their 989th duel, was seen as merely whimsical puppetry.

"-----!"

The martial arts that the Viper now displayed were just like that.

My Blindness.

Something that I wouldn't have understood, even if I saw it, becoming ■■■■ in my ignorance.

Something I didn't even regard as anything. Smoke. Husk. Illusion.

".....! ---, ---!"

Now I know it as 황월파천(黃月破天), a gesture with a voice.

I parried the Viper's swing with The Pity Sword. Silence. His sword clashed with my shadow, but there was no sound of collision. His sword couldn't cut through my shadow with sound.

"-----!!"

The Viper swung his sword.

■■■

Earth King Strike.

■■■

Dragon of the East River.

■■■■ ■■ was ■■ ■■ ■■ like ■■ ■■ and ■■ ■■ like ■■■■,
■■■ to ■■ ■■ ■■ ■■ before ■■ ■■ ■■, ■■ to ■■■ ■■ ■■ to
■■■ ■■■.

With the ferocity of a snake's venomous fangs and the cunning of a dragon's coils, you must snatch the breath before the jaws open, grab the distance before the schemes unfold, and turn the opponent's strength against them to strike at the neck.

"......! -----!"

■■■■.

Celestial Martial Guild Master.

■ ■

Viper.

■ ■

Hey.

■ ■, ■ ■.

Come, rising star.

"My name is Liǎofàn."

Slowly parrying his swing and.

‘I remember you.’

Flying Ki Sword Technique.

I swung my sword.

Chapter 276:

Orthodox Faction (1)

---

He was never suited for the Orthodox Faction.

---

-.....

Day 61 of closed-door cultivation.

Viper stood there, his mouth agape in astonishment.

-This isn't right...

A droplet of water fell from the cave ceiling.

He remembered the King of Death joking about going on a hunger strike for several days during his cultivation. Viper took those words seriously and embarked on a 60-day fast, but as the days passed, it wasn't just his stomach that felt empty; his mind began to feel numb.

-No, this can't be right... I can't even imagine the King of Death seriously practicing fasting... This kind of training seems like a waste of time, life, and brain cells.

Eureka.

It was the moment of realization.

-Damn it!

That day, Viper abandoned his 60-day fasting and went down to the Ghost Tribe village to feast. Pork hocks, fried dishes, noodles – the village was abundant with cuisine he had introduced. After making up for his missed meals over the course of 5 days, he sat in his cave, despondent, feeling like a dieter who couldn't beat the yo-yo effect.

-How can I defeat that guy?

He had wasted 60 days.

It was a depressing thought, but fortunately or unfortunately, Viper had plenty of time left.

A lot of time.

-.....

At least 60 years.

60 years.

Just barely.

-What should I do... Damn, how should I...

The only thing his 60-day fasting left him was a habit of talking to himself.

Viper groaned as he stared at the cave wall, hoping for some incredible martial arts epiphany to be miraculously inscribed there, but that fantasy never materialized.

Viper was not the protagonist.

-.....

Perhaps.

It should have been him, not the King of Death, who joined the Demonic Cult.

-... Yeah. It's all been wrong from the start.

Thinking of King of Death's brightly shining smile, Viper chuckled to himself.

-No matter how you look at it, he fits the Orthodox Faction. Not me... I can accept striving for a better world, but saving people in the Tower, that's just not my style. I just enjoy the thrill of the fight...

Viper threw a stone against the cave wall.

Thud.

Thud.

Thud.

-Right.

Four days.

He did nothing, thought nothing, and nothing changed – an empty time outside, called four days by the pace of the clock hands. In the cave, without a way to measure time, only the pockmarks on the wall – the traces of the stones Viper threw – marked the passing time.

-I was never meant for the Orthodox Faction.

Thud.

-I joined the Heavenly Demon under Elder Namgung Woon, not because I was impressed by his martial arts, but just to spend some time learning... And I went along with King of Death's plans to make the two elder's journeys more comfortable... It was fine in its own way.

Thud.

-But it was rather half-hearted. Especially compared to him.

Thud.

-.....

Thud.

-I've lived a half-hearted life.

Thud.

-Wow, did I really live my life half-heartedly? I thought I was diligent. Did I just drift here without doing anything decisive? Shit. I reached Hunter Rank 6 and became the Master of the Celestial Martial Guild so easily. Am I a genius? What if I hadn't lived half-heartedly? The Tower would have collapsed.

Thud.

-Yeah. I could have brought down the Tower.

Thud.

-Being Rank 6 doesn't mean much. Will my achievements or titles be remembered? Maybe for 3 years, at most 6 years.

After 6 years, my name and alias will be forgotten.

Thud.

-Being the Celestial Martial Guild Master is only impressive in the Tower. Drop it in the real martial world, and it would barely be a mid-sized sect. It'll just be a place where I gather kids to tell them not to wave their swords in the streets, to train themselves instead of fighting...

Thud.

-I've lived half-heartedly.

Thud.

-Shit. Go to hell. All of you, just die.

Thud.

-.....

Thud.

Day 260 of closed-door cultivation.

The opposite wall of the cave where Viper meditated was ravaged by the stones he had thrown. It looked as if a bomb had exploded there, with craters and blemishes all over. He had thrown the stones merely to clear his mind, or rather, to vent his thoughts.

Who am I?

How did I end up here?

What did I miss on the way here?

What did I manage to hold onto?

What exactly were those things?

-.....

260 days.

That was how much time Viper needed to compile his life.

He used the minute hand as the warp and the hour hand as the weft, weaving a sieve of time. Through this sieve, he shook off all the unnecessary things – distractions, stray thoughts, stress, crumbs of thoughts and emotions, the fat and flab that had crept into his life. When they wouldn't shake off, he threw stones and shattered them.

-.....

After shaking everything off, only one main concern remained.

-I need to beat the King of Death.

With just a sword?

No.

The Demonic Heavenly God Art he inherited. A sword imbued with the cries of the common people.

The King of Death always modestly refers to himself as Vice-Lord, speaking of his master with bright eyes—perhaps even sparkling ones—but Viper saw it differently. Yes. Viper knew something that others, perhaps even the King of Death himself, didn't know.

-Defeating the King of Death doesn't just mean overcoming the Demonic Heavenly God Art.

Once upon a time.

The unnamed first Heavenly Demon wandered the martial realm and created the Demonic Heavenly God Art. He heard the endless deaths, screams, and moans that filled the world.

How could a sword made and wielded by humans in such a world be anything special? Praising a sword as noble when it's disconnected from the world means it can only cut illusions, futility, and emptiness, not reality.

A sword that doesn't cut reality is merely decoration, not a true sword.

To cut the world, the sword must first contain the world within it. The world now consists only of screams, moans, and blood. Therefore, a sword of the Demonic Heavenly God Art must naturally scream, moan, and bleed.

-.....

King of Death.

He spread the Demonic Heavenly God Art to all of the Earth Spirit Tribe.

He infected them.

-...Terrifying.

King of Death's Demonic Formations Art is not just an upgrade of the Demonic Heavenly God Art. Even if the King of Death began with simple motivations like coming up with a new idea or thinking how wonderful it would be to share the Demonic Heavenly God Art with others.

It's not just that.

-Distributing the burden of a single Heavenly Demon among hundreds of thousands of common people...

Viper's eyes darkened.

The Heavenly Demon was exalted but alone. The followers not only revered the Heavenly Demon as a leader but also as a living myth, a deity. The Heavenly Demon's words were law, her actions history.

Only the Heavenly Demon could fully unleash the Demonic Heavenly God Art.

But formations are different.

Anyone somewhat familiar with the Demonic Heavenly God

Art can participate in the formations. There's no need to embody the screams of all people. Just be true to one's role, like an actor in a troupe, blending into the formation and performing just that one part.

-Sigh...

King of Death is merely the conductor of the first orchestra.

The Demonic Formations Art can unfold without the King of Death. It changes and renews itself with each participation, depending on who joins and whom they choose to embody and cry out for. Uburka could be the conductor of the second orchestra, Seimslam of the third.

He has shared it.

The burden, mission, role, status, and thus, power.

-If only he had simply followed in the footsteps of the Heavenly Demon, he would have been easier to defeat...

There are others in the world who've been wounded, not just me.

I am not the one with the deepest scars, nor the most agonizing pain.

My role as the leader of the Demonic Heavenly God Art is merely because I express it well.

Literally, I am just a Vice-Lord.

-What should I do?

Slowly.

Viper stood up.

-How can I defeat him... Huh?

He mumbled to himself, leaving the cave.

There was no longer any need to force himself into solitude.

He had firmly settled within himself.

-What to do...

His emotions, past, regrets, pride, sighs—all tangled, kneaded, and knotted into a gloomy mass within his heart, weighing a hundred pounds.

This dark mass was himself.

-Hmm.

Even if he went to the village for a drink, chatted with the Ghost Tribe children, wandered the streets alone, or climbed a mountain, the dark mass in his heart remained, constantly reminding him of his [self].

The Viper in his heart flicked its tongue strangely.

-How to defeat the King of Death.

282 days.

Viper emerged from seclusion.

---

Clash!

Swords and blades collide.

“Argh...!”

A sharp metallic sound rang.

But Viper only has one sword forged by hammering metal. I am different. There are four more shadow-blades lurking in the shadows.

“Damn it! T-This sneaky bastard!”

He was getting desperate.

“This isn't right! The Flying Sword Technique should be sending out actual swords! Is this really the Flying Sword Technique? No, seriously, is it!? That technique should not have Ego Swords, ah damn it!!!.”

-To be precise, it's a privilege only zombie has.

Guardian Spirit commented. He had been quietly observing our duel from a distance. Unfortunately, his response was impossible for Viper to hear.

-The Holy Sword Goddess has summoned each of her swords. She gives them a body with aura and fuels them to move, but the problem is they are part of the constellation. They're very intelligent. They are ego swords that fight on their own. Five ego swords scattering aura and flying around while zombie calls it the Flying Sword Technique. Hmm. Very zombie-like...

“This crazy bastard!”

-Yeah, that's what I meant. Even when I talk to myself, sometimes my intentions get across. The world is getting better each day~

Despite their chatter, it had no relevance to the current battle.

I just need to swing my sword.

I can't be distracted by the surrounding noises and voices. Right now, I only focus on Viper, while relentlessly attacking.

“Damn!”

Viper's fierce slash was automatically parried by the [Pity Sword].

A waist-targeting strike was blocked by the [Prayer Sword].

An attempt to slice the wrist was deflected by the [Sacrifice Sword].

Then, rushing into Viper's exposed bosom,

“Damn you!”

I cut.

A slashing sound rang out.

‘Shallow.’

It's not a fatal wound. Viper hastily backstepped, avoiding a deeper cut. A few droplets of blood stained the blade, but that's all. Just like when the sword and blade clashed earlier, the sound lingered.

"....."

Again.

I furrowed my brows, sensing something strange.

‘I heard metal again.’

It's natural to hear metallic sounds when a sword and a blade clash, but not now. Not in this case.

Because the shadow-blades aren't made of metal but of shadows.

Purely aura-made shadow-blades, even if they clash with Viper's sword, shouldn't make a metallic sound. It's almost silent. At most, they should make a sound like something melting or being bitten.

If the metallic sounds aren't coming from my blades, then.

‘Viper.’

It must be the moans from the opponent's sword.

‘What kind of training have you undergone for your sword to cry out?’

I quietly observe Viper standing before me.

“Hoo, huff... Haah, hoo... hoo...”

Viper was bleeding, gasping for breath.

With a smile on his lips.

Chapter 277:

Orthodox Faction (2)

---

Originally, he was not a person who would fit into the Orthodox Faction.

-Hmm.

Ever since leaving the cave, Viper had been wandering the world.

Beautiful places known for their scenic beauty. Impressive landscapes. Hidden gems.

He visited places where waterfalls cascaded from the heavens, sitting alone on rocks to endure the force of the waterfalls, and climbed to the highest places, closest to the sky, gazing endlessly at the world spread out below for days on end.

-This isn't it?

He felt no particular emotion.

The [self] that had settled in his heart showed no reaction.

Viper scratched the back of his head, recalling the advice of Namgung Woon, the Head of the Martial Alliance.

-It's spoiled. Completely spoiled. The Orthodox Faction is about capturing nature in the sword, but no matter how beautiful and pretty things I see, I don't feel any emotion. I would rather watch people commuting in the city, even that touches my heart more.

The majestic force of the waterfall.

The vastness of the world spread out beneath the mountain peak.

The frightening lightning and torrential rain.

-This is not appealing at all. Like, oh wow, it's amazing! I'm so glad to be the Orthodox Faction leader! .....There is no feeling at all.

None of it captivated his [self].

-Ah, maybe I should have joined the Demonic Cult instead? King of Death is just lucky. Why did he have to match up with a master so perfectly suited for him? Damn...

Day 407 after leaving seclusion.

The [self] lurking in his heart was still speaking only of jealousy, lament, and sighs. A black mass. Murky and sticky, he could feel its outline clearly. Viper moved on, feeling its presence.

Clang!

The sound from the marketplace initially went unnoticed by Viper.

His senses, honed from years of training, detected the metallic sound. Although his body reacted, the [self] entrenched deep within him remained indifferent.

Clang!

He was currently in Guru, the homeland of the Earth Spirit Tribe. Viper occasionally visited Guru to watch the Blood Fire Dramas, wondering if it would provide insights on how to defeat King of Death.

As a result, Viper could recite all 11 lines that Kekerkker used to confess to Raviel with his eyes closed. He sometimes wondered why those guys acted so absurdly, but then realized that the one being most absurd was his [self].

Clang!

And slowly.

Clang!

The [self] coiled up in his head raised its head.

All sorts of smells and scents from the streets were detected. Shhik. Shhuk. Among them was a sharp and fishy smell. The [self] sniffed around, searching for its source.

Clang!

It was a blacksmith's forge.

Located a couple of blocks from the city center, the area was less populated. Minor theater troupes huddled together here, and Asuras with slightly tight purses lingered around.

Clang!

The blacksmith's forge stood somewhat isolated.

It was more like slowly sinking than standing. The roof was partially broken. The pillars were decayed. Some had already lost their balance, pushing the roof dangerously to one side.

A place that would vanish with a strong gust of wind.

Clang!

A muscular blacksmith was swinging his hammer there. Clang! The red-hot metal spat sparks when struck, and Clang! It bent slightly each time.

There was no remarkable skill.

No eye-catching performances.

-Hey, Master.

Just.

-You have an interesting way of hammering, huh?

-Oho.

The blacksmith wiped his face with a towel. Approaching closer, Viper realized he was actually quite small. Not just compared to the Ghost Tribe, but even smaller than the average Earth Spirit. The blacksmith, barely reaching his own waist, was...

-What do you need, sir? Are you a guest from the Ghost Tribe? We don't make weapons, just so you know.

-Eh? Why not? Weapons are the pride of the Earth Spirit

Tribe's blacksmith industry. Especially swords. Earth Spirit Tribe gives a sword as a gift when their kids come of age, and if it wears out within a year, they gift a new one. It's a joyful tradition.

-Ah...

The elf blacksmith finished wiping off his sweat.

He looked somewhat indifferent.

-It's nice that you treat minority races well and without prejudice, but... including that, it's just too much. You know what I mean, right? It's just over the top.

-Ah, totally.

Despite being strangers, they quickly found common ground, nodding vigorously.

-So annoying.

-Yes, really annoying.

Their nodding synchronized perfectly.

One was an elf blacksmith running a shabby forge despite his livelihood, and the other was a human Hunter traveling around while possessing a Ghost Tribe member. For a moment, they were united in spirit despite their dark pasts and murky insides.

-Nice to meet an understanding customer. So, what would you like? I'll give you a discount.

-Ah.

Viper then remembered his original purpose for coming here.

His pitch-black heart urged him to hurry up and speak.

-Not really here to buy anything, I was just curious.

-Hmm?

-Don't worry, I'm not suspicious. Anyway, I was just passing by and heard you hammering. The sound was incredibly regular. I thought it was just ordinary hammering, but the interval and strength of each Clang, Clang, were exactly the same.

Indeed.

Without even a 0.1 second discrepancy, the hammering sound continued rhythmically.

To an ordinary person, it might seem like just regular hammering, but Viper, a superhuman, easily noticed the anomaly in the blacksmith's work.

-Could it be? This shabby forge actually houses a great...

-Ah, please don't sit on that chair. It's so shaky I had to fix it to the floor, but even the floor's shaky. If you sit there for more than 15 seconds, you'll fall right through. It could handle me for 15 seconds, but with you, it'll collapse immediately.

-...a great master with incredible skills, or something? Like some S-rank extraordinary fate?

Viper was excited.

His heart, along with the [self] making nonsense noises inside, was throbbing.

Viper always preferred 'this kind of thing' over beautiful nature or magnificent landscapes. Like something seemingly ordinary actually being extraordinary. Hidden power. Hidden status. Hidden settings. Hidden conspiracies. Hidden worlds. His heart always raced for these 'stories'.

-Uh...

The elf blacksmith felt uncomfortable under the intensely curious gaze.

-S-rank? I don't know what you're talking about, but our we're nothing special...

-But you actually have a hidden past and a special talent, right?

-I was just born into an ordinary family and started blacksmithing when our fortunes fell. Sir. I have no talent. Born with internal muscles like an average Fairy Tribe member, how could I compete with Asuras with their incredible muscles in blacksmithing...?

-Ah, that's obviously a lie.

-.....

-Really?

-There's no benefit in lying to a customer for a little money.

-.....

-If you're not going to order anything, please leave. You're hindering my work.

-.....

It seemed to be true.

Viper muttered to himself, "Strange, strange," while pacing around the blacksmith. The elf blacksmith sighed, "Such bad luck," but eventually ignored Viper and continued hammering.

Clang!

Clang!

Clang!

-.....

Watching the hammering from a distance, Viper suddenly spoke.

-It's the same, right?

From Viper's perspective, only the blacksmith's back, the small figure of the elf, was visible. The well-developed back muscles, balanced shoulder muscles, and arm muscles tirelessly moved, working.

-What, aren't you going?

-The rhythm. The interval. The force. It's all the same. There's no discrepancy in the hammering. If you extended your sense of time with aura, you could easily mimic it, but there's clearly no aura. So, doing it by sense...

-Huuk. Hoo...

Viper frowned.

If the elf blacksmith in front of him had not become a blacksmith but walked the path of martial arts and mastered aura, he might have been a fine warrior.

-Impressive, but what's the meaning? Why insist on such hammering?

The elf blacksmith spoke without turning around.

-It makes it a bit more fun.

Viper narrowed his eyes.

-Fun?

-Yes. It's work. Blacksmith work.

Clang!

-Do you know how hard this is? Customers take these home, use them comfortably for cutting, chopping, hammering nails... It's easy to use, but hard to make. If it were just a hobby, maybe, but this is...

Clang!

-My profession. Haa...

-.....

-Damn, I really don't want to work.

Clang!

-It's so hard...

Clang!

-I'm dying.

Clang!

-I want to die...

Clang!

-I'm dying!

Clang!

As the blacksmithing continued, the elf blacksmith's curses grew harsher. It seemed like he was cursing at someone, but mostly, it seemed he was cursing at himself.

Viper was speechless. Despite the sharp sound of hammering, this forge was noisier than any workshop in the city.

-Ah, I see. With such curses flying, no wonder no customers come. You cleverly time your hammering to swear then. The sound of the hammer masks the curses, so they go unheard.

Viper realized.

-...Are you insane?

-Sir, you've been quite a disturbance. It's about time you left.

Indeed, the races living in the city created by the King of Death, regardless of their race, seemed to be quite peculiar. Acknowledging this, Viper said,

-So it's fun for you. Your expression doesn't look fun, but are you really enjoying this?

-Of course. This has its own charm.

The blacksmith wiped his face with a handkerchief.

-Work is originally hard. Hardness is natural. Especially for my race, I wasn't born suited for this job. I have no talent. But working made me curse, didn't it?

-Well...

-If there's absolutely no joy in work. Absolutely none, I'd really feel like dying.

Clang!

-So, I find just enough fun to avoid dying.

Clang!

-My colleagues go out on weekends for recreation, rest, go to the new sauna to relax. They talk about how amazing the delayed Blood Flower Play was, and they find their own ways to relax. I don't get it.

Clang!

-When I see tall mountains, I think, why are you so tall and I'm so small, are you picking a fight with me? Even when I visit famous mountains, I feel disconnected and indifferent. Ah, this, working feels like I'm going to die... like I'm actually dying. The deathly energy doesn't go away. It doesn't disappear.

Clang!

-I'm dying.

Clang!

-But, I can't die, so...

Clang!

-I find tiny bits of fun in my work. The Ghost Tribe customer praised me like it was something great, but... I'm just trying to survive. Look. Clang! See? Clang! It's fun to keep the same rhythm. It's like unfinished music. Clang! Isn't it?

Finally, the blacksmith turned around.

The elf was smiling broadly.

With a face red from the forge and smeared with soot.

-It's fun, right?

-.....

At that moment.

-Ah, it's quite a challenge, you know. To keep matching the moment. It really ignites my competitive spirit. Like I'm the only one playing this game.

Viper.

The [self] he harbored in his heart realized something.

Someone who had already awakened to who he was, saw more awakening in a small blacksmith.

-The rules of the game are there too. When it rains, I go a bit slower.

What he finds beautiful.

What he finds natural.

What he wants to capture in his sword until his arms move and his blood pulses.

The Master of the Celestial Martial Guild understood.

-When fog rolls in, I hammer even slower to make it audible. Why? When the clang, clang, of the hammer resonates through a foggy city, isn't it poetic? The city seems to cry. The fog seems to cry. It's somewhat fun. It's cool. I find such things more interesting than famous mountains or scenic spots.

It wasn't the screaming populace.

Not humans clawing at their starving chests.

Not when the wounded heal and laugh among others with similar scars—the air filled with that laughter wasn't close enough.

-Well, this much should keep me alive.

Those who endure.

-Though I want to die.

Those who find joy to endure.

-I can live.

That happiness.

The fleeting joy that can't even be called happiness.

Enduring every day, breaking a part of themselves just to keep going.

Murmuring to themselves they feel like dying, sighing, smiling broadly.

Willpower.

The desire to survive.

-.....

Viper slowly nodded.

-...That's right.

It was easy to belittle that happiness as mere escapism. It never permanently solved problems, you're not becoming happy, you're just delaying happiness, and thus, you should find your true self, throw yourself into your real talents - such advice was easy to give.

Saying something is wrong with your life was very easy.

-It seems quite fun.

But.

What does it matter?

-May I give it a try?

No matter how trivial the happiness, it is a grain of happiness.

Even if it's a smile that briefly stays and then fades away, it is a smile.

Something that definitely existed, exists, and will exist in this world.

A proof of being alive and wanting to live.

-Eh. You, sir?

-I'm a Ghost Tribe member, aren't I? I'm good at using strength.

-It's not just about strength...

-Ah, just let me give it a try. I have a lot of money. I'll leave my purse here, if something goes wrong, let the craftsmen use it as they see fit.

Everyone works.

Everyone works painfully.

Everyone finds joy in enduring their pain.

Therefore, this happiness, even if not here and now, will unfold anytime, anywhere, irrespective of time and place, and can surely envelop the world as a sky rivaling the Demonic

Heaven.

-Ussa!

Viper, shirtless, firmly gripped the hammer.

-Okay! Let's give this a try!

Being too far from nature's landscapes to sing its praises.
Lacking confidence to capture the laughter of children spreading through a wheat field in a sword.

But the happiness of ordinary people.

Just putting in a little more effort, struggling a bit more, and being slightly happy, yet so painfully tough that without that bit of happiness, you'd die immediately. Making plans, thinking hard, implementing them, and laughing out loud with joy, if it's that kind of happiness.

-It's my first time at a forge! But I can do it! Aja!

He could capture it in my sword.

He wanted to capture it.

Viper knew that the beauty, the resonance in his heart, the landscape he wanted to show the world, the righteousness he had long searched for, was right here.

-After all, what I have in abundance is time!

Clang!

The sound of metal rang out.

Clang!

The sound of metal rang out.

Clang!

The sound of...

Clang!

Rang out.

Clang!

Rang out.

Clang!

Rang out.

Clang!

Clang!

Clang!

Clang!

Chapter 278:

Orthodox Faction (3)

---

Clang!

He swung his sword.

"Huff, ha. Hehe."

He swung his sword.

"Ouch! Damn it, resorting to cheap tricks like Astral Swords! That's cheating, you know! He doesn't even listen to his vastly more experienced senior's advice! Ha! Huh!"

He swung his sword.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

The Salvation Sword fiercely leaped in mid-air. Even if I don't manually control them, my Ego Swords have walked a lifetime with me and observed the entirety of my life. Being limbs of the same body with me, they unfolded the Demonic Heavenly God Art just like me.

"Huff! Ack!? This, now the freaky sword that ran away is casting Demonic Arts on its own!? Hey, King of Death! You, Kim Gong-Ja! You know this is really, really a cheaty no-manners play, right!?"

Viper, while generously spewing curses, accurately, tactfully steps to block the Ego Swords. The Ego Swords' feints and real strikes, their flashy sword plays, calmly countered by Viper,

"That's enough!"

Clang!

"I've starved for 60 days too, you know! Ughaha! Ugh, hoo..."

Woah. Woah. Mmm, eugh.... Mmm. Kehm, ha. Ha..... Ha. Ah. Damn, it was nothing but a pointless effort!"

Viper kicked away the Salvation Sword. When Viper's sword and my Ego Sword clashed, clearly, Clang! The sharp sound of metal echoed again.

Viper, casually wiping the blood flowing down his stomach with his robe, chuckled.

"Ha. Hoo... Ah.... Hehe."

In every way, he's at a disadvantage.

It's nearly impossible for Viper to stand against me, who has already reached the realm of controlling Ego Swords. No, right now, if I simultaneously attack with all five swords, each imbued with a different aspect of the Demonic Heavens, Viper wouldn't last even three seconds before collapsing.

"....."

However.

That still wouldn't count as defeating Viper.

If he recovers, he'll undoubtedly come back with an unaffected face and challenge me again, saying 'Hey! Let's fight again!'.

'It's not about breaking the body, but breaking the spirit.'

That's why it's difficult.

'While fighting, despite being at a constant disadvantage, he doesn't stop smiling.'

At first, I suspected he might be under a delusion. But no matter how much I observed, it wasn't a delusion. His eyes weren't tainted with madness, and his laughter contained happiness. A very small happiness, one that seems to disappear if not listened to carefully.....

'He looks happy.'

After the initial probing phase ended.

Viper began to swing his sword joyfully.

'How can he be happy?'

Maybe it's the result of his long seclusion?

Before he entered seclusion, Viper swung his sword painfully.

He swung it, trying to win, but every part of it felt torturously painful.

In fact, didn't he go berserk fighting me during that time?

'Can a person change this much?'

I tightly gripped the hilt of my sword.

I had already firmly grasped the answer to the question I asked myself.

'Of course, people can change.'

That's why I'm looking forward to it.

While it makes me nervous, I'm so eager to find out how you, Viper, have changed, that I almost want to ask right now, making it hard to hold back.

'Jealousy towards me, obsession with the Heretic Inquisitor, self-loathing for not becoming the main character, guilt for not making the Head of the Martial Alliance happy, all those emotions, those emotional knots you've been carrying, Liǎofàn.'

I swung my sword.

'How can you smile while holding a sword!'

One of my Ego Swords, the Sacrifice Sword, vibrated woefully.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Second Form.

Sword of Parched Death.

Blood spurted out.

"Woah! Wooooah!?"

The Ego Sword dashed around Viper, striking from above, left, and right, relentlessly stabbing him. Viper clumsily defended against the stabs.

"I'm dying! Hey, this is deadly! King of Death! Seriously, I'm dying! Shit, ugh!? Oh no! Damn, aaack! Damn it! It just grazed my forearm! Did you see it graze my forearm? It really did. A little deeper and I would've become a one-armed man from a cyclops!"

Clang!

The sound of metal rang out.

Viper successfully repelled the Sword of Parched Death, which had been fiercely swirling around, although the wound which grazed his forearm was quite deep, blood was streaming out. Besides that, his robe was already torn to shreds from the numerous near-misses.

"Keuheuheu... Damn. This is tough."

Viper, wiping the sweat dripping down his chin, grinned.

"Damn hard work, yeah."

"....."

"Kim Gong-Ja, if you come at me with Demonic Heavenly God Art all at once, I'll really be gone, you know? Huh? Why aren't you coming? Ah, right. You can't speak. Planning to defeat me without uttering a word. Geez, kid. You're so serious. How do you live without the fun of talking, huh? We'll eventually talk anyway."

Hoo.

After a light sigh, Viper turned his head.

There were hunters gathered, watching our duel.

"Hey, Heretic Inquisitor!"

"Hmm?"

The Heretic Inquisitor, cradling a snail shell, cocked his head.

"Yes, Celestial Martial Guild Master."

"It's actually been decades since I've seen your face, you know?"

"Ah, yes! I heard you decided to stay in the world for more training! Ahaha. It's a coincidence, but it's the same for me!"

"Aren't you going to say it's good to see me after so long?"

"Yes, it's good to see you!"

"Actually, whether we reunited yesterday or after 100 years, it doesn't really matter, right?"

"Yes! Both are equally good to see!"

"Right."

Hoo.

Viper once again composed his breath.

"You're that kind of guy....."

"Ahaha."

Viper gripped his sword.

And with a smile on his face, he asked.

"Heretic Inquisitor."

"Yes!"

"Are you happy right now?"

"Yes! I am!"

The Heretic Inquisitor answered without hesitation. Beside him, the Black Dragon Witch made a face as if saying 'what nonsense are these guys talking about', but both men paid no mind to the local broadcast.

"You must have suffered in the past."

"Hm."

The Heretic Inquisitor pondered.

"If you're talking about physical pain and psychological trauma, yes. I think I must have suffered quite a bit in the past."

"You must be suffering now too."

"Considering the intensity of my work and the amount of tasks, it's normal to feel suffering!"

"But you're still having fun?"

The Heretic Inquisitor grinned widely.

"Yes!"

"....."

"Though it's very hard, there are still enjoyable aspects to this job! Celestial Martial Guild Master! Offering you an espresso is quite a fun task!"

Silence lingered for a moment.

Viper slowly opened his lips.

"Can you be happy despite suffering?"

"Of course!"

"Yes, of course. Of course, you can be. You're a strange monster, but... you're no different from a human. Right. Pain is pain. Suffering is suffering. Laughter is laughter."

Viper turned his head to look at me again.

His rough breathing had long since calmed.

"Heavenly Demon of the Demonic Cult, Kim Gong-Ja."

"....."

"It's not just the strong ones you need to defeat in this world, nor just the weak ones you need to help."

Viper called me not just the King of Death, not just Kim Gong-Ja, but specifically "Heavenly Demon of the Demonic Cult, Kim Gong-Ja."

He made it clear that he was addressing not just the hunter

at the top of the tower or my personal might, but the weight and breadth of the Demonic Cult and Demonic Heavens that I bore.

"Your Demonic Cult took the cries of the common people as its doctrine. Their cries became vengeance, and that vengeance turned into bloodshed, staining the world red. Bloodthirsty avengers! Even as the heavens and earth have turned red, you still act as if you're the weak ones."

"....."

I paused.

That was the declaration of war given during the 990th battle, much like what the Head of the Martial Alliance, Namgung Woon, had said to my master, the leader of the Demonic Cult.

"You cry endlessly, clinging to the hem of the Heavenly Demon's robe. Begging to dance the death away on your behalf. As long as you cling and whine, you are the weak commoners, the sorrowful people."

Viper's one eye scanned the audience.

Not just the Heretic Inquisitor and the Black Dragon Witch, but also Ester, the Four Demon Lords, and followers who appeared to protect me in case of an emergency were hiding behind the forest leaves, watching us.

Viper nodded.

"Thirst."

Even though his body was beaten and battered, Viper's one eye shone brightly.

"Why rely on the malicious ghosts of the past forever when you rightfully have legs and hands? The Avatamsaka Sutra* says, 'Even a single tree must shed its flowers to bear fruit.' What about you? Are you just florists in a garden, trading on your own pain?"

*If anyone wants to read more about it: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Buddhāvataṃsaka\_Sūtra

So, is that so?

Really, is it?

'This is...'

I couldn't keep silent.

I had to break my vow of silence, my oath, my stubbornness to defeat my opponent without words.

Because that madman, the Celestial Martial Guild Master, elevated this place from a mere duel between the King of Death and Viper into a battle between the Demonic Cult and the Orthodox Faction.

Kim Gong-Ja might be able to remain silent, but the Vice-Lord of the Demonic Cult cannot be.

At any time.

"Ha."

I let out a laugh.

"I wonder if the Celestial Martial Guild Master has the right to say such things."

Seeing my lips finally loosen, Viper smirked.

"Why? You've got a mouth, so you should check it's functioning properly now and then."

"Has the Head of the Martial Alliance, Namgung Woon, acknowledged you as his successor? Have the Orthodox warriors chosen you as the representative of the righteous path?"

"Ahh, recognition. It'd be nice. But, you know, Namgung Woon's gotten pretty old, right? He got thoroughly defeated by the Heavenly Demon. What authority does a defeated person have? And the other Orthodox warriors are comfortably sleeping under the snow. Let them rest in peace, as etiquette dictates."

"So you claim to be righteous yourself?"

"Sure."

My heart raced.

"Do you have the skills to back it up?"

"I blocked your Demonic Heavenly God Art, executed with those flying swords, twice in a row. Isn't that enough? What more skill do I need? Damn, it's really tough to pretend to be a righteous person."

"I am not the Heavenly Demon."

"Yep. You're not the Heavenly Demon, and others don't call you that, but I choose to call you that."

"....."

"Demonic Cult followers swear loyalty to you and even spread your doctrine to some bizarre continent. The whole tribe turned into Demonic Cultists, and I should call you Vice-lord instead of Heavenly Demon? Isn't that too humble? Everyone else becomes warm and sentimental when they see humility, but I'm a scientific and objective person. I'll just live my way. Kim Gong-Ja, the 2nd Heavenly Demon."

"Ha."

Haha.

"Hmm."

Hahaha.

Ah.

"This is interesting."

Lightly.

I smiled.

"....."

Seeing my smile, Viper's face lost some of its cheerfulness.

Well.

I didn't mind and gripped [The Idol Sword].

"I thought if you were filled with jealousy like last time, I could easily cut you down... but no, is the jealousy still there? The Celestial Martial Guild Master's feelings towards me don't seem to have changed much. I can feel it in your gaze."

"....."

"But, I see."

I gestured slightly.

One of my Demonic Heavenly God Art swords hovering around me, wooing, reacted.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Third Form.

Sword of Submerged Death.

A surprise attack.

".....!!"

Viper immediately rolled on the ground. Thump! [The Prayer Sword] landed where Viper had been standing. The Prayer Sword immediately raised its head, scattering dirt, circling around Viper, and lunging in whenever there was an opening.

"Shit!"

Viper quickly stepped to dodge the attacks. But, whoosh! He couldn't avoid one slash that caught his ankle. Blood spurted from his ankle. Although not a fatal injury, it was still quite damaging.

"Really,"

Clang!

"You really are a damn Demonic Cultist, not holding back at all!"

Viper raised his aura to repel the sword. The sword flew away as if soaring through the air, then returned to circle around me, guarding me.

"Damn it! My foot hurts!"

"....."

Another sound of metal rang out.

While it wasn't a unique sound, and could be easily imitated with aura, I sensed some connection between Viper's joyful laughter and the metallic sound.

The reason he escalated our duel into a battle between the Demonic Cult and the Orthodox Faction.

'Is he confident he can win?'

No.

Perhaps.

'He's confident he can break me.'

Me, too. The Vice-lord title, and Heavenly Demon.

Just as I came here to shatter Viper, the Celestial Martial Guild Master, Liǎofàn, all three personas he embodied, he also came to break everything about me.

'Good.'

My heart won't stop racing.

'Good.'

What would my master say in such situations?

I recalled the face my master made, the smile, the sigh, the single word uttered after hearing the Head of the Martial Alliance's declaration of war.

So I said,

"Alright."

I lifted the corners of my mouth.

"I accept the challenge."

I briefly sheathed the [The Idol Sword], brought my fists together, and assumed a martial salute. Viper flinched but soon composed himself and assumed the same salute.

I couldn't explain why, but the smile never left my lips.

I was happy.

"May this 991st battle not shame the virtuous."

The Great Orthodox-Demonic War.

Even though a world of snowy fields perished, there are those who carry on the legacy of the Demonic Cult and the righteous path, ensuring that the 991st fight happens here, even after the world has been destroyed by snow.

I chose to view it as happiness.

"It's just..."

"Guild Master. I admire strong people, support the weak, want to make those in hell happy, and reach out to those still enduring here in this not-yet-hell."

"Sure."

"But I dislike those who speak without taking responsibility."

I grinned broadly.

"The stronger the person, the more I dislike them."

"....."

"I'll cut down anything petty, Liǎofàn."

"....."

Viper gulped.

Then, slowly, he smiled.

"Okay, Kim Gong-Ja."

In an instant.

I scattered four flying swords and wielded one Holy Sword, taking a step forward.

In the quiet forest.

Clang!

Suddenly, the sound of metal rang out.

Chapter 279:

Orthodox Faction

(4)

---

From the beginning, he was not a man who fit in with the Orthodox Faction.

-If you bend the metal there, what will happen? No, no, don't reverse it with aura. Look at this gentleman, okay?

Viper swung his hammer.

-If you're using aura to work, that's a hobby, not work. It's just playing around. Did you come here to play?

Clang!

Viper inhaled deeply. The flames from the furnace brightly illuminated his face. Drops of sweat fell, sizzling on the hot metal.

-Did you come here to play?

Clang!

Originally, he was a man who didn't fit the role of a blacksmith.

Hitting the metal, suddenly feeling a rhythm in his forearms, swinging the hammer as if dancing, or feeling his whole body trembling, releasing pent-up frustrations—there was none of that spirit.

-Wow, shit,

Clang!

-It's tough! This!

There's no spirit in work.

-I'm dying! Damn, why is this so hard!

-Dying? Don't worry. From what I see, you're far from death. If you were really close to dying, your eyes would start drooping. You, Sir... I'll just call you 'Sir.' Is that okay? You're still full of energy.

-It's tough!

-Work is always tough.

Clang!

-Just be humble. Ah, damn, it's hard. But this isn't the toughest job in the world.

-That's not very comforting.

-Then what kind of comfort do you want? Is there some miraculous magic spell that, upon hearing a few words, suddenly makes you feel comforted, makes hammering manageable, brightens your day, and makes every day enjoyable? Comfort usually isn't very comforting. It's just there to make things less tough.

-It's, it's tough....

Clang!

-Ahh....

Clang!

The area permeated with the sound of metal gradually reddened. From a clear blue sky at midday to an evening sunset stained with blood. Merchants unpacked their evening wares, and the streets filled not just with the sound of metal, but also various other noises.

-That's enough for now."

-Huff, huff! Haaaaaaah... huff, hah....

-Let's go eat.

The elf blacksmith was neatly dressed in a suit, as if he had just washed. Despite looking like he could casually stroll around, the elf's blood couldn't hide that he always intended to walk around stylishly when going out. Viper casually wiped off his sweat and accompanied the elf.

-Wow! Sir! Look over there!

On a worn street corner, several dancers were performing. Although there weren't many spectators, everyone watched the dance moves with faces full of enjoyment.

-Looks like that store hired a troupe for promotion! That must cost a pretty penny. They're really going all out for business.

-Ah... Is it like hiring a singer to perform?

-Let's go and listen! It's free!

Freebies are loved by everyone, whether they're the Countess or an elf.

Viper chuckled and, with a tired body, walked towards the dance floor.

-Woo! Ah, woo! Ah.

-Grrrrr, growl.

The actors on the makeshift stage in front of the store seemed to belong to a small troupe. There were either very young or very old actors.

Their dance was more about matching the rhythm than powerful moves, and they sang small love songs rather than epic tales of war. The music, somewhat slow, carried on the aura released by the actors, blending into the evening.

-.....

Viper crossed his arms in the front row.

The sunset, drunk on the day's blood, was particularly red. The red sunset stained the roofs, pillars, dirt roads, and cracks in the stone pavement.

-Woo, woo, woo, growl.

-Toot, toot, rrrrr, toot, toot.

This too.

This was quite nice as well.

-.....

It was strange.

Viper had seen several splendid performances. He had seen many martial dances by warriors of the Fire River Council. They were all tragic yet majestic, sorrowful yet beautiful. He had even shed tears. But why?

His heart's [self] slithered, shush, shush, its tongue flickering.

That heart's snake, which had always been silent during those grand performances,

-Ah, they are dancing.

Viper suddenly looked around. It was true. Other spectators, customers watching the performance, were moving their shoulders joyfully or inviting their partners to dance.

-Good wine! Cheap!

A store was selling red wine. It was a traditional Guruian grain wine, similar to beer.

-Chilled red wine from the waterway! Ah, thank you! Thank you!

The store clerks moved through the crowd like eels swimming deftly in a stream. It turned out that the store mainly sold simple food and red wine. The sound of selling and buying red wine mingled noisily, and the musicians from the troupe played even more passionately.

-I'll have another red wine! Here too! Two glasses of red wine!

The blacksmith, jumping in place, reached out.

-Yes! Two glasses of red wine coming up! Thank you!

-Hehe.

The blacksmith laughed, handing Viper a glass of red wine.

-This is the taste after a hard day's work. You're lucky, Sir. Enjoying a free performance and all.

-.....

-Drink up. Drink. Today, you didn't quite look like you were working, but I'll invest in your future. Everyone starts somewhere, right? Isn't that true?

-.....

Viper felt a strange, tingling emotion as he drank the red wine.

The wine, gulped down his throat, was... refreshing.

With one sip, a crisp wheat aroma burst forth in his throat. The cool, spicy wheat flavor instantly reached the tip of his head, making his nose twitch.

-Krrhh! Ah!

-How is it? Killer, right? I often come to this bar because the red wine here is just the best. There are plenty of good red wine breweries in Guru, but this place has the best value for money. Oh, Sir! You know how to drink!

-Here, uh. Another beer!

-Beer? What's this talk of beer? If you want beer, you need to go elsewhere. Anyway, hey waiter! Another red wine here!

The world became colorful.

The sunset-painted sky was like a palette of colored landscapes, and the guests chattering, drinking, and dancing underneath looked like angels. The sounds of dance and music drifting nearby seemed to be coming directly from [himself].

-.....What?

His body felt itchy.

-I usually like alcohol, but, hmm. Not this much... What's going on?

-What's up?

-Don't know.

-Ah. The Sir is drunk. Seeing how you drank, I thought you were a heavy drinker and kept ordering. Sigh. You're knocked out after just two glasses of red wine? Come on, come on. Sir. Wake up. You must be tired from work. If the day was tough, alcohol hits harder.

-I'm not knocked out... just, suddenly so happy....

Ding, dong, the music changed.

His heart was elated.

-Hmm.

Viper stood up. Or perhaps it was an inaccurate description. His [heart] stood up first. His body and limbs moved to support his heart, which couldn't stand on its own. The name, Viper, his head, his consciousness, were the last to rise.

-Hahaha.

-Surprise! Sir, what... Ah. Want to dance?

-Yes!

Viper laughed brightly.

Had he ever laughed so freely since he started his training?

The elf blacksmith chuckled and, as if used to it, took Viper's hand. Since there was a significant height difference between the elf and the dokkaebi, Viper had to bend over. But his face, even while bending, was filled with joy.

-Dancing with a ghost tribesman is a first for me.

-The song is great! Woo!

-.....Well, okay then.

Viper led his partner, humming and dancing, occasionally cheering up the troupe with compliments. The troupe danced more energetically with every compliment. As they danced, the aura matched the rhythm, creating beats and playing music along with the strings of aura.

-Whee!

-Great dancing! Great singing!

Other guests joined in with their support. Regardless of whether they knew how to use aura, everyone was tilting their glasses and dancing to the beat. There were even children clapping along. Boom! Clap! The sounds of the troupe's rhythm, boom! Clap! spread from the store to the streets, then from the streets to the intersections.

-Red wine for sale! Refreshing red wine!

-Whee!

-Actors' footsteps sound great! Good hand!

Smoke rose from various places in the village. It was a signal to bring families back from the battlefield known as the workplace. Workers saw the chimneys and left their jobs.

In single file, double file, quadruple file, quintuple file, the streets bustled with people returning home. At the edge of these roads, in a dimly lit bar, old troupes sold alcohol, sang songs, played music, and drank.

They danced.

-Whee!

It was like an outdoor club of sorts.

It doesn't require an expensive ticket. Just one glass of confidently sold red wine from the store. That's all it takes to listen to this old Blood Fire Troupe's performance. No dress code needed either. Customers who came straight from the workshop, those who put on a coat over their work clothes to look somewhat decent, or those who came shirtless as they were from work – all kinds of customers gathered, eventually humming with a glass in hand.

They danced.

-Ahh....

Viper firmly held the blacksmith's hand, which was as small as a rabbit's front paw, moving his face here and there, continuously looking at the surrounding scenery.

-It's beautiful.

-What is? The song?

-The song? No, not the song.... Just.... people drinking, laughing, singing along, everyone having fun and enjoying themselves....

-Wow..... You're really drunk, Sir. Now you're babbling nonsense.

-It's beautiful.

-.....

-How can it be this beautiful? The world.

Viper was shedding tears.

Not tears from his eyes, but from his [self], the snake. It was blood. Tears flowing from the heart, through the veins, reaching the tired calf from working all day, the knee joints, the back, the shoulders, the forearms, the palms, under the eyes, all over the body.

-Because work is tough.

-It feels like dying, wanting to die. Everyone does.

Viper, while shedding tears from his heart, with a smile on his face, led his partner here and there. The front of the store had already become a small square. Drunk dancers surrounded the Blood Fire Troupe. Sounds like "Another red wine here!" and "Yes, coming right up!" were not just noise but seemed like a part of the music, joyfully blending in.

-So, we drink to live. To have fun.

-Drinking, dancing, getting excited, music flowing. Then dancing again.

Viper lifted the small-bodied elf. Embracing him, he spun around. "Ooooooh!" sounds were heard from around, but Viper didn't hear them, nor did the elf wrapped in his arms.

-Then dance again. Work. Feel like dying. Dance again. Have fun. Beautiful. Work. Feel like dying, dance again, have fun, beautiful... Work. And work again. Want to die again, but become fun again.

Clang!

-Ah. I think I'm starting to understand now.

Viper hummed happily.

-Humans all work desperately. Working desperately, naturally, makes you want to die. Wanting to die, you find just enough fun to not die. You have to find it. Yeah, you have no choice but to dance.

Clang!

-Singing because it's tough, drinking because it's tough, eating out together because it's tough, dancing because it feels like dying. Ah, yes. There's no such thing as music for music's sake. Of course not. After working so hard that you want to forget the day, music becomes music only for those who have a day they want to forget. For those who don't have such days, it's nothing.

-What are you mumbling about..... Sir. Do you change when you're drunk?

-Ah.

Clang!

-I'm happy.

-.....

-The hammering was damn tough, but yeah. It'll be tough again tomorrow, but. Blacksmith. Aren't you happy now?

-.....

-Isn't life a bit fun now?

Originally, he was not a person who would fit into the Orthodox Faction..

-Yes.

Originally, he was an elf who didn't fit as a blacksmith.

-Of course, I'm happy. That's why I love the time when I'm not working.

There were many people who originally didn't fit in with something. Dilapidated stores, cool red wine, busy store clerks, those with the weariness of the day's work visibly staining their collars, the streets, crossroads, Guru, cities, every city, filled with workers exhausted from their day's work.

The luxury they have for a brief moment.

A glass of liquor. Delicious snacks. Nonsense with friends. To shave off, to lessen the dead spirit that almost killed them that day, just to be able to work again tomorrow.

Dancing.

-.....Everyone is alive.

-.....

-Life, it's tough enough to kill, but when you get past that moment, you can breathe for a while."

Viper wanted to protect that breath.

Righteousness is saying that the happiness of the common people is beautiful.

Righteousness is telling those who somehow finished a hard day's work to rest.

Righteousness is loving liquor, dance, and songs, but only for those who have worked and finished.

And righteousness is the Orthodox Faction's way.

-Blacksmith.

-.....Yes?

-Live long. Be careful of accidents....

Viper tapped the blacksmith's shoulder.

Staggering, he left the square where songs and dances flowed.

-Survive to the end. You too. I too....

-.....

-All of us.

As he left the square, the shadow of the dokkaebi was hidden by other crowds.

Slowly.

He became invisible.

The elf blacksmith was left alone, watching the back of someone who had disappeared into the sunset.

-Right.

Clang,

Viper was running.

-Dressing up and listening to the Blood Fire Troupe seriously, no wonder I couldn't feel anything, no matter how good the plays were. Ah, of course.

He ran.

Releasing the aura sealed for half a day, blood boiled throughout his body.

His vision brightened.

Clang, and the moment he leaped, Viper's feet were already stepping on the roofs of the village. People in the streets pointed at him, "Hey- Hey-", but they couldn't catch up with Viper's figure quickly disappearing with a taat, clang!

Viper breathed heavily.

-Originally, it's tough and feels like dying from working. Because it feels like dying, only then can you hear music and dance. To forget. To endure. Not to live happily, but to become happy to survive. To survive....

Clang!

-To survive.

From a certain point.

Whenever Viper stepped, whenever he stretched his aura in the air, a clang sound followed.

Clang!

Day 410.

Viper entered a Mountain Calamity Tribe's farm as a guest, working the land with the farmer's family for 2 years. The hardened ground was torn by the plow.

Clang!

Day 1503.

Viper joined an elf bank, working with money. Always hiding his origin, his boss, not knowing he was a ghost tribesman god, nagged at the back of his head.

Clang!

Day 2874.

Viper entered a noble's mine, wielding a pickaxe. Compared to when the Mountain Calamity Tribe enslaved people, mining conditions had improved a lot. Still, mining was tough work. Viper, gasping, struggled and swung his pickaxe.

Clang!

Day 7021.

Clang!

Day 14059.

Clang!

Day 19856.

Clang!

Day 22400.

-.....

Originally, he was not a person who would fit into the Orthodox Faction.

-Hmm.

Originally, he was not a man who fit the image of a lonely but highly skilled swordsman.

-Is this enough?

Originally, he was not a man who fit as a protagonist.

-Whew.

Standing on a mountain peak, Viper took a deep breath. The world he inhaled became blood circulating through his body – arms, shoulders, back, waist, thighs, calves, feet. Then slowly, he exhaled.

-Hoo....

In the distance.

A huge turtle monster, rising from the abyss and heading this way, looked monstrous enough to destroy the world. However, Viper did not care about the monster, not even sparing it a glance.

His focus was on humans.

-Come on, Kim Gong-Ja.

He was.

For the first time in a long time, having shed the guise of a ghost tribesman, in his own body, with his own arms, above all, with the voice in his [self]'s heart, he thrust a righteous fist into the air.

-Here lies the righteous path.

Clang!

A clang sounded.

-Fighting is work.

Clang!

-Work is naturally tough and hard.

Clang!

-Fighting you is really, among them, tough enough to die.

Clang!

-After this work...

Clang!

-Let's go to a place with good music and drink like hell!

Viper laughed.

With the Five Noble sects buried under the snow, the Ten Sect Alliance disappeared in the snowstorm, and even the Head of the Martial Alliance was broken by the sword in these times. The Demonic Heaven prevailed beyond the boundaries of the world, and songs of Baraya could be heard now, here in this snow-filled world left by the last of the righteous warriors of the Orthodox Faction.

The Celestial Martial Guild Master was laughing.

Chapter 280: Final Vote (1)

---

Inevitably, the Demonic Heavenly God Art is a demonic technique.

Clang!

Namgung Woon, Head of the Martial Alliance, mocked us as mere cultists. My master did not retort. Now, Viper, claiming to be a descendant of the Orthodox Faction, uttered the same mockery, but I too did not argue. I just smiled in response.

Clang!

We all know.

Those who blindly use the sword without knowing are mere novices who have just stepped into the world, those who wield the sword to know are intermediates, and those who hold the sword despite and because they know, are the masters.

We all know.

Clang!

That there are people in this world who, despite their difficult lives, manage to find small joys, enduring yesterday's pain and today's fatigue, surviving in their everyday life.

Clang!

They sometimes say they want to die or kill, but their murderous intent has not yet led to actual killing. They sometimes cry out in hardship, but their cries have not yet turned into screams.

Even if their happiness does not fully reach life, ending merely in an hour, half a day, a day's worth of joy.

I know there are numerous such people enduring everyday life in this world.

Clang!

Demonic Heaven cannot soothe those small joys.

The small and pretty flowers, the people of Red Dust I want to love, comfort, and kiss, are too many for the busy sky of Demonic Heaven to embrace.

Still in this world.

Clang!

There are too many screaming in this world,

Clang!

Too many eyes looking up to the heavens in hatred, bleeding.

Clang!

Those who starved to death, those who died dried up without water, those who couldn't escape the deep sea and were buried in water, those who had no place to run and froze surrounded by snowstorms, those who were bitten by poison and fell to the ground without even a chance to utter their last words, those whose limbs were gnawed away by illness with no means to cope, those beaten to death, those who burned to death, those who took their own lives.

Clang!

There are many.

Clang!

"That's right! Too many! Still, still, there are still too many things!"

Clang!

"Look, Celestial Martial Guild Master! If you still have one eye left, look!"

Clang!

"Do you really think all these countless screams will be subdued by the happiness you bring?”

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Fourth Form.

Sword of Frostbitten Death.

I swung my sword, which Viper barely, narrowly blocked. But blocking it was not the end. I had not only [The Idol Sword] but also [The Pity Sword], [The Prayer Sword], [The Sacrifice Sword], [The Salvation Sword], casting shadows, flying around from all directions. Swish! Swoosh! The demon swords rushed in, turning their blades whenever Viper showed an opening.

“Damn, shit, foot!”

Clang!

Viper, with almost miraculous movements, knocked away [The Pity Sword] aiming for his neck. But it wasn't perfect. The blade grazed his neck, and whoosh! A stream of blood spurted out.

“Heh, huff. Huh, haaaaaaa..... huff, huh, hoo, hooo...”

Viper staggered.

But even while staggering, he tightly gripped the swords in his hands.

"....."

He's already a wreck.

Though he kept talking nonstop as if nothing was wrong, there seemed to be no part of his body left unscathed. Viper was covered in wounds.

Without a superhuman will, he would have fallen twice over by now.

“Ha.”

That’s why I smiled.

“Celestial Martial Guild Master. That's why you can't defeat me. Do you understand? Even if you continue to fight for a hundred, a thousand years, you can never defeat our Demonic Heaven.”

“That's... probably true.”

“You had the audacity to recite the phrase from The Great Orthodox-Demonic War and call me the Heavenly Demon, a fight already concluded with the Demonic Cult's victory. And yet you still claim it's not over and challenge me to a duel. I secretly expected something that could captivate me, if not a heaven-tearing move, at least a martial art from someone who has committed such audacity and rudeness.”

“I am doing it...”

Viper breathed heavily.

His wounds and bleeding ate away half of his breath, making his words sound faint.

"What?"

“I am, already, doing it...”

“What do you mean?”

‘One.’

Click.

Holding the sword hilt tightly with both hands, Viper straightened up.

As he slightly lifted his stooped posture, Viper’s single eye became visible.

“Me, right now. I’m working. 2nd Heavenly Demon, you jerk.”

"....."

Viper’s eye was fiercely blazing.

“Working...”

“A job is also a karma. It’s fate. Weighing down on life, even though I wonder how I ended up here, it’s the karma clinging to me. There are so many jobs in this world, and each profession has its own fucking karma. Kim Gong-Ja.”

“Yes.”

“What do you think my job is?”

I frowned.

“Your job is being the Celestial Martial Guild Master.”

“Right. But that’s more of a side job. You’re nominally the Vice-Guild Master of the 5 great guilds, but your real job is being the Heavenly Demon, right? Or maybe the Family Head of that King of Death Family or something. Huh? Recently, I’ve got a new job. Do you know what it is?”

"....."

“It’s to endure you.”

For a moment, I couldn’t comprehend his words.

“...What?”

“Enduring you. Enduring the existence called the Heavenly Demon. That's the job I chose.”

Viper readied himself, holding the sword hilt.

There was not a single part of his body – ankles, thighs, waist, back, neck – that wasn’t wounded.

Yet, the way Viper stood on his two legs was firm, and the way he held the sword was orderly.

“How about that? Interesting, isn’t it?”

"What on earth..."

“As you say, Kim Gong-Ja. There are too many grievances in the world. Too many silent screams buried. As long as these sounds echo, the heavens will be a faded Demonic Heaven, and you, swinging your sword under it, will continue to be the Heavenly Demon. But, you see... However...”

Tat. Grains of soil shattered.

Stepping on the ground, Viper charged towards me.

“There are plenty of people who endure life’s hardships!!”

Clang!

I controlled [The Sacrifice Sword] to block Viper’s breakthrough. Even though [The Sacrifice Sword] was a shadow sword not made of steel, when the two swords crossed, a sharp metallic sound rang out.

Viper plunged in.

“There are people who starved to death! Yes! I know! There are so many unfairly dead people, I know! It’s sad. Sometimes it brings tears. But, Kim Gong-Ja! Regardless of whatever damned deaths occurred last night, we must carry our karma and head out again today! Do you understand!”

I summoned another demon sword.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Fifth Form.

Sword of Noxious Death.

[The Prayer Sword] swiftly exploited Viper's vulnerability. Whoosh! Blood gushed from the back of his right hand. Gagging, Viper groaned. He cursed. But his hand gripping the sword didn't even flinch.

“I can't just keep crying!”

Clang!

With a steady hand that did not flinch, Viper swung his sword.

“The weight of a day is heavy! So heavy that sometimes it feels suffocating! My heart pounds before starting the day, wondering if I can endure today, and even after finishing work, it gets crushed thinking about tomorrow's work! Do you understand! My heart is choked, beaten, and crushed every day, it's tight even to spare a place in my heart to cry for you guys!”

Clang!

“I'm sorry!”

Clang!

“Sorry for being born in this world, for not being able to live a day without shouldering karma, for having to earn each day's living. Damn you, Demonic Cult! I'm sorry! I'm truly sorry!”

Clang!

“So, stop blaming us!”

Clang!

“How long should we keep apologizing?”

"....."

“Until there's no one left screaming out in hunger? Until that day comes? Shall we apologize until then? Shall I throw away the karma I'm bearing now, plunge into your Demonic Heaven, follow your doctrine, and strive until not a single person dies of hunger?”

"....."

“It's tough.”

"....."

“I don't have the strength. I don't have the courage. Right now, the only thing securing my daily bread is this hammer in my hand. I've just gotten used to hammering to make ends meet. All I know is this much thievery, barely surviving with it. I can't drop everything and run to the place where your screams are heard.”

“Every day is filthy, Heavenly Demon. It's unbearably hard.”

Viper swung his sword.

Clang!

“I once helped a farmer with his work. It was the season when the wheat fields rippled like gold in the distance, with golden grains on every ear of wheat. But then we heard a typhoon was coming.”

Clang!

“Preparations and responses were useless. We had to abandon the swept-away wheat and throw only a few saved stalks into the barn. Those few stalks rolling around in the barn were the entire fortune the family had to survive the year. But it's a relief, right? At least we saved something. The farmer smiled awkwardly... Then we heard from the neighboring village. An old couple who couldn't evacuate in time were swept away by the typhoon, crushed to death under their own roof.”

Clang!

“It's sad.”

Clang!

“How can it not be sad when people die unjustly? We help when we can. There are times when tears come. But.....”

Clang!

“We still have to work.”

Clang!

“Go to the forge, to the fields, to the bank, to the mines, linking yesterday and today just like yesterday, and today like today, barely connecting to tomorrow, fearing when it will end, we immerse ourselves in this karma.”

Finally.

There was a gap.

Avoiding my swung sword, Viper stepped back, creating distance. I didn't pursue him. Naturally, a small clearing formed between Viper and me.

"....."

"....."

Many people were watching our duel.

Black Dragon Witch, Sword Saint, Heretic Inquisitor, Countess, Paladin, and Vampires, Pure Humans, Mountain Calamity Tribe, Fairy Tribe, Gill Fish Tribe* who had followed their parents. The tribes enjoying the festival across the jungle had now quietly turned to watch the duel of the two warriors.

*The Gill Fish Tribe is being renamed to Gill Fish Tribe. Apparently the hanja in my version of the korean source text was a mistake and the author fixed it later on.

Ester and Uburka. A thousand followers of mine, too.

Their silence was denser than the quiet of the forest.

“Kim Gong-Ja.....”

Viper's breath was terribly disordered.

He struggled several times with my name, mixing it with gasps and heavy breaths.

But he finally pronounced my name correctly.

"Heavenly Demon."

"....."

“Your existence threatens us.”

I...

Gripped the hilt of the Holy Sword tightly.

“Is that so?”

“Yes. We... we lack even the tears to shed for ourselves. It's tough. There are so many who've never cried for themselves. They don't die even when they want to, don't cry even when they want to. Just... because they need to survive. But... because of you, we have to shed tears even for strangers we don't know.”

"....."

“Fine. Initially, it can be good. It's a tragedy that could happen to us too... they are just like us. But, we can't keep crying forever. It's hard to continue crying. We, the people,”

Are.

“Busy with work.”

"....."

“We drink to catch our breath, play, dance, walk the streets, smile foolishly at the seasons turning red... That's the happiness we're barely clinging to, not to die. How precious that happiness is.”

Viper pointed his sword at me.

“Don’t ruin that happiness.”

“When you come, the world becomes chaotic. Heavenly Demon.”

I remained silent.

‘That is true.’

And I understood.

‘That's how one falls into demonic obsession.’

When I see people ignoring the death of a person here,
Demonic Heaven's blood boils.

When I see people just passing by where someone died here,
Demonic Heaven's fangs sharpen.

When people ignore it, pretend they don't know, later claim they really didn't know, and finally show sympathy, saying, 'Was there really such an incident?' - when I see such people, Demonic Heaven's eyes turn red.

Even though I know they are all ordinary humans.

'I want to kill them all.'

Murderous Intent arises.

There was a time when my master fell into demonic obsession. Then, with a bright smile, my master slaughtered all the humans in sight.

-Ho ho. Are these the Orthodox warriors who came to assassinate the master?

-Good. Come at me. Let's share our swords.

Because Demonic Heavenly God Art is demonic to the bone.

Ignoring screams makes one a bystander, not helping death makes one an abandoner, making no one in this world unrelated to the screams and deaths, slaughtering and killing every human.

That danger, that possibility, is always there.

“...Still.”

I opened my lips.

“I can't stop. No, I won't stop. If there are forgotten screams out there, I will collect them. And I will tell those who didn't hear those screams.”

“To make them feel guilty?”

“To make them see the world.”

I said.

“This is the world.”

Four shadows encircled me as if guarding me.

[The Salvation], [The Sacrifice], [The Prayer], [The Pity] surrounded me.

“So, ascend the tower with me.”

Ester, the family Advisor, stood behind me.

Uburka, the Chief Warrior, crossed his arms, and Kim Yul, the Shadow, leaned against a tree.

A thousand followers also hid in the forest shadows, forming a formation.

"....."

Slowly.

Viper curled his lips.

“I'll be your spectator, Heavenly Demon.”

And he said.

“When your Demonic Heaven becomes too vast to caress the little petals, I'll block your path and point out that there's a blossom here.”

"....."

“When you draw your sword to scream in this world, I'll judge and advise whether the people living there can still bear those screams, whether they have the strength left, whether your screams in their oppressed lives will become an additional burden, whether you should wield the sword of Demonic Heaven now, what reasons there are not to. All of it.”

Viper.

“I'll always be by your side, working. As a representative of mortals. I may not become the protagonist or even a main character following the protagonist. But if the day comes when you fall into demonic obsession and dye the world red.”

Celestial Martial Guild Master.

“I will be right beside you to strike at your neck.”

Liǎofàn.

“That’s when I finally defeat you. Understand? No need to hurry. Until the day you lose... until you’re devoured by the Demonic Heaven. It’s enough just to watch you from your side.”

Liǎofàn smiled.

“Kim Gong-Ja. I’ll make you my karma.”

The last warrior of the Orthodox Path left by the snowfield pointed his sword.

“See if I’m qualified for that, test me all you want.”

Chapter 281: Final Vote (2)

---

Plum blossoms fell.

They were flowers, not cold snowflakes.

---

“Alright.”

I spoke and raised my sword.

“Let’s test it.”

I charged.

Swinging.

My sword collided with Viper's blade.

Clang...!

The sound of metal rang out.

Clang...!

The sound of metal rang out.

Clang...!

Viper's shoulder flinched, then suddenly, with a pop, his coiled muscles unfurled, splitting the sword path.

It's like an illusion of several sword paths striking simultaneously.

'No, it's not a sword path, but a choice.'

Drawing out Aura to create multiple afterimages of the sword, asking me which one I will respond to.

Depending on which one I choose, the change in the sword path will be completely different.

And none of those changes will be favorable to me.

‘Unrivalled Martial Artist.’

That was probably the skill Viper gained when he first entered the tower.

That ability to read predicted paths, which I briefly encountered in my master’s world.

“Then...”

I lifted my sword.

“There's no need to choose!”

It wasn't just one sword.

The sword strike Viper swung from the upper left was countered by [The Pity Sword].

“One!”

The strike aiming for my waist was blocked by [The Prayer Sword].

“Two!”

The strike targeting my wrist was stopped by [The Sacrifice Sword].

“Three!”

The attack diving for my neck was deflected by [The Salvation Sword].

Thus, I blocked all of Viper's attacks. After tying up the opponent's hands, I dove into Viper's embrace.

“Haat!”

I swung the [The Idol Sword] in my hand.

"Eut–"

Viper stepped back.

He’s probably trying to create distance and regroup.

Sorry, but I won’t give you that leisure. I charged ahead.

Swerving.

"-----Huh!"

And at that moment, I saw a smile flicker across Viper’s lips.

“Hryaaaah!”

Clang! The metallic sound rang out.

The [The Idol Sword] I swung was blocked by something.

It wasn't Viper's sword.

Viper's wrist---the glove wrapped in Aura stopped it.

Not only that, he turned his hand around, gripping the blade.

And pulled.

“Liǎofàn,”

Viper's single eye, whoosh, came closer.

“Aren't you a swordsman,”

“I'll tell you two things,”

Our voices intersected, and at the next moment, they were drowned out by a loud explosion.

Boom.....!

The sonic boom that occurred as Viper's other fist brushed past my ear swallowed up all other sounds.

-This is also one of the fine arts of swordsmanship,

Thus, Viper's words were conveyed only by the movement of his lips.

-I mainly use the sword, just because it suits me and looks cool.

In the moment his fist brushed past, Viper was already moving into the next attack.

Pulling the gripped sword, he aimed his bent knee at my abdomen. If I let go of the sword and step back, he'll swing it around and hit my shoulder in a cross-cut. Then should I brace my legs and stand firm? No. Then he would straighten his bent knee and strike at my solar plexus.

-Right, I see.

I see it.

I feel it.

-I also handled many weapons simultaneously when controlling the Seven Ghost Heroes.

-Yes.

Viper's intentions. My predictions of his responses. The next actions based on those predictions. The pure purpose underpinning all of it.

-From a scythe to a fist, there's no weapon I can't handle!

We are now 'conversing.'

-Yes.

Swimming in the flow of time created by Aura, I glanced at the number of cards Viper could play.

I tried counting but soon gave up.

-That's a lot.

Dozens.

Even counting the traps waiting to be triggered, there are hundreds.

In a fleeting moment, from my left, right, behind, all around, and beyond, I felt Viper's intentions and murderous intent.

-Wow.

It's a literal human wave tactic.

Seven Ghost Heroes, Twelve Winged Generals, Seventy-two Demon Kings, One Hundred and Eight Arhats... Whatever it is, it's different from the harmony I once spread by controlling numerous bodies with a single will.

Spreading numerous wills with one body.

That's why the one in front of me is yet not Liǎofàn.

-That is really a lot!

The blacksmith-like fist aiming at me, the farmer's sickle-like hand blade, the gardener's scissor-like, the fisherman's net-like countless attacks unfold towards me.

-Right, give it your all.

I will also do my utmost to defeat you.

No, to defeat you all.

‘Let's go, Hwiya.’

As I leaped into the pulling blade, I also swung my fist. Was that the right answer? Strength drained from Viper's sword-holding hand.

‘Resonate with my heart.’

The moment my fist cuts through the air, I wish.

‘The Torn Goddess's Salvation.’

Among the four swords floating in the air, [The Salvation Sword] vibrated intensely.

[Activating skill.]

A secret technique once possessed by Constellation Killer.

To forget memories, drawing power equivalent to the weight of the forgotten memories.

The more the past is discarded, the more the current memories die. Since I promised Raviel not to recklessly throw away my life, I try not to use [The Torn Goddess's Salvation] unless it's a moment when I must exert all my strength.

Like right now.

‘The Salvation Sword.’

I swung the sword.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The First Form.

Sword of Starving Death.

The Salvation Sword wildly leaped in the air. “Kuh!” The blacksmith-like fist coming from my right repelled far away. One, two, three, four lives joined, but they could not withstand [The Salvation Sword].

I too was fiercely consuming Aura.

But.

‘I discard the memories of the four attacks I just repelled.’

Suddenly, my vision cleared.

My heart beated. The depleted Aura was replenished. My steps lightened, and my gestures quickened.

Glancing to the right, although surrounded on all sides, that area alone is clearly empty. Looking closer, four lives are groaning and rolling on the ground.

Although I can't remember how it happened, why it happened, and what it meant was clear.

‘Okay.’

My right side was open.

‘The Sacrifice Sword.’

Then the next thing to do was clear.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Second Form.

Sword of Parched Death.

From my left, [The Sacrifice Sword] struck. Groans and screams rang out. The attack approaching from the left was blocked.

‘I discard the memory of the attack I just blocked.’

My left side was open.

‘The Prayer Sword.’

Look.

Celestial Martial Guild Master.

I am giving it my all right now.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Third Form.

Sword of Submerged Death.

You are not an insignificant existence to me.

How could I wield the sword of Demonic Heaven against someone who means nothing to me? How could I forget memories, moment to moment? How could I scrape my soul, collect each piece of flesh torn from wounds, and form it into a stroke of the sword?

‘The Pity Sword.’

You said you would stop me.

You said you would take me as your karma.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Fourth Form.

Sword of Frostbitten Death.

I am fully handling such a you.

To be all-out means my life is laid upon my sword.

I wonder what excuse I will give to Raviel. I can't say I didn't break our promise since I didn't die. How can I show Raviel such shamelessness, stubbornly sticking to the literal meaning of words?

Right?

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Fifth Form.

Sword of Noxious Death.

I am conscious of the Guardian Spirit's gaze. This gentleman. He has become much more serious since I developed Demonic Formations Art. He spends more time watching me than talking to me. He's started to see me as a more equal warrior, which pleases me but also keeps me anxious. What does the Guardian Spirit think of the swordsmanship I display?

Right?

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Sixth Form.

Sword of Plague Death.

I think of my master. I recall the decisive battle my master had with the Head of the Martial Alliance. At that time, my master fought even to the point of breaking her life force, and wherever she stepped, plum blossoms bloomed and flowed.

The world devoured my master's life force and blood, blooming a few petals.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Seventh Form.

Sword of Contusing Death.

That level is needed to convince the opponent.

Only at that level can I cut you down.

Can I even reach that level with a tip of my finger or a single finger,

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Eighth Form.

Sword of Scorching Death.

I am worried.

Because you make me worry about my love, my friendship,
my admiration.

You cannot be a mere existence to me.

Right.

‘The left is clear.’

Gone.

‘The right is clear.’

Nothing to hinder.

‘The rear is empty too.’

No one to grab my nape.

'Then.'

The only place left is the front.

My path ahead.

Left, right, rear, all sides cleared, only the path to Viper's body remains open.

'I'll go ahead.'

I step forward.

'Piercing through the entire life you have lived.'

One step.

I recalled the swords sent to block the incoming lives. The Salvation, The Sacrifice, The Prayer, The Pity, four swords quickly gathered, circling close to me.

‘I will cut your heart.’

Three steps.

The four swords scattered like iron dust. The Aura used to maintain the Flying Ki Sword Technique was withdrawn. Instantly, my vision brightened and blood boiled in my body.

Towards me, an accountant’s pen, a vegetable vendor’s basket, a drunkard’s bottle, countless everyday objects from countless people flew, but...

‘Good.’

I stomped the ground with a determination to face all of it.

"Celestial Martial Guild Master!"

My voice burst out.

The long night subsided, the shadows cast by the forest turned pale, and as the leaves trembled coolly in the dawn light, my lion's roar resounded through the jungle.

“Viper!”

Suddenly.

Something seemed to flow where I stepped.

“Liǎofàn!”

Three steps.

My feeling that something flowed was not an illusion.

With each step, a few petals flow from the ground I stepped on.

It was just a brief flutter at the bottom of my vision, not like the master and the Head with plum blossoms blooming with each step, not with flowers spreading where the sword passes, not turning the surroundings into a garden, but merely a few white petals briefly passing between Viper and me.

Demonic Heavenly God Art.

The Ninth Form.

Sword of Self Death.

Four steps.

My sword cut through a petal.

"-----"

The sound of inhaling.

A panting breath was at the tip of my sword.

~.....

The petal, cut by the blade, silently split in two. A white line divided left and right, slowly opening my view. On one side, Liǎofàn with his black eye patch appeared, on the other, Liǎofàn's left eye.

The blade, stopped beside Liǎofàn's neck.

No.

It had to stop.

"....."

My heart.

At my solar plexus, Liǎofàn's fist rested.

~.....

~.....

Because of it being a bit late to stop, the place where my blade halted was shallowly cut, a tiny bead of blood trickled down the blade.

Because of it being a bit late to stop, the place where Liǎofàn's fist halted was slightly sunken, blood trickled down his chin from a cut lip.

"....."

I couldn't swing my sword any more. The next moment my heart would burst.

He couldn't thrust his fist any more. The next moment his neck would fly off.

Knowing this, we naturally stopped.

"Ah...."

"How, how could this..."

“Incredible.”

The forest swayed.

Again, not only hunters were spectators in this forest. The tribes following the hunters thronged, especially our King of Death Family’s retainers were attentively watching the martial field from the shaded forest.

A forest of people.

With such a scale, it's not just people in the forest; the forest is made of people.

Receiving everyone's gaze, I first casually said.

“I even defeated the Sword Saint.”

A corner of the forest twitched. Probably the Sword Saint.

Viper casually replied.

“I beat that old man too. A long time ago. In the past.”

Sure enough, the Sword Saint twitched again.

I laughed.

“You said you lost an eye.”

“That doesn't mean I lost.”

“What? So the Sword Saint is just a measuring stick for combat power? A complete cliché.”

“He's an old man.”

“Isn't there some kind of rejuvenation chance like in stories?”

“Ah. Suddenly becoming a silver-haired young boy, right? Though it's a cliché, it's possible.”

“No, I was thinking more of a young man or uncle. A young boy? What are you talking about... It's kind of upsetting me...”

“I'm sure it's not as upsetting as me!?”

The last shout was from the Sword Saint.

I laughed. Liǎofàn also laughed. Blood flowed with that laughter. Droplets of blood fell to the ground with a plunk.

"Ugh...."

And then, both of us collapsed simultaneously.

Chapter 282: Final Vote (3)

---

A shout was heard.

"Family Head!"

"Viper!"

Until now, the spectators had been quietly watching our fight. Although the Sword Saint had shouted earlier, that was just getting back at Viper, which deserved respect. It was proper etiquette for outsiders to quietly step back during a duel.

But now that the duel had concluded, they rushed in urgently.

"Stop!"

"You're the last ones who should be moving!"

And those people immediately divided into two groups, facing off against each other.

On one side stood the King of Death Family, led by Ester. She had been the Demon King of Autumn Rain, Preta, a daughter, and now a family Advisor of our lineage, always ready to counsel me right or wrong.

On the other side stood the Ghost Tribe, led by a figure in a white helmet and full-body suit. It was the leader of the 256 True Color Ghost Troop that had joined at the end of the Dragon Resistance.

"What are you blocking! A bunch of clowns dressed in color-coordinated costumes!"

"And you guys, where are you headed to play cards? All in black. You guys are simply our RGB code 000000 ~The Real Black-."

"Even lacking sense in making aliases!"

"And what's your alias?"

"I was once called the Saintess of the Wilderness, the Demon King of Autumn Rain, and Preta. Now, I am known as the Advisor of the King of Death Family!"

"Uh, what... that's actually kind of cool..."

The leader of the Ghost Troop hesitated while scratching the back of his helmet, but Ester paid no mind.

So, I had to step in and stop Ester.

"Ester. Let it be."

"No, Family Head! I cannot!"

Her immediate objection felt like rebellion. Slightly shocked, I lowered my head, and Ester glared at the Celestial Martial Guild Master.

"The Celestial Martial Guild Master's words to you, Family

Head, are arrogant and disrespectful to the point of being unbearable."

"....."

"Always the possibility of you going astray? Ha. Falling into demonic obsession, slaughtering civilians and commoners indiscriminately, erasing all the screams in the human world as if they never existed, slaughtering all humans, gathering only those worthy of survival to create a small paradise. That's what the Celestial Martial Guild Master is talking about as your danger."

"Right."

Viper barely propped himself up on his palms, then slid on the grass and fell back into the mud.

"Damn it...."

Feeling embarrassed, he gradually calmed his breath.

He said,

"You're right. I think you, all of you Demonic Cult bastards, are capable of falling into demonic obsession at any time, causing an unprecedented massacre."

".....You."

Ester gritted her teeth.

"How long have you been observing the Family Head? Without knowing the people around the Family Head, what kind of people they are, and with what resolve they have taken up the lineage's flag. Despite all of us swearing to assist the Family Head with our lives and honor! Yet still..."

"It's not about 'yet still.'"

Viper coughed, clogging his neck wound with mud, but it didn't stop the bleeding.

"It's exactly that."

".....What?"

"You won't be able to stop your Family Head if he falls into demonic obsession."

Ester clenched her fists.

"Ha. I may have fallen, but I am the Demon King of Autumn Rain. When my tears become raindrops, thousands of ogres, orcs, goblins, and numerous monsters turn into raindrops and form an army. A bit of elevation in skill level doesn't compare to a mere swordsman."

"Yeah, you guys are strong... damn strong."

Viper coughed out blood.

Then he smirked.

"But can you stop the Family Head if he falls into demonic obsession?"

"Yes. Of course. Even if it costs my life..."

"No, that's not it. Imagine the specific situation. Did you really hear what I said? Huh? We're talking about your Family Head, Kim Gong-Ja."

Viper looked around.

Like a tired swordsman who sat in the middle of the Colosseum, shoulders drooping.

"Who is Kim Gong-Ja? Huh? Who is the Heavenly Demon of our era? Take a look. He didn't fall into demonic obsession even when his master died. He just accepted it as sadness. Why did the master have to die when there are so many people deserving death in the world, huh? He didn't even let out a roar of anger. He just... just mourned while sending her off. Actually, this guy is tough."

Sitting in the Colosseum of the jungle, Viper raised his voice.

"Even if the world ends or the heart of his most beloved woman is torn apart, ah, he's fine! He never falls into demonic obsession. Holding onto his sanity, thinking if he lets go, he's nothing, whatever hellish event befalls, he never falls into demonic obsession."

Clap, clap, clap.

Viper clapped his hands. Despite the wounds on his hands, already bandaged, every clap made blood ooze from the not yet healed wounds.

"Such impressive patience. His level of controlling his mind is almost superhuman."

"....."

"Lady, what on earth would it take for Kim Gong-Ja to fall into demonic obsession?"

Silence ensued.

"He's seen the world end countless times, so that won't do. He's seen the world end in especially horrible ways. That won't work either. So what would it take? Truly... when human malice, combined, crushed, and so concentrated that just being close or smelling it makes you think, [Ah, this is hell]... Only that might do it. Only then, our Family Head, the Heavenly Demon of the Demonic Cult, might finally lose his mind."

Viper chuckled.

"Then, you. All of you retainers. Could you stop Kim Gong-Ja?"

"....."

"Would you want to?"

"....."

"What kind of hell will you see then? I don't know. I can't even imagine. But if it's hell horrifying enough for Kim Gong-Ja to lose his sanity... and then, if he tries to kill all those who created and ignored that hell..."

Viper glanced around.

Advisor Ester, Chief Warrior Uburka, Shadow Kim Yul, Head Steward Silvia Evanair. Even the Sword Saint, who wasn't officially part of the family but volunteered as a bodyguard.

"Could you all... stop Kim Gong-Ja?"

“We are...”

“Rather, it seems like you'd follow Kim Gong-Ja to kill those bastards who created that hell. Flipping your lids.”

"....."

“In other words, the entire lineage, the entire doctrine, would fall into demonic obsession and massacre the entire world. Wow, what a picture.”

Viper laughed lightly.

“Among you are a former Constellation, a current active Constellation, a hunter who earned an alias for slicing up Constellations, an Apostle who almost destroyed the world with the power of Constellations. The rest aren't ordinary either. The elites of the Demonic Cult who survived the end of the world. The elite! Nearly a thousand subordinates capable of at least high-level Demonic Arts....”

Thud.

Viper picked up a stone and tossed it.

It fell in front of Ester.

“Looks like an easy force to destroy a world, right?”

"....."

“If the Heavenly Demon falls into demonic obsession, it’s natural for the entire family to follow suit, and if you all, fully obsessed, roam the tower, then that’s the end of the world. The end.”

Thud.

The second stone tripped up in front of Uburka’s front paw.

And then.

“King of Death.”

Thud.

“Heavenly Demon.”

Thud.

“Hey, Kim Gong-Ja.”

Thud.

“You need me.”

"....."

“Without me, you’re doomed.”

"....."

“When you feel like you’re about to go mad, when you think, ‘How can someone create such a hell? If you’re human, shouldn’t you at least do this much?’ When you start to get enraged, when your heart races and blood rushes, turning your body red with anger.”

Thud.

A small stone flew and tapped near my heart, just where Viper had pressed his fist earlier.

Looking over, Viper was grinning.

“I’ll be there to restrain you.”

"....."

“If you can’t be restrained, I’ll kill you.”

So that's it.

And the moment I fall into demonic obsession and am executed by Viper, the Orthodox Faction wins.

No.

It would mean the defeat of the Demonic Cult.

“Ha.”

I laughed.

“What a long... a battle that will take so long... 10 years? 20 years? 30 years? Maybe even centuries. Liǎofàn. Are you proposing a martial contest that lasts for centuries?”

“That’s right.”

Viper laughed.

“From my perspective, it’s like getting a contract job that lasts centuries, so thank you.”

Hmm.

Right.

“Alright, Liǎofàn.”

Ester looked up at me.

“Family Head.....?”

“Ester. There’s no time limit in a martial contest to begin with. To determine whether Demonic Cult or the Orthodox Faction is right, Master and the Head of the Martial Alliance had to fight 990 martial contests. Even as the world was ending, they continued their contests, yet no decisive outcome was reached. There’s no need to rush.”

Ester took a deep breath. Then, as if spitting fire, she said,

“Family Head, you will never fall down the wrong path.”

“Why do you think so?”

“Well, because I have already walked down that path.”

I thought of the clouds mixed with ashes, of the rain pouring down red.

Yes.

That's right.

“Thank you.”

“So even if you seem to be straying, we will all unite to persuade you, grab you by the scruff of the neck if necessary, and pull you back.”

“I trust you.”

“There's no need for someone like him, though.”

“But still, I might fall down the wrong path.”

I patted Ester's head.

Then I looked at Viper, who was roughly wiping his mud-covered face with his hands.

“Liǎofàn.”

"....."

“Thank you.”

I bowed my head.

“For your effort for me. For spending time to defeat me. I really appreciate it.”

"....."

“You said you were jealous of me, but it wasn’t an ugly jealousy. You didn’t slander me. You didn’t plot to harm me. You just looked at me straight, acknowledged your jealousy, and tried to beat me. I think... you are beautiful.”

"....."

“Rather, it’s embarrassing for me to think that my Flying Ki Sword Technique would naturally extinguish your jealousy. You had already overcome your jealousy long ago. You’re incredible.”

I stood up. It was hard to breathe due to the sunken chest where the fist had hit, but I endured and walked towards Viper.

"....."

Seeing me approaching, Viper seemed a bit tense.

‘Yes.’

I know.

What to say at this moment, at this time.

‘It’s inevitable to feel tense.’

Facing the person you’ve envied, the person you’ve admired, finally coming face to face, meeting at the same eye level, what would you want to hear from them?

What do they desperately want to hear?

What do they need?

As someone who envied and admired Yoo Soo-Ha more than anyone, I know.

“Liǎofàn.”

I lightly tapped his shoulder.

“You’re quite a madman yourself.”

“.....”

“I don’t dislike good madmen. I like them. You even thrust your fist into my heart... really, you’ve worked hard.”

"....."

"You were like the protagonist."

I smiled broadly.

"But if you think that's enough to cut my neck when I fall into demonic obsession, you're far from enough. Train harder. Don't neglect your practice."

Liǎofàn made a baffled face.

"Look at this guy talking. If someone saw this, they'd think you just won?"

"Hey. Think about the situation. When I fall into demonic obsession, my combat power rises, you know."

"What kind of calculation is that..."

Liǎofàn laughed helplessly. I also sat down in front of him and laughed.

“Let’s have a drink.”

Soon someone brought drinks. The cups were prepared, and they were filled with liquor.

Then a petal fluttered from a branch and settled on the rim of my cup.

[Counting complete.]

The observing tribe had made their decision.

[Option 2 Votes: 00.00%.]

[Option 1 Votes: 100.00%.]

[Stage Clear.]

Perhaps what they had been watching was not the stage, but the transparent tears that flowed in someone’s eye.

“Yeah, let’s have a drink, Kim Gong-Ja.”

He said.

“You crazy bastard.”

Thus.

[The 47th floor has been cleared.]

The last vote was completed.

Chapter 283: Final Vote (4)

---

We held a banquet.

It was almost an instant clear of the 40th to 47th floors, and Viper had returned much stronger than expected from his solitary training. It was more than enough reason to celebrate. We, the leaders of the 5 great guilds, no longer regard a comrade's rapid growth with caution or fear. Like good friends, we simply congratulated him with pure hearts.

Very purely, indeed.

“For you, the Sword Saint! I specially made my signature milk cocktail.”

“Stop it! Stop! Elder Sword Saint! You know nothing about cocktails! You just want to enjoy the atmosphere of a cocktail bar but don’t understand the taste, so you just keep drinking milk like a kitsch dandy, using me as your sacrificial lamb... Pfft!?”

“Here, drink. It’s a cocktail made by a battle power gauge. I thought plain Kahlua milk would be boring, so I mixed in durian juice and espresso, then added milk. Isn’t this place similar to a seaside resort in the jungle? I’m going to measure your romanticism.”

“Suck... Ugh, ugh! Huk, huk, ugh!”

“Hoho, romanticism 1 million... 2 million... 5 million... 53 million... It’s rising. Being young is great. An old battle power gauge like me just needs to die.”

“You crazy old man, has the Medicine King infected you!?”

Such a purely chaotic scene.

“You guys really never grow up... Is there something wrong with your brain development...?”

Black Dragon Witch shook her head and enjoyed a simple drinking session with the Paladin. The neatly laid mat seemed to give off a vibe that said people with below-average intelligence should not approach. The Countess was also snuggling up to them on the mat, cooing 'nyangnyang'.

Peace. Elegance. Grace.

This was the true elegance of a drinking session, Black Dragon Witch seemed to be subtly showing off.

“One side is hell, meanwhile the other is paradise...”

I sipped my orange juice with a bitter smile.

Suddenly, a familiar voice popped up next to me.

“No. I think both sides are paradise.”

"....."

I turned my head.

A white-haired, doll-like face, embodying the ideal of a young girl – no, an idol – was right there.

“.....You always appear out of nowhere, Princess.”

“Yep! That's my specialty!”

The girl, clearing her throat, supported her waist with her hands.

[‘The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages’ manifests.]

The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages.

The guide for our journey from the 30th to the 49th floor.

Others know her as a Constellation, but she’s actually one of the Pillars, the highest authorities of the Tower, and most importantly, the true daughter of the Tower Master.

“Yaaaay— But really, it's amazing. Yep. The King of Death is amazing. I've praised him several times already, but still, he’s amazing! Yep yep! Definitely worthy of the candidate I had my eyes on!”

Thud.

The Princess casually sat next to me, smiling radiantly. Seeing her sneakily sitting next to me, I shifted a bit but still looked at her with wary eyes.

“What scheme are you plotting this time?”

“Nothing at all. Nothing! I just came to praise the King of Death.”

I sighed and drank my orange juice.

The daughter of a mother, a Constellation and a Pillar, laughed next to me, the sound of her voice carrying her inherent playfulness.

“I’m sincere about wanting to praise you. You, umm. You all really did well. I’ve been around various towers, but there’s never been one with such unanimous stage clearance like here.”

“There’s never been one?”

“Yep! The best case I've seen is when one species was completely ostracized. There's a saying, 'To make friends, create enemies first.' In that tower, the ascending candidates, the strategists, came up with a proven strategy. They agreed to make one species the scapegoat. Everything was the fault of that species. Flood? Their fault. Drought? Their fault. My life sucks? Actually, it's because of that species.”

"....."

“That's the [best case]?”

I looked at the Princess.

Every scream, hatred, and death in the Tower is embraced by the Tower Master, who feels all the pain on behalf of everyone.

That's not something a child who asked me to save her mother should say.

"Yeah."

The Princess munched on rice cakes.

“Because that one species, called the [Witch Clan], turned the tables, beat up the species they believed to be gods, the strategists, and even thrashed the other four strategists.”

"....."

Wow.

“Yes?”

“Yeah, yeah. Then they brainwashed the other species into slave soldiers and attacked the lower floors of the tower. They massacred all humans who were comfortably relying on the strategists. Humans were used for biological experiments. Happy ending, happy ending.”

The Princess smiled cheerfully.

“By the way, the [humans] I'm talking about are different from your [humans]. They looked like toads. Basically, the tables were turned, and those world's humans, who were treated like gods, suddenly became laboratory toads.”

“Goodness. Really...”

“Cool, right?”

The Princess continued munching endlessly on rice cakes with her cheeks puffing up like a hamster.

How can she still enunciate clearly while eating like that...

“That happened about 1000 years ago.”

Her eyes turned serious.

“You actually have a deep connection with them, King of Death.”

I blinked.

“Really?”

“Think about it.”

Her eyes suddenly became serious.

“You've met them before.”

"....."

Her playful nature always lingered around her, but her eyes were like untainted jewels, looking deeply into mine.

I couldn't recall immediately.

“People who conquered the tower 1000 years ago? How could I meet them? Even considering everything, the time difference is...”

“Just living simply, whether using Aura or Magic, it's common to live for thousands of years beyond the 50th floor. Isn't that obvious from Constellation Killer?”

Suddenly.

“.....Ah.”

The [hints] casually thrown by the Princess clicked together in my mind.

『Sword Emperor.』

『Huh?』

『150 years ago, you demolished one of the towers there, right?』

That was when I reached the 50th floor to meet Constellation Killer, using almost cheat-like methods.

The 50th floor was completely different from any stage I had experienced before - perilous and dominated by a fearsome [force].

『There used to be six towers.』

『But I demolished one.』

This [force] was entangled with the grudge of my Guardian

Spirit... the Sword Emperor.

A sworn enemy, so to speak.

So when I mimicked the Sword Emperor and shouted, this [force] immediately responded.

『Sword Emperorrrrrrrrrr!!』

The response was a bit intense, I recall.

『Sword Emperor, you've returned! I knew you would someday! Even when all the constellations announced your death, only we believed you, the bastard who wouldn't die even in death!』

『Possession or reincarnation? Doesn't matter! Either way is fine!』

『Kill him! We will kill you, Sword Emperor! We'll tear your soul to shreds and scatter it across the world, then defecate over it! Kill him! Kill!! Kill him now! In the name of the tower's history, chase him down to hell!』

I can't forget the sight of hundreds, thousands, tens of thousands of wizards flying towards us on broomsticks.

Shivering slightly at the memory, I turned to the Princess.

She was beaming innocently.

"....."

Hmm.

Let's summarize.

1. 1000 years ago, a species reversed roles with gods and humans, becoming the tower's protagonists.

2. Their name is [Witch Clan].

3. Coincidentally, for over 1000 years, the 50th floor has been dominated by a force ruling as the stage boss.

4. The name of this force is [Magic Tower].

5. The Witch Clan used the species that persecuted them as slaves or lab rats. A total of 6 species suffered this fate: 5 species that ostracized the Witch Clan and toads that were humans in that world.

6. Coincidentally, the Magic Tower consists of 6 towers.

"....."

So.

“The witches from the Magic Tower I met on the 50th floor are the Witch Clan!?”

“Bababang- Correct!”

Bang!

The Princess set off a birthday firework.

“Yay, as expected of the King of Death! You're so quick-witted, it's easy to talk to you.”

“Insane.....”

As I realized how entangled and knotted my connections had become, I suddenly noticed an important question I had missed.

“Wait a minute. The main inhabitants of the tower can change?”

“Of course. If the Earth Spirits go berserk and massacre all the residents of your tower, from that moment, the inhabitants of the tower would no longer be humans but Earth Spirits. But as long as the King of Death is alive, that won't happen.”

“.....”

“Aegim Empire's citizens and the Revelations' residents could theoretically replace you and ascend the tower. It's just that you still monopolize the [rankings], so they haven't realized it yet.”

Rankings.

Indeed, currently, only those up to 7th place in the rankings could take the frontlines of the tower.

“If someone from the worlds we've conquered entered the top 7 rankings instead of us...”

“Yes! They would be able to ascend the tower too.”

The Princess shrugged.

“But it won't be easy for them to climb the rankings.”

“Why is that?”

“Well, they are busy fighting every day in their own worlds. Those who don't need to leave their land usually don't find a reason to ascend to the heavens. No matter how strong they are, the tower doesn't pay attention to them.”

Her words left a strange resonance in my heart.

After a moment, the Princess shrugged again.

“But there could be those aiming for ascension for other reasons. Like the Earth Spirit Tribe, or should I say, [Asuras]?”

The Princess' eyes twinkled playfully.

“Asuras are strong. They know there are higher worlds since a Constellation emerged among them. Not just that. They've mastered the incredible Demonic Heavenly God Art and even know how to deploy the Demonic Formations Art. They will rise in the ranks quickly, but... that will cause its own problems.”

Perhaps the child had inherited not only her mother's playfulness but also her venom.

“What kind of problems?”

“You're confident that the Earth Spirits will never betray you, and so are your comrades. But what about the vast majority of residents who haven't joined your conquest? Will they welcome the species you suddenly bring in as their children with open arms?”

"....."

“Hehehe.”

The Princess mockingly imitated laughter.

“What will you do? Will they believe you if you say, ‘Don't worry, there's no problem’? You're the King of Death with a good image, so maybe your words might have some impact, but what about the others? Only a handful know that Black Dragon Witch has changed. And those who know that Heretic has changed, can they be counted on one hand?”

"....."

“Will they trust you if you say, ‘Please believe us’? What about Viper? What about Sword Saint? Will the people living below the tower trust you? Will they trust the children you bring?”

I looked around slowly.

The noisy sounds of the banquet reached my ears.

“Sadly, I’ll have to end the durian course here.”

“I, I’m alive... Ugh. I survived...”

“Next is a cocktail made with the essence of the Mountain Calamity Tribe and top-quality salt hand-mined from Limepolis. Sword Saint, this cocktail is said to reveal its true flavor only when drunk in one go. Drink up.”

“Uh... Isn’t that just jelly and salt water?”

“Drink it.”

Indeed.

Regardless of age, gender, or race, everyone at the banquet mingled in their own way. There was jealousy, admiration, friendship, and a mix of immature hope and deep sighs.

Everyone was looking straight at each other.

Like Viper and I did to each other.

‘When you see a person as a person.’

I nodded.

‘That's enough.’

And I looked directly into the Princess' playful eyes.

“I can solve it.”

“Really?”

“Exactly, I can help make it happen. Well.”

I turned my head to Black Dragon Witch. She was playing cards with the Paladin, not particularly chatty, and seemed bored as she observed the scenery. Just then, our eyes met.

-What are you looking at?

Black Dragon Witch's lips moved. Her face was shaded under the palm leaves. Despite the distance, her telepathy resonated clearly in my ears.

“Please come over for a moment.”

-It's bothersome... Why?

“There's something important I need to tell both you and the Princess. It's important.”

Black Dragon Witch sighed and set down her cup. Before the cup could land, before her sigh could fully escape, she appeared right in front of me using [Teleportation].

“What's going on?”

“Before we head to the 50th floor, there's an event we need to prepare.”

“An event?”

“Yes. An event.”

Black Dragon Witch tilted her head. The Princess looked at me with interest.

I took in their gaze and slowly began to speak.

“Tomorrow. Let’s return to the 1st floor of the tower and hold a vote.”

“A vote? But we’ve already completed all the votes with the Ghost Tribe.”

“No. There’s one last vote remaining.”

I shook my head.

“We haven’t yet received the votes from [the people living in Babylon].”

"....."

Anastasia fell silent.

Indeed.

‘There’s one crucial vote remaining.’

The 5 major guilds have overcome past divisions and united.

The heads of the guilds have decided to look forward despite the scars in their hearts.

It’s a good thing.

It deserves celebration.

‘But it’s still just our story.’

The ordinary residents living day-to-day in Babylon don’t know this.

They're happy and cheering for the rapid conquest of the floors, supporting the massive guilds, but still, there are [unseen issues] lurking everywhere.

Like in a world shown by the Tower Master, a rebellion could occur in the Temple of All Gods, Black Dragon Witch could be betrayed, and the tower might crumble from within.

If we ignore the people living ordinary lives, they too will ignore us.

‘We need to talk to each other.’

No, talking isn't enough.

‘We need to show them. Make them feel and experience it.’

For that reason alone.

This event is essential.

“Anastasia.”

“Please prepare a press conference.”

Anastasia furrowed her brows.

“Mmm.”

“I will hold my second press conference since becoming the King of Death.”

“That kind of event... wouldn’t be bad. It’s a triumph worth boasting to the outside world...”

“Let not only journalists but also the residents of the tower freely attend the conference. They can ask questions, and I won’t avoid answering them.”

“And.”

I looked directly at Black Dragon Witch.

“Not just me, but I hope all of you will attend as well.”

"....."

“To all the people living in Babylon, let's speak honestly and straightforwardly.”

For us to ascend the tower together.

"....."

Black Dragon Witch was silent.

The silence was long.

Not because there was little to say, but because there was so much to say, and that silence was needed to withstand and swallow that onslaught. Therefore,

“It will be dangerous.”

The words that flowed from her were inevitably suggestive.

“A normal press conference can be controlled by us. We can control which newspapers and journalists are allowed, the questions permitted in the conference, the reactions, the seating arrangement, everything. But if we allow the residents to ask questions...”

“I know.”

"....."

Anastasia closed her mouth again, taking more time to digest the silence before speaking again.

“There are many who want to slander you.”

“That’s right.”

“The major guilds have secretly nurtured you as a star. The achievements of the King of Death are actually the work of the major guilds, but we intentionally credited them to the King of Death to build a star. The King of Death is just a marionette following the commands of the major guilds...”

“I know.”

“You’re an orphan. You brought your orphanage director to the tower. People will subtly belittle you for being an orphan, saying you’re taking care of those around you as soon as you got power...”

“Yes.”

“Those people have no right to hurt you. There are many like them. There's no need to create a place for you to get hurt.”

“There is.”

I nodded.

“There is. You know there is, right?”

"....."

“If someone wants to hurt or blemish me, of course, some of them are just petty like I used to be. But Anastasia. This is the consequence of the major guilds secretly running the tower for over a decade.”

I placed my palm over Anastasia's hand.

“They aren’t fabricating lies to hurt me. They’ve been treated as non-existent all this time, and now they want to hurt someone to prove their existence.”

“Hurting a completely unrelated person with a completely unrelated wound.”

“Hmm. Well. The world is full of irrational things.”

I smiled.

“But sometimes, a leader has to take on irrational tasks for a while.”

"....."

“You made me a leader.”

I spoke.

“So now, it’s my turn to be the leader of this tower.”

Chapter 284: Final Vote (5)

---

Snip.

The hairdressing scissors crossed in mid-air.

“...Are you sure you want to leave it to me?”

“Yes.”

My reflection in the large mirror nodded back.

Over my shoulder, the orphanage director wore an unconvinced expression.

“I want you to cut it, Director. It’s a strong wish of mine.”

“The phrase ‘strong wish’ always sounds odd to me. It's as if a wish doesn't come true unless it's strong. Interestingly, right now, you are tied with a white cloth around your neck, and I hold quite sharp scissors in my hand.”

“Ah. Considering I'm an A-rank Hunter and you're F-rank, it becomes even more interesting.”

“Sigh...”

The director exhaled expressionlessly. Snip. The scissors made another unnecessary swing through the air.

“It's not too late to change your mind. Black Dragon Witch has prepared a professional hair designer for you. It's disrespectful to her if I, an amateur, handle this for a press conference.”

“Director, think about it.”

“Here we go again...”

“If you cut my hair, first of all, the hair designer will be happy. He gets paid without working, as he's already called to standby outside right now. You mentioned it's disrespectful to Black Dragon Witch, but she's close friends with me. A little discourtesy like this is fine. After all..."

"Enough. I get it."

The director sounded weary.

"I shouldn't have encouraged debate during your lessons. You all became slick talkers despite being fools at heart."

-Indeed. You were the culprit behind his slick tongue...

Guardian Spirit commented, as if solving a decade-long mystery. But since the director couldn't hear, she kept mumbling.

"Kim Han-Bi was even flying around on broadcasts. Sometimes, I wish I could stitch his lips shut."

Kim Han-Bi, formerly known as Kim Han-Bi-Ja. Who exactly is he?

Seems like a guy who would star in a spin-off, playing a politician engaged in blackmail, violence, and betrayal...

“So... are you really going to make me cut it?”

“Yes.”

“Don’t blame me if it turns out badly.”

“Of course.”

“It’s not my fault if you look bad. It’s just your inherent ugliness showing.”

Isn’t that a bit harsh?

“Relax. I won't let it get to you.”

Snip—

The scissors cut through my hair.

"....."

I watched the mirror impassively. The director was also expressionless, focusing on the haircut. Recalling the old times made my lips curl into a faint smile.

"You used to cut our hair, Director."

"Yes, I did."

"Volunteers used to come from the nearby barbershop, didn't they? Why did you bother learning it yourself?"

"Volunteering isn't always free. They sometimes require paperwork, and it's only right to treat them well when they come. Plus, you have to give them a tip. If they come from far away, you have to pay for their taxi fare too."

"I see..."

“I thought it would be better to learn and do it myself.”

Snip.

"....."

"....."

Snip.

“Did it embarrass you?”

“Maybe a bit...”

I cautiously nodded.

“A bit, I guess.”

“Because of the school kids?”

“Yes. I couldn’t even say our Director cut it...”

“Understandable. Even kids who have their hair cut by their parents feel embarrassed at that age. Surprisingly, children care a lot more about their hair.”

“I think I used to say a sister or brother I knew cut it.”

“That makes sense.”

“Kids can be cruel, right?.”

“What do you mean? They become even more venomous when they grow up.”

Snip.

“I learned it diligently, knowing they’d be embarrassed. Was it for about 2 years? I think I became quite skillful, but just the fact that it was cut at the orphanage made them self-conscious.”

"....."

"Doing good is always like that."

Snip.

Black clumps of hair fell.

"Gong-Ja, even the best intentions can't overcome a single point of someone else's embarrassment. No matter how hard you try, the process of your efforts is never painted in the other person's mind. Volunteer work is always seen as clumsy, and people easily mock it."

"Is that a downside to accept?"

"No."

Snip.

"You just have to be more thorough."

The sound of hair being cut resembled silk being sliced.

“Thinking back, I shouldn’t have cut hair in the director’s office. While cutting, other kids would peek through the window. That’s why they felt embarrassed. I should have cleaned an unused storeroom, covered it with proper curtains, and set up a system to use it only for haircuts.”

"....."

“That’s how much calculation goes into cutting a child’s hair once. You must anticipate the child’s embarrassment, analyze why they feel that way, and create a system to prevent the cause of embarrassment.”

“Ah.”

I blinked.

“That’s why a beauty room was made when we entered middle school?”

“Yes. I bet it was the prettiest room in the whole orphanage.”

“Right.”

I recalled how my juniors enjoyed visiting that room.

“It’s fascinating... something...”

“Clever?”

“Yes, and...”

“Diligent.”

"....."

Hmm.

I’m beginning to see where half of my personality comes from.

In the mirror beyond, the Guardian Spirit seemed to have realized something too.

“Remember, Gong-Ja. Good deeds, virtue, don’t materialize just from good intentions. Instead, plan as if you’re about to do something really bad.”

“Something bad...?”

“When trying to help someone, plan as if you’re plotting their murder. In your mind.”

Snip.

“Murder isn’t achieved just by intention. It doesn’t happen automatically, never. But if you must commit murder, what should you do?”

“You prepare the tools first.”

“And then?”

“Choose the murder location and time.”

“And then?”

“You learn about the victim's lifestyle. That way, you can murder them when they're most off-guard, and there's the least chance of getting caught.”

“And then?”

“...After the murder, you think about the body. Where and when to dispose of it, how to ensure it doesn't get discovered by the world, preparing an alibi in advance. And if the police come to investigate, you plan the expression, face, gestures, and words you'll use...”

“And then?”

“If you get caught, you think about that too. Escape routes, lawyers, defense arguments, or maybe a public opinion campaign, psychiatric evaluations...”

“That's right.”

Snip.

“Even villains put that much effort into a single act of evil.”

"....."

“Gong-Ja, if you want to do good, you must be more thorough than any villain.”

Creak.

“Don’t expect your kind heart to comfortably change the world for you. It’s not your intentions that create miracles. It’s your actions. Actions are better the more thoroughly they are calculated, analyzed, and implemented.”

"....."

“Did you calculate thoroughly?”

Thud.

“Don’t overlook the emotions others might feel due to your frank attitude and good heart, even unconsciously.”

Thud.

“Have you considered potential enemies to your plan? Did you simulate the smallest to most annoying possibilities? Do you know the identity of your enemy? The media? Public opinion? Your image?”

Thud.

"You need confidence, Gong-Ja."

Thud.

“Goodness is like water, but it’s not a river that flows gently down the mountain, nor a waterfall that breaks everything in its path. If goodness is water, it’s simply a well. When the season is dry and the land parched, you have to break the soil and shatter the rock to finally draw a bucket of water from the well.”

Thud.

“Kill them.”

Thud.

“Proceed with your good deeds as if you’re about to commit a murder.”

Thud.

“Then, finally...”

Thud.

“Those who stand with you will feel proud.”

Yes.

Director.

I understand.

Now, where to?

To do some good.

“Ah! Master!”

Heretic Inquisitor.

“The venue is ready! Ahaha. Preparing in just a day was indeed a challenge. For this past week, we mobilized all the manpower of the Temple of All Gods to set up the space!”

Did you consider the presence of a traitor within the Temple of All Gods?

“Yes! I even deliberately baited them, thinking they might plant a bomb or something. Hmm. No bites, though. It seems they are more meticulous than I thought.”

Right.

But they won't be more meticulous than us.

“Ahaha. Of course!”

Good.

Bambolina.

Let's go.

“Security is perfect.”

Black Dragon Witch.

“Just between us, Black Dragon is actually composed of four separate organizations, each working independently. They compete and scheme against each other. I had them take turns inspecting security, promising to cut the funding of any group that misses a loophole by half. They were all eager, but nothing was found.”

You still have a ruthless way of working....

“So what? That's who I am. Don't like it?”

Having a reliable friend like you is a fortune in my life.

"Oh my. Thanks for telling me the truth."

My pleasure.

Anastasia.

Let's go.

".....Your attire is the same as usual. It doesn't look shabby."

Paladin.

"Your hair looks a bit roughly cut. Are you really okay with that? Most of Babylon's residents are coming to see you, maybe even to speak, and probably to curse at you."

The Director cut it for me.

"Hmm?"

She used to do it often when I was young.

"....."

I'm thinking of bringing it up when I get the chance.

".....?"

This is the most comfortable for me.

It feels like the Director's warmth is still on the ends of my hair, reminding me where I came from, where I am. It's comfortable.

I wanted to meet everyone in my most natural state.

—Something like that.

“Really..... Is it intentional?”

Yes.

“A good strategy. Even better because it's not a lie. You're exploiting your orphanage background to create a strong impact on people. That's.....”

“Hmm. Since everyone in the Tower has lost their hometown, it should resonate strongly.”

Countess.

“While it may sound harsh, your background isn't a negative but a huge plus in the Tower. There are many who've lost their families. Losing a country applies to all residents. Being an orphan symbolizes losing everything from birth. But...”

Overdoing it could backfire.

“Oho?”

My background is just a slight catalyst for empathy to start the conversation. That's it.

Dragging out the orphan story will bore or even annoy the audience. We are people who, despite losing much, decided to live anew.

“Right. A very apt observation. ...Hmm. I thought you were just going to show a naïve face at the press conference, but you’re not that type. I trust you a bit more now.”

Pioneer.

“Hmm?”

We’re not refugees or exiles.

‘Residents of the Tower’ sounds too bland.

People here, they need a name.

"....."

From now on, I’ll refer to those living in the Tower as [Pioneers].

“Ha.”

A name defines a person's life.

How one greets the day changes.

Waking up in the afternoon thinking, ‘I’m unemployed’, versus waking up at dawn thinking, ‘I’m a working person’, changes the day. Accumulated days transform into different lives.

Countess.

We will be Pioneers.

Starting today.

"....."

“...What to say about that.?”

"Hmm."

"It's truly a thought befitting your real name."

"Such a Kim Gong-Ja* remark."

*Reminder that his name means Confucius.

Let's go.

Patricia.

Nisha.

"I've decided to oversee the meeting's security myself."

Sword Saint.

"As the Vice-Captain, you should join the stage and take questions. For now, I'll act as the Captain of the Vigilante Corps and oversee the security inside. Don't worry about any accidents, as long as you're there."

Thank you.

Mr. Callenbury.

"We've finished checking everyone entering the meeting."

Viper.

"Using skills really makes it easier. Detecting weapons, explosives, poisons, just positioning those with such skills does the job. Haha! Though there were hundreds of thousands lining up, our guys managed to clear them all efficiently. It's a good time we live in."

"Internet around here will be down for a while. I asked the Wide-Area Communicator, ranked ninth, for a favor. Even if someone secretly records, they won't be able to broadcast it. So..."

"The meeting will be like a small, isolated island. If the Tower is an isolated island from the outside world, then within that island, another secluded island is being created, perhaps?”

“Hey, hey, don’t interrupt me. Anyway, that’s right. We’ve confiscated all smartphones and recording devices at the entrance. People were so annoyed! Our Celestial Martial Guild members nearly died out there, man.”

“You only know how to use brute force. We have to find some way to use you.”

“Huh? Are you challenging me to a guild war?”

“Look at him, getting all high and mighty just because he sparred with Kim Gong-Ja....”

Ahaha.

"Huh?"

No, I’m just happy.

".....?"

Let's go.

Liǎofàn.

“Leave it to me!”

Great.

“However, there’s a huge crowd at the meeting. Wow. It spilled from Babylon Square to the alleys?”

“Ho, are there really so many people? We were so focused on the preparations that we didn’t notice the current situation!”

“Yeah! Basically, everyone living in the Tower is there. It’s a whole different level from when you first held a press conference.”

Thud.

“Hmm... Since the public can ask questions too.”

“The fact that they can see all of us together adds to the appeal. The media has already started spreading ridiculous stories. Claiming that the five great guilds are about to unite into one...”

Thud.

“Ahaha. It's easier to think of it as preheating the grill for us!”

“In case the meeting runs long, we've cleared all buildings, accommodations, and hotels nearby. No problem. Most of them are owned by me anyway. Be it half a day, a full day, two days, three days, or even four—”

Thud.

“Let them talk as they wish, Kim Gong-Ja.”

Okay.

“We are always ready to support you.”

Everything is ready.

Alright.

Don't forget to smile.

Even if it won't be recorded or remembered.

We are about to converse with all the [Pioneers] living in the Tower.

"....."

Politely.

With respect.

Even if they see us as demons, monsters, blackmailers,

agitators, we will always treat them as individual humans.

“...That’s a tough conversation.”

“You're talking about it so casually. Really.”

Can we do it?

“I’ll try my best.”

“I'll give it my all.”

Okay.

Good.

Then, Bambolina.

“Yes! Master!”

Open the door.

“Understood!”

Creak—

Chapter 285: Final Vote (6)

---

The bustling crowd was palpable.

"....."

The murmurs continued.

"....."

Murmurs filled the air.

.....That's him..... Oh, it feels weird not being able to use cameras. Why aren't cameras allowed according to the rules..... Are they filming this themselves? Planning to distribute the original source later? .....The conference might last for days. With various information circulating online, it would create confusion, so until the end of the conference..... Days? Is that even possible? What about our sleep? Do we go home to sleep and come back? .....The 5-star hotels under Sang-Ryun are all booked out today..... Wow. Really? .....

Even the 7-star hotels are empty. They say if you participate in the conference, you get a discount of 1/100 of the regular price, but I'm not sure if that's true..... Someone check during the break! .....Amazing..... King of Death is truly a treasured gem to the major guilds.....

The buzzing continued.

".....What are you doing, Kim Gong-Ja?"

Thump.

"You should go up to the stage first and greet everyone. Why are you spacing out! They took away the cameras, so no flashes will go off. Are you losing your mind because tens of thousands are looking at you all at once?"

Hmm.

Well.

Seeing these people, who I'll be with moving forward, makes me feel anew.

“.....Cut the nonsense. Get on the stage already.”

Yes.

I must go.

It's time.

"....."

Thump.

"....."

The murmurs grew.

"....."

Thump.

"....."

The murmurs.

"....."

Thump.

Murmurs...

"....."

.....

.....

Ah. Ah.

Actually, we don't need a mic test.

The thing I'm holding now is not even connected to a wire. I just prepared it because it felt awkward standing in front of people empty-handed. I'm speaking to you all directly with my own voice, using my aura. It's commonly known as telepathy, right? Similar to a lion's roar. I'm amplifying my voice and spreading my aura with it, to speak to you.

The voice you are hearing is my voice, unfiltered by any device.

The face you are seeing is my unadorned face, not prettied up for any media.

So....

You are seeing me right now.

Hello, Pioneers.

Nice to meet you.

Ranked 2nd among the hunters, Vice-lord of the Demonic Cult, Moon of the Ivansia family, Head of the King of Death Family. Alias, King of Death.

Kim Gong-Ja at your service.

I look forward to working with you.

"....."

Ah.

Not much of a reaction.

Was my greeting too abrupt?

"....."

Today, I have arranged this meeting to have a relaxed conversation with you all. Some of my colleagues questioned the necessity, but I insisted on the importance of this gathering.

Despite your busy lives.

Thank you for taking the time to gather here.

Let me first call my colleagues...

“Why didn't you allow the entry of recording equipment!”

Ah. Thank you for the prompt question.

But let me first call my colleagues...

“I'm from Summons Times, a hunter with an alias, Jeon Seo-Gu. Not only our reporting equipment, but even the personal smartphones, cameras, recorders of the individuals were all confiscated by the general members of Celestial Martial Guild. This measure was taken even before the start of the conference. Many are curious and even worried about this decision.”

Hmm.

“The tyranny of the major guilds has been an issue for a long time, but this conference seems especially dangerous. It's just a grand-sounding event without any record, a 'blind conference.' Aren't you just trying to create a meeting where no records are kept?"

.....

"King of Death! Please respond to the media's question!"

.....

".....King of Death? Are you listening?"

.....

"Please respond to the question..."

I made that decision.

"..Yes?"

Regarding the recording equipment. I requested a complete ban on their entry. Black Dragon Guild opposed it, but I persuaded them, and I convinced the other guilds, leading to the massive turnover you see now.

“Does that mean... the other guilds acted according to the King of Death's wishes?”

You said you're from Summons Times, right?

"....."

And you have an alias.

“Yes, that's correct.”

There's no need to reveal your name here. Feel free to mention your affiliation, but just saying you live in a certain area of Babylon, on a certain street or in a certain building, or what you do for a living is sufficient.

Or you don't have to say anything at all.

"....."

I banned recording and filming equipment, not for me, but for you.

"....."

“What do you mean.....?”

We have an unprecedented number of people gathered here in the history of the tower. As I mentioned, I'm using telepathy, and the aura consumption right now is immense. That means there are many of you here.

At such a moment.

"....."

Right. If...

If filming or recording were freely allowed.

Those seated in front or standing in the back, or those watching me from the rooftops, those over there, would be busy flashing their smartphones.

The reporter who just asked me a question must be holding a camera in one hand.

"....."

If you all did that...

Then, I'd be conscious of the outside world.

"The outside world, you say?"

Yes.

The people outside the tower watching us.

If filming was allowed, it would instantly flow out to the outside world.

“Why...”

You, the reporter, must know.

No.

Everyone gathered here knows.

When the outside world watches us, we try to look good.

Those who left their families behind would want to show they are doing well.

Those who were almost forced to transfer from the main office in the outside world would want to show they are living just as well here.

Refugees, minorities, etc., who had difficult circumstances in the outside world, would deliberately dress up to show off.

That's what we do.

"....."

I don't want to do that.

I don't want to do that to you.

In a place where I came to talk to you, listening to your voice, seeing your faces, but in my mind, I don't want to be preoccupied with someone else I don't know, can't see, and will never meet in my life.

I am sure that it's not respectful to you.

"....."

Think about it, everyone.

When was the last time we had [time just for us]?

Talking and drawing attention to what happens in the tower through newspapers, broadcasts, live streams, internet, communities... Fighting and getting heated up over it.

Although this place is supposedly eternally cut off from the outside world, aren't we sharing stresses with the people of the outside world more than ever?

We live in the tower.

And we will live in the tower forever.

In this place, where once you enter, you can never escape.

"....."

So, let's turn off our concern for the outside world, even just for a moment.

The voice you are hearing is my voice.

I am not speaking to anyone else but you.

The face you are seeing is my face.

I did not dress up my face to show to anyone else but you.

Everyone.

At least for this moment, I am only looking at you.

Let's talk for us now.

"....."

"Right!"

"There must be over a hundred thousand smartphones collected. Wonder if we can get them back properly..."

"Just complain to the Celestial Martial Guild."

"The hair style doesn't look weird..."

"King of Death! King of Death!"

“Hey, be quiet...”

If anyone has something to say or a question for me, please raise your hand. Ah, just a moment please. There's still an order to follow.

Don't worry.

Right now, I have enhanced not only my voice but also my vision with aura. My sense of time is flowing 6 to 12 times slower than a regular human who cannot use aura. You can tell because I haven't stumbled or bitten my tongue even once while speaking.

Ahaha.

You can do a lot when you are skilled with aura. Alright.

I won't miss anyone who raises their hand first or feels unfairly deprived of their turn. There will be absolutely no such thing.

Since no filming is taking place, there's no risk of your identity being exposed.

Please feel at ease.

When it's time for questions, just leisurely raise your hand.

"....."

Now, let me introduce my colleagues.

In order, Black Dragon Guild's Black Dragon Witch, Heretic Inquisitor of the Temple of All Gods—.

---

“Question. A rookie, secretly raised with the support of the 5 great guilds, a manufactured star - rumors are rife. Is it true?”

Hmm.

If you saw my old apartment room, you'd know it's not true...

My life brightened with lottery tickets.

I was the type who thought, why buy such things when I could buy stick mix coffee and make rice soup instead of just a cup of Americano. But now I've been adding all kinds of strange things to the point it's no longer coffee but something else entirely.

I'm lucky.

You might also consider buying a lottery ticket once a week.

“Is that an advertisement to increase the sales of the lottery tickets issued by the Merchants Union?”

It wasn't my intention, but seeing the Countess laugh next to me, seems like it is.

I apologize.

“Since ranking 3rd and above, you've been operating power privately, bringing people from the outside world into the tower. There's also talk of contact with a congressman from your hometown. Do you have any relations with powerful people in the outside world?”

Uh, my official contact is managed by Black Dragon Witch.

Black Dragon Witch, what do you think?

“Currently, it’s being used quite usefully.”

"....."

“Beyond that, I cannot say much as it involves the confidentiality of various countries outside. However, one thing is for sure, King of Death knows almost nothing about it.”

My goodness.

“For reference, the person King of Death brought into the tower is the orphanage director. A person who looked after King of Death since childhood, akin to a parent. It’s a story of settling in the tower and bringing their parent to live here. I’d be grateful if you thought of it that way.”

.....

Yes, the director is my...

.....

The person who gave me half of what I am.

"....."

The person who cut my hair today is the director too.

Though they said they didn't want to.

I pushed through forcefully.

I plan to force them a lot more in the future.

Thank you.

"King of Death!"

Yes.

“Is it true that you and Black Dragon Witch are dating?”

It’s good that I’m meeting you all officially today.

I haven’t yet gained enough power to commit a public murder without being punished.

I don’t have such power, and I never will, so be thankful for that.

Above all, be thankful that my one and only love is not here today.

Next.

“King of Death!”

Ah. Yes.

“There are rumors floating in reality and on the internet that the Master of Temple of All Gods calls you ‘Master’!”

Hmm.

“Are the two of you dating?”

Can’t we remove this person from here?

Chapter 286: Final Vote (7) (Part 1 Complete)

---

“...It’s a big deal. It’s break time but the crowd isn’t thinning.”

Is that so?

“Look over there. The number of people in the alleyway is increasing! My goodness. Originally, it was expected not to exceed 7 hours no matter how long it took!”

It’s proof that the conference is successful.

That’s good for you, Anastasia, isn’t it?

You were so anxious it might fail.

“...Even if it's successful, it's too successful, that's the problem. Right now, there are 13 B-rank hunters attached next to [Wide-Area Communicator] as batteries. They are using their aura to block external transmissions and broadcasting, but, I don't know the details, they are almost at their limit, smelling like spinach from their mouths.”

Eh.

Please tell them to hang in there a little longer.

".....How long is a little?"

Well.

There are people setting up tents over there.

At least until tomorrow?

“You crazy bastard.....”

I hear that often.

“Master!”

Yes?

“After quickly surveying a hundred people, the questions they want to ask next are exceedingly diverse! There are even questions our guild masters can’t answer! Ahaha.”

Hmm.

What do you mean?

“It seems we might need to call on [Duchess Ivansia] and [Chairman Seimslam] too!”

---

"Good day. Thank you for taking my question. I run a café at Babylon Crossroads. We also deliver.”

.....

Ah, the place Yoo Soo-Ha frequently ordered from...

“Pardon?”

No. Sorry.

It’s nothing.

Please refrain from advertising your store and continue with your question.

“Ah, yes.... alright. Cough. My question is for the King of Death. Recently, the raid teams have been on a successful streak, significantly expanding our tower’s territory. It happened with the Aegim Empire and now the newly conquered new continent. However, currently, access to these floors is strictly controlled by the 5 great guilds.”

Yes.

“Isn’t that a monopoly?”

.....

“In essence, the 5 great guilds are monopolizing the resources of the new continent, intending to further strengthen their influence within the tower based on that...”

“Hmm. Let me take this question.”

Raviel.

“Continue, please.”

“Uh..... My point is, there are many smaller guilds in the tower, even guilds barely functioning with only three members, like a hole-in-the-wall shop. These guilds hardly benefit from such developments....”

“What kind of benefits are you referring to?”

“Err.... like that....”

Raviel.

Raviel is so beautiful that looking directly at her can cause a stun effect.

Please be a bit more considerate of the questioner.

“Indeed. Is that so?”

That’s exactly it.

“I was distracted by my own appearance.”

Yes. Like the sun that cannot be gazed upon directly.

“Sorry about that. Born and raised in the empire, I’m not accustomed to this culture. In my heart, I initially consider each of you as a baron at least.”

“A baron, you say. Oh. I’m just...”

“An owner of a bakery, right? I know. But aren’t you living a more prosperous and comfortable life than a baron in our empire?”

"....."

‘You and us are different. Indeed, in many ways. Just like how you were different from the people of the outside world.’

"....."

"Among you, there must be those coveting the territory of my empire. Those who yearn for the rights to it. When forces clash, friction is inevitable, and I, as well as the nobles of the empire, are already prepared."

"That means..."

"12 years. For the next 12 years, there will be extreme limitations on private sector exchanges."

"....."

"We are already sending exchange students to the 29th floor's school city. They will learn about public education and get accustomed to your culture, then return to the empire to handle negotiations. Until then..."

.....

“Just wait.”

.....

"I ask of you all as a representative of the empire.”

.....

"What if..."

Hmm.

“What if many people can’t wait? Oh. I’m sorry for not introducing my affiliation first. I am a priest of the Temple of All Gods.”

“It’s fine. Ask your question.”

“Yes. Thank you. As you know, Your Grace... The power of our tower is overwhelming. If we intend to, for example, we could make the empire a colony...”

"....."

“I'm not making this up. Whether jokingly or seriously, there are actually people who think and talk like this. The logic of reality is harsh, isn't it? Isn't that right? So....”

“You're wrong.”

“Pardon?”

“The premise is wrong. You are not overwhelmingly stronger than the empire.”

“...I'm not sure what you mean...? Even without mentioning scientific prowess, if our hunters unite to attack...”

“Why do you think you all will unite?”

Squeeze.

"King of Death will help me."

"....."

"Those who help King of Death will also help us. Just that already makes us as powerful as what you call the 5 great guilds. The Asuras who see King of Death as a father and friend will help, and the races forming the Fire River Council with the Asuras will help too. Look. Where do you see the overwhelming force difference?"

"....."

"That term [tower's force] you mentioned is wrong. You should have said [tower's villains]. If that's the context, indeed, the force you mentioned would be strong."

"....."

"But as strong as they are, we are too."

Raviel.

“There must be cynics among you who coldly say that’s just how the world is. While they spend a day in cynicism, my consort, their enemy, built power through bloodshed. He formed alliances. He established confederations. Regardless of race, nationality, and even world boundaries, he built the current family just to confront them.”

.....

“So if you ask me if the world is inherently like that, I have no reason to go along with your answer. Is that the logic of the world you live in? That’s unfortunate. I choose to make the place where the King of Death is my world. My heart needs his voice to breathe.”

.....

Yes.

Right.

I’m on your side, Raviel.

"What....."

Forever.

"Aren't we all people of the tower? I mean, haven't we been supporting the tower's conquest all this time? We couldn't physically participate often due to the rankings, but that was unavoidable..."

"I am Ukrainian."

Anastasia.

"I came here and founded Black Dragon, which somehow became the top guild in the tower. Back then, many people who never noticed me before started to show up saying 'Let's stand together as fellow Ukrainians.'"

"....."

"If I had followed the logic of [being from the same place], over half of the executives in Black Dragon would have been Ukrainian. But I didn't."

“That's...”

“Right. Things have gotten somewhat better. So now, shall we create a [Tower Nation], invent a [Tower Citizenship], and establish [Our Tower]? They cast us out, but look at them now, watch as we, now thriving in the tower, mock you, the outside world. No, all worlds.”

"....."

“I wanted to, but.”

“I won’t.”

I could, but.

“Tell them to fuck off.”

"....."

“Ah, it feels like I can finally live without the media blackout. I should have asked [Wide-Area Communicator] to set up such a setting earlier. Really. I need to start getting rid of this nature of living and dying by public attention...”

That’s also a charm of yours, Anastasia.

“Shut up. Anyway, I hate it. I’m sick of it. I am the Black Dragon Witch, the 3rd ranked hunter and a guild master. I’ll take care of my guild members, look after the people around me, and treat those who treat me as a person with respect. How thankful is it that we have no language barriers in the tower? Every morning, I pray with gratitude to some unknown being who demolished the damned language barriers.”

“Ahaha.”

Bambolina.

“I’m from Bulgaria! But I haven’t registered with any public institution, and I don’t even have a passport! Technically, there’s no way to prove my origin. So, maybe I could be from Serbia or Romania!”

" ..... "

“I am just the Heretic Inquisitor. Everyone, believe in your own god, worship with your heart, and be careful not to fall into heresy! If you feel the world is testing you, knock on the door of the Temple of All Gods anytime!”

“And serve them espresso coffee...”

Liǎofàn.

“I'm Chinese. Well, there are some from my hometown in the Celestial Martial Guild. But the strongest always prevail. The weak, whether they are from the continent, islands, or jungle, end up just cleaning the guild building.”

"....."

“But King of Death turned out to be stronger than me, what can I do? As someone said, the world is harsh—”

"....."

“I was born in Venezuela.”

Patricia.

"I still see the scenery of my hometown when I close my eyes. The village I lived in had beautiful trails. There was no glass on the dirt roads. When you stepped on them, you felt the earth beneath your feet. When I went to the city for studies, I often visited the bars at night. Old jazz, worn-out pianos... I miss everything."

"....."

"But that's not all of my heart."

Patricia?

Why suddenly stand up...

"Babylon's 11th District Gourmet Street is the best. The paella they occasionally make there, although lacking saffron, boasts an exquisite taste. So much so that during the recent conquest, I thought of that shop three times in several days. Shop owner, you are remarkable."

"....."

“Respect to the seventeen heroes who opened a jazz bar in the 6th District. Hats off to the chamber orchestra and the eleven quartets. I don't understand why they thought they would succeed in the tower when they failed in the outside world! Marvelous!”

“Bravo!”

“Long live Little Venezia!”

“Who's that? If I catch the one who just mentioned a failed shop, be ready for an inspection raid by the Vigilante Corps.”

“Play the piano again, please!”

“Goddess!”

“Please release a record! I'll buy 10! No, I'll download it 10 times!”

“The 7th District's walking path is a marvel, whoever created it. As I heard, a hunter ranked around 200 secretly digs up the path and makes gardens at 4 AM daily. He's really jobless to not reveal his identity. Amazing. I spent a day there out of the 30.”

“Agree!”

“I love my homeland!”

.....

"But loving my homeland is like loving music!"

.....

“If I love the tower, it’s only because music never ceases here!”

.....

“We can’t always love like jazz. Songs have their silence. But..., damn it. Fine. I’ve decided to establish a separate guild named [Black Knight] with Black Dragon Witch and King of Death!”

“What?”

“Guild?”

“Really?”

“A music guild. A jazz guild. A new form of music called 'Bloody Opera'... Damn it. If anyone who knew me from the past comes to watch, I'll kill them. I'll throw them in prison.”

“Goddess is returning!”

“The return of Little Venezia!”

“Finally ditching the helmet and armor?”

“I love you, Goddess! I've been waiting!”

.....

Princess.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages listens attentively to your words.]

The voting.

Start it, please.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages asks if you're sure it's okay to proceed.]

Yes.

The tribes that must consent for us to ascend the tower are not only the Mountain Calamity Tribe, but also the Fairy Tribe, Gill Fish Tribe, Vampires, Dream Demons, Pure Humans Race, Earth Spirit Tribe, and Ghost Tribe, and also us humans.

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages nods in agreement.]

[The privilege of the pillar is activated.]

[Quests on the 48th and 49th floors are altered.]

[Stage Integration.]

[Sequential Layer Progression.]

The people living in the Aegim Empire too.

The old man who remains in the snowfield, guarding the pillar of his sect.

The girl sitting on the porch of an old-fashioned Hanok, gazing at the sky.

[All characters belonging to 'the tower' are granted voting rights.]

[Regardless of the stage, the exercise of the voting right is equal.]

“Huh?”

“What's this notification...”

[Edited footage of the conquest from the 30th to 47th floors is compiled.]

[The edited footage is played for those with voting rights.]

[The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages sends a message saying 'I edited it decently, so don't worry about secrets being revealed! It's a complimentary service!']

For us to be simply us.

[Currently.]

[The quest on the 49th floor is in progress.]

If fortune accompanies us.

[Voting begins.]

Our next story might start on an even higher stage than before.

---

Translator's Note:

Hello everyone! I really think I should do these notes often because there's so much I end up wanting to talk to everyone about, but then I think about how I don't want to hinder your immersion in this fabulous story with my nonsense... Anyway, part 1 of the novel is now completed! I gotta say, it's been a ride translating these 286 chapters. From the Hellfire Mansion to Martial Realm, from Sormewin Academy to Shinseo High, from Guru to the Tower Master's World. It's been an insane, incredibly enjoyable experience for me. It's one thing to read a story, but when translating, you truly realize how beautifully presented this story is. The language and connections often made me baffled, making me re-think my own creative skills hahaha.

Leaving that aside, I'm truly glad I took up translating this novel. I'm also glad a lot of you have been actively talking to me and other readers about it in our discord. I hope we all can continue doing that even during Part 2, which I will start translating very soon! Thank you for reading my translations and I hope to see you all in Part 2~

Chapter 287: 50th Floor (1)

---

The Black Knight's ambitiously prepared first performance was a colossal failure.

"Impossible..."

The Paladin covered her face with a gesture of despair.

Was it because she had practiced the blood fire drama too fervently over the past month? Every gesture, every movement was imbued with dramatic flair; the Paladin's current pose was an artwork titled 'Despair' itself. It was the kind of art that wouldn't sell for even a gold while the artist was alive, only to become wildly popular posthumously, a needless coffin-dweller.

"I wanted to return to music but... Maybe it was my greed."

The Paladin laughed hollowly.

At her feet lay letters, discarded like autumn leaves.

"I'm disappointed, that was the worst, I don't know what sin my ears committed in a past life to have to endure a performance like yesterday's", etc. A salad of curses and contempt was laid out before her.

"I shall retire now. Kim Gong-Ja. No, not as a musician. As a hunter. As a human, I want to retire from life..."

Oh no.

"Yes. The ignorant masses cannot understand us after all."

The Black Dragon Witch?

"Humans are all trash. They don't even remember what they've done. Living like beasts, devouring their own pasts like flesh... Haha. Do we need to sacrifice ourselves for such beasts? Kim Gong-Ja?"

Her eyes dangerously twinkled.

Was she truly corrupted as her alias, the Black Dragon Witch, suggests? Anastasia, the ultimate boss, laughed ominously. Haha. It was a laugh only permitted to the true mastermind, sending shivers down my spine.

“King of Death! You are no longer my master!”

The Heretic Inquisitor laughed brightly.

No, that's not it.

Upon closer inspection, it wasn't the Heretic Inquisitor but a blond Welsh Corgi styled like the Inquisitor's hair, a literal son of a bitch.

A dog was panting heavily, incessantly drooling on my pants.

“I was born with a mission to guide the lowly humanity! Woof! Now I understand why the gods of the universe have been whispering to me. I am the promised savior! Don't worry, woof! You will be specially placed in an exclusive iron cell and provided with high-quality jerky three times a day! Woof woof!”

What kind of dogshit...

No, it's literally a dog, right?

“Hey, King of Death.”

What is it, Liǎofàn?

Wait a moment. Why are you holding my Shiny?

Why are you blushing and acting shy?

“This is really embarrassing to say, but...”

[Shiny declares it will speak for itself.]

Shiny shimmered intensely.

I must admit I named this sword very well.

[Shiny says it and Viper have decided to date.]

What?

[Shiny sings. It says seeing its previous master safe and its current master finding happiness with a partner, it too desires to find its own happiness. Seeing the woeful warrior wandering day by day, it felt that his side must be graced with a sword like itself.]

“I too thought the same, perhaps? The genre of a heroine residing in a sword has a long and storied history. It’s regrettable that this sword isn’t the sharpest 【Japanese Katana】 known for its “sharpness”, but that’s an everyday ordeal I must endure.”

Insane.

Viper was spouting some typical Viper nonsense, and the adolescently sparkling Shiny, at least 10000 years old in actual age and... a sword by appearance.

Among these, I couldn't decide who was the real son of a bitch.

Was it possible that neither of them were, and I, who harbored such thoughts, was the real son of a bitch?

Or perhaps the whole world was, and I was the only one who wasn't?

At the very least, wasn't it clear that the Welsh Corgi Heretic Inquisitor, still rubbing its face against my trouser leg and wagging its tail fervently while barking "Woof! Woof!", was indeed a son of a bitch?

Is my life over?

-Damn it.

I turned my head.

Guardian Spirit was making a face like a bone soup of pork back-bone stew.

-Hey. Hey! No matter how much I have to die and see unsightly things, why do I have to join you in watching your dog dream? Huh? Wake up, you zombie son of a bitch! Wake up already! Open your eyes!

Why?

It's entertaining to watch.

If you don't like my dog dreams, then give me something.

-You devil... Wait. Sorry, I was wrong. My apologies, zombie. No, Gong-Ja. Sir Gong-Ja. I was wrong. So please, don't include me in your dog dreams! Stop it! I won't dance to that! Damn it, stop! Stop it!!

Alright.

Another day begins with the refreshing screams of Guardian Spirit.

---

-You just wait till you get to the 50th floor. Ah, just, ah, I won't give you any advice, I'll just watch you fail! You're so arrogant because you managed to get the Constellation Killer, but that was just luck. The 50th floor is a damn brutal place. Huh? Even if you come later crying and clinging to my trouser leg, I won't give you a single piece of advice.

"Ah. A grown adult, getting sulky. What a sight."

-Just look back at your dog dreams! Hell, it's not even occasionally, but always! I'm tired of that bullshit!

I ignored Guardian Spirit's complaints and descended the stairs.

"Oh. Are you awake, Gong-Ja?"

The Paladin was sitting in the basement.

She was fully armored except for her gauntlets, which were removed as she fiddled with her smartphone.

"Yes. Good morning, Patricia."

"Good timing."

The Paladin smiled and held up her phone.

“I was waiting for you to come down. Look. It’s a sensation.”

“What is it?”

“What else? The blood fire drama, the blood fire drama. The responses to our last performance are starting to come in.”

“Ah...”

I suddenly remembered the dream I had today.

The fantasy of the Paladin retiring after the failed performance resurfaced, and I felt uneasy.

“How is it? Are the reactions good?”

I approached and looked at the smartphone screen. Swipe swipe. As the Paladin moved her finger, headlines flashed across the screen.

“It’s amazing! The internet is buzzing!”

The Paladin couldn't contain her excitement.

“People in the outside world are astonished by our new stage. Can you believe it? Renowned directors are constantly contacting me by email.”

“Heh.”

That's a relief.

It seems the dream I had last night was really just a dog dream.

I felt a sense of relief and started reading the headlines.

『Blood Fire Drama: A Dance Genre That Transcends the Limits of the Body.』

『Dancers, directors, musicians not separated!』

『Germany's Maestro says, 'This is the jazz of the dance world.'』

『A feast of Aura that changes dramatically with every performance.』

『Is the Tower now attempting to surpass the Old World in art?』

The response was overwhelmingly positive.

A satisfied smile overflowed on the Paladin's lips.

“We even got a feature article about us. Really, they didn't care a bit when I was doing jazz, and now they're making a fuss. It's bittersweet...”

That's when it happened.

-Aaaahhhh!

A scream came from the other side of the basement.

The Paladin glanced briefly at the source of the sound, and I followed her gaze. There stood a prison gate made of iron bars.

But that was short-lived. The scream soon stopped.

We nonchalantly turned our heads back and dived into our phones again.

“Wow. I expected it, but the reaction is really amazing. What's this, The Post? The Times? These are famous newspapers, aren't they?”

“They're not just famous. Kim Gong-Ja, aren't you too disinterested in worldly affairs? Not just Anastasia, but I too stayed up all night checking the reactions online.”

“I realized how vain that is... Be careful. Watching others' reactions is a kind of addiction, an addiction.”

“Hmm. Of course, I know... But as an artist, not just the deputy leader of the Vigilante Corps, it's hard to resist. Look. Each of these comments, every line of criticism, is like a drug...”

“Get used to it from now on, renowned director. This will be your daily life.”

“Ha. Our Black Knight Guild Master is becoming quite the flatterer...”

Once again, screams filled the air.

-Aaaaahhhhh!

We kept exchanging pleasantries, ignoring the screams. This time, however, the screams persisted longer than before, continuing without a break.

-Save me, please save me!

-Stop it! Aaaah! Please, no more! I can't take it there anymore...

-I'll spill everything! Yes, I'll tell you everything! Just don't leave me alone!

-Do you know who I am!? Huh! Just you wait, once I get out of here...

We ignored them and continued our chat.

After about five minutes, the screams subsided. In the meantime, we greedily devoured our egos from anonymous journalists and critics on the internet.

Our egos were so inflated they were about to burst, and just when the Paladin and I were starting to realize how stupid we were to entrust our self-esteem to this tiny smartphone, click.

The iron door of the basement cell opened.

“Good morning...”

The one who came out was the Black Dragon Witch.

“...Huh? What? Kim Gong-Ja is here too?”

“Yep. Good morning.”

I waved my hand.

“Any progress?”

“Well... it's so-so. It feels like all the information that could come out has already come out.”

The Black Dragon Witch yawned and staggered towards a pantry shelf in the corner of the basement that looked like a small pantry. Her hand clumsily searched for a coffee filter.

“Ah, just sit down. I'll make it for you.”

“Okay... Thanks.”

The Black Dragon Witch looked visibly tired, with dark circles under her eyes suggesting she had stayed up all night. She took the offered seat from me with a sigh of relief.

“This is why I like married men. They have consideration and manners ingrained in them.”

“That's a biased statement, Anastasia. It's not because I'm a married man, but because I'm me that I can show such consideration.”

“Ugh. What? That's annoying...”

“For example, I know your coffee preference is a hazelnut latte. You like it hot with an extra shot. So now, I'm going to make you a hazelnut latte, not an Americano. Come on, be amazed.”

“...Huh? An annoying angel...?”

The Black Dragon Witch sipped the coffee. "Damn, this is really good..." she muttered begrudgingly, then opened her lips.

“Your prediction was correct.”

I nodded.

“So there were traitors after all.”

“...Yes. In the Black Dragon and Temple of All Gods, there were secret societies.”

Anastasia pulled out a worn notebook from her pocket.

“Their official name is the ‘Seta Learning Society’.”

"....."

“A secret society that believes the Tower is a reincarnation of the fallen Tower of Babel, a miracle granted by God for humanity to reach the heavens once again. They argue that the outside world, already tainted, should be abandoned, and a new kingdom built inside the Tower, that we should devoutly make this place blessed.”

“And what does 'blessed' mean?”

“It’s just a fancier term for terrorism. Crazy kids. Two executive members and eleven regular guild members. It wasn’t a large number, but if we hadn’t noticed now, they might have grown bigger later.”

That’s right.

I took the notebook from Anastasia and flipped through it.

『The Tower is the second coming of the fallen Tower of Babel, a miracle given by God for us to reach the heavens once again...』

『We must abandon the tainted outside world and build a new kingdom within the Tower, as commanded by the Lord, devoutly making this place blessed.』

『The current rulers of the Tower are deluded, and driving out these false rulers is...』

They were whispers of fanaticism.

The hastily scribbled words, looking like doodles, were smudged with fingerprints at the end of each sentence, showing how often the owner had treasured and read them.

“I see.”

I swallowed.

In the world shown to me by the Tower Master, Anastasia and the Heretic Inquisitor died because of this secret society. Perhaps they had been active since this time, which prompted me to secretly gather information...

“It’s good that we found them now.”

Is a bad hunch always right?

People dissatisfied with the current regime controlled by the 5 great guilds were everywhere, and a combination of cultism and fanaticism lurked inside the guilds like malignant tumors.

-Stop! I can’t take it anymore! Don't send me there! Don’t leave me alone!

And now, the fanatics were screaming in the dungeons below.

The Black Dragon Witch grimaced slightly.

“Thanks to the Dream Demons helping with the interrogations, it was easier. No need for bloodshed... If it were the old days, a head or two would have flown already.”

“How scary were the dreams that made them scream like that?”

“Nothing special? Just dropped them onto a blank white horizon and left them alone for about 30 days in dream time.”

What? That's hell.

Looking around, even the Paladin was shaking her head. Among our members, there was no one lacking in the talent of tormenting others, but the Black Dragon Witch was in a league of her own.

“Anyway, thanks to you, we cleaned house. Truly, thank you.”

Anastasia nonchalantly set down her coffee cup.

“I want to ask how you found out, but... it's not important, so I won't. What matters is that we managed to eliminate a potential threat.”

“That's accurate.”

“Good. Our leader.”

From beyond the iron door, more screams were heard.

The Black Dragon Witch linked her fingers, propping her chin up, and stared at me intently.

“We’ve dealt with the traitors and heretics. Everyone is distracted by the blood fire drama performance, so no one noticed. After such a perfect cover-up, I wonder what our leader is planning to do next?”

Thud.

I closed the notebook.

“There’s only one thing to do.”

And I declared.

“Tomorrow, I will ascend to the 50th floor.”

Chapter 288: 50th Floor (2)

---

On a rainy morning.

I covered my face with a raincoat and stepped out into the square.

From the hologram billboard installed in the square, suddenly, a strange voice flowed out.

-I ask everyone to please vote carefully.

It was none other than my own voice.

A video recorded two months ago was playing.

'Eek.'

My face suddenly felt hot.

'Why does my voice always sound like that? Damn. It gives me the creeps...'

I quickly fled the scene.

As I left the square, I glanced at the hologram. My face was reflected in it, seriously staring straight ahead, speaking each word clearly.

-Everyone. This vote is not just about whether you trust us, the 5 great guilds.

-Will we ascend to the 50th floor? Or will we give up on further exploration and stay here? In other words, it's a vote that will determine the direction of our entire Tower.

-A completely different world awaits us from the 50th floor onwards.

Next, the scene of Babylon Square was shown in the hologram.

The square in the hologram was bustling with a huge crowd. Residents of the Tower who had just finished voting were ecstatic.

-King of Death! King of Death! King of Death...

-Yes. You have just seen the video from two months ago.

An announcer appeared in the video.

-As you can see, the vote conducted two months ago passed with an overwhelming majority. It was essentially a decisive vote on whether to trust the 5 great guilds and maintain the current system. Professor, the approval votes overwhelmingly outnumbered the opposition, didn't they?

-Yes. It seems the King of Death, er, our second-ranked hunter, has a positive image, doesn't he? The couple is also popular.

-Very popular!

-Yes. So, it was kind of a popularity vote...

-A popularity vote?

-It had to be. Yes. The way the King of Death appeared in the vote, and how that Ivansia Duchess methodically rebutted. Sigh, such things must have moved people's hearts...

-But, Professor. From the 50th floor onwards, hunters from other worlds will join us, right? Other worlds. Different worlds? What about that...

As I moved further away from the square, the sound of the news gradually faded, and my embarrassment slowly subsided.

I sighed and adjusted the hood of my raincoat.

'...Has it already been two months?'

It was the 60th day since the vote was held.

'Time sure flies.'

In the meantime, I devoted myself to organizing the inside of the Tower.

Dealing with the Seta Learning Institution, the fanatics hidden in the Temple of All Gods and the Black Dragon, was also part of the internal cleanup.

'No more worrying about being stabbed in the back.'

Everything was ready.

There was little chance that our Tower would be divided from within.

I stepped on puddles filled with the smell of clouds and left the city outskirts.

“Welcome, King of Death.”

Sitting in the middle of a desolate harem was [The Princess Who Strolls Through Mirages].

“It’s been a while.”

“Two months is nothing.”

“Have you been waiting for me here?”

The street was now uninhabited. Long-neglected roofs failed to stop the rain. Water flowed through the holes in the punctured pipes. [The Princess] crouched down, pressing her index finger against a downspout where water gushed out.

“Yeah. You were going to look for me anyway, right? I anticipated the path the King of Death would take and came out to meet you. It’s raining too. There’s no need to waste time.”

“Indeed.”

I approached behind the blonde [Pillar].

She didn't turn to look at me, still playing with the water in the downspout. As [The Princess] moved her finger, the flowing water split into two following the trail of her finger.

“You're looking for me to ask to open the 50th floor, right?”

“Yes.”

“Fine. I can grant any request. But are you sure? You’re alone now, King of Death. Wouldn’t it be better to be transferred with your reliable companions, especially since you’ve made so many?”

I shook my head.

“If the 50th floor opens, other worlds will be accessible. In reverse, it means other worlds can invade us.”

“Hmmm.”

“All hunters except me will stay here to prepare for the invasion. The Earth Spirit Tribe... the Asuras are fully prepared. If some force underestimates us and invades, well, they’re in for a surprise.”

“You’re cautious as always.”

[The Princess] stood up with a grunt.

“All the others are on defense, and you alone will be the scout diving into the 50th floor. It doesn't matter if things go wrong, you won't die anyway.”

“Yeah, that is exactly what we'll do.”

“Alright.”

She reached out and grabbed my wrist.

“From now on, you have graduated from the [beginner*] phase.”

*Novice is now changed to beginner, because it fits better with the new context.

The moment the dampness of her palm transferred to me, the sky above ripped open.

Krrrrrr...

Violet lightning struck down. Once, twice, thunder roared within the steam clouds. Even the storm clouds couldn't contain the thunder. Krarrrrrr! Krrrrr...! The clouds split into ten, a hundred paths, and purple thunderbolts branched out in the sky like capillaries.

[Beginner's protection is now disabled.]

Thunder poured down over me.

[Beginner's privileges are permanently revoked.]

[The World of the Lone Child formally joins the common route.]

[From this point on, The World of the Lone Child is free to travel to and from the 50th floor.]

[From this point on, different worlds are free to travel to and from The World of the Lone Child.]

It's disappearing.

The intangible walls that have protected us are crumbling.

'A world Yoo Soo-Ha has never breached once.'

I swallowed the rainwater seeping into my lips.

'A world where hunters like the Constellation Killer roam... a world conquered by the Sword Emperor.'

Thunder struck down.

Krarrrrrrrr!

It was louder than any other thunderbolt. From the heavens to the horizon, the sky literally split in two. Not just the storm clouds, but even the continuous rain was divided. Krrrrr...! The gap that had opened only grew wider.

Like an eggshell.

[Announcing to everyone.]

The sky was shedding its skin.

[Today, the 50th floor has been opened.]

[Announcing once again to everyone.]

[Today, the 50th floor has been opened.]

Finally, on the other side of the completely split sky, a scene unfolded that we had never known.

The Tower.

A single tower stood like a world tree.

“From now on, whenever you look up, you’ll see that tower!”

[The Princess] stood with me in the rain, looking up at the sky.

"In the mansion where dolls sleep. In the Aegim Empire. In the snowy wilderness filled with warriors, outside the library windows, in the birthplace of the Earth Spirit Tribe.... In any world you've chosen to be a part of, whenever, wherever."

"....."

"Bye-bye, King of Death. Make sure to survive."

[The Princess] smiled, drenched in the rain.

"I'll wait for you on the 100th floor!"

I smiled back.

And just as I opened my mouth to say "Yes,"

[You are entering the 50th floor.]

A blinding white light enveloped my vision.

---

I had visited the 50th floor before.

Using a kind of trick, an unofficial cheat, maybe loophole is a better word.

But I remember the moment I entered the stage, it was quiet around me.

['Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' detects your presence!]

This time it was different.

['The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth' senses the aura of the Constellation Killer from you.]

['The Lonely Seeker' welcomes the resident of the new world.]

['The Lotus Reflected on Water' is observing the sword you possess.]

Before I could even open my eyes, while my mind was still clouded in whiteness, alarms aggressively intruded.

Aliases I had heard before. Some I hadn't, sending messages, responding to my official entrance to the stage.

‘That’s quite the grand welcome!’

Then, Guardian Spirit, who had been silent since the dog dream this morning, blandly commented.

-Obviously, it has to be grand. You, Kim Zombie, must be on the watchlist of almost all the Constellations.

‘Huh? Why? I did cause a commotion here, but that was undone by regression. From their perspective, this should be their first time seeing me.’

-It's technically their first time seeing you directly. Kid, think about what you’ve done so far.

The white blur in my vision slowly faded.

‘What have I done to deserve this?’

-First, you killed the Apostle of Mahos. Then you killed Mutia’s Apostle. You didn’t just kill her, but you harvested her life with your skill and turned her into your subordinate. And he even captured the Constellation Killer. Do you even know how famous the Constellation Killer is among the Constellations? He was considered the craziest of the crazy. And you are the one who captured that lunatic.

‘Eh. The fact that I captured Kim Yul is already known among the Constellations?’

As my sight returned, the scene before me became clearer.

‘That doesn’t make sense. What I captured was Kim Yul, not yet the Constellation Killer’s [puppets] that are still moving around....’

-Right. They might not know everything. But there must be sharp ones. At least one or two would have been watching the Constellation Killer, and they would’ve found out he was devoured by you. Do you get it? Be careful, man.

Thud.

The first sense to return before sight was touch.

I had been transported, and my feet touched the ground.

-You captured the [Demon King of Autumn Rain]. Not just that, you gathered all [Goddess of Protection] and subdued them. The [Holed-Up Head Librarian] became a mere kid because of you. That's what you've done. A newbie who couldn't even climb the 50th floor!

Guardian Spirit chuckled softly.

-Normally, Constellations would kindly guide you and you would scrape through quests for rewards, but you just smashed those quests! And, nobody knows this, but you even met the Tower Master. Huh? Even I find it strange.

Finally, I could see the surrounding landscape.

-It's a strange situation, isn't it? Now, Zombie. No matter if it's their first time seeing such a crazy newbie, wouldn't they be interested? Wouldn't they?

Hmm.

‘Seems like it.’

-Of course, they’d be overflowing with interest.

‘So what? I like getting attention. Don’t worry. Be happy. Okay?’

-Sorry, but that attention is not that kind of attention, kid.

And then.

-Constellations are like game masters, GMs. They create quests. When you get attention from those guys, you’ll see what happens.

I had been transported to the middle of a wasteland.

Where strange monsters should roam, the place was, strangely enough, crowded with dozens of people.

These people, who came out to hunt monsters, and me, who was transported here, our meeting was entirely coincidental, or so I wanted to believe. But at first glance, it didn't seem so.

"---He's here! That guy!"

Because as soon as those guys saw me, they pointed fingers at me.

"He finally showed up!"

"Everyone, get ready for battle!"

Moreover, because each of them was holding a hideous sword in their hands.

Despite the pointing fingers and blades, it's quite hard to chalk everything up to coincidence.

For me, too.

"What's this now...?"

Without even having a chance to savor the feeling of finally reaching the 50th floor, I quickly drew my Holy Sword. Already surrounded. Over twenty people had encircled me.

[‘Warhorse of the Eternal Plains’ issues a quest to its followers.]

[You are designated as the target of the quest!]

[The quest is now public.]

And then, an absurd text appeared in the air.

+

[King of Death Subjugation]

Difficulty: Unknown

Objective: The King of Death is a human from the newly registered World of the Lone Child. Even before entering the common route, he dared to oppose the ‘Warhorse of the Eternal Plains'. He slaughtered the Apostle of Mahos.

Warriors!

The 'Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' commands you, brave disciples. Subjugate the King of Death! Take advantage of his arrival on the 50th floor and ambush him!

Be careful.

The King of Death is fearsome and cunning. A heretic who spares no means. He is also a wicked cult leader with hundreds of fanatics under his command. But do not fear, warriors. If you attack when he is still unfamiliar with the common route, you will have a chance of victory!

The warrior who kills or captures the King of Death will receive the Apostle's blessing from Mahos.

*However, you cannot participate in this quest.

*You are the [target of the quest].

+

"....."

I felt dizzy as common sense flew out the window.

‘What? Fearsome and cunning?’

A heretic who spares no means?

‘Who is that!?’

I don’t know such a person.

Is this some kind of error or misunderstanding?

-It’s no misunderstanding. You’re a member of the Demonic Cult, zombie. To those who don’t know you, you’re exactly like a heretic.

But am I supposed to be a wicked cult leader with hundreds of fanatics under me?

-That's quite a reasonable assumption. Vice-lord. According to that Viper guy, you're actually the big bad Heavenly Demon of this time. H.E.A.V.E.N.L.Y D.E.M.O.N. Even just the name sounds bad.

No.

What kind of nonsense is that!

“Don't let your guard down!”

A hunter, a resident of a different world who accepted this ridiculous quest, shouted.

“Mahos himself warned us to be extra careful with this guy! Don't be fooled by his human appearance! He's a devil among devils, a novice who can catch us off guard! Draw your swords!”

“Draw your swords!”

“Attack!”

The hunters forming the encirclement charged at me, all yelling in unison.

I raised my Aura to prepare for battle, but I couldn't help but scream out.

“Wait! I'm not a bad guy! If anything, I'm more of a good guy! Everyone, this quest is a lie! How can you blatantly lie in a quest like this? Hey, everyone. Everyone? I'm not the bad guy the quest is talking about!”

-Useless.

Guardian Spirit giggled.

-Quests are at the GM's whim. Remember the quest the [Demon King of Autumn Rain] gave you? It's no wonder that the Constellation Killer went around killing Constellations.

‘Then what do I do here?’

-Fight.

Guardian Spirit smirked.

-Welcome to the 50th floor's world of manipulation and distortion! Sir Gong-Ja!

Damn it.

Chapter 289: 50th Floor (3)

---

"Expose your neck! You wicked heretic leader!"

The hunters swung their swords.

Upper left. Upper right. From behind. Blades aimed at my life came from three directions at once. Clang! In a panic, I raised Shiny to parry the most urgent strike first.

"I'm telling you, I'm not a bad guy!"

"Truly a cunning heretic's silver tongue."

The apparent leader among them snorted contemptuously.

"Don't listen to his words, everyone. Mahos said his tongue is more dangerous than his sword. He said that the heavens turn upside down once he starts his rhetoric, and the earth gets deluded. Truly, a tongue born of the devil! Beware, he might charm us unwittingly."

"But who exactly is that!?"

The hunters I confronted swallowed hard.

They looked at me with eyes full of fear.

"He's terrifying...!"

"He just has a simple and innocent face. Behind that naive facade, such wicked evil lurks... How frightening!"

"Are you all blind or what? Huh?"

Even amidst the battle, the fight continued.

The skills of Mahos' disciples were, well, not particularly awe-inspiring. If it had been in the old days, I might have struggled, but frankly, their Aura control was far inferior to mine.

['The Lonely Seeker' is interested in your realm.]

['The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth' doubts if you are really a beginner.]

Three, six, twelve - even when they attacked in formation, it wasn't too tricky.

Unlike ordinary martial arts, Aura is a martial art of dominating space.

As long as I had enough Aura to dominate space, no matter how many enemies there were, it only got a bit more bothersome. I was just stunned by the absurd quest content, but I was not really in trouble.

"What is this...! Is this truly the prowess of someone who just arrived on the 50th floor!"

The Mahos disciples seemed shocked by my performance. They continuously changed formations, employing various techniques, but I remained unshaken. As their attacks piled up, the disciples grew more anxious.

"It's impossible. He must have made a pact with the devil!"

Not a devil, but I do have a ghost as a pet.

"How could he have reached such heights by normal means! He must have walked the path of evil arts!"

Well, I did improve my skills with some abnormal skills...

"Call for reinforcements! This heretic leader controls the dead. He summons the spirits of those he killed from hell and uses them as his soldiers!"

"Hah!"

"He was called the King of Death for a reason! Truly evil!"

Hmm.

Sort of right but not entirely correct either...

"Hurry up. He can't cast his summoning spell right now as we're fighting him, but if there's even a moment's gap, he will! We must subdue him before we all die!"

.....

Really?

'Sword Emperor.'

-What?

'I just realized something.'

I easily twisted and countered the twenty simultaneous Aura assaults from the disciples. I countered each Aura strike, turning it back on the disciples.

"This can't be!"

The disciples were astonished.

'What if, and I mean just hypothetically, what if, to others, I really look like a bad guy...?'

-Is that even a question?

Guardian Spirit replied as if it was obvious.

-You totally give off the vibe of an absolute evil boss.

'Why!?"

-Look, Zombie. Think again why I call you a zombie.

'Because you're a psycho with a twisted personality...?'

-There are many reasons why I call you a zombie, but one of them is to mock your lich-like nature.

'Lich?'

-Yes, lich. An undead sorcerer. Gaining power by sacrificing their own life and using the corpses they killed as subordinates – that's a lich. To those who don't know you, you're just a minion of evil.

I was stunned.

'That's ridiculous! I'm a hero! I've been certified as a hero since the 11th floor. Isn't that right, Shiny?'

[.....]

[Shiny acknowledges that you are indeed a true hero.]

Wait.

Shiny hesitated for a moment before answering. Am I imagining it?

['Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' recognizes your extraordinary skill.]

['Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' expands the quest range.]

[Warning! The scope of the quest involving you is expanded to the entire city!]

As I was subduing Mahos's disciples one by one, an ominous alarm rang. It was a message I had never heard before. But I could tell it wasn't good news for me.

"There he is!"

As expected, hunters began pouring in from the city direction.

"There's the lich!"

"Capture the devil's minion!"

"Oh, Mahos! Protect us!"

Surprisingly, all the hunters knew how to use Aura. Whether their level was high or low, they each used light-body techniques and approached rapidly. Dozens of hunters were leaping around with movement techniques, like a swarm of jumping cockroaches.

It was a scene scarier than any horror movie.

'Here, knowing how to use Aura is a basic for hunters!'

Even more terrifying was the sight of dozens more people following them.

"Oh dear."

I managed to suppress a laugh.

Of course, I could easily defeat them using [Ghoul Reincarnation].

But.

'If I use [Ghoul Reincarnation] here, I'll definitely be labelled the Lich King for real...'

I sighed inwardly. I might escape the immediate danger, but it would cause more headaches later.

There were probably forces watching this fight from afar.

If I flaunted the might of controlling the undead in such a situation, I would indeed be marked as the evil boss of the 50th floor.

Eventually, I came to one solution.

'Let's run!'

It was a very simple answer.

'Why fight these guys when there's no benefit for me? There's no need for unnecessary battles.'

-Giggle. Wise decision.

I focused my Aura on my thighs, hamstrings, calves, and soles. Then, taking advantage of a brief moment when the Mahos disciples were catching their breath, I leapt high from the ground.

"What!?"

"The lich is escaping!"

Sorry to say it, but the encirclement formed by Mahos' disciples was frankly weak. From my perspective, who developed the Demonic Formations Art with Uburka, it was just a cooperative attack filled with numbers. They practised the same martial art but didn't share the same mind, so despite dozens of them cooperating, their Aura movements were disjointed.

'After all, our Earth Spirit Tribe enjoyed the Blood Flower Drama for generations, hundreds of years, to learn the Demonic Formations Art. It's hard for ordinary hunters to mimic such formations.'

Feeling proud of my people, I left the battlefield.

"Chase him!"

The Mahos disciples clumsily pursued. But by the time their leader started to say 'Cha-' and finished with 'se!', I was already far away. It happened in an instant.

Among them, a few hunters of decent skill pursued me. But only for a moment. Within six seconds, I heard their cries of astonishment fading behind me.

"Good heavens! How can anyone be that fast...!"

"It's no use! Contact the other branches! We'll lose him if this continues..."

Their voices of astonishment faded away into the distance.

'Maybe I should move more cautiously.'

After shaking off the pursuit, I didn't stop. I darted back and forth across the wasteland, running as if entering the city, only to change direction abruptly. I visited each entrance to the city from all directions - north, south, east, and west.

'This should keep me from getting caught.'

I even took off my coat and tucked it under my arm. Although it was a temporary measure, I messed up my hair to change my style and fixed it with Aura.

'Okay.'

From a distance, it would not be easy to recognize me just by my appearance. Unless it was my comrades who knew me well, the disciples of Mahos would have no clue.

'Is this good enough?'

Twenty minutes passed.

['Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' sighs.]

['Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' acknowledges the failure of the quest.]

It seemed my prediction was correct as new messages were updated.

[The quest involving you is changing!]

[Difficulty is being adjusted.]

[Linked quest is proceeding.]

[The quest is revealed.]

I glanced at the text appearing before me.

+

[King of Death Pursuit Order]

Difficulty: A+

Objective: Sadly, the King of Death has broken through the encirclement and fled. The brave warriors surrounded and pushed him to the brink, but failed to catch him as he used his reserved power to escape in the end!

If the King of Death enters the city and hides, the 50th floor will face a great calamity. He is more toxic than a pandemic and more vicious than the black plague. He is a villain beyond any human-made remedy.

Hurry and find the King of Death, and inform your comrades!

Warriors, only you can protect the peace of the city and uphold justice! Other forces have already noticed the King of Death's potential and are attempting to approach him. If the wicked ones collaborate with the King of Death, a tremendous calamity will ensue!

*However, you cannot participate in this quest.

*You are the [target of the quest].

+

What should I say?

I could nitpick endlessly, but I'll refrain for now. Anyway, it's clear that I'm increasingly being portrayed as a villain straight out of a legend...

"Seriously, what kind of nonsense is this?"

I ripped one knee off my pants. Rrrrip! I rolled up the torn pant leg and wrapped it around my neck like a scarf. Adjusting the scarf to cover up my mouth, I managed a decent disguise.

"Why are you tormenting an innocent person? Is this how all Constellations behave?"

-Their tendencies are different, but their characters are similar.

"What do you mean?"

I entered the city.

[Your body begins to be eroded by Void Poison.]

[Your current erosion progress is Lv.1.]

[The Void Poison is neutralized by your Aura!]

[Erosion has stopped.]

At the city entrance, there were slums and bustling markets.

I easily blended into the crowd.

The noisy sounds of people talking, buying, and selling enveloped me, allowing me to comfortably chat with Guardian Spirit.

-Remember, I said Constellations are like game masters. They are literally GMs. Each one has its own distinct temperament.

"Masters..."

-And those who serve the Constellations can be seen as players. The master opens a session and issues quests, and the disciples of that Constellation decide whether to participate or not. Is this quest suitable for my level? Can I really accomplish it?

Before long, I spotted a familiar place.

An open-air pub.

There was no building, no walls, just tables, chairs, and a bar where the owner stood. The very same outdoor pub where I had an unofficial chat with the Constellation Killer, using a cheat to visit the 50th floor.

-But as I said, each Constellation has its own unique tendency.

"What about Mahos?"

I asked as I sat down at the bar.

-Mahos is a combat enthusiast.

Guardian Spirit answered promptly.

-His quests are simple. An enemy appears that must be defeated. If not defeated, the world is in danger. So, defeat it.

Oh, it escaped? Chase it. Oh, you defeated it? Here's your reward. They're damn simple.

Makes sense.

Hearing Guardian Spirit's explanation, I got a rough idea of what kind of Constellation the 'Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' was.

-That blondie you caught... Goldencup, right? At the Apostle level, quests get more complex, but those cases are rare. Most disciples are basically combat fanatics.

"Hmm."

-But these simple-looking quests are surprisingly popular. Actually, they might be the most popular ones. Mahos, if nothing else, ensures solid rewards. A fight worth the difficulty and valuable items. With these two, it's easy to lure disciples.

I ordered an iced tea from the owner and sipped it.

"I understand what you're saying, but why do the Constellations do this?"

-Haha.

Guardian Spirit smirked knowingly.

-Because it's the easiest way to receive worship.

"Huh?"

-You've never served a Constellation, so you don't know. Think from their perspective. Constellations are deliberately creating quests and rewards for you hunters. It's just to make your life more interesting.

I tilted my head, not understanding Guardian Spirit's point.

The Guardian Spirit opened his mouth as if he knew I wouldn't get it.

-Think about the Holed-Up Head Librarian. From your perspective, he unnecessarily threw you into a doomed world for his own amusement, watching you struggle and suffer, right? But think the other way around. The Head Librarian collected 'worlds' to give you quests.

"....."

-Even for Constellations, do you think that's easy? Scouring worlds in ruin, selecting apocalypses suitable for you among them. That's hard work.

"That's....."

I was shocked.

I had never thought about it that way.

-Zombie, do you think Constellations go through all that trouble just because they think hunters are cute? To see you suffer and die? Generally, Constellations are way stronger than normal hunters. They could kill you with a gesture.

"...That makes sense."

-So, in a way, Constellations are 'dedicating' themselves to you. Well, each one has its reasons for issuing quests, but the primary goal is the same.

Guardian Spirit explained.

-Worship.

Worship.

-You'll understand if you ever serve a Constellation. Completing quests and receiving rewards, you gradually feel like you're becoming a [hero].

"....."

-Your life becomes fun. You feel like you're no longer just yourself but someone meaningful in this world. Someone immensely superior, a Constellation, is creating events just for you and acknowledging your existence... Hah. It's addictive, like the high of an RPG.

...I see.

I had never walked the path laid out by Constellations, so I fundamentally differed from the hunters who surrounded me in the wasteland.

-That's why the bond between Constellations and their disciples is incredibly strong. Disciples naturally worship Constellations that recognize and reward them. They adore and love them. This worship is akin to the purest form of faith, fueling the Constellations' existence...

At that moment,

Boom!

The glass on the table shook, the ground trembled, and other tables around me spilt trays and dishes.

I instinctively looked in the direction of the explosion.

Chapter 290:

Forsaken Believers

(1)

---

Kwaaaang!

As the explosion rang out, the tavern patrons were thrown into disarray.

"What the, what's going on?"

"Damn it. It's starting again...!"

The customers neither evacuated nor hid under the tables. They simply grabbed the glasses and appetizers on the tables with both hands, wary of them toppling over. Here, on the 50th floor, an explosion was just a part of daily life.

「 Ah, ah. Mic test. Mic test. 」

Amidst the chaos in the hall, a voice echoed from the sky.

Including me, people looked up to find the source of the voice.

「We apologize for the inter-floor noise from the Magic Tower.」

Magic Tower.

That place, along with this open-air tavern, was one of the familiar locations on the 50th floor.

When I previously tried to capture the Constellation Killer, witches from the Magic Tower also participated. Their base, the Magic Tower, composed of five spires, stood tall in the sky.

It was like the fingers of a giant of the earth reaching for the sky.

'A power that has ruled over this 50th floor for over a thousand years... Was that it?'

I glanced at the Guardian Spirit.

'Isn't that place an enemy of yours?'

-Nah, nah. I don't really have any feelings towards them.

The Guardian Spirit claimed nonchalantly.

-It's just that they unilaterally hate me. Really. On the contrary, I think I'm quite aggrieved.

'...But didn't you destroy one of the original six towers? How is that an aggrieved person's behavior?'

-Now, look. Those kids always look so gloomy. They're always holed up in their tower, doing research, almost to the point where you can smell mold. I just made a little hole in the tower to suggest they ventilate once in a while. Thinking about it, I should be thanked. I even did a remodeling for free. Anyway, the richest folks on the 50th floor have no sense of decency. Tsk tsk tsk.

'It seems to me that you just have no sense of morality....'

The voice sent from the Magic Tower resounded throughout the city. People drinking outdoors, vendors laying out their stalls, vagabonds playing dice in broad daylight, everyone paused their daily activities and blankly gazed up at the five towers.

「I will be the spokesperson for the Magic Tower. Well, it's nothing much. Today, terrorists who don't know their place tried to mess with us, so we have to make this announcement.」

「The explosion sound that just scored a goal in your eardrums was the result of those terrorists' doing. Hey, hey. Bring them here. Not there. Tsk! That's right. There.」

At that moment, voices other than the spokesperson's sharply cut through.

「The Magic Tower is imprisoning our comrades!」

「We are followers of Hamusutra!」

I flinched.

They were followers of Hamusutra?

「 We are all officially enrolled Librarians! The Magic Tower is illegally oppressing and imprisoning us! 」

「 Everyone! If we don't unite and rise up now, someday you too will end up like us.... 」

「 Ah. Ah. Okay, that's enough. Phew. 」

A sigh from the spokesperson was heard.

「 Anyway, those without a master have such loud voices. Now, have you all grasped the situation? The disturbance this time was completely caused by losers abandoned by their Constellations. Just so you know.... 」

「 Shut up! We were not abandoned by Hamusutra! 」

「 Do you know the difference between the strong and the weak? The strong only have to be quiet when they want, but the weak have to be quiet even when they don't want to. 」 Kwajik!

A strange tearing sound burst from beyond the sky.

「Ugh! Urk...!?」

「Yes, as you can see, these guys are weak. It would be fortunate if they were just weak, but they even tried to damage our Magic Tower security system. The result? Well... I have a tooth in my hand right now. Do you get what I'm saying?」

「Please don't mess with the Magic Tower. That's the message I'm trying to convey.」

The surroundings buzzed.

「Oho? Trying to intimidate me? Listen here. When I say shut up, it doesn't just mean close your mouth. It also means shut your eyes.」

Kwazook, tzeeeuuk! Keeeiii....

The ominous sound stretched towards the cloudy sky. With each twist of the sound, gasps, groans, and someone's screams intertwined. The moans were cut into seven parts and scattered across the sky of the 50th floor.

"....."

"....."

Silence descended upon the open-air tavern.

The Hunters each looked around cautiously, trying to ignore the screams coming from the sky. They all realized this was a sort of public execution. Only the tavern's owner grumbled, "Tsk, they're ruining our business again," while cleaning the bar.

「 Ah. Ah. Testing the mic once more. 」

「 If you happen to see old followers of Hamusutra while walking around, or in places that aren't common path, please report them. Those kids are trouble, you know? There's a small reward, but think of it as contributing to the city's security.... 」

「Ugh, this is bothersome. Anyway, you've all got it, right? In my hand right now are eight teeth – front teeth, canines, molars, all combined. These teeth could belong to your friend or to you.」

「May fortune be with you.」

The voice abruptly cut off.

The sky was enveloped in silence as always. But the people of the 50th floor city seemed to find the silence in the sky burdensome. After about 10 seconds, the bustling noise of daily life hesitantly returned.

"Those damn things. Catching rat-like believers again...."

"The Librarians are really pitiful. Hey, where did Hamusutra disappear to?"

"Well, it's obvious. He was probably killed by the Constellation Killer, right?"

"Ugh. This is all because of one guy, the Constellation Killer. So many people are suffering."

It was a conversation I couldn't help but be interested in. I turned towards the table next to me.

"Excuse me. I'd like to ask something...."

"What is it?"

An elderly Hunter frowned.

A hunter with curly hair and an eyepatch over her left eye.

Not just her, but all the Hunters at the same table, regardless of gender, were had curly hair and eyepatches.

"....."

Overwhelmed by their striking visuals, I momentarily lost my words.

Stammering, I asked as politely as possible.

"...Uh, well. I haven't been up-to-date with the 50th floor happenings lately... I've only just returned here after three months. What exactly is going on with the Magic Tower?"

"Uh? You haven't heard about Hamusutra's disappearance?"

The curly-haired Hunters stared at me.

It was extremely uncomfortable.

"I think I've heard something like that...."

"Oh my, the rumor is that the Constellation Killer killed him!"

The curly-haired Hunter group seemed eager for someone to listen to their chatter. They noisily talked among themselves, tearing into bread appetizers that looked like something out of an Indian feast.

"From a while back, the faith in [Great Librarian of All Knowledge] abruptly ended. The Constellation was always indifferent to its followers, never responding to prayers, but now it feels like it doesn't even exist. Here. This friend used to be a follower of Hamusutra."

Curly-haired Hunter A poked the rib of curly-haired Hunter B.

B grimaced and chewed on a piece of bread, clearly uncomfortable with the topic.

".....Keep it down. It's not the case anymore."

"Heh. Hamusutra might have had few followers, but their loyalty was really high. And then suddenly, it disappeared, right? I understand why the Librarians are in despair."

"....."

I sensed an ominous premonition. Something big, something I never anticipated and didn't even know about, had happened because Hamusutra lost the power of a Constellation.

"That... Was the [Great Librarian of All Knowledge] originally popular...?"

"Hmm? No, not really popular."

Curly-haired Hunter A asserted.

"[Great Librarian of All Knowledge] was too unfriendly to hunters. Other Constellations guide you through small quests and naturally lead to the final quest, right?"

"Ah. Yes...."

Is that so?

I've never worshiped a Constellation, so I wouldn't know.

But to curly-haired Hunter A, it seemed unthinkable that I didn't worship a Constellation. He spoke as if it was the most natural thing.

"But the [Great Librarian of All Knowledge] was different. It just throws one goal like [Save this world from destruction] and leaves the rest up to you. Tsk tsk. It's irresponsibly frustrating."

"....."

"There's no reward or hint during the quest. Normally, if a hunter faces danger, a Constellation gives a chance or two, but this one just mercilessly lets you die! To put it nicely, it's high freedom, but to put it differently, it's just neglecting its followers. How could it be popular?"

".....That's exactly why I liked Hamusutra. It's different from ordinary Constellations that just throw quests. Hamusutra gave us a world where we can be active. Get it? It prepared everything and didn't interfere with us players. How great is that!"

"See? Such a fanatic."

A chuckled.

"But it's over now. As I said, the responses just disappeared!"

"....."

"Their followers are really foolish. If your master dies, you should quickly choose another Constellation to serve, but Hamusutra's followers are so loyal, they won't switch faith. Instead, they're banding together to survive.... How could those spider-like Magic Tower folks let them be? 'Ah, hunters without the backing of a Constellation,' and they capture them to enslave."

"Shut up! Hamusutra isn't dead! He's just laying low to avoid the Constellation Killer's pursuit!"

Hmm....

"Wow, scary. Should I shut up just because you say so? The Magic Tower people said it. The strong don't need to be quiet. I've been serving [The Lonely Seeker] for over 20 years, soon to be an Apostle. And you? You lost your beloved master and switched faith like a loser, didn't you?"

"You bastard!"

"Uh... Excuse me."

I interjected between the two Hunters' quarrel.

"What if the Constellation Killer isn't the one who killed

Hamusutra?”

"Hmm?"

“What?”

The Hunters looked at me as if I was spouting nonsense.

I was clearly being looked down upon as a beginner.

Carefully, I continued.

“What I mean is... the reason for Hamusutra’s disappearance isn’t clear, right? It’s possible that someone other than the Constellation Killer killed him. Or maybe, just maybe..... he didn’t die at all.”

"He didn’t die?"

Curly-haired Hunter A asked with a mocking tone.

"The aura of the Constellation has completely disappeared. Despite the followers' calls, there's no response. If he's not dead, did he run away or something?"

".....Maybe..... he fell and became human."

"What, fell? Human?"

A laughed loudly. Even B, who had been arguing with A, looked incredulous. Actually, all the curly-haired Hunters watching our conversation chuckled.

"Ha! This guy is definitely a newbie."

"Fell? I've never heard such a thing in my life."

"Listen, young man. A Constellation is a Constellation, and a human is a human. Especially Hamusutra, a renowned Constellation among Constellations. Maybe dead, but where did you hear such ridiculous urban legend?"

"....."

It's true though.

Hamusutra really became human and is working part-time at a cafe.

As a part-timer, he's so popular he's getting a lot of tips from customers...

“Of course, it could be someone other than the Constellation Killer. Another Constellation could have done it. But that's unlikely! So far, no one has claimed to have killed Hamusutra. What a great feat that would be, who would hide it?”

“Right. Hunters wouldn't miss a chance to brag.”

“Constellations have no reason to hide it either. The Constellation Killer, that crazy guy, is the one to blame.”

"Hmm....."

I asked one last question.

“What if, just maybe, the Constellation Killer isn't the culprit? What then?”

That's when it happened.

Curly-haired Hunter B's eyes flashed menacingly.

"We'll capture that bastard and kill him!"

Bang!

B, unable to contain his anger, slammed the table.

“How dare! Someone other than the Constellation Killer harm our heavenly Librarian, our precious Master! He'll be condemned to the void and fed to the monsters! That villain! I'll tear him limb from limb, nail him from head to toe!”

B's eyes, once a follower of Hamusutra, blazed with fury. A deadly aura. The other Hunters joined in, agreeing fervently.

“Hamusutra fanatics are formidable. Their love for their master is real. Heh. If there's a real culprit, all the universe's Hamusutra followers, all the stage's Hunters will swarm and kill him."

"Yeah. The extermination squad will have thousands!"

"That's only because the Constellation Killer is a universe-class lunatic that everyone's keeping quiet. If it's not him? Oh, then it's real trouble. I don't even want to think about it."

"A storm of blood will rage!"

The Hunters, except B, laughed heartily.

As if they had heard an amusing joke.

Of course, I didn't find it amusing at all.

-Zombie, do you understand now?

"....."

-Everything I told you is nothing but the truth.

The Guardian Spirit grinned at me, sweating bullets.

-You really are the real evil boss. You crazy cult leader, fucking sharp tongued bastard.

Right.....

At least I now know there's one thing I need to resolve on the 50th floor.....

Chapter 291:

Forsaken Believers

(2)

---

-Hmm? Followers...? Ah, yes, there were some.

Hamusutra spoke through the communicator.

I heard the sound of exertion, "Eutcha, eutcha," likely from moving boxes in the cafe.

"There were some?"

I leaned closer to the communicator.

"You have followers. Isn't that a bit negligent?"

-Oh, that's a harsh accusation.

Hamusutra replied indifferently.

-Gong-Ja, I never asked them to become my followers. They chose to be followers themselves. They called themselves Librarians and volunteered to be my hands and feet, but honestly, it was bothersome.

Hamusutra's tone carried a strong sense of annoyance, like trying to shoo a persistent fly buzzing around a dining table. It starkly contrasted how he addressed the Constellation Killer or me.

-More importantly, are you sure you want to chat with me with this precious one-time communicator? As far as I know, this is one of the secret tools the [Wide-Area Communicator] made. Of course, I'd be very pleased if you think a conversation with me is worth that much, but...

"No, it's not like that. Let's get back to the main topic."

-It's not that then... Hmm, about the followers, why bring them up now?

I explained the current situation. Initially, Hamusutra listened nonchalantly, but his tone became more rigid as the story progressed.

-Uhhuhm.

The noise from the other side of the communicator ceased. He had stopped moving boxes to focus on my story.

-Indeed, this is a bit troubling, even for me. Certainly, when I joined hands with you to fall, I didn't pay even a speck of attention to the Librarians...

That statement could make his followers cry.

"I'm also very troubled. It feels like I inadvertently caused harm to innocent people because I dragged you into becoming human."

-Uuuuum... As I said, the Librarians chose to be my followers themselves... If they abandon their faith in me now and switch to another Constellation, there shouldn't be any problem. It's a burden they should carry themselves...

Hamusutra sighed, resigned.

-But knowing your character, you won't just let this pass. Alright. Although embarrassing and shameful, can I entrust you to handle what I neglected?

"Of course."

I nodded.

"I didn't contact you to blame you. It's about Hamusutra's followers, after all. I just wanted to seek your consent and permission. I'll handle it myself, so just keep a note of this debt in your heart."

-Damn. It's a pity! If I were still a Constellation, I would have sent the message [Your favorability with the Great Librarian of All Knowledge has significantly increased] right now!

Why is he regretting such a thing...

Moreover, Constellations actually enjoy sending messages...

"Never mind the message. Is there some kind of token?"

-Token? Sorry, I don't understand. What kind of token do you mean?

"If I go to rescue the Librarians trapped in the Magic Tower. It would be easier if I had something that clearly shows I'm on the same side. Like a mark of Hamusutra. A password or something."

-Ah, I see, I see...

Hamusutra pondered.

-There's no convenient item like that... But there is a way that might work.

"What is it?"

-Among the Librarians trapped in the Magic Tower, there might be a Hunter you know.

Hamusutra said.

-His alias is [Assistant Writer].

"....."

What kind of life must one lead to earn the alias [Assistant Writer]?

I was dying to dig into this person's life and history, but the communicator I was using was time-limited. I reluctantly held back.

-[Assistant Writer] is a Librarian who quit climbing the tower on the 50th floor and is renowned among them. He must be over 600 years old. If the Magic Tower spiders started capturing Librarians, they wouldn't have left [Assistant Writer] alone. Among the followers, he was as revered as my Apostle...

So he's like the leader of Hamusutra's followers. I nodded.

"So if I gain the trust of this Hunter, that's the key."

-Exactly. [Assistant Writer] has entered Revelations twice for quests. I remember the ending of the first Revelation. It was a solo quest... Only [Assistant Writer] entered.

Hamusutra continued.

-Only I and [Assistant Writer] know the whole story of that quest. It's a secret shared between the two of us. All scenes and dialogues were unseen and unheard by the audience.

"....."

-I'll now tell you a line from that secret story.

A line that only Hamusutra could know in this world.

I listened intently to the words Hamusutra uttered.

---

The next day, I immediately put the plan into action.

The reason for staying overnight was to save a [Save Point].

In case I died, I wanted to return on the 50th floor, not the 1st.

"Alright. Let's get moving."

I headed out into the streets.

The chase had happened yesterday.

Although only a night had passed, several things had occurred in that time.

['Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' encourages quests among the followers.]

['Warhorse of the Eternal Plains' emphasizes the danger of the evil heretic cult leader!]

First, Mahos hadn't given up on me. Instead, he increased the quest rewards, desperately trying to catch me.

'How cute.'

I smiled slightly.

By now, Mahos's followers must be vigorously expanding their search network. Sorry, but it'll only get harder as time goes on. The teachings of the Demonic Cult aren't called the doctrine of shadows for nothing.

And it wasn't just Mahos who was anxious.

[‘The Lonely Seeker’ offers you a one-shot quest.]

[‘The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth’ offers you a one-shot quest.]

[‘The Lotus Reflected on Water’ is paying attention to your faith.]

[‘The Incarnation of Love and Lust’ offers you a one-shot quest.]

Almost all the Constellations with some power on the 50th floor had sent me messages. They seemed intrigued by how easily I had evaded Mahos's followers yesterday.

-The strength of a follower directly affects the reputation of the Constellation.

Watching my rising popularity, the Guardian Spirit snorted.

-Zombie, you're indeed a highly desirable recruitment candidate.

"That's nice to hear. But what's a [One-shot Quest]?"

-Well, as the name implies, it's short. It's a simple quest.

Explained the Guardian Spirit.

-Constellations don't just randomly invite someone to be their follower. They consider compatibility, personality, level, etc. Only after assessing all that do they usually send an offer. A [One-shot Quest] is like a trial to see if you're a good match.

"Huh."

-But a Constellation personally offering a one-shot indicates deep interest in you. Anyway, no need to choose right away. It doesn't matter if you never choose.

Hmm.

What should I do?

As I pondered, the Guardian Spirit started talking about the old days.

-Actually, I never chose one forever! Kyaa. It felt so good to ignore the love calls from numerous Constellations right in front of them. You don't know how satisfying that is. Sure, the Constellations treated me like a thug afterward, but so what? To serve a noble, they should send a thoroughbred, right?

"Good day, esteemed Constellations. I sincerely appreciate your invitation to the quests."

Right after hearing the Guardian Spirit's words, I decided on my approach.

-Huh..?

"Currently, I believe some of you might be secretly observing me. I'm a bit occupied at the moment. I'll carefully review all the one-shot quests you've suggested and then respond respectfully."

-Hey, why are you doing that? I told you to ignore them!

The Guardian Spirit was puzzled, but my proactive approach immediately elicited responses.

['The Lonely Seeker' is satisfied with your response.]

['The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth' is surprised to find you're more normal than expected.]

['The Lotus Reflected on Water' smiles.]

['The Incarnation of Love and Lust' increases the rewards for the one-shot quest!]

As expected.

"Thank you very much."

I expressed my gratitude again.

-You're strange. Hey, I told you. Constellations are all perverted lunatics. Why are you being polite to them?

'Sir Sword Emperor, I've learned something while living as a hunter.'

-What's that?

'First, no matter what I do, as long as it's the opposite of what Yoo Soo-Ha does, I score a hundred points.'

-I've heard that several times. I wonder how that guy is doing... But you said first, so what's the rest?

'Second, no matter what I do, as long as it's the opposite of what you do, I score fifty points.'

-This damn kid?

'Thank you for being my second role model.'

The Constellations were clearly cautious about me.

As soon as I responded with a bit of courtesy, proving I wasn't a psycho or an old fogey, they shot messages my way.

['The Lonely Seeker' asks if you're genuinely planning to oppose the Magic Tower.]

"Yes, I am."

['The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth' is curious about your relationship with Hamusutra.]

"Well, that's hard to say right away. I know what kind of being Hamusutra is. I'll tell you more about it once we get to know each other better."

['The Lotus Reflected on Water' asks if it's okay to continue observing you confronting the Magic Tower.]

"Yes, of course. When it's time for me to act alone, I'll ask you to divert your attention then, but until that moment, feel free to watch as much as you want."

['The Incarnation of Love and Lust' wonders if the person you've been talking to yourself since yesterday is your imaginary lover!]

"What? What the hell... No, sorry. I'm married. I have my love."

The messages in my head instantly became a cacophony of noise.

At least one of the Constellations turned out to be an extraordinary lunatic, but regardless, they were excitedly chatting among themselves, using me as a medium.

Compared to yesterday, their attitude towards me was much lighter.

['The Lonely Seeker' complains that the Magic Tower is blocking all quests on the 50th floor.]

Amid the small talk, there were useful pieces of information.

[‘The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth’ agrees.]

[‘The Incarnation of Love and Lust’ laments that many followers can’t progress beyond the 50th floor due to the Magic Tower, even with extensive campaign quests.]

[‘The Lotus Reflected on Water’ neither agrees nor disagrees.]

[‘The Lonely Seeker’ advises that infiltrating the Magic Tower is almost impossible.]

Indeed.

The Constellations seemed not too friendly towards the Magic Tower.

‘I remember the Guardian Spirit mentioning that a Constellation is imprisoned under each of the five spires of the Magic Tower.’

There was a time when the Guardian Spirit explained this about the Magic Tower.

'The Constellations are captured alive and their energy is extracted.'

If that's true, it's no wonder the Magic Tower isn't on good terms with the Constellations.

I moved closer to the Magic Tower, pondering in my mind.

-Now, zombie.

Before me lay ruins.

-Listen carefully to what I say.

It looked like a giant made of stone and wood had fallen and decayed. Moss and mushrooms covered the heaped rocks, and unidentified insects scuttled among the debris. Hunters swarmed the 50th floor, but this place was deserted and rarely visited.

-This is where the sixth spire of the Magic Tower once stood.

About 150 years ago.

The remnants of the old spire that the Sword Emperor himself had toppled.

-Only fools would try to infiltrate the Magic Tower directly. It's been famous for its ironclad security since old times. Even if you just [watch] the Magic Tower, you'd be detected in 23 seconds. After I wreaked havoc, the security must have become even tighter.

However, the Guardian Spirit added.

-That's only true for the other five spires I didn't destroy.

Thud.

I followed the direction indicated by the Guardian Spirit.

-Even those perverted Magic Tower folks wouldn't bother securing [an already destroyed spire]. Don't you think so?

Navigating through the debris was challenging. But the Guardian Spirit remembered this ancient event as if it just happened.

Following his instructions, I cleared away large rocks.

['The Lonely Seeker' is puzzled by your enigmatic actions.]

I kept clearing, but the debris piled up like a mountain.

Non-stop, I wielded my aura, digging like a mole.

-The spires of the Magic Tower are connected by secret passages.

Gradually, I was below ground level.

-Ordinary hunters obviously don't know, and even the Magic Tower's own spiders usually don't. Only the real top brass know about these passages. I deliberately didn't touch the secret passages when I caused havoc in the old days. I planned to use them again when I came back to destroy more. Sadly, I died on the 99th floor before I could complete the big picture.

The Guardian Spirit chuckled.

-How about that? Hitching a ride with you for my comeback?

Crack!

The ground I had focused my aura on split in two. Instead of solid ground, a loosely gaping crevice appeared.

I concentrated my aura further, widening the gap enough for a person to fit through.

-Then let's take advantage of it.

I readied my blade.

Before crawling into the underground entrance, I carved something into the rock.

The Sword Emperor has returned.

Until just 150 years ago, this was the dominion of an absolute powerhouse who had conquered the tower.

At that moment, my mind was bombarded with messages.

['The Lonely Seeker' is shocked by the characters you carved!]

['The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth' is surprised by the area it didn't know about.]

['The Lotus Reflected on Water' probes your intentions.]

Good.

I stored my aura.

The underground passage was dark, but it brightened easily when I shone Shiny.

-Zombie. You might be a bit lacking, but you're something like my disciple, aren't you?

'Let's assume that's the case.'

-Then, having reached the 50th floor, shouldn't you at least demolish one tower, just like me?

'What are you talking about?'

I grinned.

'At least two should be demolished to uphold the name of the Demonic Cult.'

Then, I leaped into the underground passage.

Chapter 292:

Forsaken Believers

(3)

---

The secret passage was pitch dark.

"Shiny, light up. What are you waiting for?"

[Shiny feels delighted to hear a command after a long time.]

[Shiny feels a severe sense of self-loathing for being happy about such a thing...]

Since integrating with all the sister swords and becoming a complete entity, Shiny has grown quite emotional. Yes, like a cheese pizza topped with camembert, cheddar, and gouda.

[Shiny points out that you forgot Parmesan cheese!]

Shiny shone brightly as if craving cheese pizza.

Despite being neglected for 150 years, the passage was relatively intact. Occasional rockslides were blocking the way, but that was nothing a slash of aura couldn't handle.

-Don't even look towards the northeast.

The Guardian Spirit occasionally offered advice.

-If you do happen to look, make sure to break eye contact before 23 seconds. Their security system activates even underground. Ah, and don't let your aura accumulate in your eyes. See that slightly different colored stone on the floor? Never step on it.

“Okay. Is this the right way?”

The Guardian Spirit knew exactly where to go and where not to look. There were traps every 12 seconds or so, but I avoided them all.

-Turn left at the first fork.

“Hmm. This way seems right... I just have a feeling.”

The Magic Tower's stronghold was as tempting as a Quattro Cheese Pizza before me.

-Oh, and there's a monster trap ahead. Just go around the side and wall run.

“Hey, you're right again. I must be lucky. I felt something ominous about the right path at the last fork.”

All the while, I kept talking to myself.

Of course, it's not because I'm crazy.

-Aren't you?

“Hey, what do you take me for?”

-I take you for whatever you actually are, zombie.

Contrary to the Guardian Spirit's wicked imagination, my babbling was meant to confuse the watching Constellations as if I was simply lucky to bypass all these obstacles. As if I had some fortune or detection skill that made it so easy for me to evade traps, I kept on rambling.

[‘The Lonely Seeker’ is speechless at your progression speed.]

[‘The Barren Lady’ wants to pat you on the back.]

[‘The Incarnation of Love and Lust’ thinks about slapping your butt too!]

[‘The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth’ seriously doubts the skills you possess.]

Okay. Although some strange folks exist, these Constellations are taking the bait well.

I swiftly navigated through the secret passage. I could feel myself getting closer to the heart of the Magic Tower. The further I walked, the stronger the presence of something like aura but stickier and more noxious, like a toxic fog.

-Stop.

Abruptly, I halted at the Guardian Spirit's command.

-This part is crucial.

The floor illuminated by Shiny showed nothing unusual.

However, the Guardian Spirit spoke as if a red starting line had been drawn.

-The Magic Tower's mages, known collectively as [spiders], have bio-etched insignias on their bodies. These insignias serve as a kind of ID, allowing them free access. From this point, anyone without the spider's etching will be recognized as an outsider and trigger an alarm.

“Hmm. It seems like if I walk carelessly from here, I’ll get into big trouble...”

-But it’s also [detection magic]. There's a delay before the magic actually activates.

“Looking at it, it doesn’t seem like an instant-reactive trap...”

I casually acted while the Guardian Spirit chuckled at my performance.

-Six seconds.

The Guardian Spirit pointed forward with his left hand.

-You just need to get past it in six seconds.

"....."

-Actually, I'm not sure if it's six or seven seconds. Anyway, last time I ran through in six seconds, no alarm was triggered.

I turned my head. The passage stretched far into the darkness, too deep for even Shiny's light to reach.

I picked up a stone and threw it with all my might, like a baseball player, infused with aura...

"Hm."

The stone shot straight out. Except for the sound of it cutting through the air, there was nothing else. Only after a long while did I faintly hear a thud as it hit something.

The end of the passage didn't seem close at all.

-It's a bit far, huh?

The Guardian Spirit snickered.

-Heh. Starting to get an idea of how awesome I was back then? I was like a comet streaking across the sky. My red hair fluttered, just like the tail of a comet.

"....."

Listening to him, I surveyed the passage.

‘So you crossed it in six seconds, huh?’

-Of course.

The Guardian Spirit shrugged nonchalantly.

-It felt like a leisurely walk, but it took six seconds.

Alright.

This will be fun.

“Constellations, I may not be a magic expert, but I have a nose for magical scents. It seems like the spiders ahead have laid a rather nasty trap.”

I put Shiny back in its sheath and began stretching my thighs and calves.

“I’ve just arrived on the 50th floor, and you’ve shown interest in me. So I want to give you a chance to judge what kind of person I am.”

[‘The Lonely Seeker’ is intrigued by your words.]

['The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth' knows what lies ahead but remains silent.]

As I put Shiny away, darkness enveloped everything. The cold air filled with a strange, ominous magic, making the darkness seem like squirming tentacles.

After finishing my warm-up, I took a deep breath.

'I'm running.'

Movement technique.

The technique I learned from my master was an improved version of what originated from the Kunlun Sect.

'Run!'

The secret isn't just wrapping aura around the legs and feet.

I also form a small, sponge-like orb of aura under my soles.

I don't step on the ground directly. Instead, I step on the small aura mass, exerting force on my entire leg, and then explode that tiny orb.

It's a continuous process.

Naturally, a slight mistake could cripple your legs. Not only do I have to wield aura to prevent damage to bones and muscles, but I also use the explosive force of aura as propulsion.

‘Six seconds, you said?’

Facing the Guardian Spirit's challenge, I concentrated aura more intensely under my feet than ever before. Like a child pressing mud into a ball, I layered aura, creating a [spring] ready to explode at any moment.

‘Let me show you a 5-second run.’

Then, I launched forward.

Perhaps 'shot out' would be more accurate for such speed.

-Oh-ho.

1 second.

In the vast darkness, I heard the Guardian Spirit's whistle. Smiling, I focused solely on creating and stepping on the [aura springs].

The reactions of those other than the Guardian Spirit were even more intense.

['The Lonely Seeker' is astonished by your aura manipulation!]

2 seconds.

The wind slashing past my cheeks was sharp. I wrapped my entire body in aura. The sticky magic, like a spider's web, attempted to block my charge.

Of course, I tore through the web-like magic and advanced.

[‘The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth’ is certain you're no novice!]

3 seconds passed, yet the end of the tunnel was still not in sight. However, the intensity of the web-like magic was increasing. My form was definitely getting closer to the Magic Tower, and at a very rapid pace.

‘4 seconds.’

I ran even faster. I compressed the aura springs under my feet more forcefully, more fervently. I started to feel that [pushing any further would be harmful], but it didn't matter.

‘5 seconds!’

Finally, I sensed a solid wall blocking my path. A dead end. The end of the secret passage. An entrance was revealed.

If I reduced my speed now, I could cut it close to 6 seconds and gently stop in front of the entrance.

‘Not yet,’

But I just kept running.

‘5 seconds!’

At that moment, BOOM! My body crashed into the dark barrier.

Rather than colliding, I basically demolished the wall.

Despite covering my entire body in aura, the impact was inevitable, so I tumbled on the ground.

"Ow, uh, owowow..."

Rumble.

The barrier I broke through crumbled, bricks falling apart. Amidst the rising dust, I slowly stood up, massaging my thighs.

No alarm for intruders sounded.

"Ah. Thank you, Constellations. It seems I've safely passed through the secret passage. My thighs are just... Ah, I pushed myself a bit too much."

[‘The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth’ is at a loss for words.]

[‘The Lonely Seeker’ begins to pity the Magic Tower for having you as an enemy!]

The Constellations were clearly dumbfounded in their messages.

[‘The Incarnation of Love and Lust’ realizes you're crazy and is delighted!]

[‘The Incarnation of Love and Lust’ eagerly recommends not just a single quest but an entire campaign for you!]

[‘The Incarnation of Love and Lust’ is ready to promise you an enormous quest reward!]

Ignoring that one who had been like that since earlier.

'Now, Sword Emperor. What do you think? Don't you believe that the difference between 6 and 5 seconds represents an insurmountable wall separating the ordinary from the extraordinary? In other words, I am a meteor surpassing a comet. Comets may look stronger, but in English, comets are 'comets,' and meteors are 'meteors'. In most RPGs, Meteor is a higher level spell than Comet, reflecting the general perception of the world...'

I was turning to tease the Guardian Spirit when it happened.

Snap.

I accidentally locked eyes with someone whose identity I couldn't discern.

"....."

"....."

Probably.

The figure in front of me seemed to be cleaning this underground area.

Looking around, I saw that the end of the secret passage turned out to be a sewer.

The smell of cheese missed its eating time emanated from various places. It was evident that this was a neglected area, and therefore, anyone who had to clean such a place was surely not a high-ranking official, nor a child of one, not even a friend of such a child's, but simply, the lowest of the low.

"Uh, uhuhuhuh, uhuhuh...."

The mage boy, obviously a low-ranking one, holding a broom, looked at me with terror-stricken eyes.

He twitched his toes as if to move (he was barefoot) but did not. Or rather, could not. He was completely paralyzed by fear.

"Intruder... intruder... there's an intruder...!"

"Hello."

I gently grabbed the boy's shoulder.

Politely smiling the whole time.

“Nice to meet you.”

“Eek!?”

The boy clammed up.

From his perspective, I was a bare-bodied person who just smashed through a massive wall and appeared unscathed, albeit a bit stiff.

Though I must have been covered in dust from head to toe, my human-like appearance, even with a gentle smile, was unlikely to be very appealing.

“I seem to have lost my way.”

Nevertheless, I always tried to be kind to anyone. Still smiling pleasantly, I spoke to the boy in the softest voice I could muster.

“I'm not quite sure where this place is. Could you perhaps guide me?”

“This, this place is... the Magic Tower...! The Magic Tower's second division...”

“Surely, this isn't the Magic Tower, right? Imagine, just getting lost and ending up here, only to be treated as an intruder. And the Magic Tower folks having to swiftly eliminate the intruder, and since the intruder wouldn't want to die, they would have to silently kill the witness who discovered them. Surely this isn't such a horrifying Magic Tower?”

“Eek...!?”

The boy dropped his broom.

“No, no! This isn't the Magic Tower! Absolutely not! I don't know where that is! Please, just... I didn't see anything... Ohh, I didn't see it...!”

“Ah. That's good to hear.”

I genuinely felt relieved and nodded.

I wanted the boy to know that I was satisfied, so I gave him another smile. The boy finally seemed reassured and swallowed hard with a "gulp."

He must have realized I was harmless.

"I'm looking for the followers of Great Librarian of All Knowledge - Hamusutra. I have some business with them... Sorry to bother you, but since this place isn't the Magic Tower and is just a slightly complex location, could you guide me?"

"Uh, those followers... are under strict surveillance. I... I'm just..."

"Ah."

Squeeze.

"We should help each other out in life."

I gave the boy's shoulder a more comforting pat.

“You can at least guide me, right?”

“...Yes, uh....”

The boy was trembling.

Tears welled up in his eyes.

Surprisingly, most of the human body is made of water, which occasionally gets expelled through the eyes.

".....I'll guide you... just... please spare me....."

“Ah, see? There's still kindness in this world!”

I patted the boy's back.

“Thank you. Nameless spider. I'll surely repay you later. Ah, of course, once I safely escape from this place that is definitely not the Magic Tower. Let's both make it out safely!"

"Huuuh... yes..."

"What's your name? I'm Kim Gong-Ja, mage. And you?"

"Cha, Charumu... my name is Charumu.... Huuuh..."

For some reason, the boy shed more tears.

I was pleased that things were going smoother than expected. Then, a beat too late, I remembered I was in the middle of boasting to the Guardian Spirit.

'Ah, right. Anyway, Sword Emperor. I was one second faster than you. One second leads to ten, then a year, and eventually a century. So, essentially, I'm a hundred years ahead of you, right? It proves that the Demonic Cult's movement technique is the best.'

-.....

‘Do you admit it? Mr. Six Seconds. Huh? Having fallen a hundred years behind someone who made a 5-second record.’

-Yeah....

For some reason, the Guardian Spirit looked incredibly disillusioned.

-Right... Viper isn't your rival for nothing...

‘What?’

-Nothing. Just go be the best...

Perfect.

Everything is perfect.

Now, off to heroically save people!

Chapter 293: Sword Emperor's Return (1)

---

He was overwhelmingly superior to be considered just another hunter like them.

-Hey, you losers! Sometimes you need to get some air.

-Staying cooped up all day like you guys isn't good for you.

It was excessively repulsive to even consider him a human being like themselves.

-Here, consider this a favor! I'll give you a free remodeling today! Haha.

The elder of the Magic Tower clenched her teeth. She had numerous subordinates under her command. So far, six constellations had kneeled before them, and six worlds had submitted to their rule. The 50th floor had long been their domain.

But why.

-Why can't we catch that damn gorilla!

-Because I'm a damn strong gorilla, that's why.

The elder was infuriated. "Ah, fuck," she muttered involuntarily.

If he had been a warrior of some dignity, she could have accepted defeat. If he had a clean character deserving of respect, if not admiration, she would have willingly handed over the throne of the 50th floor.

-I can't do that!

But she couldn't accept defeat to a bastard like him.

-No, I won't! Sword Emperor, you bastard! It's better you just kill us instead!

-Oh. Then let's do this. From now on, every time you call me a bastard, I'll take down one of your towers. Deal?

-What? What nonsense...

The Sword Emperor swung his sword casually. All the hunters fighting on the 50th floor realized something. Even if the Sword Emperor was a bastard, what came out of his mouth was far from nonsense.

The spire, boasting its majesty for over a thousand years, was neatly sliced off.

-Aaaaaah!?

The elder was going insane.

-No! Stop it! My research! My experiment materials! No, no, the Constellations! At least protect the Constellations sealed underground! And you, you bastard.....

-You alright? Call me a bastard one more time, and another tower goes down.

-B..... Ba..... Bird.....! Fuck, bird!!

-Oh. Right. The universe is vast, so somewhere, there might actually be a species of bird called 'fuck bird'. I'll accept that.

The elder seemed on the verge of losing her mind. No, she actually had lost it. If only she could smash her fist into that smug face of his, she would gladly lose all her 200 years' worth of research data.

A thousand-year-old great tree. A demon. A monster. She had many aliases, but now, she was nothing more than an ordinary madwoman before the Sword Emperor. He had the knack for driving his opponents insane.

-I'll kill you!

The elder vowed.

-I will kill you for sure! I'll leave the ruins of the tower you destroyed as an eternal mark! And when you return to the 50th floor, fuck bird! I'll catch you and imprison you in the ruins underground! Forever! I'll stake your heart!

-That's why you guys are going to fail.

The Sword Emperor clicked his tongue and slung his sword over his shoulder.

-You should think of chasing me but you're already thinking of my return.

-What?

-I am the Sword Emperor. The unrivaled warrior of the World of Thousand Swords. And, I will be the first orthodox warrior to conquer the 100th floor of the tower in all creation!

Then, something astonishing happened.

The hunters on the 50th floor, who were watching the battle, felt something from the Sword Emperor's declaration.

Maybe they were too complacent in reality? Weren't hunters supposed to climb the tower? Hunting newcomers on the 50th floor, dominating the world of beginners, and living comfortably - wasn't that wrong?

Yes. There was a deep meaning behind the Sword Emperor collapsing the spire of the Magic Tower. Even if they ruled the 50th floor, they were not eternal victors! Anyone can become a traitor. The Sword Emperor had taken up his sword to teach us, the common people, this noble intention. Oh, praise him. From now on, we are followers of the Sword Emperor, disciples of the Sword Emperor Sect. We shall all follow him...

"Excuse me, Bird Sir."

-Huh? What now? It's just reaching the climax.

"Stop your bullshit and just show me the way."

It was all an old story of the Guardian Spirit.

---

While listening to the Guardian Spirit's old tales about the Magic Tower, specifically his useless brags, I delved deeper into the interior of the Magic Tower.

Infiltration was easier than expected.

-That's because the external surveillance is too thorough.

The Guardian Spirit, who seemed in a good mood for visiting a place related to his past after a long time, willingly answered questions I didn't even ask.

-There are few cases of successful infiltration up to this point. There are too few intruders, so they rarely have a chance to reevaluate their internal security. And right now, you're being guided by an insider.

“Eeeeeek.... The big spiders will kill me if they find out....”

As the Guardian Spirit said, an insider of the Magic Tower was faithfully guiding me.

His name was Charumu, right?

The mage boy trembled as he walked, his long bangs obscuring his face, but he seemed to be very timid.

"I've betrayed the Magic Tower... If caught, no, I'll surely be flayed alive. The big spiders will see how pretty my mana is, then thinly slice my small intestine, marinate it in a potion, and grill it on a torture plate... I'm scared...! They'll record my pitiful screams in a harmony and play it as an acapella song every time they torture me...! Scared, scared, scared....."

"....."

This boy, he's so detailed in his imagination yet he's cooperating with me?

He's more like a hero who lost his fear rather than just timid.

"Ah... wait, please stop...."

Just when I was slightly taken aback by his unusual behavior, the mage boy, holding his staff, suddenly stopped.

"There are guards stationed up ahead..."

Was the weight of the staff, longer than his height, too much for him? He trembled.

"If we go further, they'll notice..."

"There are guards?"

“Yes, yes...”

At my inquiry, the mage boy shrunk. He nervously twiddled a strand of his bangs.

“They’re not very strong, but they guard and monitor the disciples of Hamusutra... A sensitive spider was chosen as the jailor. And, you mustn't recklessly kill the jailor. If he dies, an alarm will automatically sound throughout the Magic Tower...”

“Hmm. I see. It is indeed a bit tricky.”

I stroked my chin. What to do? Approaching and knocking them out before they notice would be simple, but I wanted to avoid dangerous methods.

Seeing me pondering, the mage boy, Charumu, hesitated.

“There is a way...”

"Uh?"

“I’ll distract the jailor... You must be a great master, right? If the jailor is busy with me, you can surely finish the job...”

Huh.

He was clinging to me, begging to be saved just moments ago, and now he’s offering proactive suggestions.

I tilted my head.

“Really? That would make it easier for me. Are you sure?”

“Not at all. Not at all... *sob*. But now, my life is bound with yours... If you succeed, I live. If you fail, I die too.”

“Hmm.”

Even the lowest mage is still a mage.

He surrendered just minutes ago, but as soon as his fate was decided, he started thinking fast.

As I was pleased with the boy's proactiveness, he continued mumbling.

“If you fail, my intestines will be skewered and crisped over a flame fueled by dog shit from the Cerberuses... *sob*. My small intestine will be skewered with yours... In a way, we're already bound by an intestinal connection...”

"....."

What kind of connection is that?

It's quite disturbing....

Besides, this boy, he's definitely not normal.

Honestly, it's scary.

"Then... I'll go first."

The mage boy walked away, dragging his cloak behind him.

[The 'Lone Seeker' watches your stealthy movements with interest.]

[The 'Eyes That Dwell in the Labyrinth' predict that your companion will betray you.]

[The 'Incarnation of Love and Lust' gives generous points to the boy hiding behind his bangs.]

After a few steps, the mage boy turned a corner. Splish, splash. For a while, only the sound of his bare feet squishing in puddles echoed from around the corner.

Shortly after.

"Hey! Stop! Who's that?"

A strange voice addressed the boy.

"Come any closer and I'll shoot..."

"I-I'm sorry! Please don't kill me!"

"...What? It's just a bug."

I pressed myself against the corridor wall, eavesdropping on their conversation. The owner of the voice seemed to relax upon recognizing the mage boy, a distinctly condescending tone in their voice.

"What's a bug like you doing here, huh?"

"I-I was cleaning the sewers... and lost my mop. Could you, um, maybe lend me a spare one...?"

"A mop, huh? Haha."

The voice chuckled.

"There's a mop right there."

"Where, where?"

"You. You're the mop. Look at that cape you're wearing. Just roll around on the floor to clean it. A bug whose very existence is a mop. You lost something and came all the way here to borrow?"

Thump!

A sound of a hit echoed.

"Ouch.....!"

"Mop bug, bug mop. Perfectly poetic. Hey, I was bored watching the prisoners. I couldn't even punch them once; the big spiders strictly forbid torturing prisoners for fun. They get to enjoy all they want!"

Thump, thump. Familiar sounds of beating continued from around the corner.

"Yikes, ugh. Sob...!"

"I took this job as a guard hoping for some fun, but it's just a waste of my precious time. I need to research too! It's obvious how my colleagues are getting ahead! This is troublesome, you see!"

"I'm sorry.... Sob! I'm sorry...."

Okay.

The attention is more than diverted; it's glued.

I immediately sprinted around the corner.

In my first step, I entered the hallway; in my second, I passed the guard who seemed to be a mage.

"Huh?"

Detecting me, the mage uttered a dumbfounded sound. He didn't look much older than Charumu. He was kicking the fallen Charumu when he froze in his tracks.

"What the----"

On my third step, I was behind the guard. Tapping the back of his head with a finger, I poured aura into his spine. Forcing aura into his vertebrae, he gasped, "Huh!?" and fainted.

Thud.

The guard collapsed next to the mage boy who was being beaten. The crisis was resolved in an instant.

The mage boy, curled up like a hamster, then looked up.

"Ah...."

"Good job. Thanks to you, it was easy to subdue him."

I patted the mage boy's head once and searched the fallen guard. Clink. An old bunch of keys came into my hand.

"From now on, I'll make sure to take good care of your identity."

"Really...?"

"Of course. It's a person's duty to take care of their own. You betrayed the Magic Tower to join me and even actively helped like this. Of course, I'll save your life. I'll help you settle down properly in the world."

"Really...? For real...? Can you swear by the Constellations you believe in? I mean, uh, of course I believe you but... just..."

"You've been deceived too much."

I smiled.

"I don't particularly worship any Constellation, but to someone important to me... Alright, I swear on the name of the House of Ivansia. And just so you know, it's a big deal."

"Aaaaah....."

The mage boy covered his face with his hands and sobbed.

"Thank you... Thank you, intruder... Thank you..."

"Ah, it's nothing."

Feeling strangely pleased, I turned around.

A typical prison unfolded before me. It was too dark to see inside the cells, but I could sense the presence of prisoners.

Among them, there might be the [Assistant Writer] Hamustra mentioned.

"Well then, the guard is out cold. Let's slowly free the disciples..."

That's when it happened.

Screeeeeeeech!

A grating noise ripped through the entire prison, maybe even the whole Magic Tower. It was a sound that instinctively made people flinch. I reflexively raised my aura to protect my hearing and looked around in confusion.

"An alarm? Is this an alarm? What's going on..."

Then I saw it.

The mage boy stabbing the guard with a dagger.

"....."

"Huff, huff. Haaah..."

The mage boy was covered in blood. The guard, who had been unconscious, was obviously dead without having resisted. The boy, smeared in blood, wiped his sweaty forehead with his hand.

"I finally killed him..."

I was stunned.

"Excuse me."

"Yes? Intruder...?"

"Why did you kill the guard?"

"What...?"

The mage boy blinked, not understanding my question.

"Because he deserved to die, didn't he?"

"....."

"He was 30 years younger than me yet flaunted the favor of the big spiders. I've been cleaning sewers for 131 years, 10 months, and 21 days, and he already had a guard position... If that's so, sob, it's unforgivable..."

"....."

"Also, he beat me... A lot. He deserved a little death... It's unavoidable retribution..."

"But..."

I barely managed to speak.

"You told me not to kill the guard on our way here, right? You said if the guard dies, it triggers an alarm. So I should be careful."

"No? No...?"

The mage boy tilted his head.

"I said [you] shouldn't kill the guard..."

"....."

"I had to kill him..."

Right.

My instincts are never wrong.

Whenever I felt some guy was crazy, he was 100% crazy.

Not once did it turn out to be, [Hey, relax! Actually, he was normal!] No such cliché ever happened. It's always been like this, it will be like this in the future, and it is like this right now. Crazy. Why did I trust a guy like that? Did I trust him because there was nothing else, not even a bald chimpanzee?

"Ah, of course the alarm went off... But now the chances of us being bound by the skewer connection have increased. Considering it a small price to pay for a bit of justice in this world... isn't that cheap?"

Screeeeech! Screeeeech!

The unsettling alarm continued nonstop.

The Guardian Spirit spoke to me, lost in my sage time.

-I told you. The 50th floor is full of crazies, right? Why do you treat the words of a heavenly senior like dog shit and ignore them? Doing so, you become dog shit yourself, zombie.

You're the craziest of them all, you nutcase.

Chapter 294: Sword Emperor's Return (2)

---

-But do you really have time to curse at me now?

The Guardian Spirit laughed slyly.

-The alarm has been sounded. In a blink of an eye, the spiders will swarm us.

"Damn it. Followers of Hamustra!"

I ran towards the prison, holding the bunch of keys.

"If you are a disciple of Hamustra! The [Master of the Great Library of All Knowledge] is the greatest Constellation in the universe! If anyone is there, make even the slightest groan!"

"Uuuugh..."

Weak groans emanated from various places.

My aura-enhanced hearing didn't miss even the faintest sounds. Twelve places in total. I began fumbling with the bunch of keys to find the right one, but then---

"There's no time for this!"

I threw the bunch of keys on the ground and drew my holy sword, slashing through the iron bars. Clang, clang, clang! The bars, as if enchanted, were incredibly sturdy, but they snapped like straws under my surging aura.

"Come on! Anyone who still has the strength to stand, hurry..."

-Rooooooooar!

That's when it happened.

A sinister roar echoed from afar.

I couldn't tell what kind of monster was howling. One thing was certain; it wasn't howling to announce the dawn.

[The 'Eyes That Dwell in the Labyrinth' find your predicament amusing.]

[The 'Lone Seeker' is keenly observing how you'll overcome this situation.]

[The 'Incarnation of Love and Lust' is excitedly imagining your future as a captive!]

This is insane.

"Everyone, just follow me! Let's escape!"

I cut the restraints of the disciples.

"W-Who are you...?"

Some, severely tortured, couldn't even stand up. For them, I stimulated their acupoints to circulate aura and poured potion into their mouths.

"Drink this!"

"Gulp, gulp....."

"Don't throw up! It's damn good for you!"

I handed out a bottle of potion to each disciple. It was a special medicine from the Apothecary, now invaluable due to scarcity.

The loyal Apothecary had said, 'For you, I'll offer it at a friend's price...' Thanks to that, I could generously distribute it in a situation like this.

"Oooh?"

"This, this taste...!"

"Incredible. Such efficacy from such a tiny dose..."

Apothecary's skills seemed to be recognized even on the 50th floor.

‘Truly, she’s my friend.’

-That girl was quite a nut too. Come to think of it, isn’t this Charumu kid somewhat similar to her?

‘Keep it down, will you.’

Most of the Hamustra disciples had taken the potion.

But 'most' is not the same as 'all'.

"Wait. Who are you to tell us to follow you?"

The woman, who looked suitable in glasses and had a sharpness in her eyes, spoke up. Her disheveled hair from imprisonment made her look fiercer.

"I am also a follower of Hamustra."

I said.

The woman frowned.

"I've never seen a librarian like you. I won't leave until you explain what your intentions are..."

We didn't have time for this.

"Just focus for a moment."

"What?"

I accelerated my aura to stretch the perception of time. On this elongated timeline, I looked around carefully.

The Hamustra disciples were watching the woman with anxious faces.

Not as colleagues or subordinates, but clearly as someone superior. They seemed eager to flee but hesitant to move without her permission.

‘As expected.’

I realized immediately.

‘This person is the [Assistant Writer].’

Wasn’t it said that she is almost treated as an apostle among the Hamustra disciples?

To lead the disciples, I needed to gain her trust first.

‘If she’s an apostle-level person of a Constellation, she should understand telepathy, right?’

I spoke while maintaining the stretched timeline.

"The [Master of the Great Library of All Knowledge] personally asked me to take care of you, [Assistant Writer]."

My words flowed out at a speed impossible for ordinary people to mimic. To a human of lower realm, my sentence would sound like a single word, ■, an incomprehensible buzz.

As expected, the [Assistant Writer] was capable of understanding telepathy. She knitted her eyebrows.

"The Master asked you...?"

"Yes. To take care of his disciples. The believers who stayed loyal to him. His current situation..."

"I can't believe it. We are far from the top of the Master's [Favorite Character Ranking]. You're telling me he sent you to rescue us? That's a [convenience-driven, incoherent plot development]."

Favorite Character Ranking, character breakdown, convenience-driven plot development... What are these?

That Constellation and its apostle, I thought, but again, we didn't have time for this.

"I knew this would happen, so I brought proof."

"Proof?"

"The Master said there's a phrase only you and the Master of the Library know. A phrase you heard from someone when you entered the apocalypse."

I whispered into the Assistant Writer's ear.

"[I am looking at your face right now.]"

"....."

The Assistant Writer's eyes widened.

"[Someday you too shall die. If you think of my face when you close your eyes, then both of us will die looking at each other. The same. Looking at each other. The same. I'll be here, waiting only until you close your eyes.]"

".....Enough, no. I understand."

The Assistant Writer made a difficult expression.

"That's enough..."

She seemed sad, angry, and surprised all at once.

For a moment, scars that everyone accumulates in life seemed to surface on her face.

"Yes, you must be the person sent by the Master. It's hard to shake off the feeling of implausibility, but well, I'm not exactly the [protagonist] anyway..."

She shook her head bitterly. Then, her eyes regained focus.

She spoke.

"I'll handle the disciples. What's the escape plan?"

"Originally, I planned to sneak out quietly..."

In the stretched timeline, the alarm echoed strangely.

"But with this mess, let's just push through with force."

"Can we really do that?"

"The quicker this conversation ends, the higher our chances. We're talking telepathically, but we don't have much time. So hurry..."

"This man is indeed sent by the Master!"

The Assistant Writer shouted to the surrounding disciples.

"Everyone, follow this man's orders! Damn these spider bastards! Let's escape!"

"Yes!"

The disciples responded eagerly, as if they had been waiting for this command.

-Rooooooar!

The monster roared eagerly, as if it had been waiting for just that command. Finally, it rounded the corner and burst into the prison.

Consequently, the disciples' initially spirited response of "Yes!" turned into a twisted, panicked "Yeeeees!?" by the end.

-Oh. A chimera. Haven't seen one of those in a while.

The monster didn't waste time sizing us up or anything like that. If there's one advantage beasts have, it's living in the present moment.

And this monster's present moment was drooling from its maw as it charged toward us.

-That's a hybrid of a manticore and a slime, a mutant bred by mixing the two.

Thump! Thump! The ground shook with each stride of the monster. Where its eyes should have been, there were none. Instead, a sticky green liquid continuously oozed from its eye sockets.

The Guardian Spirit clicked his tongue.

-Ugh. Perverts. They're the same as they were a hundred years ago.

“I'll lead the way! Just follow me!”

I charged forward.

“Ah...! In-Intruder! That is...!”

Charumu tried to say something with a swallowed groan, but I didn't listen and charged ahead, guessing what he might be trying to say.

‘It must be something like, “It's a lifeform that can't be killed without a special method!”’

Monsters inhabiting the 50th floor are usually special.

For example, to kill a [Creature that Dies When Split in Half], you need to split it precisely in half, and to kill a [Screamer], you must overwhelm it with sound, not slashes.

This chimera, a monster emerging from the Magic Tower, is one from the highest difficulty dungeons on the 50th floor. It won't die just from being cut recklessly.

‘So...’

I slid, skidding under the chimera's belly, and before it could react, I plunged the tip of my sword deep into its underbelly.

‘If I obliterate it down to the last speck of dust, that should do it!’

The sword flashed brilliantly. Red lightning seemed to shoot up, and then the next moment, Boom! The beast's belly burst open.

But it wasn't just the belly. The chimera's innards, body, spine, head, even the slime oozing from its eye sockets – its entire being exploded instantly.

“Eek!?”

The mage boy screamed. I had used the holy sword like a syringe, pumping aura into it like crazy.

The monstrous infusion of aura beyond any logic caused the creature to explode while still alive.

“Phew.”

I exhaled, having expended my aura.

I didn't just settle for bursting the chimera's body; I burned its skin, bones, and even the last trace of its existence. For a brief moment, ash-like dust fluttered in the air, but even that was incinerated.

I had literally erased the monster's existence.

“Okay!”

I sprang up and looked back.

“There's no need for a special strategy when you can just obliterate it! Let's go, quickly!”

The mage boy, the Assistant Writer, and the disciples stared at me blankly.

“What are you waiting for? Let's go!”

“Ah, yes. That's right. Let's hurry!”

The Assistant Writer was the first to snap back to reality. She grabbed and pulled at the shoulders of other disciples, sometimes kicking their behinds to urge them on. The disciples then joined in, following me as we fled.

[The 'Lone Seeker' is speechless at your aura manipulation.]

[The 'Eyes That Dwell in the Labyrinth' are amazed you're not exhausted and still in good shape.]

[The 'Incarnation of Love and Lust' is already preparing a long campaign just for you.]

Yeah, yeah, thank you, thank you!

But such stories are for later!

“That chimera was a pet especially beloved by the big spiders...”

The mage boy, panting heavily, still managed to follow me. Despite struggling to run, he kept trying to look at my face, seemingly shocked by the recent events.

“The chimera’s heart, being like slime, circulated endlessly within its body... unless it was precisely stabbed, it wouldn't die...”

“Ah, I see. So my method was the right one.”

"....."

The mage boy opened and closed his mouth but then shut it, focusing on running.

-Roar! Roar!

Monsters appeared non-stop in the corridors, as if springing from nowhere.

“If you don't want to die, move, you weirdos!”

Not slowing down, I swung my sword. Whack! Splatter! Every monster that my sword touched exploded like a balloon.

For about 3 seconds, monstrous creatures of terrifying appearance kept emerging, but I was eradicating them at a rate of one per second, clearing the path ahead.

“Hyaaaah!”

In roughly 40 seconds, I had exploded about fifty monsters.

Then, I felt something off.

I had been tense infiltrating and now cautious escaping, but I wasn't tired at all. Sure, the monsters were terrifying. But wasn't it enough to just smash them with brute aura?

‘Isn’t this easier than I thought?’

It wasn't as difficult as I had imagined.

Maybe, just maybe.

‘Have I become much stronger than I thought?’

Pause.

I halted my steps.

“Huff, huff... huff...!”

“In-Intruder, just a little... slower, please...”

The sounds of panting followers came from behind. Strange. I had only enhanced my legs with aura and ran, yet my companions, all hunters who had made it to the 50th floor, were struggling to breathe.

"....."

I looked up, still holding my holy sword.

We were still underground in the Magic Tower.

Beyond that wall would be the city on the 50th floor.

‘Let’s give it a try.’

I gripped the sword handle and activated a skill.

‘I relinquish all memories of the hunters I met at the open-air bar.’

Woosh!

The holy sword wrapped itself in red aura. [The Torn Goddess's Salvation]. A skill that grants temporary power in exchange for memories. Channeling a skill inherited from the Constellation Killer, I swung my sword at the corridor ceiling.

With just a single slash a blood-red storm surged. The stone wall crumbled amidst roaring thunder, overpowering the screams of the disciples behind me. I swatted away falling rocks, heading for the disciples' heads, and looked upward.

[The 'Eyes That Dwell in the Labyrinth' are in shock.]

Before long, the ceiling was cleanly punctured.

"Oh."

Through the gap in the ceiling, dark clouds loomed. The 50th floor was always cloudy. But even that gloomy sky was brighter than the underground corridor's ceiling.

It felt like looking up through a hole from the bottom of a well.

"This works?"

"....."

The disciples gaped at me in awe.

"Line up one by one. I'll lift you up. What are you waiting for? If the spiders catch up, it'll be a headache. Let's line up orderly and with decorum."

"Intruder..."

The mage boy, trembling, opened his lips.

"What, what exactly are you...?"

I shrugged my shoulders and replied.

"The boss of evil."

Chapter 295: Sword Emperor's Return (3)

---

“Who are you... What the hell are you?”

The [Assistant Writer], a disciple of Hamusutra, abruptly asked.

“Apart from the fact that the Great Librarian of All Knowledge chose someone... What was that insane aura just now? A skill? How did you learn such a skill?”

“I'm just a newbie who arrived on the 50th floor yesterday.”

“Don't lie to me. There's no way a newbie like you exists in this world.”

“All groups are desperately looking for experienced newbies like me.”

The Assistant Writer's face twisted like a sweet potato.

I shrugged my shoulders.

“Let’s get out of here first. I’ve been feeling a chill on the back of my neck. Seems like some annoying guys are following us.”

“...Alright.”

The Assistant Writer reluctantly swallowed her words. She seemed to be holding back from asking various questions due to the situation.

The other party members also hurriedly moved their feet.

-Uoooooh! Guooo!

The beasts poured out through the escape route we had just crawled out of which was a hole I had made.

The real chase had just begun.

“Ahhh!”

“R-Run...! Hurry!”

The disciples screamed. They were running so hard that they seemed unable to properly scream. Perhaps their physical strength had dropped considerably from being imprisoned for a long time.

“What a shame.”

I clicked my tongue in sympathy.

“Come here. I’ll help you. How do you plan to survive in this harsh world with that kind of stamina?”

“Y-Yes?”

I didn't wait for a response. Instead, I grabbed the nape of one of the disciples. I lifted him up effortlessly.

It wasn't difficult. A life of imprisonment takes away various things from a person. Those who lost their dignity over a long period were that much lighter.

“Uh? Eh?”

“Relax. Don’t you understand? If you tense up, you’ll get hurt unnecessarily.”

"Uh, uhm....."

“Shut your mouth so you don’t bite your tongue.”

I put more strength into my right arm as I continued to run.

“Hrmpf!”

And then, I threw him.

“Eh?”

I literally threw him.

Like a shot put athlete in the Olympics.

I threw the disciple I had lifted with my right hand, wrapping him in an aura barrier, forward.

“----Ah.”

The disciple flew. In the slow, extended time. Above all, in the air.

Like an elegant flamingo dancing over a zoo lake.

The disciple flailed his arms and legs in desperation, but as in life, he grasped nothing but thin air. All that existed were nitrogen and oxygen.

“Eeeyyiiiiiieeek!?”

And so, one of the most novel screams I've ever heard in my life existed there too.

I clicked my tongue.

“I told you to shut your mouth, and yet you scream like that.”

Kooooom!

The disciple flew splendidly and crash-landed. Some might call it a crash rather than a landing, but in the grand scheme of life, there was no significant difference between the two.

“Now, let’s move on to the next one.”

“Huh?”

I grabbed the nape of another disciple. It was simple. The disciples were dumbfounded, looking up at the sky as their comrade performed his flamingo act, unable to escape my grasp.

“It’s dangerous, so shut your mouth.”

“Huh? .....Yes?”

“Hrmmmpf!”

“Ahh, ack, haa, aaaaahhhhhhh!?”

What followed was a repeat performance.

I picked the weakened disciples one by one and threw them far away. Then I ran up to them, sprawled on the ground, and threw them again.

“S-Save me... please save us...!”

“This is all for you to survive.”

Thanks to this, the disciples, despite their lack of strength, could sit still and move quickly. The beasts couldn't keep up with our speed and gradually fell further behind.

It was a truly divine dribble.

[‘The Lonely Seeker’ is at a loss for words at your actions.]

[‘The Eyes Dwelling in the Labyrinth’ realizes you are out of your mind.]

[‘The Incarnation of Love and Lust’ has taken a liking to you from now on.]

Local broadcasting is so noisy.

-Ah, ah! Mic test! Mic test!

How far had we run? Finally, a familiar voice came from the direction of the tower.

It was the spokeswoman of the tower who publicly tortured the disciples of Hamusutra yesterday.

-What the hell, who are you?

The spokeswoman was fuming. Her voice came directly to me through telepathy. I was also ready to reply via telepathy.

-What kind of crazy bastard are you? Can't you hear meee?

“Good day. You're working hard, miss. The weather is nice today.”

-You really are crazy, huh!?

She was talking to herself too much.

-Do you know who you're messing with? Eh? Eh?

“Well, I don't know much since you haven't introduced yourself. Don't you think introductions are a very important part of etiquette in a world where people live?”

-Where did this insane lunatic come from... We are the tower! The tower! We have the power of Millennium Magic! The supreme tower! The force that monopolizes this great Monopolized Poisonous City on the 50th floor!

So the city's name was Monopolized Poisonous City.

“That’s right. Nice to meet you!”

-Can’t you return them right now!?

“Ah, sorry, but that seems a bit difficult... I listened to your broadcast yesterday. It seemed a bit too much. Life is precious even if we live well together, so why bother the kind disciples of Hamusutra? Seeing that, I felt sorry and am helping them escape.”

-Oh, wow. Really, such a crazy guy.

The spokeswoman kicked something furiously, the sound transmitted through telepathy.

In the midst of provoking the other party appropriately, I continuously searched for a way to escape. I was trying to buy as much time as possible.

If we return to our tower like this, we could easily escape.

‘But most likely, we’d be caught.’

I shook my head.

The Magic Towers have been reigning over this city for more than 1000 years. Even if they get beaten, they would chase us to the end for revenge.

Of course, to counter the invasion of other worlds, the Sword Saint and the Black Dragon Witch would be fully prepared, but still, it was best to avoid unnecessary battles as much as possible.

-Which Constellation's lackey are you? Eh? Which one?

“I don’t serve any Constellation. If I have to say, I always carry my beloved in my heart.”

-Ah! Catch that bastard and beat the crap out of him! Anyone will do, just please!

That's when it happened.

“...Over there.”

The Assistant Writer, who had been keeping up with me, spoke next to me. While all the other disciples had regressed to flamingos, only the Assistant Writer was able to run on her own feet, keeping up with my pace.

“It doesn’t matter which world you’re from, it’s dangerous to run there. Not everyone from that world can be as strong as you.”

“I was just thinking the same thing.”

“There is a secret hideout where our comrades are hiding. I’ll guide you there. ...It’s a place we’re not supposed to reveal to outsiders, but since you’re someone who received that person’s message.”

The Assistant Writer muttered.

“Gray, embrace us.”

At that moment, the voice of the tower echoed in my head.

[A certain skill affects you.]

I tilted my head. I couldn't feel any effect with my senses.

However, it seemed different from the perspective of others, as the spokeswoman of the tower immediately became enraged.

-Damn it! Assistant Writer! How dare you do such a shoddy trick...!

The telepathy changed. Until just now, the telepathy that was directly hitting me, now started to ring from the sky instead of my head.

I wondered what was happening.

"It's a skill that hides the presence of aura."

The Assistant Writer explained from beside me.

"The Magic Tower identifies people by their aura to send telepathy. Aura is like a person's fingerprint... From now on, even the Constellations won't be able to talk to us."

“Interesting.”

Indeed, the Constellations who had been noisily broadcasting in the local channel also suddenly fell silent.

In short, the Assistant Writer had activated a kind of [Stealth] skill.

“But it can’t hide our physical presence... Thank you. I could use this skill with peace of mind because you helped us escape this far.”

“That’s impressive. It’s quite a convenient skill.”

“In my opinion, the truly impressive one is you...”

The Assistant Writer gave a bitter smile.

“This skill won’t last long. Follow me, Mr. [Protagonist] of this story. I’ll take you to our hideout.”

-We’ll kill youuuu!

The spokeswoman's voice raged behind us.

-You may be a lunatic, but let's see if you can keep your nerve after being caught by us! Yess! I'll tear your nails out and shove them into your eyes, and Charumu! You, I saw you there!

"Hic..."

The mage boy following us in silence hiccuped.

-You know how it ends for traitors. Ahaha! But you'll realize how ignorant you were because, uh! Because you will set a new record for the worst punishment ever given to traitors!

"Ugh... Huh..."

-Expect it!

Bang, a noise sounded. The spokeswoman seemed to have slammed the table.

-You will all receive the worst massacre! No! The worst eternal hell! Definitely! Without fail!

---

We successfully shook off our pursuers.

“This is the place.”

The Assistant Writer led us to an underground cave.

“As you know, the 50th floor is eroded by void poison. The land itself has a strong magical nature. The deeper you go underground, the stronger the disturbance becomes, so the tower's spiders can't accurately locate us. It's a natural fortress.”

As the Assistant Writer said, the secret hideout extended deep underground, without a single light.

“Is there only one entrance?”

I lit my fingertip with aura to use as a light. The disciples carefully descended the passage using my light.

“No. There are several. I know of 14 exits, and probably there are more than 23 times that I don’t know about.”

“That’s incredible.”

“Well, that's necessary in case we're invaded so everyone can escape on their own...”

The Magic Tower also knew about this hideout and occasionally invaded it. However, the underground cave was unimaginably vast and had countless entrances, making a complete sweep virtually impossible.

"....."

There were eyes watching us from the dark depths of the cave.

“...They are the librarians...”

“Why did they come back? How did they return?”

“Shh, don’t show any interest...”

They were ragged-looking people. It seemed they had set up dwellings in a corner of the cave, with cluttered living tools scattered around. There were also dirty tents spread out to avoid the dew dripping from the ceiling.

As we walked down the cave passage, there were people like that, with their belongings strewn about.

“...This is a communal refuge.”

Noticing my curiosity about their identity, the Assistant Writer informed me.

“A communal refuge?”

“Yes. Not only librarians like us, but almost all hunters who lost their Constellations live here. The toxicity is strong, so it's hard to live long... But it's better than being captured by the Magic Tower and be subjected to human experimentation.”

Indeed.

I noticed that there were small shrines included in the cave dwellers' tent homes.

Some even arranged a modest altar with a deity statue on it.

“Outside, they call us [escapees]. Well... Even though we're in similar situations, there's no sense of solidarity. Rather, they hate each other. They served different Constellations, and each thought their own was the best.”

“I can understand that.”

“Is your world the same? Well, all worlds are similar. This way, please. Each Constellation's followers have strictly divided areas, so it's dangerous to enter the wrong one.”

As I followed the guide, looking around.

“...Hmm?”

Something strange caught my eye.

I rubbed my eyes, thinking I saw it wrong. After wiping away nonexistent eye gunk, I looked again, enhancing my vision with aura.

"....."

But my vision was normal.

In one corner of the cave.

There was another passage leading in a different direction from where we were walking. What I noticed was on both sides of the passage. Sculptures carved like the Four Heavenly Kings in Seokguram* were there.

*For more info, check <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Seokguram>

The sculpture had a very familiar face.

"Huh?"

The Assistant Writer, walking ahead, stopped and looked back.

“What’s wrong?”

“Nothing... I’m just seeing things right now...”

"What is it?"

The Assistant Writer also looked where I was staring.

She tilted her head after seeing [something].

“Huh? Why?”

As if it were a very familiar, everyday sight.

“That’s just a normal [Sword Emperor] statue.”

"....."

I was stunned.

“Careful, intruder.”

If the mage boy hadn't been right behind me, I would have collapsed.

“That, that, Sword Emperor statue? Sword Emperor staaaatue?”

“...Why are you so surprised?”

“Why. Why. How come, why is there a statue of something like the Sword Emperor!?”

I grabbed the Assistant Writer's shoulder and shook her. I couldn't help it. The Assistant Writer looked at me as if I were crazy, then shook off my hand.

“Why? Well, because the Sword Emperor is also a Constellation. Of course, there are people who serve him.”

“Yeees?”

“I don’t know why you’re so surprised... The Constellation of the Sword, commonly known as the Sword Emperor, is quite famous. A hundred and fifty years ago, when he was still human, he once brought down the a spire of the Magic Tower. Though, like our Librarian, it is said he didn't make disciples... But there are always followers everywhere.”

The Assistant Writer furrowed her brow.

“Especially, followers of the Sword Emperor are often seen as fools obsessed with martial arts. I’ve seen them a few times passing by, but I recommend not getting involved with them. How should I put it... It feels like they live in a different world.”

"....."

Creeeak.

I slowly looked at the Guardian Spirit.

The Guardian Spirit looked at me as if to say, what are you staring at now?

-Why?

‘Explain this to me.’

-Flip your card over.

‘Card? What damn card?’

-My card, you idiot. The one you took from that gramps Marcus.

I summoned the card.

I flipped it over.

+

[Sword Constellation]

Rank: A+

Effect: From another world, he cleared his world's tower up to floor 99 but failed on the 100th. Unsatisfied, he was unable to give up on his earthly desires, and has become a spirit.

He cannot physically affect anything in this world, but is able to communicate with the holder of this skill.

Be awestruck by his skill and experience, and ask him for guidance!

*Only the holder of this skill is able to feel his presence.

*Skill copied from Marcus Calenbury.

+

What is this?

-Look at the card's name, Mr. Zombie.

I looked.

-Is [Sword Constellation] visible to your eyes or not?

"....."

-Then am I a Constellation or not? You brain-dead zombie.

This is insane.

Why didn't you tell me?

-You didn't ask.

This insane son of a...

-And I did tell you.

‘When?’

-When you invaded the Magic Tower today. When I told you a secret passage to sneak in. I told you a story from the past.

[Yes. The Sword Emperor had a deep purpose when he brought down the tower's spire. Even if it's a power ruling the 50th floor, there's no eternal victor! Anyone can become a traitor. The Sword Emperor took up his sword personally to teach this noble intention to us, the common people. Oh, praise him. From now on, we are the disciples of the Sword Emperor, followers of the Sword Emperor Sect. We will all follow him...]

-But you told me to shut up and just lead the way.

"....."

-I always speak the truth, you brain-dead zombie. But in the eyes of a sage, only sages are seen, and in the eyes of a zombie, only zombies are seen, you always dismiss my truth as nonsense. Even now, realize that I am a true senior with a proper personality.

So.

‘You’re telling me there really is a Sword Emperor Sect in this world, with followers who serve you? For real?’

-That's correct.

This world is crazy.

Chapter 296: The Legend Himself (1)

---

Witness A.

First testimony.

“T-The Sword Emperor? He’s famous, of course...”

The mage boy, with his bangs covering half his face, stuttered.

“I personally witnessed the Sword Emperor demolishing the sixth spire... It was incredible. Just by swinging his sword, the tower, coated in all sorts of magic and thick armor, crumbled to pieces... Ah! It might have been the first and last time Elder was that enraged. Umm... I was really pleased because there were many detestable people in the 6th Branch who all died... Though as a result, my lineage got wiped out, blocking my path to promotion, and eventually, after several decades, I ended up cleaning sewers for 131 years, which was shitty...”

Witness B.

Second testimony.

“...I don't know why you're asking this.”

The librarian with an irritable gaze sighed.

“The Sword Constellation... Commonly known as the Sword Emperor, is so famous it would be strange if someone didn't know about him. He's probably ten times more renowned than the current Constellation Killer. Anyway, he was the only person to have ascended beyond the 99th floor. Frankly, I think he cleared the 100th floor... Huh? Why was such a psychopath famous? ...What are you talking about? Why have you been making a face like you've eaten shit?”

Witness C.

Third testimony.

-I never really wanted to be a constellation, you know.

The world's rascal rambled.

-I don't know since when, but faith started gathering around me. And somehow, I ended up becoming a constellation. Well, that's a story for later. Anyway. The conclusion is that I'm an incredibly awesome guy. The true savior, you see, zombie. Even without trying, I'm worshiped as a god.

Since the witness is utterly useless, the above testimony is classified as bullshit.

“This world is rotten...!”

“Why have you been like this since a while ago? ...Ah, but you were also personally chosen by the Librarian. It's natural you have some quirks.”

The [Assistant Writer] muttered as I plunged into despair in real-time.

This is the hideout of the Hamusutra disciples.

After descending the underground cave for quite a while, we reached the secret hideout. There were no decent buildings or furniture. Just some mats laid on the cave floor and simple canned food stocked.

But just being here seemed to reassure the disciples, as they exclaimed, “Ah...”, “Thank goodness,” “Thanks to the King of Death, we could survive that hell!” and so on.

“Thank you so much! Our lives are all indebted to the King of Death!”

“Ahaha... You’re too kind.”

Normally, I would have calmly accepted their gratitude. But now, an earthquake of magnitude 5 was happening at the corners of my mouth. The Sword Emperor Sect. The fact that a religion worshiping the Sword Emperor existed in this universe shocked and terrified me to the point of nearly losing my sanity.

I barely held onto my sanity and spoke.

“Well, then everyone can return to their own worlds now.”

"....."

The disciples looked at each other at my perfectly normal words.

“Um, King of Death. The thing is...”

“We have no world to return to,” said the Assistant Writer.

“The tower has colonized and turned it into a colony. In the old days, there were rebellions, but that’s a story from hundreds of years ago. Now, only traitors who collaborate with the tower to enjoy wealth and power remain. Even if we wanted to return... there’s nowhere to return to. Nor do we want to.”

“Wow.”

I was somewhat surprised. A colony.

I had suspected to some extent, but the tower really could conquer the towers of other worlds.

“That’s why people like us can only stay on the 50th floor.”

The Assistant Writer leaned her hand on her forehead and sighed.

“We can't escape to lower floors. There are plenty who would capture us and offer us to the tower. Nor can we advance to higher floors.”

“Why? If you clear the quest, you can go directly to the 51st floor, right?”

“...You really are a newbie who just arrived here.”

The Assistant Writer looked at me as if I was a marvel.

“You really don't know anything. Well, you might just have remarkable acting skills. Until a moment ago, I thought you were a recluse who had concealed your identity and come down to the 50th floor.”

What is she talking about?

“Uh, intruder.”

The mage boy spoke from beside me, his face troubled.

Then the boy's words completely exceeded my expectations.

“Since 150 years ago, there has been no hunter who cleared the 50th floor...”

What?

“Well, to be precise, no hunter not affiliated with the tower. To clear the 50th floor, you must either be a part of the tower or at least not be their enemy.”

“Really? ...For 150 years? How is that possible?”

“The tower is blocking the quests.”

The mage boy fiddled with his wand anxiously.

“Until now, there was a responsible person for each stage you passed through. The responsible constellation... But beyond the 50th floor, there's no such helpful guide. You have to find a constellation on your own, serve it, gain its recognition, and bring its quest... only then can you pass.”

“No, wait. That’s strange.”

I furrowed my brows.

“Then constellations just need to give out quests, right? I received countless whispers from constellations as soon as I arrived on the 50th floor. They all wanted to run quests with me. How can the tower monopolize the quests?”

"....."

The mage boy pulled his hood further over his head. I almost forgot about his dramatic betrayal, but he was also a part of the tower, until just two hours ago.

“Those are minor quests.”

The Assistant Writer answered in place of the mage boy.

“Kill this person. Help that person. Such quests can be given out anytime. Rewards can also be given. But to compose a quest that can be recognized as [Clearing the 50th floor], it's complicated to go around the tower.”

“It's a bit hard to understand, isn't it? Hmm. But you're also a messenger of the Librarian, right?”

The Assistant Writer scratched her cheek.

“First off, whether you like it or not, the tower is the force that rules the 50th floor. You know that, right?”

“Yes. More or less...”

“Then you can understand that it's tricky to compose a quest that allows bypassing the tower and claiming to have passed the 50th floor, right? It's like if a novel threw in lots of foreshadowing about the final boss for 497 pages, only to casually dismiss it in the next 3 pages with ‘Actually, it's not necessary to defeat the final boss’ ‘Yeah, yeah, it's okay to ignore it’ like a comedy sketch. The novel would be trash, right?”

A typical metaphor from a disciple of Hamusutra...

“So, even from the constellations' perspective, to create a 50th floor breakthrough quest, they inevitably have to use the [tower] as a material.”

The Assistant Writer spread her fingers.

“Firstly, you get recognized by the tower. You serve the tower for a long time or maintain a consistent camaraderie to become [a member of the tower] or [an honorary member of the tower]. Thus, you build achievements like [You have gained solid support from the force ruling the 50th floor]. ...This is the current [regular route]. Hunters who climb up this route steadily appear one or two per year.”

"....."

“Secondly, you directly fight the tower and subdue it. ...This is the [irregular route].”

“And there hasn’t been a hunter who cleared the irregular route in the last 150 years... That’s what you mean.”

I stated, understanding.

The Assistant Writer nodded.

“Yep. It’s not an easy task.”

The Assistant Writer snapped her fingers.

Then, pages appeared out of thin air, rustling. Each page, glowing faintly like fireflies, circled around the Assistant Writer.

“These pages are my skill. [Rejected Contest Entries].”

"....."

“It’s not a name I came up with. Don’t look at me like that. I’ll gouge out your eyes.”

This lady was quite a character.

“...Anyway, I can peek at [failed quests] of others with [Rejected Contest Entries]. And these are all traces of those who failed to break the 50th floor through that [irregular route].”

Rustle.

The torn pages fluttered as if they had wings.

I grabbed one of the closest pages and looked at it.

+

[Liberation War of the Monopolized Poisonous City]

Constellation: Warhorse of the Eternal Plains

Difficulty: SSS

Objective: Warriors! The moment of uprising has finally arrived. For the past 20 years, the demons of the tower have oppressively ruled Monopolized Poisonous City. The guardian of the sword may have disappeared, but how can there be only one hero in this world? Now, it's time for you to wield the sword.

Stand up. Fight! Topple the remaining five fingers of the tower, rescue the constellations groaning in their grasp, and walk proudly beyond Monopolized Poisonous City!

Result: Failure

Reason for Rejection: Decisive defeat of the allied forces. Most of the [Warhorse of the Eternal Plains] executives were massacred. The constellation subsequently acknowledged the failure of the quest publicly. A humiliating truce was made, agreeing not to issue quests targeting the tower for the next 100 years.

+

Plop.

I caught another piece of paper.

+

[Love Saves the World]

Constellation: The Incarnation of Love and Lust

Difficulty: SSS

Objective: Are you at peace, beloved lovers? I am at peace. But there are those in Monopolized Poisonous City who are not at peace. (Dramatic)

It's the ruler of the tower, the Tower Lord, the Elder. (Surprise!)

It's said that the Elder has never opened her heart to another in a thousand years. As a human, wouldn't she feel loneliness? (Curious) I believe that beneath that frozen ground lies a stunningly beautiful flower.

Someone, please show the Elder the greatness of love, the beauty of the world! It's an extremely difficult task, but I believe our wonderful lovers can do it! (Thumbs up!)

Result: Failure

Reason for Rejection: All disciples of [The Incarnation of Love and Lust] who approached the Elder were executed.

Those who touched the Elder's shoulder had their fingers chopped off 230 times, and those who attempted to kiss the Elder had their lips split into 23 pieces. The constellation subsequently acknowledged the failure of the quest publicly.

+

"....."

I flipped through the torn papers.

Some quests were written seriously, others lightly, each with the unique tone and taste of the constellations. But each one invariably contained one word.

Failure.

"....."

[Failure], [Failure], [Failure].

The [Irregular Route Quests], which were actively conducted until 100 years ago, gradually decreased from a certain point. Rather, they drastically decreased. Eventually, they were updated once in 10 years, once in 20 years...

And then they disappeared.

“The last Irregular Route Quest was issued 31 years ago.”

The Assistant Writer snapped her fingers.

Like a lie, the floating pages disappeared into thin air.

“We actively encouraged participation in the quests, but now even that doesn’t work. Since our Librarian disappeared, we’ve been too busy taking care of our own lives... Now, this city, the 50th stage, is literally a place where time has stagnated.”

“...Why?”

I had to ask.

“Why would the tower do such a thing? What profit do they gain from this?"

"A lot."

The Assistant Writer replied immediately.

"By enforcing this [Regular Route], they fill the floors beyond the 50th with their loyal forces. This way, the tower monopolizes the progress of the tower, not the constellations. And permanent monopoly always brings immense profits."

"But..."

"You're right."

Did she understand what I was about to say?

The Assistant Writer nodded silently in agreement.

"It's boring."

"....."

"Deadly boring. Boring to death. Tedious. Stale and suffocating."

Complaining about the so-called regular route, the Assistant Writer sighed.

"Ever since the tower began ruling Monopolized Poisonous City, apart from the brief time when the Sword Emperor wreaked havoc, there's hardly been any fun. That's why we librarians resist the tower."

The Assistant Writer looked around with a bitter smile.

Less than ten disciples were healing their bodies injured from their imprisonment. All of them looked shabby. Their expressions conveyed just surviving.

"...Now 'we' is just this much."

Is that so.

‘I understand.’

I looked up.

To others, it might seem like I’m lamenting at the empty air, but I saw the Guardian Spirit.

‘Why you destroyed the tower.’

-Hmm.

‘It wasn't just for fun to create chaos.’

-Well, seeing the Elder’s face contort was quite fun.

The Guardian Spirit lay horizontally in the air as if the sky was his bed.

-I didn't expect that after I disappeared, not a single new talent capable of defeating the tower would emerge. Well, I was a bit extraordinary.

‘Why didn’t you destroy everything instead of just one spire?’

-Of course because I’m not a nanny spoon-feeding kids.

The Guardian Spirit spoke nonchalantly.

-If the tower guys are bastards, what are those who can’t defeat those bastards? And what about those who wag their tails as dogs of the tower to pass the 50th floor?

"....."

-You might not feel it because you’re doing well, but these guys are hunters. Hunters who climbed up to the 50th floor. Strong people. They’re long past their beginner days; they should take care of themselves.

"....."

-I’ve done my duty by just taking down one spire.

Indeed.

That was a very Guardian Spirit-like statement, so I nodded. Perhaps the Guardian Spirit and I were not that different.

